Jamal, who is a top jazz Argos LP seller, and whose records sell well even to the so-called pop element, draws heavily from his LP repertoire and pleases the paying customer with his dynamic intensity and paced program. Instrumental in any Jamal presentation are his two rhythm cohorts: large Crosby on bass, and drummer Vernel Fournier. Together they make a well-oiled team that shocks and bounces the audience with cohesive ensemble and purposeful improvisation. They have been called the chamber music of the new jazz.

In the past year the Clancy Brothers and Tommy Makem have risen to a new high in the folk singing realm of the world of music. The New York Times describes them as the "front rank of this country's folk performers." Their performances have been described by Variety as "smashing."

The Clancy Brothers and Tommy Makem were the highlight of a pair of new shows which recently opened at the Chicago Playboy Club. They had the house in an uproar. If audience reaction is any indication and if the raptures of local columnists mean anything -- this group is going all the way.

In January of 1961, they opened at New York's "Blue Angel" night club. They sang of the things they knew best -- Ireland and its people, its legends, its quiet brooks, its lovely colleens, its joy and sorrows. They sang of Ireland but it was everyone's home, everywhere. Through it all Tommy Makem's penny whistle piped its bitter-sweet lament. All the critics raved about the boys from Ireland.

Theirs is the kind of stage presentation which commands attention. When they sing, you listen -- and a pleasurable experience it is.

The Chris Barber Jazz Band is a phenomenon in our midst. While the majority of British critics still persist in an attitude of aloofness and faint praise that borders on the incredible, the fact clear for all to see -- is that here is one of the world's greatest jazz bands. It is a band that has drawn unstinted praise from two such diverse characters as Louis Armstrong and John S. Wilson of the New York Times; and it is consistently voted "Best Jazz Band in the World" throughout the Continent of Europe.

The band's records have outsold those of any other jazz band yet. Apart from the gold disc winners "Rock Island Line" and "Petite Fleur", the albums such as Barber in Copenhagen, New Orleans Joys, Elite Syncopations and Barber in Berlin have been best sellers in their own rights.

As a creative jazz band in the traditional idiom, the Chris Barber Band is probably without equal in the world today. Certainly in the terms of commercial drawing power it is in a class of its own; and this is probably because the band's first consideration is always to improve its music -- as UVM is projected into the national limelight. Sigma Nu's political satire is geared to comedy as the hilarious results of a visit from the White House unfold in "New Pastures."

Greeks Choose Candidates

A beauty enchanting, Miss Margorie Slater, is Gamma Phi Beta's choice for Kake Walk Queen. Margie, a twenty year old senior from Cleveland, Ohio, is a speech major in the College of Arts and Sciences. As a member of the University Players, she was recently featured in the production of "The Mad Woman of Chaillot." Margie is also secretary of the Student Photography Staff and a member of the University Readers. She plans to attend graduate school in speech correction next year.

Sigma Phi Epsilon's choice for Kake Walk King is Lee Pantas. Lee, a Junior from Greenwich, Connecticut, is a zoology major in the College of Arts and Sciences. At UVM Lee's interests center around his fraternity and the Varsity-Track Team. Lee's interests also turn towards folk-singing. Recently he performed at the Cafe Ratlo in Greenwich Village.

Sigma Alpha Epsilon's candidate, Loren Disque, hails from South Shaftsbury, Vermont. Presently a senior, Loren is majoring in Agriculture Economics. "Tuber" has been active on campus and a member of Alpha Zeta, the national agriculture

Some of Marty's activities include Panhellenic Representative, Honorary First Lieutenant of Pershing Rifles, and Chairman of the Freshmen Week picnic. Although active on campus and in her sorority, Marty enjoys skiing and skating in her spare time.

Chris Schonwalder is Alpha Epsilon Pi's candidate for Kake Walk King. From New York City, Chris is a junior majoring in chemistry. While remaining in the top quarter of his class, Chris still finds time to participate in almost all intramural sports. Chris's interests are not con-

FRATERNITIES PRESENT KAKE WALK SKITS

Preceding the walking on Friday and Saturday evenings of the Kake Walk weekend are skits presented by several of the fraternities. This year Kake Walk humor will be presented by Phi Sigma Delta, Tau Epsilon Phi, and Sigma Nu.

Whoever he was, the first man to say "Niglo demaritus sublim egestata" certainly started something. On Friday and Saturday evenings of Kake Walk Phi Sigma Delta will attempt to show that this Roman had more on the ball than a lot of people give him credit for. The brothers and pledges of Phi Sigma Delta hope that you'll all agree with them when they say "It ain't all in the books."

Twenty years from now the UVM football team finally becomes the Vermont State Champs with the aid of a mysterious newcomer. Tau Epsilon Phi depicts the exciting season with many laughs and a lot of fun in "Up, Up and Away."

The advent of the "new frontier" in Washington has greatly affected the entire nation with perhaps the exception of one small state and its university. But a critical decision in the highest echelons of the national government influences the entire UVM campus. The inhabitants of 1600 Pennsylvania Avenue discover that there is an unknown member of the first family and for a moment a period of crisis reigns, but a solution and succeeding events proceed with vigor

Kake Walk Ball Spotlights Si Zentner

The 66th Annual Kake Walk officially begins on Thursday evening February 21 with the Kake Walk Ball. This year the music for the traditional opening of weekend will be provided by Si Zentner and his orchestra. One of the more recent products of the music world, Si Zentner and his orchestra have become one of the hottest bands in the nation, bringing out dancers in the greatest numbers in twenty years.

What is Zentner's secret? With what does he invest popular songs that strikes just the right chord? Such traditional critics as John S. Wilson of the New York Times, and Ted Morello of the New York World Telegram and Sun, uncovered part of the secret. "Stripped of the clangor and leaden thump with which they are usually presented, Zentner has dressed current hits in richly voiced arrangements played with a light and swinging beat. At the same time, he takes a wallowing rhythmic approach to old favorites like "Up The Lazy River." "He steers his men through arrangements that are masterpieces of revery as punctuated by his suavely mellow trombone solos, and he brings dancers thronging to the dance floor." "The four years of groundwork that he has devoted to his band is reflected in its clean polished playing and the fullbodied depth of its attack."

Si Zentner has made one of the more persistent efforts to bring new life to the dance band field. The secret of his success has been largely unmasked and it promises continuing and growing popularity... and with it, memories of the days when "name" bands dominated popular music, are being hopefully stirred.

Skating events dominate the Winter Olympic Games and all of these skating events involve speed skating.

This example is used to demonstrate a world-wide interest in this type skating. The United States last won a speed skating event in the Winter Olympics in 1952 when Ken Henry won the 500 Meter event. The one and only time that the United States won the Unofficial Olympic Games Title was in 1932 when the United States won all four of the speed skating events. The U.S.S.R. has taken the Unofficial Olympic Games Title in 1956 and 1960, both times by dominating the four-speed skating events. Yet at a time when it is most desirable for the United States to do their best in the Olympic Games, their chances are being strangled by the many communities, towns and colleges that are building indoor ice rinks with public funds and then insisting on "No racing (tubular) skates allowed." I must then ask how will public interest in this sport be manifested? Any possibility of furthering the interest in racing

The World Around Us

It will surely not surprise anyone to say that we have had some rather cold weather lately. (At 5:30 A.M., Monday, February 4, the temperature hit 26 degrees below zero, only 4 away from the record low for Burlington.) But for a description of winter and cold in general, nobody could beat Robert W. Service. His "Ballad of the Northern Lights" is probably the best description of winter anywhere, and from the "Ballad of Blasphemous Bill" comes this picture of sheer freezing cold:

You know what it's like in the Yukon wild when it's sixty-nine below:
When the ice-worms wriggle their purple heads through the crust of the pale blue snow;
When the pine-trees crack like little guns in the silence of the wood,
And the icicles hang down like little tusks under the parka hood;
When the stove-pipe smoke breaks sudden off, and the sky is wierdly lit,
And the careless feel of a bit of steel burns like a red-hot spit;
When the mercury is a frozen ball, and the frost-fiend stalks to kill --
Well, it was just like that that day when I set out to look for Bill.

Read the sixth and seventh lines again, slowly; Have they been matched anywhere in the English language? It certainly doesn't seem so.

How did Charles Poore know about East Hall when he wrote the following in a N.Y. Times review of C. Northcote Parkinson's latest book, In-laws and Outlaws: "For instance, a Parkinson law might be established from the casual remark that the purpose of all temporary buildings is: 'to occupy for fifty years a site that is wanted for something else.'"

Unwittingly, WCAX radio is contributing to the downfall of the Great Moral Tradition in America by every now and then playing, in order, "The Girl Friend" and "A Small Hotel."

On the other hand, New York State is keeping its citizens well protected from such "immoral" things as Communism. There is a New York law that makes it illegal to belong to the Party. A suspected Communist has his driver's license liable to revocation, and proven or convicted Reds have their licenses revoked automatically. Truly, a fate worse than death.

Letter-writers to the Burlington Free Press are also keeping the land morally straight. This comes from that paper sometime last summer:

To the non-believer must be shown all charity. If the non-believer is too offended by our mentioning of the word "God" in our prayers, on our coins, in our songs, and in our federal (Oh, really? - K.B.) and state constitutions, he is free to leave this believing land for other lands where un-believers reign.

Very interesting definition of Christian Charity, that.

And an example of True Humility and the Open Mind, also from Free Press: "My attitude is a healthy one, so please don't argue to the contrary!"

I offer in nomination as the Best Unintentional Satire of the year the picture "Sodom and Gomorrah." The satire occurs mostly in two places. One is when a comment is made by having Sodom and Gomorrah go up in an explosion that produces a mushroom cloud. The other is a little line that appears at the beginning, near the end of the credits. It says that any resemblance between characters in the picture and actual persons, dead or alive, is purely coincidental. One can't be quite sure whether that's a theological comment, or a comment about Stewart Granger's looks, or just what it is a comment on.

The intellectual activities of the United States Senate are illustrated in these two legislative notes from the Congressional Record:

MR. LONG - Can the Senator correct me on the wording of that ancient poem which goes something like this: The law looks up ---

MR. DOUGLAS - Both man and woman ---

MR. LONG - Who steals the goose - -

MR. DOUGLAS - from off the common ---

MR. LONG - But then turns loose --

MR. DOUGLAS - But lets the greater felon loose/Who steals the common from off the goose.

and, "Harry F. Byrd, a Senator from the State of Virginia, attended today."

Finally, there is a sign in the Hayden Planetarium in New York City that says more about us than a million newspaper columns. It says "Solar System and Rest Rooms - That Way."

Debaters Rank 4 & 7 At Harvard

Two University of Vermont debaters earned speaking honors when UVM tied for third place over the weekend at the annual Harvard Invitational Tournament in Cambridge, Massachusetts.

At the end of preliminary rounds, Gil Tornabene of Weston, Mass., and Bill Germain of Winooski ranked fourth and seventh best-debaters respectively in a tournament that included 108 teams from 90 colleges and universities throughout the country.

Tournament winner was Brandeis University.

Brandeis met Georgetown University in the finals after Georgetown defeated UVM in the semi-finals. UVM tied for third place with Wayne State University.

In the tournament UVM defeated Luther College of Iowa; the University of Toronto; Old Dominion College, Norfolk, Va.; Ohio State; Washington and Lee College of Virginia; Union College, Schenectady, N.Y.; Howard University, Washington, D.C.; Kansas State; George Pepperdine College, Los Angeles; and last to City College of New York.

The UVM team was coached at the tournament by Prof. John Travis.

This weekend four UVM freshmen will attend the Kings College Debate Tournament in Wilkes-Barre, Pa., with Dr. Norman T. London, coach. They are debaters Norman Snow, Craig Nelson, David Waite, and James Sanderson.

Ice Skating

Dear Sir:

On Wednesday, January 10, 1963, I attempted to go to the public skating session at the new indoor rink, and was prevented from doing so because of a rule. "No skating allowed with racing (tubular) ice skates."

When I questioned this, I was given the following reasons.

1. Racing skates are for racing. (This is like saying that anyone driving a sports car is racing.)

2. Racing skates damage the ice. (This is not true. The bearing or running surface of a racing skate is several times longer than either a hockey or figure skate. What about the teeth of a figure skate being used to stop on the ice?)

3. Racing skates are too fast. (The rules state definitely no racing. A controller is always on the ice; therefore, anyone skating too fast, regardless of the type skate he is using, can be put off the ice.)

4. The rink is too small. (The rink is a regulation-size rink.

This size is used all over the United States for indoor speed skating meets, notably, the Silver Skates Meet at Madison Square Garden.)

5. Racing skates are dangerous. (No skate is dangerous. While it is possible a novice skater might present some hazard because of his little control over the skates, no one particular type skate is more dangerous than another. As for falling in front of someone, or in a pile-up, racing skates are no more deadly than the back of any other type or the toe teeth of a figure skate.)

In addition, the 1962 edition of the World Almanac lists the following Olympic Winter Games.

SEIJO UNIVERSITY

News of increases in college expenses comes not only from UVM, but also from across the seas at Seijo University (Tokyo, Japan). According to the Seijoites, "The school authorities decided in November to raise the tuition from 39,000 to 48,000 yen for two semesters and the administration fee, 6,000 to 10,000 yen. This increase in fee is to be applied to the newly arriving frosh next semester.

The paper continues, "In spite of the fact that that level of the national income has remarkably raised in these days, the rise of prices are more than the rise in personal incomes; especially the necessities of life such as raise of the rice price, the publications, the subscription to newspapers and the fare on private lines."

"Students are little concerned about this raise because almost all the students in Seijo University, as other private universities depend upon their parents for payment of their tuition..."

"... University applicants have no right to protest against it. Every student wishes to attend good lectures and have the use of good equipment. It is a great problem for parents to send their sons and daughters to the university while paying expensive tuition in this economic situation. "Is it impossible to materialize the dream of youths to have the highest learning at the lowest tuition?"

Dear Japanese student, we too would like to know the answer!

PAMONA COLLEGE

Now that we've begun to embark on the college habit of classes, studying, partying, etc., it seems appropriate to include some excerpts of a speech delivered by Dr. Henry Steele Commanger at Pamona College, (Claremont, California), as reported in the Pamona College Bulletin.

Dr. Commanger, the noted author, historian, and educator called upon the formation of an "Intellectual Peace Corps - A Minerva Corps - which can be expected to cooperate with the states of Asia and Africa and Latin America in the creation of secondary schools, colleges, schools of medicine, law, engineering and library science, and which will carry to these parts of the globe, too, something of the American belief that education is for all who can profit from it; something of the American practice of academic freedom and intellectual independence. It will be the most benevolent imperialism in history."

What say you Mr. Kennedy and Sergeant Shriver?

ST. BONAVENTURE UNIVERSITY

With Kake Walk soon upon us, the traditional influx of "Imports" will also invade the UVM campus. This presents untold problems for the UVM co-ed. The following piece of poetry (?) was extracted from the Bonaventure. It is hereby dedicated to the Vermont men who have not yet found the merits of Vermont's own daughters!

The Co-ed's Lament

I do not mean to mock you Famed Bonaventure men. But since you have no real regard For me, I'll clue you in To certain things well-known in here On some secrets dark and deep. You may protest but whoa my friend My patience I can't keep.

You call us co-eds (dirty word) And often scorn to speak To those below the dignity Of the station that you keep.

You think we greatly savor St. B's charm and quaint old flavor If you do, it's no surprise You're not quite human in our eyes....

We're here for education. Not for MRS. So you don't need protection Come on now, confess.

We know you truly love us, And if you don't you should, So if you get to know us We know you really would."

UVM Awards Scholarships

Financial assistance, whether in the form of scholarship or loan, has always played an important part in providing college opportunities for many students.

The University of Vermont annually awards substantial financial aid to young men and women who otherwise might not be able to afford to enter or continue in college. The task of administering such a program is a full-time one and last summer, in following a recommendation made in the University's Self-Study, the position of financial aids officer was created and H. Reed Saunders was named director. Prior to this, he was assistant to the director of loans and undergraduate scholarships at the University of Wisconsin.

The majority of UVM scholarship funds are earmarked for qualified Vermonters in continuing their quest for an education. The Wilbur Fund is a good example of the type of scholarship aid available for those residing within the borders of the Green Mountain state. Wilbur scholarships are available only to residents of the state and constitute approximately half of the scholarship aid set aside for freshmen and upperclassmen. Last year the University awarded $105,000 from Wilbur funds to 163 freshmen and 104 upperclassmen.

"Additional scholarship funds of about $40,000, made possible by private gifts, were distributed to nearly 200 students last year, supplemented by loan funds and employment opportunities," says Saunders.

He points out that a number of scholarships have been set up by donors who placed special restrictions such as the place of residence, birth, and other qualifications, but that all applications of incoming freshmen are carefully checked to see if they are eligible for these specialized funds.

Such restricted scholarships are available for Vermonters who live in Waterford, Lunenburg, Moretown, Middlesex, Waitsfield, Williston, Westminster, or in Washington or Windsor counties. A special fund is for graduates of Brigham Academy. A number of special scholarships have been established by state and national business firms.

Two types of loan funds exist at UVM and are open to all students. One is the National Defense Education Act which last year lent $157,000 to 269 undergraduate students, at UVM. The University Loan Fund, established by private gifts, also makes it possible for students to borrow money to continue their education.

While freshmen are not encouraged to seek employment, many opportunities exist for upperclassmen to earn part of their college expenses.

Saunders says that students applying to UVM for financial aid should also apply for any national or local scholarships for which they might be eligible, such as National Merit Scholarships, local Elks and Lions Club scholarships, and others.

The next three months shape up as extremely busy ones for Saunders. He has already received more than 150 applications for aid for the fall of 1963. "Application forms for University of Vermont financial aid are available at every high school in the state and from the F.A. office at UVM. All applications must be in by April 1 and preferably by March 1. All financial aid decisions will be announced by April 30," says Saunders.

Mixes And Matches

by Sue Milman

Now that the excitement of rushing has reached its peak and intersemester vacations have come to a close, UVM is once again the home of pedants and socialites. The social Dean's List, both upper and lower, has certainly grown in length over the past weeks. At the AEPH house three of the sisters recently became engaged. Congratulations to Joan Powell, '63, and Arnie Kersner, Class of '63, of UVM Medical School; Laurie Wiedman, '64, and Harvey Ruskin, Class of '63, of University of Michigan Medical School; and Judy Korman, '64, and Ed Swartz of BU Law School. Excitement galore at the ADPI house. Congratulations to Mina Carter, '63, and Ted Jewett, '63, and Sue Firth, '64, and Tom Granal, Harvard, '62. Best wishes to Marge Kucio, '63, and Willy Thompson, '63, of St. Michael's, Barb Clayton, '63, and Al Ploof, Acacia, '63, and Nancy Glenn, '64, and Bob Hansen, Alpha Gamma Rho, '63, on their recent pinnings.

Cupid has also been visiting Sigma Phi. Congratulations to James Hall, '64, who has become engaged to Kathy Marclano of Rochester, New York. The been overcome by the charms of cupid. Best wishes to Albert Stevens, '64, who has recently become engaged to Barbara Brothers, '65, a sister of Gamma Phi Beta. Congratulations to the following brothers of AGR and their pinmates: Calvin Walker, '65, and Kathy White, '66; Charles McCosco, '64, and Adele MacLeod, Kappa Phi, West Virginia Wesleyan College, '64; Russell Kinerson, '65, to Charlene Bohlen.

A heart-shaped halo must be hovering over the AEPH house. Steve Pell recently announced his engagement to Pat Conwit. In addition many of the other brothers have begun their climb up that ladder of success. Congratulations to the following brothers who have become lavallered:

Steve Frankel, '64, and Helen Chafetz, '66; Larry Scudder, '64, and Andi Becker, '66; Gary Pearson, and Ann Drooz of Mt. Ida Jr. College; Steve Devins, '65, and Gail Karger of New York; Don Cosino, '65, and Joanne Urbanowicz.

Best of luck to Steve Clark, '63, a brother of Sigma Phi, who has been accepted to Columbia Dental School.

"Turn Of The Screw" Production Called Disappointing

by Lee Owens

After last night's production of The Turn of the Screw, Henry James must have turned in his grave. To have his lovely story turned almost into a comic opera was an extreme disappointment. Of course, there were several good points and many bad points with explanations.

It must be admitted that the entire cast does have excellent singing voices - when one could hear them. Even in about the seventh row the words could not be heard on occasions - perhaps because of the poor acoustics of Memorial Auditorium or for the loudness of the orchestra.

One important part of the production which helped to make it worthwhile was the terrific set. The set showed imagination. In fact it was such an interesting set that when one could not hear the words one could find pleasure in letting their eyes wander. And the use of a screen would have been extremely effective if the light from the orchestra had not spoiled it.

Miss Neway was of course cast as the lead because of her voice. But the audience was rather shocked after reading the program, saying, "a young governess." On stage one saw a woman more suitable for playing a grey-haired old lady. Also the housekeeper, if she had white hair and was supposedly old, why then did she behave in her actions more like a woman of twenty-five?

The audience was just kind enough not to leave during the first act. But about one quarter to one third of the audience left at intermission. If this part of the audience had stayed to see the second act they would have seen a cast trying to move a show. It was an admirable try, but still the entire performance was a failure in achieving the goal of any cast.

skates is being diverted from the many young people who may now have some interest in it.

Vermont is proud of its natives who show the world how well they ski. Would we not be just as proud, if one of our public indoor ice rinks produced a world champion who might possibly clinch another Unofficial Olympic Games, Title as was done in 1932?

It is quite obvious I am championing racing skates. I enjoy this type skate and have been using it for many years. In fact, the pair I presently use are constructed and designed specifically for use on indoor rinks.

In those areas where people have been using racing skates for many years, the local college or town has provided an indoor skating rink, allowing public skating -- racing and all other types of skates permitted. As a matter of fact, some places have gone so far as to grant specific times for racing skates only.

For example, Rensselaer Polytechnic Institute Field House has had public skating, allowing the use of racing skates, since 1952, with no problems. Brandmore Palace in Denver has public skating with racing skates allowed.

Lake Placid has public skating with racing skates allowed. The Pasadena Ice Palace in Pasadena, California, allows racing skates during public skating hours.

The decision to not allow racing skates at public skating sessions was made before the new rink was even opened. What was this decision based on? Could a trial period be allowed to see how racing skates affect the public skating, if at all? Possibly the use of racing skates could be limited to those persons who have demonstrated ability and good judgment in the safe use of racing skates. I would like to see the opportunity arise for skaters to prove that the racing blade is a safe, popular, easy-to-handle skate.

Your concentrated consideration of this request for permitted use of racing skates on the new indoor rink would be greatly appreciated.

Very truly yours, Clinton B. Charron

UConn Routs Vermont 95-62

by Bernie Zaccaro

The Catamounts of the University of Vermont took a brutal beating at the hands of the University of Connecticut last week. The final score was 95-62. The individual height of the boys from Connecticut surmounted that of the Catamounts. With men of 6 ft. 10 in., 6 ft. 7 in., 6 ft. 7 in., 6 ft. 6 in., 6 ft. 3 in., and 6 ft. 3 in. tall towering over the UVM boys, the latter had little chance of snagging a telling number of rebounds off the backboards. This aspect was a major reason for the loss.

Another reason for the astounding defeat was the show of poor shooting on the part of the Catamounts. The Cats could not get their big guns firing as they have in previous games this season. Benny Becton, Jack Shabel, and Ralph D'Altilia both the scoring and rebounding threats for UVM seemed out of form as the lofty UCONNers hovered over them under the hoop.

Scoring for the Cats were Benny Becton with 12 points, Dick Lawson with 12, Ralph D'Altilia with 8, Dave Strassburg with 7, and John Stahler with 5. The top scorers for Connecticut were Slomkowski with 20, Comey with 17, Hulteen with 10, and Kimball with 10.

The hot hands and sure eyes of the boys from Storrs kept the game going at a fast pace. At present, their record in the Yankee Conference stands at 5 wins and 0 losses. A 1 win and 7 loss record places the University of Vermont in last place in the Conference, while the University of Connecticut is in 1st place.

Everyone on the UVM campus is anxiously awaiting the contest between the Cats and their neighboring rival, St. Michael's. The first game is scheduled for February 6, and the second for February 15.

Ski Team Places 6th at William's Carnival

Last weekend Vermont's varsity ski team traveled to their first major winter carnival at Williams College. The Catamounts ran up against the best college ski teams in the east, including Dartmouth, Middlebury, St. Lawrence, New Hampshire, and Williams. The team placed an overall sixth out of ten teams. In the alpine combined, however, we placed fourth, tying with UNH. As in the past, the men were strongest in the downhill event.

Captain Rick Hubbard sped down the downhill course to tie with Bob Hiller for second place in that event. The two were nosed out only by Middlebury's Gordie Eaton. Rick deserves a lot of recognition for this, as it ranks him with the best college racers in the country. Also, commendation should be given to Chris Quimby who finished sixth, and to Jim Dwinell, who finished fourteenth. These places gave the team a third place in the downhill.

In the slalom, Hubbard again led the team by taking seventh place out of forty-two racers entered. Falls hampered Dwinell, Quimby, Lamb, and Carnie giving the team a sixth place in that event.

The nordic events spelled out trouble for the Catamounts. In the cross country Sky Thurber and Steve Lozinski were fourteenth and fifteenth respectively but the rest of the team fell back giving us an eighth in that race. The jump was won by Middlebury, with UVM placing sixth.

Next weekend the team will participate in their most important meet of the season. This race is the class "B" Championships at St. Michael's College. The winner of this carnival will attend the Eastern Championships at Middlebury. We will meet such teams as St. Mike's, Paul Smith's and rapidly improving Syracuse University. When UVM had an "A" rating they did not have to participate in this race, but now that they have lost it they have to win this race to get it back. A good attendance at this race would help them win.

Cats Lose To Middlebury Fr. In Hockey

by Marty Hackel

On February 2, the newly formed UVM hockey team "entertained" the Middlebury College freshmen in a scrimmage game. The score of the game, 12-2, does not indicate the ability of Coach Bill Ruffer's pucksters.

With only one formal practice prior to the scrimmage the Cats showed the effects of the exam and inter-semester period. Middlebury dominated the play throughout the first period. They had trouble finding the scoring range in the early moments as Tony Russo, UVM's fine senior goal-tender played brilliant hockey. On numerous occasions he blocked Middlebury forwards at point blank range. At the end of the game Russo felt as though Middlebury was using a gatling gun to fire the pucks at him.

Vermont notched its first score when Art Garvin fed Paul Barrett at 11:06. Barrett shot the puck to the side of Panther goalie Dupruy. The second line of Barrett, Garvin and Swanson played well. The period ended with Middlebury ahead 5 to 1. Tony Russo stopped 28 shots for Vermont.

Midway through the second period Micky Steinberg replaced Russo in the Vermont nets. Steinberg replaced Russo in the Vermont hits. Steinberg brought into the game a new strategy. Instead of clearing the puck when he made a save, he held it. This did two things. It slowed the play down, and it gave Vermont a chance to set up defensively. Steinberg had ten saves bringing the period total to 20.

Early in the third stanza, Swanson outskirted the Panther defenseman after he received a nice lead pass from Garvin. Swanson held his shot and waited for Dupruy to make a move. The latter did, and Swanson fired the puck pass the helpless goal-keeper.

Steinberg made 24 saves and allowed only three goals during his stay in the nets. Vermont goalies had sixty-two saves. Stevenson, freshman center was injured toward the end of the period. Chances are he will be lost for the remainder of the semester.

Middlebury was a well-conditioned and schooled club of players. They knew each others moves and played position hockey.

With a little more conditioning, Coach Bill Ruffer's boys can make a creditable showing on Saturday when they meet the Norwich frosh at Gutterson Field.

Zamboni?

Vermont fans got a chance to see the latest model of the Zamboni Machine. This converted jeep which is valued at the cost of one and a half Cadillacs or close to $8500, scrapes ice and puts a new surface down. The Zamboni will pay for itself in a year or two since it takes the place of three men.

Indoor Track

All freshmen interested in participating in indoor track and field competition should contact coach Archie Post in the Gutterson Field House. Activities open include the weight throw, shotput and other field events. Upperclassmen who wish to participate should also contact Coach Post. The squad is in great need of members.

UVM 3-0 In State Series; Shabel And Becton Excel

by Ray Bello

The cunning Catamounts played their best game of the season Wednesday night, as they trounced St. Michael's College 90 to 77 at the jam-packed Roy L. Patrick Gym, before more than 4,200 wildly cheering spectators.

Led by jumping Jack Shabel and bouncing Benny Becton the Cats now lead in the State Series. Together both men accounted for 51 of Vermont's 90 total points.

That total of 90 established a new single game high for the 81-game series. It also was UVM's 50th series win against only 31 set-backs. The Cats stand 3-0 in Vermont play, while the Michaelmen slipped to 4-1 in state competition.

The hustling, hard-driving tactics of UVM ripped open the St. Mike's defense and pulled apart their offensive threat just as the spirited St. Michael's rooters disembowled a paper dummy of a UVM player in a ritual before the game.

The attack on the Purple Knights of Winooski was spearheaded by little Bobby Nurse. Nurse only netted 11 points but set up many more points and played his usually fine defensive game. Nurse earned a starting position for his good performance against the giants from Connecticut last week.

Jack Shabel undoubtedly played his best game of the season. Time after time he drove toward the basket at seemingly impossible angles and scored on spectacular twisting lay-ups. His long jumpers from outside also were just as fabulous. He hit on 11 of 17 attempts from the floor and on 7 of 10 from the foul line, not to mention all the assists he fed off.

All-time Vermont great, Benny Becton, recaptured the form he displayed as an All-Yankee Conference performer as a sophomore and turned in a sparkling nights work. Becton scored 24 points to move into third place in all-time scoring for UVM, ahead of Keith Jampolis - with a total of 1,040 points. Benny was 6 for 10 in field goal accuracy and 10 for 13 in free throw percentage, and needles to say, great under the boards.

The Cats took the lead and never let up. At one time the Evansmen were up by 25 points. The Squires took more shots than the Cats in an effort to out-score them. But they were as cold as the Winooski River. They only connected for 26 of 74 tries. Dick Tarrant topped the SMC scores with 19. Walt Baumann, who was contained very nicely by Vermont's zone defense, finished with 18.

The victory was a much needed one for the Cats as they have been kept win their last five outings against conference foes.

The win was a team win, the five out on the court and the 2,500 or so roaring UVM faithfuls in the stands did their jobs with equal vigor and it resulted in a resounding victory for Vermont.

INTRAMURAL BASKETBALL

The intramural basketball competition between fraternity and independent groups is nearing completion. In the fraternity leagues, Sigma Phi Epsilon and Sigma Alpha Epsilon have captured their respective league crowns with perfect records of 7-0 each. These teams will compete in a semifinal match, the winner to be declared fraternity champion.

In the independent leagues, competition has not yet ceased.

VOL. 80 UNIVERSITY OF VERMONT BURLINGTON, VERMONT, FEBRUARY 14, 1963 NO. 22

Pre-Columbian Art Heads Calendar At Fleming Museum

An exhibit of Pre-Columbian Art opened at the Fleming Museum on Wednesday, Feb. 13, and will continue through March 6.

The exhibit combines materials from the Olsen Foundation of Guilford, Conn., and from the Museum collection. A lecture on Latin American Art by Dr. George A. Kubler of Yale opens the showing.

This is the art of the civilizations that flourished in our hemisphere from the Mexican Highlands to the Andes of Peru until the arrival of Columbus and the Conquistadores. The period covered is 800 B.C. to 1500 A.D.

In span of time, geographic extent, and complexity of cultural patterns, an equivalent survey of Western European Art would include everything from Periclean Athens to the jet-age present.

The exhibit's sampling selection, said Director Janson, will introduce the visitor to two things: the impressive quality of Pre-Columbian art, and some grasp of the people who created it.

Unlike in Western European civilization, said Janson, there are no copious literary remains to round out our picture of the history of Pre-Columbian America. Even where written signs occur, they are largely undeciphered. Our grasp of these peoples, particularly those of the Peruvian Andes, depends on the expression and shape of the things they made.

In the Fleming exhibit pottery predominates. It appears in the shape of decorative vessels, but also as symbolic sculpture in the shape of effigy figures.

The oldest piece is a Peruvian vase of 800 B.C. of the Chavin culture. It is decorated with jaguar tails. From Peru also are early textiles from the Paracas Necropolis and Chancay, and pottery of Mochica, Nazca, and Tiahuanaco origins.

The Aztec, Maya and associated cultures of Mexico are represented by stone sculpture, including a head of classical starkness from Vera Cruz, and a seated Aztec God of Pleasure of extraordinary grimness.

Less forbidding and more personal are two terra cottas, a smiling Totonac head and a tiny lady from Tlatilco, sporting the pony-tail and animated curves of her most sophisticated 20th century equivalent. Here, suggested Director Janson, an otherwise anonymous, impersonal past briefly becomes as real and familiar as the present.

New Rules For Library Instituted By Staff

Modified Hours For All Night Study Room

A new, stronger set of policies will go into effect at the Bailey Library beginning, Friday, February 15. The following regulations formulated by Mr. Benjamin Bowman, Director of Bailey, Dean Harris, Dean Patzer, and the Student Executive Committee. They were passed at the last SA meeting.

Due to noise and distractions created by the inconsiderate and forgetful, "A complete NO TALKING policy will be instituted in the library," stated SA President, Paul Chervin. "This means that those persons talking in the library will be evicted."

Commenting on the revisions, Mr. Bowman said, "Since the opening, Bailey has provided students with improved study facilities and more access to more books" but due to a number of complaints from students, faculty, and the library staff, the following regulations will be enforced:

"Members of the library staff," said Bowman will first "ask for quiet and will, when necessary ask those not observing it to leave the building." Secondly, "those congregating in the stair wells for visiting and smoking will be asked to use the All Night study rooms. Thirdly, "anyone bringing cokes, coffee, and sandwiches into the building" will be asked to eat it elsewhere.

In order that additional facilities are available for informal conversation, group study sessions, and smoking, the All Night study rooms will be open, starting February 15, from 10 AM to 12 noon, 1 PM to 5 PM, and 6 PM to 10 PM, Monday through Friday, except on vacations, week-ends, and certain holidays. It will also be open from 6 PM Saturday to midnight, and 1 PM to 9 PM on Sundays.

KAKE WALK COMMITTEE CLARIFIES TICKET SALE

Because of some student misunderstanding, the Kake Walk committee has decided to clarify the issue of the sales of student tickets.

Apparently some students had been led to believe that all Kake Walk tickets would be sold at a general sale, rather than by raffle.

The committee stated that the sale is being held as a raffle to insure as equitable a distribution of tickets to the students as possible. As in the past, alumni, faculty and medical school tickets are distributed first, two tickets per person.

The committee expects that every student will be able to attend one of the two nights, and that the only problem will be in who gets the better seats, although there are no really "bad" seats in the gym.

The Kake Walk committee also wishes to remind students that the student sale will take place Friday evening, February 15, at 7:00. Admission will be by ID only.

Corse Fellowship

Applications for the Corse Fellowship of $1200 will be accepted by Dean C. E. Braun, Graduate College, through April 15.

This fellowship, established through the bequest of Frederick M. Corse, '88, is awarded annually to a graduate of UVM holding the Bachelor of Arts degree, to a senior or to a recent graduate with the proper qualifications.

Applicants, either young men or young women, must have majored in English, or a classical language, or two of the European languages, and must be preparing for a career in college or university teaching. Exceptional ability, character, and capability for independent thought are considerations.

Information may be obtained from Dean Braun's office, 107 Waterman Building.

Dean Braun To Retire From Head Of Graduate School

Dr. C. E. Braun, dean of the Graduate College of the University of Vermont, will retire this June.

President Fey declared the Graduate College "under Dean Braun's able leadership, has moved forward with vigor and imagination."

He noted that the college had developed five new doctoral programs and enjoyed substantial enrollment growth under Braun, and said "he leaves a firm and promising base upon which the university may continue to build." Braun, who first joined the Vermont faculty in 1923, becoming professor and chairman of the department of chemistry in 1942, credited the university's Graduate faculty and "particularly the executive committee of the Graduate College," with making possible the recent progress of the College.

A native of Brooklyn, N.Y., and a graduate in chemistry from the Polytechnic Institute of Brooklyn, he holds the M.A. and Ph.D. degrees from Columbia.

He served in 1952-53 as first dean of the Graduate College at Vermont, and from 1950-53 as coordinator of research for the university. He was appointed to the graduate deanship for the second time in 1960, when Dr. John H. Kent resigned the post after seven years of service.

Braun said he believes the Graduate College at Vermont has made "sound progress," and that it "is and will continue to be a significant and enriching influence in the academic life of the university."

He said that he and Mrs. Braun plan to "do some of the traveling and relaxing we have been looking forward to."

Players Produce Musical "The Fantasticks"

"The Fantasticks," the mock-romantic musical that scored a run of more than two years in New York and huge successes in Europe, Australia, South America and the Near East, will be presented by the Departments of Music and Speech and Drama as the annual Fine Arts Musical offering of the Festival of Fine Arts at the UVM Arena Theatre on March 21, 22, 23, and 24.

With book and lyrics by Tom Jones, based on a farlequinade by Edmond Rostand, and score by Harvey Schmidt, "The Fantasticks" is another re-telling of the ancient Pierrot and Columbine story of a boy and girl who fall in love, then spoil their love, and finally come back to each other with deeper experience and understanding.

The opening of the play reveals a boy and girl secretly in love despite the bitter feud between their fathers. This "feud," however, turns out to be a clever perentense on the part of the two parents in an effort to bring their children together. As an additional aid to the romance, the two fathers plan for a staged abduction by moonlight in which the boy will heroically rescue the girl from the clutches of a sinister bandit. All goes as planned, and the happy ending plotted by the fathers appears imminent. It happens though that daylight brings a profound change to the circumstances; that which was "scenic by night" has become "cynic by day." All the principals go through considerable suffering before they can reach a final understanding.

"The Fantasticks" will be presented under the musical direction of Professors Lidal and Weinrich, choreography by Norma Albert and staged by Edward J. Feldner, Director of Drama. Settings are designed by B.G. Ackley, with Maurice Singer serving as Stage Manager.

KW Activities Proposed Open To Independents

On Wednesday, February 6, 1963 the Student Association Senate held its first meeting of the second semester. The Senate passed a motion stating that all Kake Walk festivities should be open to all University of Vermont students. Included under these festivities would be skits, snow sculptures, and walking.

As yet this motion is by no means law, but it merely expresses the sentiments of the S.A. Senate. Kake Walk is advertised as a University affair, and the Senate therefore hopes that all Kake Walk activities will be open to all the students of the University -- not just to the fraternities and the members of these fraternities.

King And Queen Candidates Heralded At Pops Night-Penny Carnival

by Betty Fuchs

UVM's 66th annual Kake Walk opened with the hawking of wares at the WRA Penny Carnival, Friday, January 8. The basement of Memorial Auditorium was given over to a midway lined with game booths. Really unique was the Western Union booth where messenger girls were kept running to deliver "telegrams" to anyone in the building. In a direct steal from Charles Schulz, the Happiness Booth asked all comers to define happiness, awarding large happiness buttons to the authors of the most original definitions. Several other booths tested the aim, dexterity, or dancing skill of the competitors.

The university band's rendition of "Cotton Babes" marked the end of Penny Carnival and the beginning of Pops Night. When the auditorium doors opened, the impatient crowd rushed in to claim front row center seats on the floor.

First to present a skit was Sigma Alpha Epsilon fraternity, which put on "Ye Olde Minstrel Show." The audience visibly warmed to the skits' six end men. The jokes, typical of minstrel show humor, were modified to amuse the UVM audience, and included one very clever job on the notorious Burlington police force. One of the most ingenious spots of the evening was the "Saga of the Tired Cotton Picker", a liver version of a silent movie, complete with a pie-in-the-face ending. The conclusion of the skit came with the presentation of SAE's king candidate, Loren Disque.

Next, Alpha Chi Omega presented the oriental "Princess Who Was Plain," which, as all fairy tales do, ended happily, with the introduction of Marty Gardner as Alpha Chi's candidate for queen.

Kappa Sigma's "Untouchables" were that, indeed, for bawdy wit. A planned abduction of Al Brown, Kake Walk king candidate, was crossed and double-crossed until Eliot Ness's brother saved the day for Kappa Sig.

Delta Delta Delta followed with a Snow White theme. A hag with purple hair, a JFK mirror, and seven dancing dwarfs made this skit different from the original fairy tale. Tri Delta's fairest of them all is their candidate for queen, Brenda Woodard.

Sigma Phi Epsilon's skit opened on a scene of unabashed "mufky" in the library, then quickly shifted to the days of Queen Elizabeth, where Sir Walter Raleigh packed in a few good punch lines. But it was King Lee Pantas who saved the day, the queen, and the skit.

Phi Delta Theta's theme was that nightmare of all UVM students, registration. But no one ever had as much trouble at registration as did the Phi Delta's slippery hooved calf. With a little ad-libbing, and a show of muscle, the skit was completed, and king candidate Jim Howe safely presented.

Gamma Phi Beta proved their versatility, drawing from their ranks girls of every type imaginable, and finally presenting their choice for the girl who has everything: queen candidate Margie Slater.

Last to perform was Alpha Epsilon Pi fraternity, which presented the spine-chilling "Monster from the Green Latrine." Clark Bent, alias Sewerman, unfortunately failed to save the day for Alpha Epsilon Pi, but Chris Schonwalder, candidate for Kake Walk king, took over where the BMOK (Big Man on Krypton) left off.

Loaded down with flyers, lollipops, matches, bubble gum, confetti, and balloons, the audience left the auditorium before the concluding performance - that of the janitors clearing away the remains of Pops Night, 1963.

Dr. Giles: Key Speaker At "March Conference"

Dr. Harry Giles

The founder and first director of The Center for Human Relations Studies at New York University will be the key speaker at the 56th annual meeting of the "March Conference" on March 4.

Dr. H. Harry Giles, who founded the Center at NYU in 1947 and served as director until 1956, will speak on the subject "Human Relations in the Teaching-Learning Process."

The "March Conference" is sponsored by the University of Vermont and the Champlain Valley Teachers' Association. Approximately 800 elementary and secondary teachers are expected to be in attendance at the sessions in the Lyman C. Hunt Junior High School.

Dr. Giles is currently chief advisor for the graduate program in human development and social relations at New York University.

A native of Oberlin, Ohio, Dr. Giles received his A.B. degree from Amherst College, his M.A. from the University of Wisconsin, and his Ph.D. from Ohio State University. He has also done graduate work at Columbia, the New York School of Social Work, and the University of Chicago.

In addition to his teaching, he has been a lecturer and had special teaching assignments at a number of institutions, including Harvard, Northwestern University, the University of North Carolina, and Chicago University.

He has written several books, including "Teacher Pupil Planning," "Education and Human Motivation," and "The Integrated Classroom." Dr. Giles has written more than 80 articles on educational subjects.

He is serving as general consultant to the Institute of Behavior and Social Sciences at Adelphi College, and to the National Conference of Christians and Jews. Dr. Giles is a member of the board of Goddard College, is president of the Stockbridge School, and is chairman of the Commission on Education of the National Assn. of Intergroup Relations Officials.

The University of Vermont has been awarded $136,900 by the National Science Foundation to conduct summer institutes in mathematics and physics for high school teachers.

This summer will mark the sixth year for both institutes at UVM.

The physics institute, under the direction of Dr. Nelson L. Walbridge, will run for eight weeks, starting on June 24. Dr. N. James Schoonmaker, chairman of the department of mathematics, will be director of the seven-week math institute that opens on July 1.

A total of $69,900 was awarded for the physics institute and $67,000 for math. Fifty stipends will be available in physics and 60 in mathematics. Tuition and fees are paid for those attending the institutes and participants receive stipends of not more than $75 during the duration of the training, allowances for travel, and allotments for up to four dependents. Institute participants are selected by the college and university, not the Foundation.

The NSF sponsors the summer institutes to provide teachers an opportunity to renew their knowledge of fundamentals, to acquaint them with recent developments and advances in science, mathematics, and engineering, and to familiarize them with new approaches to presentation of their subjects.

Foundation grants for 1963 total $24.2 million and are spread out among 287 colleges and universities to conduct 415 institutes. Only 24 schools received funds for physics institutes while 119 did for chemistry.

Old Mansion Dedicated As Training Center

Reprinted from "Peace Corps Volunteer" December, 1962

Sandanona, the Experiment in International Living training center for Peace Corps and other overseas projects, was dedicated Oct. 20 in Putney, Vt., by Experiment President Gordon Boyce.

Sandanona is an old mansion recently bought and converted into classrooms, language laboratory, and dormitory space for Experiment members and foreign students - and some future Peace Corps trainees.

The Experiment, which manages young-visitors-abroad exchanges and foreign-student orientation, operates the only private international training center of its kind in the U.S.

Shriver Telegram

Peace Corps Director Sargent Shriver expressed in a telegram his appreciation of the new Experiment training center. Shriver himself spent two summers abroad as a member of the Experiment - 1938 in France and 1939 in Germany.

Volunteers for several Peace Corps projects have trained at Experiment headquarters: East Pakistan (also administered abroad by the Experiment), Venezuela YMCA, Chile YWCA, Venezuela university teachers, and Dominican Republic community-development workers who are presently training for a February departure.

Peru, Bolivia Groups

Peru and Bolivia Volunteers also have studied in Putney while waiting out departure delays. Several additional groups are scheduled to train at the Experiment in the future.

At the dedication a maple tree was planted on the grounds, the first of several to be planted - one for each Peace Corps project trained in Putney - to form an avenue of Maples for Peace.

Bills For Vermont Legislature Drafted In State Government Class

The 1963 Legislature may get some work as the result of a UVM Evening Division course in State Government offered at Stowe.

One requirement of the course, taught by UVM Professor and former Vermont Lt. Gov. Robert S. Babcock, was that each member of the class draft a bill. Each member of the class did so, and Babcock thinks five or six of them are good enough to warrant introduction in the 1963 Legislature.

One measure, drafted by Mrs. Fritz Wiessner of Stowe, would turn Vermont's outdoor advertising billboards green with white lettering, by virtue of restricting advertisers to use of these colors. The idea, she suggests, would fit in with the increasing interest in keeping Vermont beautiful, and would also give Vermont "unique and effective approach" to outdoor advertising.

One outdoor advertiser, at least, is sold on the idea. He is Robert Kirby of Stowe, who runs the Yodler, and who has already changed his signs to the white lettering on dark green background. Kirby, also a member of Babcock's evening class, also has a bill which Babcock thinks might warrant introduction. His bill would tighten unemployment compensation qualifications.

Other bills which Babcock thinks might warrant introduction include one, by Mrs. Ann Fry of Stowe, which would seek to discourage school drop outs by compelling bus transportation for high school students; another, by Mrs. Corrinne Meyers of Stowe, would authorize an appropriation for further development of Waterbury State Park.

A bill drafted for the class by Mrs. Marion Kellogg of Stowe, aimed at helping reduce stream pollution, would remove the exemption now enjoyed by saw mills from laws regulating dumping of refuse in streams.

A bill by Mrs. Rosamond Chambers, Stowe Selectwoman, would eliminate the poll tax as qualification for voting in any Vermont election.

Babcock said he was pleased with the range of matters taken up by students in the Stowe course, with the blending of imaginative practicality that characterized the student bills, and said he would be pleased if one or more of the bills won consideration by the 1963 Legislature.

Vermont Youth Conference Planned For Mid-April

A total of 53 Vermont high schools have registered to participate in the fourth annual Vermont Youth Citizenship Education Conference set for mid-April at the University of Vermont.

The theme of this year's conference is "The Role of a Citizen in a Representative Democracy." The conference is sponsored by the Vermont Headmasters' Association, the Vermont Superintendents Association, the State Department of Education, and the Government Clearing House of UVM and is partially supported by a grant from the Sears-Roebuck Foundation.

A number of those attending the conference will be selected to represent Vermont in the regional conference to be held at Tufts University. The latter meeting is a project of the Nine States Youth Citizenship Education Project.

Members of the steering committee which organizes the conference and plans the program are Max W. Barrows and Miss Karlene V. Russell, State Department of Education; Miss Catherine C. Corcoran, principal of N. Bennington High School; Glenn M. Fay, principal of Lyman C. Hunt Jr. High School, Burlington; Joseph M. O'Brien, principal, Hinesburg High School; A. ROTC Program May Be Revised

WASHINGTON (CPS) - The Defense Department has proposed to the 88th Congress a far-reaching revision of the Reserve Officers Training Corps program in the nation's colleges and universities.

The new Congress is expected to pass legislation calling for an end to ROTC programs in high schools, ending compulsory ROTC in colleges under the land grant act, and reducing the four-year ROTC programs at most schools to two years.

According to Army ROTC director Thomas A. Harris, the department will request the new program to alleviate high costs of the ROTC programs, and in an effort to induce more students to take at least some voluntary ROTC training while in school. Harris noted that the new program may carry with it an increase in benefits for the students signing up for ROTC programs. He suggested that students in ROTC programs will be paid $47 per month instead of the $28 now received. In addition, he said that the summer programs may be extended, to enable students to earn more during the summer. Harris hastened to add, however, that the Congress may change the departments requested program.

THE MANLY ARTS

Football's just not the game it was when Dad was yelling himself hoarse over "Big Jim" Thorpe. New rules have sharpened the action, equipment is lighter, stronger. The same holds true for the fans. Gone are the Hoover collars and the heavy fabrics. Now the accent is on lightness - style with comfort.

We at Stevens have changed, too. But our accent is still on the individual. From our small beginnings in North Andover, Massachusetts, in 1813, we've become one of the world's largest manufacturers of textiles. Daily, 35,000 Americans turn up at our 55 mills from Maine to Georgia and hundreds of others go to our sales offices across the country. The fact of the matter is, fabrics are necessities and wherever there's a need, there's a Stevens salesman.

Yes, things have changed since Jim Thorpe's day. To find out precisely how much they have changed, plan now to talk with the Stevens representative, Daniel Denham, who will be on campus Feb. 19th.

The Rise And Cost Of Living

A superfluous statement, but a proper opening remark, is that it does take a very great deal of money, to run a University. The total UVM budget for the 1961-1963 biennium was $17,326,730. All the tuition and fees paid by students of the University accounted for only 35% of this total operating budget, or just over 6 million dollars. The greatest remainder is appropriated to UVM by the State of Vermont on a biennial basis.

It is the financial aspect which so intricately binds UVM to the political and economic philosophies of the state. This is not to say that this University actively engages in political stories to enhance its pocketbook, but rather, as a state supported University it must look to the Governor and to the State Legislature for a substantial slice of its "Income Pie." (see charts).

Bulletin of the University of Vermont,
January, 1963)

The budget requested by President Fey for the 1963-1965 biennium calls for an increase of more than $3,900,000 more than for the present biennium. There are four basic reasons for this increase, as stated by President Fey in the Bulletin of the University of Vermont for January:

1. Salary increases authorized during the 1961-63 biennium as noted above, and salary increases of seven and eight percent respectively planned for 1963-65 as noted above;
2. Increased expenditures for wages, largely due to new physical plant facilities, including the new gymnasium, the second phase of the medical building program, and anticipation of completion of the new engineering building;
3. Increased operating expenses anticipated in connection with operation of these new major facilities; and a normal 5 percent increase in anticipated operating costs;
4. New positions authorized during the 1961-63 biennium, and new positions anticipated in the coming biennium.

This new request is 3 million dollars more than Governor Hoff wants to give the University. In other words, he has recommended that UVM's new budget be cut to about its present status; that the new gym, new library, and new engineering building attempt to operate within the confines of an already obviously insufficient budget; that salaries for new positions be paid out of a budget which was originally not intended to take these salaries into consideration, and to increase the salaries of the faculty under a budget not sufficient to do so.

It is this last point which is perhaps the most important one. According to a recent study, UVM ranks about 21st in reference to the salaries paid the facul-

Briefs from the BU News: "Male sophomore students under 21 years of age will be required to live in 'university (approved?) accommodations,' beginning in September, 1963."

The winner of the accepted entry to name the new BU coffee shop will receive a $50. U.S. to name the engineering building? There's no promise of a monetary award though.

BROOKLYN COLLEGE

There's an unusual organization on the campus of Brooklyn College, according to the Kingsmen. It's the UMOC... the Ugliest Man On Campus. Each year the group sponsors a contest in which various members dress up in the ugliest costume they can, with the emphasis on the mask, or facial features and a contest is held whereby votes are cast by the use of a dime. The proceeds of this contest go to the Leukemia Society. Oh, yes... the winner is "crowned" at a special dance held for the occasion. We understand that his theme song for the night is "I Feel Ugly."

Brooklyn College has rescinded a ruling of October, 1961 that speakers affiliated with a Communist party could not speak on campus. The college has since invited James Jackson, editor of The Worker to speak on the McCarran Act.

UNIVERSITY OF NEW HAMPSHIRE

If the faculty members of UVM think some of the student proposals are ridiculous, this student was amazed to say the least at a seemingly sincere proposal made by two faculty members at UNH. As reported in The New Hampshire, these members of the faculty "feel that there is a lack of sophistication on the UNH campus and propose to remedy the situation by creating a non-credit course, "Sophistication in the Boondocks" or "How to be Sharp." One of the only favorable comments to the suggestion came from a sophomore psychology major from Vermont (!) who indicated that he "would be interested if he had the time to take it. Another student wanted to know if students "have to spend a week-end in New York without flubbing up for the final in the course."

NORTHEASTERN UNIVERSITY

A survey recently conducted by the Northeastern News posed the following question before the student body: "First Family Spoofs - Amusing or Abusive?" Replies generally consisted of mixed sentiments concerning the "First Family" recording. Some students felt the recording was harmful in that it lowered the prestige which Americans hold toward the office of the President while others detected a "new trend" in our society which will result in an amalgamation of the high and low classes. Still others saw in it only a "disgusting way to make a fast buck."

SYRACUSE UNIVERSITY

In a dedication editorial to the memory of Vermont and the entire country's memory of Robert Frost, the following are some of the excerpts that appeared in the Daily Orange, entitled "Miles to Go Before I Sleep."

"This was a man who gained fame in his lifetime - a rarity among poets... He was first a farmer, a man of the soil who learned to understand and live with the whims of nature. And from his own lessons he was able to teach the world about his favorite subject..."

"A Robert Frost poem warmed the soul and filled the memory with pleasant thoughts of deserted country landscapes in a snowstorm, a blazing autumn hillside, the roar of the summer ocean and the first bud of springtime. These are all facts of nature in New England and Robert Frost was their spokesman - a travel agent for the northeast."

"And to the world he was the calm voice of the died-in-the-wool Yankee. He spoke firmly throughout the world of the country he loved so well. And now he sleeps..."

"His epitaph was self-written in 1900 and published in 1942: 'They would not find me changed from him they knew. Only more sure of what I thought was true.'"

Kennedy Proposes New Aid-To-Education

The following are the major proposals contained in President Kennedy's new aid-to-education program:

COLLEGE STUDENT AID -- A 50 percent increase in funds for the National Defense Education Act student loan program; increase in NDEA graduate fellowships from 1500 to 10,000 per year; a three-year, $67 million grant program for "work-study" plans at colleges; a three-year $150 million program for insuring commercial loans to students; National Science Foundation scholarships increased from 2800 to 8700 a year.

COLLEGE CONSTRUCTION -- A three-year, 1 billion, low-interest program for private and public four-year colleges for construction of classrooms and other academic facilities; a similar, $150 million program for junior colleges.

ACADEMIC FACILITIES -- A three year, $300 million program for buildings, books, and equipment in public and private college libraries, technical schools, science facilities, and graduate programs; expanded grants for teaching and research in science.

TEACHING PROGRAMS -- Extension and enlargement of NCEA programs for teacher-training, guidance, and counseling.

PUBLIC SCHOOLS -- A new, four-year, $1.5 billion grant for classroom construction and teacher pay raises in public grade and high schools; four-year extension of the $345 million yearly "impacted areas" program; more grants for science, mathematics, and language instruction equipment.

Letters To The Editor School Song Chided

February 7, 1963

To the Editor:

Last Wednesday night spectators were privileged to watch Vermont and Saint Michael's play a tremendous game of basketball. The students of both colleges showed spirit and enthusiasm that is equaled only at Kake Walk. This spirit was demonstrated by Saint Michael's to the tune of "When the Saints Go Marching In." Lacking an appropriate school song to boast, U.V.M. came back with "When the Saints Go Marching Out". Personally, I enjoyed the little exchange. However, this episode plainly reveals our need for a good school song. I think it is obvious why "Lake Champlain" is not appropriate. "Let's Fight for Vermont" is not effective because the accent is misplaced in the world Vermont. As a result, the song sounds quite ridiculous.

It's time Vermont had a school song. Don't you agree?

Sincerely,
Jean Conner

THINKING OUT LOUD

by Kim Boriskin

Every now and then someone will start whooping up the cause of a universal language: Esperanto, Ido, Romanol, Basic English, etc. Of all the proposed languages, the only one that has caught on to any degree at all is Esperanto; Basic English would catch on but for the fact that it presents a larger vocabulary than a good many English-speaking people already possess, and would only confuse rather than clarify.

Almost every proposed universal language has two major shortcomings: it is based, for some obscure reason, on Latin, and either elaborates on it or oversimplifies it, both of which make for chaos; and it ignores the fact that we already have a language that is almost universal, and will be universal in not too many years. That language is, of course, English.

Educators have been telling us for quite some time now, and with some justification, that Americans tend to be linguistic ignoramuses. They have been expounding on the evils of not knowing at least one language besides English (ignoring the fact that most of us don't know English too well either), and how our schools are being derelict in the teaching of foreign languages. To a large extent, they are right, and it is mostly because of this ignorance that English is becoming the universal language. We have refused to learn the languages of other countries, so they have been forced to learn ours; it's a simple matter of survival.

As a few examples of the universality of English, look at the most recent surveys of foreign education. The most popular language by far in every country where the school system is beyond the most rudimentary mission school stage (except for the English-speaking countries, of course) is English. In Russia every student who goes past the fourth or fifth grade takes English as a required course. The official language of India is English, and Prime Minister Nehru speaks English much more fluently than he speaks his native Hindi dialect. Even, as it was pointed out when she was visiting this country, Nina Khrushchev speaks fairly fluent English.

Having English as an universal language has its good points, of course. For one thing, it makes things very easy for all Americans, including the ones who do know foreign languages well enough to converse in them. For another thing, it allows other people to see why so many Americans seem to be functionally illiterate (as opposed to technically illiterate).

For similar reasons, it undoubtedly makes things difficult for anyone to learn. Just as foreign idioms give us no end of trouble, our idiom must give everyone else the same trouble. And there is the sheer size and subtlety of the English (and especially the American) language. Once a foreigner gets past the most basic points in English, he can see why the majority of Americans never stop having difficulty with their language.

Of all the language on earth, there is probably none that is more beautifully expressive than American. Because of the size and subtlety, however, American is probably the most difficult language for a native to master, even without the terribly burdensome and often useless grammar. Because of this same subtlety, it is sometimes impossible to translate (although every language has words and expressions that can't be translated into other languages), and always easy to come up with something ludicrous. Witness a French translation of Sinclair Lewis's Main Street wherein appeared a group of business known as "the bouquet." A quick reference to the original will show that Lewis wrote it as "the bunch." What happened, apparently, was that the translator, unfamiliar with the slang, consulted his French-English dictionary, saw the first definition, and used it.

English-American is a language where it is easy to say one thing ten different ways and get ten different reactions, depending on what you want of the audience; it is the language where a rose by any other name probably smells like hydrogen sulfide, the usual example being how the United States releases information while Russia spreads propaganda.

Unfortunately, it is also the language of the euphemism, where old men are senior citizens, senile men are in a state of retrogressive cephalocronological development, and where stupid children are only underachievers.

It is the language where people can put together two words that are antithetical by definition and come up with such things as Marxian anarchists and scientific research that is creative. (But then, to say that one is not creative these days is a supreme insult; we even mistake the natural inventiveness, imagination, and flights of fancy of small children as being creative.)

English-American is, despite the efforts of Samuel Johnson to stifle it, an ever changing language, where words are constantly being redefined and invented, generally to our advantage. Such household words as robot and—at least in some parts of the country—destruct are relatively new, the former having been given to the world in 1921, and the latter with the advent of the missile age and the Range Safety Officer. Indeed, it is a good thing that any word can be used to mean anything we want it to, providing we make our definition clear enough, or that a new word can be put in use if an old one isn't available. Naturally enough, this leads to absurdities. One such is the new term for a grocery store: superette. There would be nothing wrong with this if somebody had bothered to say what a superette was, but nobody has. All we can say is that it is a superlative diminutive, or a big little (or maybe it is a little big). We can't say that it is a big little something, but just a big little.

English also lends itself to such things as movements for phonetic spelling. In England a phonetic alphabet has been adopted and is being used in elementary schools as an experiment. But, in a typically stupid human way, they have phonetic being spelled as fonetic. It is not fonetik, notice, but fonetic. Here is a letter (k) that can be pronounced but one way, and they use a letter that can be pronounced three ways as a substitute. If ever there was a beautiful illustration of the absurdity of the human race, that is the one.

Kubler Lectures On Art

Dr. George Kubler will lecture on Latin American art. (Credits Audio Visual)

"Latin American Art: The Inventive and the Borrowed" was the subject of a talk given by a Yale professor Wednesday, Feb. 13, in the UVM lecture series. Dr. George A. Kubler, professor of the history of art at Yale, spoke at 8 p.m. in the Fleming Museum.

Dr. Kubler majored in English as an undergraduate at Yale and received his B.A., but a special year of study at the University of Munich turned his interest to art and he received his M.S. and Ph.D. in this field, both degrees from Yale. He joined the faculty of his alma mater in 1937.

He has been a visiting professor at the University of Chicago and at the University of San Marcos in Lima, Peru. While in Peru he acted as anthropologist on duty for the Smithsonian Institute.

In 1943-44, he was a Guggenheim fellow, the first of three such awards, and he wrote a two-volume work, "Mexican Architecture of the Sixteenth Century." Under his second Guggenheim award he studied the Spanish antecedents of American architectural history.

Dr. Kubler was chief of the UNESCO Mission to Cuzco, Peru in 1951.

The final speaker in the 1962-63 lecture series will be Dr. Ashley Montagu on March 11.

Recitals Given

A faculty recital of chamber music was given in the Ira Allen Chapel at 8:30 P.M., Thursday, February 7. This was the third in a series of six faculty recitals announced for the 1962-1963 season. The program featured music for clarinet, violoncello, and piano by Beethoven, Honegger, and Brahms. The performers were Mrs. Davis Kinsey on violoncello and Dr. and Mrs. Frank Lidral on clarinet and piano.

Mrs. Kinsey holds a certificate in violoncello and theory from Yale University and studied with Charles Crane at the Juilliard School of Music. She was a member of the New Haven and Springfield Symphony Orchestras for seven years, and performed on network radio for Breck Shampoo for 2 1/2 years. Mrs. Lidral holds Bachelor of Music and Bachelor of Science degrees in piano and music education from the University of Illinois and a Master of Music degree in piano from Northwestern University where she studied with Gui Mombaerts. Dr. Lidral, chairman of the Music Department, studied clarinet with Domenico DeCaprio of Northwestern University.

The program included the Trio in Eb, Opus 11 for clarinet, violoncello, and piano by Ludwig Van Beethoven; Sonata for clarinet and piano by Arthur Honegger; and Trio in a minor, Opus 114 for clarinet, violoncello, and piano by Johannes Brahms.

Admission was free, and all who attended experienced an enjoyable and rewarding evening.

Herbert Philbrick Famed Counterspy Speaks At St Mikes

On Feb. 20, at 8:00 P.M. in Austin Hall, St. Michael's College Student Forum Lecture Series will present Mr. Herbert A. Philbrick speaking on "Zero Hour For America".

Herbert Philbrick, citizen, "communist" and counterspy, is a man who, according to Time Magazine, "postponed his own life, liberty, and pursuit of happiness to get to the bottom of the great communist conspiracy in the U.S."

In 1940, he was a young advertising executive on the threshold of a fine career. Recently married, he was active in community and church affairs. He soon discovered that Communists had very quietly taken over the reins of a suburban youth group which he headed outside of Boston, Mass. After consulting the FBI, he made the difficult decision to stay. Philbrick let himself apparently be argued over to the communist way of thinking. He joined the Young Communist League in 1942 and two years later he was invited to join the party. After taking this fateful step, Philbrick gradually rose in the Party ranks until he was made a member of the Pro-4 group, which masterminded Communist strategy in the area.

KEY WITNESS

In 1949, his testimony at the trial of eleven top U.S. Communists cracked the Communist defense, and brought into the open the existence of the Pro-4 group, which was unknown, at the time Philbrick revealed it at the Foley Square trial, even to rank and file Communist party members.

Philbrick is continuing to battle U.S. Communists and their insidious influences in many ways even today. In his lectures he describes how he saw the "fronts" set up, involving reputable and innocent Americans. He tells how to distinguish between worthy groups and "flakes" and what to do when such a situation is detected.

BEST-SELLERS

Philbrick has written two books - "I Led 3 Lives," and "The Queer Fish." "I Led 3 Lives," became an overnight best-seller and was serialized in the New York Herald Tribune and in over 100 newspapers throughout the country. In his Herald Tribune syndicated column, "The Red Underground", he reached millions of other Americans and often exposed the secret plans of the communists. Several times he has forced the communists to cancel or change their original plans by revealing their intentions in a certain area with his extensive knowledge of their movements, transmitted to him by sources still working in the Party.

Television has also proven an effective medium for Philbrick's exposure of the workings of the communists. The program based on his book, "I Led Three Lives," show in the country, an unprecedented achievement for a documentary. It has been shown in 137 cities, including every large American metropolis. It won a George Washington Honor Medal from Freedoms Foundations, Inc., and has received 47 other awards from churches, veterans, civic and governmental bodies.

STILL ON CALL

With an increased concern with civil defense as a result of hydrogen-bomb headlines, there is particular interest in his remarks dealing with his experiences with Communist infiltration into civil defense organizations and sabotage training.

In his continuing job of exposing communists, Philbrick is also kept on call by Congressional investigating committees and has appeared before the Senate Internal Security Committee and the Subversive Activities Control Board appointed by the President.

Philbrick now owns and operates a country store in New Hampshire. He lives there with his wife, five daughters and one son. He now has time to indulge in his hobbies of photography and his home workshop, and to play his Hammond organ, an enthusiasm also shared by his family.

Boatwright Highly Acclaimed For His Versatile Performance

by Ira D. Feirstein

The performance of Mr. McHenry Boatwright, Saturday evening, February 9, will probably stand out as the finest performance of the 1962-1963 Lane Series season. For some two hours this highly talented baritone went through an extremely varied program which covered the spectrum of musical composition from an aria from Verdi's "Othello" to Boatwright's own arrangement of some native American Negro spirituals.

Among the famed artists represented on the program were Handel, Bach, Schumann, Strauss, Verdi, Ravel, and Copland. Featured at the concert was the Credo aria from Verdi's "Othello". In this aria the evil Iago, plotting the destruction of the moor Othello and his young bride Desdemona, pays homage to the god who directs his villainy. The audience's enthusiasm was clearly visible in the long ovation which followed the aria (as followed all the concert's selections). Another part of the concert which seemed to please the audience especially was Boatwright's own arrangement of Negro spirituals.

The magnificent baritone voice of Mr. Boatwright maintained its strength and quality throughout the evening. In some of the lighter numbers such as the "Dodger" by Aaron Copland he used his wonderful charm to add something special to the selection. Indeed, throughout the concert, Boatwright proved to be a charming and personable artist.

Following extremely enthusiastic ovations Boatwright graced the audience with two overtures—

"A Woman Is A Sometimes Thing" from Gershwin's "Porgy and Bess" and another spiritual.

Mr. Boatwright, who received his education at the New England Conservatory of Music, has performed with Eugene Ormandy and the Philadelphia Orchestra, the New England Opera Theater and a host of other lauded groups. He has performed in Europe and the Far East as well as throughout the U.S. He will be performing at the new Lincoln Center for the Performing Arts in New York City this June.

ROTC OFFICERS NAMED AT ANNUAL BANQUET

A Wallingford senior has been named brigade commander of the University of Vermont ROTC unit.

Peter H. Carr received this high honor at the annual senior ROTC banquet held Thursday night (Feb. 7) at the Olde Board. At the banquet 52 seniors, including 23 Vermonters, received their cadet ranks for the spring semester. Carr, who is enrolled in the College of Agriculture and Home Economics, will hold the rank of cadet colonel. Away from the classroom, Carr is a member of Vermont's defending champion Yankee Conference rifle team.

At the banquet, seniors and their special quests heard Major J.C. Closson, CD, Army Staff Officer at the College Militaire Royal de Saint-Jean (Quebec) speak.

Four seniors were named cadet lieutenant colonels. They are Craig Brodie, Orlando, Fla., brigade executive officer; John Stahler, Huntington Station, N.Y., 1st Battalion Commander; Robert Walsh, Westwood, N.J., 2nd Battalion Commander; and James Newman, Gilman, 3rd Battalion Commander.

Named cadet majors were Stanley Zeilinski, Bellows Falls; Richard Paye, Cumberland, Md.; Neal Adams, Union, N.J.; Donald ties of 32 public and private institutions in New England, New York, and New Jersey. We have entered an age of competition for the professional, and the institutions of higher learning in not immune from this competition. Teachers are bought, bartered, and cajoled, (if one may use such terms without implying a connotation of dishonesty or "shady dealings" to them). This is an almost daily occurrence, as universities and colleges attempt to strengthen and supplement their faculties, and to improve their general academic stature. Obviously, if the students of UVM are not to be cheated of their proper education, then the University must expect to maintain substantial faculty salaries and wage increases.

The budget proposed by Governor Hoff does not even allow this University to maintain its present level of expenditures, let alone account for recent expansion, and far from think of further expansion and modification.

Governor Hoff has sympathized with UVM's needs and goals, but has also maintained that elementary and grade school education has a higher priority than does UVM's requests.

THE BELL TELEPHONE COMPANIES SALUTE: GEORGE HUDSON, JR.

George Hudson, Jr. (B.S., 1960), has improved efficiency on just about every job Pennsylvania Bell has given him. That's why he has climbed swiftly with the company.

On his present job at the West Chester Office, George supervises a group that coordinates the work of 46 installers and repairmen. He sees to it that customer orders are handled swiftly—a responsibility that calls for a lot of decisions and original ideas.

On earlier assignments George supervised 12 repairmen, and handled special assignments for the District Plant Superintendent. Outstanding performance on both jobs earned George his present responsibilities.

George Hudson and other young men like him in Bell Telephone Companies throughout the country help bring the finest communications service in the world to the homes and businesses of a growing America.

TELEPHONE MAN OF THE MONTH

The CYNIC does not take issue with this philosophy. The CYNIC sympathizes with Governor Hoff's position, and fully understands the myriad of budgets he must attempt to balance and incorporate into his total plans for a state budget.

Yet, tuition certainly must not be raised any higher. UVM charges the highest student fees of any state university in the country! Even a substantial increase would hardly afford the extra money requested, and the only place to turn is the State of Vermont.

The next move is in the hands of the Legislature. They approved the last biennial budget with a full understanding of the increased costs this would bring eventually to the University. The Legislature approved a 2 million dollar bond issue (to be paid back mostly through the student gym fee), with a full realization of the increased operating costs this would bring. Certainly the Legislature comprehends the problems inherent in attempting to maintain high standards of quality in an age when costs are constantly rising. The Legislature must now rise to meet their continued obligation to higher education in Vermont.

(Editor's Note: This editorial, in part, hopes to bring the nature of the "costs of education" to light. Some of the information contained in this editorial was taken from The Bulletin of the University of Vermont, January 31, 1963. This publication should be consulted for further information).

Ski Team Wins St. Mike's Winter Carnival

Mermen Sink Norwich

by John Westcott

The UVM swim team splashed its way to an impressive 58 - 37 verdict over Norwich Friday, February 8. This win was sweet revenge for the Cats who dropped an earlier decision by the score of 65-30.

The 400 yd. team medley which consists of 100 yds. of Backstroke, Butterfly and Freestyle, was won by UVM's team of Cheney, Nixon, Slack and Johnson with an impressive pool length victory. The time of 4:34.7 was almost 18 seconds faster than Norwich's time of the first meet.

The 200 yd. freestyle was won by Letko of Norwich in the time of 2:22.7 followed by Kendall and Stanton of UVM.

The 50 yd. dash which leaves little room for error was won by Kenny Burton of UVM in 25.7 seconds.

The 200 yd. individual medley was won by Captain Steve Slack in 2:37.8 with Jim Nixon placing second.

UVM's Bob Gredick did a creditable job in the diving finishing second behind Rich of Norwich.

Chuck Kendall continued to turn in a fine performance when he easily won the butterfly in 1:13.9. He was followed by Earl Olsen in second place.

Norwich momentarily dominated the scene in the 100 yd. freestyle when their two fine freestylers Clegg and Letko finished one - two in 58.1 seconds followed by Rovitz of UVM in third place.

In the 200 yd. back stroke Dave Cheney led teammate Earl Olsen to victory in the time of 2:52.2

The most gruelling event in any meet is the 500 yd. freestyle. Steve Slack continued his fine performance by taking the 500 in the time of 6:49.5, followed by teammate Al Lyall in second place.

Jim Nixon won the 200 yd. breast stroke with a time of 2:51.9, with teammate John Westcott taking the 3rd place position.

Norwich proved to be dominant in the final 400 yd. freestyle relay with Michael, Woodley, Letko and Clegg winning in the time of 4:25.4.

The team will continue to work this spring in preparation for an expanded schedule, next year including UCONN and McGill University.

Hockey Team Nipped By Norwich 6-4

by Marty Hagkel

With each game Coach Bill Ruffer's puchsters are improving. On February 9, the Cats dropped a close scrimmage to Norwich Frosh, 6 to 4.

With forwards Art Garvin and Steve Swanson not playing the first two lines had to be switched. This hurt the Vermont team. During the week the first two lines played equally well and things were looking bright. Jack Vivian a burly defenseman was also not dussed. Vermont still suited twice as many players Norwich managed to fight off a Vermont dinie in the final period.

FIRST PERIOD

Play was fairly even in the opening minutes. Norwich showed a fine power play and good pass work. Vermont still had a little trouble getting out of the defensive zone. Kirby opened up the scoring for Norwich at 8:35. Tony Russo, Cat netminder, played well. Towards the end of the period he displayed as he has throughout the year, tremendous play. He came up with the big save when needed. At one point he played for twenty five seconds without a stick. Russo had 16 saves.

SCORE:

Norwich 1 - Vermont 0

SAVES:

Norwich 8 - Vermont 16

SECOND PERIOD

Vermont played six minutes of this period short handed. At 3:10 Warde Kenny was sent off for boarding. Russo came up with two stellar saves. Norwich scored with ten seconds left on Kenny's penalty. With six minutes to go Marty Stevenson and Ken Sausville broke in two to one but couldn't finish the play-off. Steinberg replaced Russo in the nets. Tim Davis notched Vermont's first goal with a twenty foot backhand with an assist to George Cook.

SCORE:

Norwich 2 - Vermont 1

SAVES:

Norwich 6 - Vermont 18

THIRD PERIOD

Kenny Sausville hit the post with a hard shot at 1:15. Vermont's play picked up. They cleared the puck well. The line of George Cook, Paul Barret and Kenny Sausville worked well. Wilson scored for Norwich to put the Cadets ahead by two goals. Lane Morrison scored at 3:12 for Vermont when George Cook passed across the goal mouth to him. Tim Davis centering the second Vermont line, was robbed seconds later. Steinberg came up with a save when Wilson of Norwich broke in all alone. Morce scored for Norwich on a screen shot, at 5:45. Three minutes later he scored again as his shot bounced off Steinberg's chest pad.

Vermont came to life in the last five minutes of the period. George Cook scored at 17:56 unassisted. Paul Barrett followed at 18:20 from Warde Kenny.

BB CHAMPIONSHIP

The Checkmates, an intramural team composed of resident hall counselors and graduate students, defeated the powerful Leftovers 39 to 31 Tuesday night. In fraternity play Sigma Alpha Epsilon was downed by a hustling Sigma Phi Epsilon five, 46 to 27. This game featured hot and cold shooting. Sig Ep was hot and SAE cold as the weather we've been having lately. The Checkmates will meet Sig Ep tonight for the all-campus championship.

Team Regains "A" Rating; Hubbard Leads Catamounts

by Prent Phelps

Last weekend the Vermont Ski team proved itself worthy of a class A rating. In doing this, they beat eleven class "B" teams at the St. Michael's winter carnival. UVM's racers excelled in the alpine events as they took the first three places in the slalom and 1st, 2nd, and 4th in the downhill to give them an easy victory in the combined. The team was greatly improved in the nordic events, and took four out of the first ten places in the cross-country. After placing well in the jump on Sunday, Vermont took an overall third in the nordic combined.

Once again, Co/captain Rick Hubbard led the Catamounts by taking first in the slalom, second in the downhill, third in the jump, and tenth in the cross-country. This gave him a first in the alpine combined and the Skimeister award, which is given to the outstanding competitor in all four events. Also starring on the team were Jim Dwinell who won the downhill and placed third in the slalom, and Chris Quimby who placed fourth in the downhill and second in the slalom. Not to be forgotten are Steve Lozinski, Tim Grant, and Sky Thurber, who placed fifth, seventh, and ninth respectively in the cross-country. Tom Clark finished sixteenth in the jump, helping us in that event. Nash Lamb also finished seventh in the slalom event.

The varsity ski team should be commended for their fine performance at this, their most important race of the season. They had been training all year long with this race in mind, as they had to win it to qualify for entry to the E.I.S.A. Championships at Middlebury. There was a lot of pressure on each team entered at St. Mike's, but due to excellent material, a top coach (Jake Stewart), and added support, the Catamounts rose to the occasion as true competitors. They deserve a pat on the back, and have our best wishes for good luck at the Middlebury carnival.

In the space of four days the UVM Kittens took two hard fought basketball games from the Squires of St. Michael's College.

The first of the home series was played at the Roy L. Patrick Gym. With the LaPointemen coming out on top with an eight point margin, 66-58.

In the first half of last Wednesday's game, UVM's little men couldn't find the range. As a result they were on the short end of a 36-25 total. At the outset of the second half an inspired Vermont team took the floor. The Squires raised the score to 42-31, but at this point the Kittens took charge and ran off 17 straight points before the little men from Winooski could sink a free throw. From then on the Kittens were never in trouble and breezed to a 66-58 victory.

The big men for the Kittens were Steve Ross and Ken Spalter. Steve, from Orange, Conn., connected from 9 hoops and 11 free throws for a total of 21 points. Ken, a Brooklyn, N.Y., man, came up with 8 hoops and 2 free throws. While only scoring 2 points, Jim Lange from Bradford Vt., did an excellent job on both offensive and defensive boards while he filled in for Milt Goggans.

On Saturday night the first year men of UVM took a little trip downtown to the Memorial Auditorium to clash with St. Michael's once again. Once more the Kittens came back victorious, this time a 78-76 overtime affair. UVM held a 13-5 lead in the opening minutes, but that was whittled away by a hard playing St. Michael's team. At the half the LaPointemen were once again on the short end of a 45-34 score.

The little fellows once again fought back, this time controlling the boards which they didn't do in the first half. Never letting up for a second, the Kittens fought to gain a 66-66 tie at the end of regulation time. Both teams then plunged headlong into a fast-moving overtime period. Big Marty Engel of Lakewood, N.J., scored all six of his points in the overtime to keep the little ones in contention. Once again he proved to be the big man when he scored the winning basket on a fine pass from Layne Higgs with 10 seconds remaining. The little Squires hit for 30 of 38 foul attempts. They also finished the game with four players. The little team from Winooski put up a hard fight, but in vain as they lost 78-76. Steve Ross was high man for the game with 10 hoops and 4 free throws for 24 points. Layne Higgs, Barre, Vt. had 11 hoops and 1 free throw for 23 big ones.

The Kittens' record is now 8-0 with Middlebury, Norwich, and Champlain remaining on the schedule.

Brandeis Beats UVM 74-69

DAVE STRASSBURG - netted 20 points against the Judges of Brandeis University last Saturday in a losing cause. Strassburg has been one of the Catamount's steadiest performers all season long.

by Bernie Zaccaro

The Catamounts of the University of Vermont were defeated by the Judges of Brandeis University last Saturday night by a score of 74-69.

The tilt was characterized by an overwhelming amount of fouls, totalling 50, 30 of which were charged to UVM, and the remaining 20 to Brandeis. The Judges led at halftime by a score of 41-37, after overcoming a nine point deficit inflicted early in the game by Vermont. Brandeis took advantage of the large quantity of free throws by hitting 28 of 46 attempts, while the Catamounts profitted on 17 of 29.

BOBBY NURSE - spearheaded the attack on the Knights from Winooski last week as the Cats routed them 90-77. Nurse is looking forward Friday night to repeat his hustling performance against SMC.

In the remaining minutes of the game, the mainstays of the UVM squad, Benny Becton and Jack Shabel, fouled out. This proved to be a great hindrance to the Cats as they were unable to put forth a final surge.

Scoring for the Judges were Ron Kemper with 22 points, Gary Goldberg with 20, and Bill Goldberg with 16. The high scorers for UVM were Dave Strassburg with 20 points, hitting on nine of 17 from the floor. Jack Shabel with 19, and Benny Becton, who also pulled down 16 rebounds, with 10.

Vermont now shoulders a 6-10 overall record, while Brandeis stands at 5-9.

66TH ANNUAL KAKE WALK STEPS INTO SPOTLIGHT

by Betty Bergman

After 362 days of anticipation and many more hours of work and planning, zero hour has finally arrived on the UVM campus. The 66th annual Kake Walk was ushered in Thursday evening, February 21, by the rhythmic music of Si Zentner and his renown orchestra. Excitement reached a fever-pitch when Maestro Zentner crowned the royal couple who will reign over the remainder of the week-end.

One of the finest jazz concerts to be seen as part of the Kake Walk festivities in a long time, was held this afternoon in the new Patrick Gymnasium. Hundreds of UVM students and their dates gathered in a less formal atmosphere than the previous evening, to keep to the beat of the three famed features, Ahmad Jamal, the Clancy Brothers, and the Chris Barber Dixieland Jazz Band.

But, the moment of intense enthusiasm comes tonight as the lights are dimmed, a white hanky is dropped, and two by two, they're off: sixteen pairs of high-steppers in their flashy, satin suits, "Walkin' fo' de Kake" in a two-minute routine that culminates more than two months of exercising and practicing. Three winning teams are chosen each night by a panel of judges made up of members of the faculty and administration.

Not as deeply rooted in tradition as the walking, but certainly an integral part of Friday and Saturday evening's entertainment are the skits presented by three fraternities. This year's contestants in the two-kakes-a-night

Self-Study Of Greeks To Be Presented In Fall Semester

University of Vermont fraternities will sample student, faculty, and community opinion next fall as a major part of a self-study the Greek letter chapters have voted to undertake.

The study will be financed jointly by the Interfraternity Council and the Alumni Interfraternity Council, and will have the assistance of a class in Social Research Methods in preparation of questionnaires which will be used next fall.

Preliminary work will also involve the collection of other fraternity questionnaires and studies as background for the preparation of the questionnaires to be used by the Vermont fraternities.

Aim is to sample both fraternity and non-fraternity student opinion, faculty opinion, and community opinion, according to William H. Lewis, UVM senior from West Rupert, who is president of the IFC.

The IFC and AIFC have agreed to make available $2500 for the cost of the study, including creation of a summer staff to collate, collect and codify information for the questionnaires.

The questionnaires will be circulated in the early fall. Review of the collected data will follow. The completed study, including any recommendations which may result, will be presented to the IFC and to individual fraternities on campus by December or January.

Both the IFC and AIFC believe the study will provide "a useful base for the continued development of the fraternity system at Vermont," Richard Alpert of Burlington, president of the AIFC, said.

University of Vermont President John T. Fay said the University "is pleased with the initiative taken by the fraternities in regard to the study." The fraternity evaluation, he said, was in the constructive spirit of the University's own continuing self-study.

competition are Tau Epsilon Phi, Phi Sigma Delta, and Sigma Nu. Limited to 12 minutes each, uproarious laughter, as well as the scenery are wheeled in and out.

Not to be overlooked during this 66th Kake Walk is the start of a new tradition, Saturday afternoon is reserved for a hockey game in the new Gutterson Field House, where Vermont will meet the Dartmouth Storm Kings.

And on Sunday, the curtain falls once again on the country's oldest winter carnival and the culmination of something old, something new, something borrowed, and something blue will have for the 66th time proved Kake Walk to be that uniquely wonderful winter weekend.

Sophs' Walk For "Mom's" Cake

Two University of Vermont students plan to do their own version of "walking for the kake."

This weekend will find Kake Walk holding forth at UVM but sophomores Mike Fay of Dorset and John Beckwith of Marshfield, Mass., will be doing their "kake walking" far removed from the Patrick Gym, scene of the winter carnival activities.

Mike and John plan to walk from Burlington to Dorset where Mrs. John Fay, Mike's mother, is going to have a cake waiting for them.

The ambitious pair, who plan to outdo the 50-mile hikers by double distance, will depart Thursday morning at 10 a.m. Their schedule calls for a four-hour "catrest" break in Middlebury from 6 to 10 p.m., then on to Rutland which they hope to hit by 8 a.m. on Friday. They continue down U.S. 7 to Manchester where they branch off onto Route 30. If all goes well, the schedule calls for the pair to reach Dorset by 9 a.m. Friday.

Their thoughts may not be of cake by that time but they are determined to negotiate successfully the 100-mile trek.

P.S. — They intend to take a bus back to Burlington.

Billings Student Center Opens Doors To Visitors

by Roberta Levy

The Billings Building, which has been in the process of becoming our new Billings Center ever since the Billings to Bailey move last year, will soon be opened for use. The building probably won't be in operation until after Kake Walk because it was necessary to see how the various rooms, lounges, offices and snack bar looked in their completed states before the proper furniture could be purchased. Even if Billings Center does not open before Kake Walk, tours will be conducted on Friday and Saturday afternoons of the Kake Walk weekend to all of those who wish to visit the building.

On the lower level we find the "Cattamount Den", which from now on will serve as our snack bar, replacing the one in Waterman. The Den seats 250 and is complete with a well lit cloak and book room and adequate telephones (pay phones and campus phones). The CYNIC, the Ariel, Student Photography and the Kake Walk offices are all on the snack bar level, each with its own large outside bulletin boards, within viewing distance of all students. There are three conference rooms in Billings Center, two on the same level as the Cattamount Den, and one in the part of the building that used to be the balcony.

The activities Room, or Main Lounge, will be used for just about everything. Within it are four carpeted music rooms with record players, a section of card tables for chess, checkers and cards, couches, easy chairs and reading lamps. The main lounge will act as a meeting place for lectures, conferences and quiet relaxation. One section on the main level will serve primarily as a quiet study and reading room with private study alcoves while the Marsh Room will serve mainly for relaxation and conversation. The mammoth fireplace can now be put to use. Billings Center is to be more than a union for recreational facilities but also an educational facility for programs and organizations. Emil Spees, the Director of Student Activities and the Billings Center, likes to think of it as a place for our campus community that compares to the New England Town Meeting Hall.

All ticket sales will take place in Billings Center from now on. Also, there will be a central file room where any student organization that wishes to, may keep its files and information. This central depository for files will be readily accessible to all student organizations.

Along the former balcony are more offices—Centaur, W.S.G.A., Student Association, Panhellenic, I.F.C., Student Court, Men's Residence Hall Council, and four available offices for periodic use that will not be assigned to any one particular organization.

The Billings Building, without its books and former overcrowded conditions, has been transformed into our student center but still has kept some of the old character in its wooden balconies, stairs, Syrian Arches, fireplaces, gas lamps, and old "Richardson" chairs from the library. The building, now a combination of snack bar, study halls, lounges, conference rooms, music rooms and offices has come to life while keeping its old character and tradition.

Through these doors, the students of UVM will find music and study books, a coffee shop and many other exciting, new advantages.

Climax Of A Year's Work

Go! Go! Go!

(Credit: Ojanen, S.P.S.)

As the band strikes up the first few notes of "Cotton Babes" on Friday, February 22, and Saturday, February 23, the climactic Kake Walking will take place in the new Roy L. Patrick Gymnasium. To the fraternity men who have practiced for so long, the two minutes of the walk will be the peak of the timeless hours spent in perfecting each motion.

Way back in September, each fraternity selected two members to represent them at Kake Walk. Naturally, each house assumes that its walkers are the best. The members of the team are usually about the same height and weight. Due to their agility, the tall, thin boys do the best jobs.

Once the team is chosen, the walkers have all they can do to devote hour upon hour on workouts. These consist of exercises of all sorts, running and jumping, and a general toning of all the muscles. From Thanksgiving until Kake Walk, the boys selflessly give up smoking, drinking and excess dating in order to give their all to the performance.

Another important element in walking is exact timing. If so much as one step is taken at the wrong second, the whole routine is ruined. It is a necessity that the boys start at the same time and on the same foot.

At the Kake Walk presentation, the spectators see only the two walkers from each house. However, the coach, a behind-the-scenes man, is another important member of the team. Without him, the boys would not have sufficient coordination for a successful walk. Frequently, the coach himself is a former walker. Besides spurring the team on when things look grim, the coach also instills a winning spirit in each participant.

Thanks to the cooperation of every Kake Walker, and every coach, each two minute walk is a thrilling experience. The air is tingling not only in the fraternity houses prior to the presentation, but also in the audience when the walkers appear. Good Luck to all "them cotton babes" when, at our famous Kake Walk, they will do all they can to win a piece of Kake.

Greeks Cut Up In Skits

Alpha Chi Omega's saga of the ugly princess.

(Credit: J. Sulton, S.P.S.)

The traditional sequel to Pop's Night, the Coffee Shop Skits, was traditionally different this year. Because the period of royalty campaigns were extended from three to ten days, they were held a week later. And this year Southwick Gym became a makeshift Coffee Shop for the Saturday afternoon event.

Each of the eight contending fraternities and sororities presented their choice for king and queen in the royal fashion that best suited their candidates. A shower of favors followed each of the skits.

ENGINEERING BUILDING NEARS COMPLETION

Build we must for a Growing UVM.

(Credit: Sulton, S.P.S.)

By Steven D. Adler

The new engineering building at UVM has been in the planning stage for many years. Dean Edd R. McKee, Dean of the College of Technology, reports that when he came to the University in 1934, he was informed that there would be a new building "soon"; he even has an architectural drawing which dates back to 1928. It has taken time and there were many disappointments, but the engineering staff kept the spark alive during the following decades. It is now 1963 and the dream is rapidly becoming a reality. By New Year's '64, the new engineering building should be completed. In the words of Dean McKee, "This new structure will represent many things to many people. Everyone—faculty, undergraduates, and graduate students—will be able to point with pride to the building and its modern facilities."

Yet, Dean McKee has forgotten to mention one very important group of men without whom the new building would still be a dream. These are the employees of the H. B. Cummings Construction Company who face the wind and snows of Vermont while building our new home for engineers. These workers must pour concrete every Tuesday and Thursday, regardless of the outside temperature. For instance, they poured concrete the day it was 27 degrees below zero—a day the pipes and gas lines froze. The builders are also responsible for the internal and external beauty of the edifice. They will use multi-colored, glazed concrete blocks in the toilets, corridors and stairwells. There will be a promenade deck on the roof, and the one-piece metal window frames will each be two stories high. After the construction is finished, the construction men will become a demolition crew and reduce our lovely East Hall to nothing more than a fond memory.

Yet these very same men must daily face a necessary evil which, according to Mr. Shand, Superintendent for H. B. Cummings, "raises production costs by 300 percent." What is this unwanted necessity? Surprisingly, it is the Polyethylene plastic covering on the structure which not only serves as a wind breaker, but also causes an indoor shower each morning. Mr. Shand explains this unusual "rainfall" as a result of evaporation from concrete poured at 70 degrees condensing on the plastic surface. When the little oil burners that heat the structure are turned off in the evening, the condensation freezes. In the morning, the heaters are turned on again and the large accumulation of ice precipitates as rain. Then the plastic must be temporarily removed to let the moisture escape.

Against all these hazards, the construction workers are not delayed in their determined effort. They are right on schedule now and will have completed a job well done before the spring of '64. So let's give credit where credit is due, to the men who are the real creators of UVM's new engineering plant.

History Recaptures KW Tradition

by Janet Hadda

One of UVM's oldest and best-loved traditions is here again! Like any other tradition, Kake Walk has had many things happen to it, to make it the event we know today.

Our first "winter carnival" was held in 1893, when the Military Ball was cancelled. Instead, skits were held which were considered both amusing and financially successful (net profit: $165!).

In 1894, "Walkin' fo' de Kake" was initiated. This old Southern harvest dance featured a pair of plantation workers competing for a cake.

Kake Walk was considered to be too wild by the administration (they seem to have been conditioned by now,) and the event was not repeated until 1897, when it was used to raise funds for the football team.

By 1900, a new feature had been added to Kake Walk. This was a parade, participated in by most students at the University, and characterized by a vast array of colorful costumes.

Kake Walk was already firmly established in 1901, when there was a record turn-out - 800 people. As was to be the custom for many years to come, Sherman's Band played. Five couples "walked fo' de kake."

In 1903, instead of holding the holiday in the fall or winter, it was moved up to the closest weekend to Washington's birthday. Kake Walk was then held in the "new gym."

Cotton Babes is the theme tune of Kake Walk. It was written in 1904 by Percy Wenrich. This familiar song almost lost its claim to fame when every copy was destroyed by fire in the same year as it was written. From memory, however, Dr. Joseph Lechnyr rewrote the entire score for every instrument. In memory of his contribution to Kake Walk, the Joseph E. Lechnyr Memorial Award is presented to the fraternity "which most nearly approaches the spirit and devotion of Kake Walk, exemplified by Joe Lechnyr."

It is odd, but in the early years of Kake Walk, the actual walking was not the highlight of the holiday. In fact, in 1904, only two couples participated in the walking; one was from the Medical School, the other was from the academic section.

By 1910, up to six couples walked. As a novelty, the walkers had bales of cotton in their paths. At an appointed time, pickaninies jumped out from behind the bales and joined in the dance. Apparently, it was not too successful.

In 1934, the first king and queen elections were held, but, at that time, they were somewhat different than they are now. The candidates belonged to political parties and had to electioneer. Once the king was elected he could choose his queen by dice rolling. This was rather an un-queenlike procedure, so in 1936, the queens were also elected.

was very firmly established and accepted by 1952, in that year, disputes over the blackening of the Walkers' faces caused some action to be taken. Charley Johnson, who introduced "Coke Walk", was invited to attend our Kake Walk in order to settle the dispute over whether or not to blacken the faces of the walkers. Unfortunately, he was unable to come because he had cataracts on both eyes, but it was inferred by his letter, that he found nothing wrong with the practice.

Kake Walk has come a long way since its uncertain beginning. We have seen the impromptu stage where most festivities were private, the Armory Days (when Kake Walk was held on the present site of the Fletcher Library), the Stage where the fraternities put on stunts for which there was generally little preparation, from these stages, we have arrived at our present level of careful planning and elaborate execution of plans.

After almost fading out in its early days because of lack of interest, Kake Walk is now the highlight of the UVM year. Walking fo' de Kake has developed from just one small event of a one night winter carnival to a highly competitive and important event of the weekend.

Each year, it is predicted that "This Kake Walk will be the biggest yet", however, with the facilities of the new gym, it really should be the most spectacular Kake Walk of all.

Four Directors, Assistants Guide Kake Walk

Any program presented to the public requires many months of planning and preparation. Kake Walk is no exception. In fact, Kake Walk must be an outstanding "show" requiring more than the usual preparation for not only is Kake Walk, America's oldest winter carnival, but is representative of the University of Vermont. Realizing these two facts, the Directors of Kake Walk strive to create an exceptional program which will add to the pride of the history of Kake Walk and fulfill its obligation of representing UVM. As the men behind the scenes, the Directors have spent countless hours during the past months insuring the success of this 66th Kake Walk. Budgeting time has become a specialty with these men for they are not only Kake Walk Directors but active members in other campus organizations and, strangely enough, students.

Production, finance, and publicity are the major areas which require the efforts of the Kake Walk Directors. James Newman is the man who handles the production aspect of this year's presentation. Jim, from Burlington, is a member of Sigma Phi and is majoring in Engineering Management. He coordinates the work of the other Directors as well as fulfilling the requirements of his own position. As Production Director he is responsible for the hiring of the entertainment for the jazz concert and the band for the Kake Walk Ball. He is also responsible for the coordination and presentation of the walking and skits. His campus activities include ASME, Student Association Gold Key and Key and Serpent Honorary Societies. As a member of the Advanced ROTC Program Jim foresees his immediate future as an officer in the Army.

This year's Financial Director is Frank Amato. A member of Sigma Alpha Epsilon hailing from Oceanside, New Jersey, Frank is an Industrial Management major. Besides handling the year-round financial matters Frank is responsible for ticket distribution and seating arrangements. His campus activities include being vice-president of his class for three years, membership in the Boulder Society, and Ethan Allen Rifles Honor Society. Frank has also played Varsity football for three years.

Neal Adams is the Publicity Director for the 66th Kake Walk. From Union, New Jersey, Neal is a member of Sigma Phi Epsilon. His responsibility lies in local and national publicity for the Kake Walk festivities. Included in his activities are Interfraternity Council and Boulder Society. As a senior in the College of Education and a member of the Advanced ROTC Corps Neal plans to serve as an officer in the Army and then a career in teaching.

Bill Cullen, from Hamden, Connecticut, serves as an Associate Director of this year's program. Presently serving as president of Delta Psi, Bill has as his Kake Walk responsibility the task of ironing out the many problems which have arisen from moving the festivities into the Patrick Gymnasium. Bill's campus activities center around the Student Court of which he is presently Chief Justice. He is an Economics major in the College of Arts and Sciences.

The Nutmeg State and the Green Mountain State are the states from which this year's assistant Kake Walk directors hail. Fred Weisberg and Dave Maichuk are from Stamford, Connecticut and Rockville, Conn., respectively, while Carl Eells and Jim Richardson are from Rochester and Barre, Vermont.

Fred, a brother in Phi Sigma Delta, organizes and schedules walking rehearsals and puts the walkers through their paces making sure that the walking rules are followed to the letter. He is also responsible for organizing the King and Queen campaigns and presentation of skits at Pops Night.

Dave, a Phi Delta, is this year's publicity man. His main responsibility lies in soliciting advertisements, writing copy and setting up the program for the weekend. The Poster and Snow Sculptture Contests are also his responsibilities as are press releases and window displays.

Carl, a brother in Acacia, is Assistant Finance Director. As one of the financial wizards of the committee Carl is responsible for purchasing trophies and cakes. His major responsibility is ticket distribution. Since working on the Kake Walk Committee he has become very proficient in coming out with a very diplomatic "no."

Jim, a Theta Chi, is responsible for scheduling skit rehearsals and organizing the skit presentations the night of walking. He is also responsible for creating the atmosphere of the Kake Walk Ball.

Editor's Scrapbook An Allegory

EDITOR'S NOTE:

Below is a child's bedtime story. Read it if you wish a few moments pause this exciting weekend. Read it if you are curious to see why this is written in "double column," and almost everything else is printed in "single column." Read it before you tear the page out just to make sure you are not tearing out anything important. Whatever you reason, be sure to read it. It is the story of The Child Who Was Given a Little Black Train.

It was told to this editor by a wonderful talking termite. Milquetoast the Talking Termite, if you will. It seems this hapless termite was ensnared in the folds of the skirt of a pretty UVM co-ed, attendant at Battery Park for the fourth running of the Classical Affair Submarine Races. It seems Milquetoast did not come out in the wash, and was transported to his present quarters in East Hall via this very same dress about a week after the aforementioned races. He built a rather comfortable home in my file cabinet, under the "Startling Revelations" division in particular. He would have gone unnoticed, since this drawer is rarely opened, had I not been doing a bit of housecleaning, prior to our moving into new quarters in Billings Center. The termite was rather disturbed, fearing I might decide to kill him. (I had entertained no such thoughts). At first, I was rather taken back by his unusual power to talk, but we rapidly became acquainted with one another. He displayed some disgust with several of my past editorials (apparently he was also able to read), and said I might do better if I took to writing nursery rhymes, and children's stories. I stated I might just do that, if he would provide me with some material. He did, and so below, compliments of Milquetoast, is a story for your enjoyment.

Some, far wiser than I, have called it an allegory, and a brief critique on the Well, read it and judge for yourself, but perhaps many years from now, Kake Walk will bear sad testimony to The Child Who Was Given a Little Black Train.

Father gives his Son a present. It is a set of toy trains, complete in detail, from powerful Black engine, to gleaming red and black caboose. The Child squeals with delight at the opportunity of owning something. It can call its own, already envisions the glistening brooks, craggy mountains, and peaceful farms which will soon be assembled on a board. A microcosm, so to speak, and a chance for the Child to demonstrate his artistic and creative talents. Admittedly, the project does not call for intellectual profundities, now does tax the Child's physical or emotional abilities. Father has given his Son a proper toy, and an amusing diversion.

And so the Son sets to work, lays the foundation for the scenery, and twists and winds the track through tunnels and over bridges. The loose wire and paper mache begin to mold, the wooden board becomes a green carpet. Buildings are added, and further refinements of a civilized people are reflected in miniature on the board. The Child lies awake nights thinking of ways to improve his wonderful train set, and spends endless hours patiently molding the little world his heart and mind have created. Father lends a helping and guiding hand. He even seems almost as anxious as the little boy to see the powerful Engine chug up the mountains and come roaring out of the darkness of the tunnels.

It is Friday afternoon. The Child rushes home from school and runs down into the basement. He works furiously to put the last finishing touches on his masterpiece. Father will be home from work soon, and he wishes to surprise him. The Train is ready to run.

And a wonderful piece of work it is. Perhaps not perfect in every detail. But then, who expects perfection from such a Child? And who need look so closely and scrutinize so feverishly a mere diversion of a Child? In time, Father will help iron out these little imperfections: the slight tilt on the building over there; the slightly crooked track on that sharp bend there, in the corner.

And so the young Child is content, and under the watchful eye of his father, expands the train set, and sets out to make modifications and improvements. But what fun the set is. Even Father likes to play with it occasionally.

Eventually, several of the Child's friends here about his wonderful train set, and come to see it. "My, you don't come to my house very often to play with me. How come you're here so often now," says the Child, with a somewhat puzzled expression. "My trains! You'd like to see my toy trains?" The Child's face shone in anticipation of demonstrating his accomplishment. "Sure, you can see my trains. I'll even let you play with them, but only for a little while, 'cause they're mine," the Child said, a bit of apprehension creeping into his voice.

And so it happened, on successive weekends, the Father, his Child, and all the young one's Friends would gather to play with the toy trains. And everyone had a good time.

And this went on for many weekends, until all the Friends took it upon themselves to say: "Our trains," and they even elected a president to be in charge of the small assemblage, and to guide the running of the trains.

And now the Child is unhappy. He got to play with his very own trains only as much as all the other boys. And Father approved, perhaps thinking that this would provide good training for the young child. But the Child only became hostile toward the others; for although they called themselves Friends, he did not truly believe they were. After all, weren't Friends supposed to do something for him in return for using his trains? "Oh, No!" they exclaimed, "you have it all wrong. They're not your trains, they're our trains. Remember?"

All children do grow up, and in maturing divert their interests in other directions. Yet it is fun to visit that dusty corner in the basement, throw the switch and watch the Little Black Engine whistle past, to the very last car, the little caboose with the black roof.

WSGA Abolishes Honor Pledge

The WSGA Council recently approved several changes in its constitution and by-laws. Paramount among the changes will be the future exclusion of the Honor pledge from the WSGA Handbook. Freshman women will no longer be required to recite it.

However, each woman student is still responsible for upholding the University and WSGA standards and rules. Any violations should be reported by the individual to the House President, or to any other member of House Committee.

House committee is then responsible for taking the appropriate disciplinary action as indicated by any violations which are reported by the individual, as well as those violations which are not reported by the individual.

These revisions were the result of feelings expressed during various floor and administrative conclaves. In reality, honors will still remain as the basis of government, but more emphasis has been placed on personal honor.

No clear line of distinction within the rules has been made as to self-government, but rather it is hoped that an intangible feeling guided by the conscience will be created.

Pops Night

Dear Sir,

Probably since the beginning of time, man has appreciated the value of a good joke. People in the late 20's and the war years needed a good hearty laugh, and names like Cantor, Durante, Foy, and Hope are still loved for their efforts to arouse the sense of humor. There was the type of humor that kindled a warm glow inside and made a person feel good all over.

Not by the wildest stretch of the imagination could the Pops Night fraternity skits be considered as that type of humor. The vulgarity of these shows disgusted almost everyone. I say almost because there are exceptions to every rule. All the people around, seniors as well as freshmen, were commenting on this nauseating show of immorality. Sure, they were laughing; they couldn't help it. But they were laughing at the guys, not with them. Their conduct was too disgusting to be funny. Do they really think that students pack the gym and coffee shop to see that kind of trash?

Getting a pie in the face was a sure way of getting a laugh years ago from people of any size and any tongue. Apparently, the commonplace sport nowadays at UVM is filling a skirt and sweater, or emptying them. And all this is to sell the Integrity, Charm, and Attractiveness of their candidate who, they hope, will be elected a center of attraction for Kake Walk Weekend, as well as an extra credit for his frat. I have often received the impression that the guys on the stage would rather be doing anything else. This type of humor has always drawn laughter in the past, so it must be used again, and again. Drinking and W.S.G.A. are a couple more worn out themes that reappear every year.

I've heard it said in high school, "You can't be morons or you would not have gotten this far." It is to be expected that anyone in college has a certain amount of brains. Anyone who can meet the activities and marks required by the Greek clubs must have an extra helping. So, why can't they be used with a little elbow grease to produce a skit that would really be appreciated?

Dr. George Dykhuizen, chairman of the Philosophy Department and Faculty Advisor to the CYNIC, has written the Professores for the Kake Walk issue of the CYNIC.

Professores

An ancient Greek, I believe it was Heraclitus, once made the remark that a man may learn and learn and still be a fool. This statement is worth pondering - especially for those of us, students and faculty, engaged in education on the university level. For a university is concerned with the advancement of learning and with seeing that those who come under its influence are wise and not foolish in the conduct of human affairs.

The remark cited indicates that these two goals do not necessarily coalesce. It implies that a student during his years in college may acquire a vast amount of information and still be no better off than the uninformed person in grappling with human problems. It implies that a student may have knowledge but not necessarily wisdom or the ability to apply what he knows to the enrichment of his own life and that of others.

This fact came home to me a few days ago when a student entered my office and complained that this was happening to him. He said that he was taking courses which introduced him to a huge amount of facts but which made little or no attempt to evaluate these facts and to show their bearing on human life. And he raised again the old question as to what precisely the duty of an instructor ought to be. Should he conceive his task to be solely that of acquainting his students with the facts relating to his discipline, or should he also add to this an appraisal of his own? Should an economist, for example, stop when he has described the different types of economic organization, e.g., capitalist, communist, socialist, etc., or should he also attempt to evaluate them in terms of human welfare? Should a political scientist rest content when he has examined with his students the structure and functions of the several kinds of government, e.g., democratic, communist, fascist, etc., or should he also appraise them? Should a cultural anthropologist confine his work to passing in review the various cultures which men have evolved through the ages, or should he also pass judgment upon them?

I told my friend that two different schools of thought prevail in university circles concerning this matter. One group holds that the instructor should stay with the facts and leave the evaluation of facts to the student. To introduce value judgments into their discussions, the members of this school argue, is to introduce personal bias and prejudice into their subject-matter and this they cannot rightly do. The only proper course for the instructor to pursue, therefore, is to present the facts as accurately, objectively, and comprehensively as he can and to leave to the student the task of evaluating them. The other group declares that the instructor should permit value judgments to intrude and that his task is not finished till he has allowed this.

Upon being asked to what school I belonged, my reply was that I adhered to the second and for the following reasons. First, knowledge that is mere knowledge and in no way related to human values remains sterile and inactive whereas it ought to inspire and serve as the basis for intelligent and right action. To bring knowledge into close and dynamic relation to actual living as the instructor does when he relates it to human needs and values is to vitalize it and make it significant. I quite agree with Alfred North Whitehead when he warns against "the aimless accumulation of precise knowledge, inert and unutilized."

Secondly, I believe that the instructor can allow value judgments to enter into classroom discussions without letting his own personal bias and prejudice to prevail. This becomes so when the class as a whole is encouraged to take part in the evaluational process and when all points of view are allowed to compete in the free give and take of the classroom. Such discussions represent the quest for wisdom in a particular field, and their worth to the student can scarcely be exaggerated.

Thirdly, I believe that it is a false dichotomy which opposes facts and values and which declares that some courses, e.g., those in the natural and social sciences, are inherently and of necessity exclusively factual in content and descriptive in method, and other courses, e.g., those in the humanities, are inherently and of necessity exclusively valuational in content and normative in method. And it is a wholly artificial and inadequate policy which hopes to establish a balance between facts and values by requiring the student to supplement his courses in science with courses, say, in the humanities. The truth is that values are facts evaluated and facts are values made real.

All of this presupposes, I might have told my student friend if he had had the time to linger, that the soul of the educational process is the pursuit of wisdom. "Happy is the man that findeth wisdom" - not knowledge. Wisdom - not knowledge - "is more precious than rubies," and it is a wise son - not a merely informed one - that "maketh a glad father."

But in the pursuit of wisdom let no one discount the importance of factual knowledge. For wisdom, to be truly wisdom, must be grounded in knowledge of facts. But knowledge of and fidelity to fact are only the beginning of wisdom. To achieve wisdom, the individual must know how to put his facts in their larger moral and social context and to make them serve human needs and aspirations.

"De Cake" Is Symbol Of Kake Walk

Like all traditions, the colorful cake awards of Kake Walk Night have deep and historic origins. The symbol of "de cake" has, for the UVMer, a significant meaning, although he may be unaware of the origin of the cake's symbol.

It started in the deep South in the days of the gentleman farmer when plantation workers would celebrate the completion of the year's work with festivities similar to that of our own Kake Walk. The younger laborers would step and kick lively to the music of fiddles. Couples were judged, in the meantime, according to the precision of the grace and agility of their partners. One by one, pairs were eliminated until the winning couple was chosen. This last and final pair of precision dancers was awarded a giant and highly decorated cake. Thus, the origin of the presentation of the cake has evolved.

Sixty-three years ago, the entire tradition of the plantation workers was imitated by the Northern Yankee; it has stayed at UVM ever since. With the development of the Kake Walk tradition, there has been a corresponding increase of competition in various campus activities. Now candidates campaign for King and Queen of the Kake Walk Ball; fraternities and sororities compete for snow sculpture and Kake Walk poster awards. Skits with a common theme have also become an integral part of Kake Walk Holiday. Here the symbolic meaning of the cake appears once again. Cakes of different sizes are awarded to the winners in each of the above categories of competition. When one realizes the work that is involved in trying to win one of the cakes, no matter what size it may be, the winner's ecstasy should be apparent to everyone present at Kake Walk Night.

The traditional symbol of Kake Walk, "de cake", which is given as a prize to the winners of the walking, skits, and sculptures.

...NOT AGAIN THIS YEAR!

Silks And Satins Of The Walkers

Fraternities line up after a hard evening of walking.

(Credit: Parks, S.P.S.)

It's that time again, Kake Walk is virtually the only current topic of campus chatter. An influx of co-eds from everywhere by any means of transportation possible lends an aura of excitement and expectations to the atmosphere. Vermont's most colossal college weekend is just around the corner.

The Kake Walk format is traditional with the ball, skits, and jazz concerts as an integral part of the weekend. The most keenly anticipated part, however, is Walkin' For De Kake, when fraternities vie for the coveted Kake denoting excellence in performing the intricate and precise routines of Walking.

Kake Walk's famed climax is a time of splendor and gaiety both of which are reflected in the striking silks and satins of the costumed walkers. Each house has its particular colors and costumes by which the fraternities can recognize their Walkers, since the teams are called by numbers and not by name. Here's a list to help you keep them straight too.

Acacia - black vests with gold lapels, black trousers with gold stripe down side.

Alpha Epsilon Pi - gold pants with blue stripes, gold vest and tails with blue trimming.

Alpha Gamma Rho - for the second year they will wear green and gold.

Alpha Tau Omega - blue costume with gold trim and gold buttons.

Delta Psi - black and white vertical stripes.

Kappa Sigma - green pants and tails with red vest.

Lambda Iota - white pants, red vest, red and white stripe vest.

Phi Delta Theta - blue costume with silver trim.

Phi Mu Delta - orange and black.

Phi Sigma Delta - violet costume with white lapels and white stripe down side.

Sigma Alpha Epsilon - kelly green costume with silver sequins.

Sigma Nu - pink and white costume without tails.

Sigma Phi - blue and white.

Sigma Phi Epsilon - red and purple.

Tau Epsilon Phi - blue tails, white trousers with blue stripes down sides.

'62' KW King Queen

Reminisce Their Reign

King Scott and Queen Roanne smile joyously as they reign over Kake Walk 1962.

(Credit: S.P.S.)

When the snow sculptures start appearing on campus, and the Pop's Night skits and Penny Carnival are presented, and the tune of "Cotton Babes" becomes the UVM anthem, many memories are rekindled. Some remember the hilarity of a coffee shop skit, some remember the anxiety before the first "walking", but to at least two people, the memory is a royal one.

To Roanne Bockar and Scott Johnson, Kake Walk King and Queen of 1962, it was a memorable experience. Roanne described her reign as "an enchanting whirlwind of fun and excitement. I felt honored in having the chance to be an integral part of the 65th Kake Walk, and in being able to represent my sorority."

Roanne, a 1962 graduate of UVM hails from Newburgh, New York. She is presently a teacher in a New Jersey elementary school and living in New York City. During her four years on campus she was Social chairman of Alpha Epsilon Phi, Society editor of the CYNIC, and secretary of her senior class.

"I'm looking forward to seeing Kake Walk again this year and reliving my wonderful experiences."

Scott felt his reign was "A great experience. As king, I was really a part of Kake Walk; I was able to see the whole weekend from an 'inside' point of view. It was a great thrill and an honor to represent UVM and Sigma Phi."

A native of Sudbury, Vermont, Scott is presently doing graduate work in the Department of Horticulture at UVM. Having graduated from UVM last year as a horticulture major, he was also house manager of Sigma Phi Fraternity and president of the Class of 1962. Scott was active in fraternity athletics, as well.

He is engaged to Elaine Wright, a girl who sports as many regal titles as he -- Greek Week Queen, 1962; Miss Vermont, 1962.

Scott feels that this year's Kake Walk will be "better than ever. The new gym should really add to the excitement." And, as the voice of experience, he urges all the candidates for Kake Walk royalty to "get rid of their jitters, and enjoy it!"

Freshman Designs Winning KW Poster

(Credit: Eldred, Audio Visual)

The striking yellow and black Kake Walk poster that is being displayed on campus and in town, was designed this year by Barbara Asplund, a freshman in the College of Home Economics. Drawing must be natural to Barbara, for she claims that she has never had any formal training except for what she has received this year in the design course given by the Home Economics School. The drawing of the Mona Lisa displayed in Terrill Hall a while ago was done by this same girl, and an article on Barbara and her drawing appeared in the Burlington Free Press at that time.

Barbara heard about the Kake-Walk poster contest immediately after the Homecoming Weekend, and decided to enter. She had a slight problem at the time though, for she did not know what a Kake-Walker looked like. She realized that a facsimile of one should appear on the poster. Once that hurdle was cleared, Barbara started drawing silhouettes of a kneeling Kake Walker, but soon decided that they did not look realistic and that she wasn't drawing them well. The abstract that we see in the final poster is drawn in what she considers her "style." It's a style of suggestion leaving things up to the imagination. It is also a style of bold, hard lines. To balance the walker she picked lettering that she thought appropriate, small letters in large size. She chose the yellow and black for effect.

After several false head starts, a final copy was turned in, and she settled down to a tense wait. Penny Carnival seemed awfully far away. But it was worth it. Congratulations Barbara, for a job well done!

KAKE WALK SECRETARY

Behind the scenes of Kake Walk '63 is the efficient personage of Kake Walk Secretary Peggy Lund.

by Steven D. Adler

Serving as the 1963 Secretary to Kake Walk is Miss Peggy Lund, a senior student in the College of Agriculture and Home Economics. Miss Lund was chosen for this position primarily for her experience in newspaper work. In fact, she spent last summer working as a floating editor for eleven weekly papers in Bloomfield, New Jersey. A sorority sister in Kappa Alpha Theta, Peggy is quite a busy co-ed on campus. At the Theta House, Peggy serves as art chairman, and she is also Secretary of Omnicron Nu, the national home economics honorary. In her major department, which is Home Economics, Peggy is interested in clothing and textiles. Outside of classes, she is an avid writer, enjoys horseback and skating.

Big Three KW Advisors

Dr. Fredric Marston, Professor of English at the University, is the faculty advisor to Kake Walk.

by Steven D. Adler

One of the most important behind-the-scenes men of Kake Walk this year, and for five years previous to this, is Frederic C. Marston, Jr., Professor of English. As one of the faculty advisors to the '63 Kake Walk, Dr. Marston takes an enthusiastic interest in his position. He feels that this traditional weekend is a time when spirits are at a peak. One reason for his great interest in the preparation of Kake Walk stems from his observation that this is an all-campus project. Many individuals and organizations contribute to assure its success. Marston also believes that Kake Walk is a stimulant to creative thinking, which often results in interesting innovations.

Professor Marston took a leave of absence last term. For a while it was feared that he would not be able to participate in this year's big weekend, but that fear is with us no longer. He is bringing the great enthusiasm this year again that he has brought to Kake

Serving as faculty advisor of Kake Walk first semester, Dr. Milton Nadworny, now assumes the position of over-all advisor to the Kake Walk Directors.

Walk as advisor, in the past. On the scholastic side of Marston's life, he is well acquainted with Williams and Duke, having obtained his bachelor's and doctor's degrees from those colleges, respectively. A ten year period was spent teaching English at Brown University before Marston came to UVM in 1948. Besides the usual freshman and sophomore courses, Marston is also teaching a course with a rather unusual title, "Literature of the American Frontier."

A second advisor to the 1963 Kake Walk festivities is Dr. Milton J. Nadworny, Professor of Commerce and Economics. Dr. Nadworny filled in this year as Kake Walk Faculty Advisor while Dr. Marston was on his sabbatical leave. However, Nadworny is by no means a novice in this position; in fact, he held the very same position several years prior to Dr. Marston's assumption of the duty. This year Dr. Nadworny is serving as general over-all advisor to the three Kake Walk Directors, Neal Adams, Frank Amato and James

Mr. Gordon Paterson, is Assistant Treasurer of the University, and holds the position of Financial Advisor to this year's Kake Walk.

Newman. He sits in at all meetings and is helping in production. Professor Nadworny, who also serves as acting Chairman of the Department of Commerce and Economics, has authored a paper on "Frank and Lillian Gilbreth and Industrial Relations" which appeared in the March-April issue of the Journal of Industrial Engineering and in a reprint issue containing a number of special papers on the Gilbreths.

The third advisor to UVM's big weekend of '63 is Mr. Gordon Paterson, Assistant Treasurer of the University. After holding this faculty position for the past four years, it is only natural that Mr. Paterson is serving as Financial Advisor to this year's Kake Walk. In this capacity, he advises the Kake Walk Financial Director, Frank Amato, on budgetary matters, authorizes expenditures, assists in the preparation of the Annual Kake Walk Financial Report, and sits in on all meetings of the Kake Walk committee.

Mr. Paterson, a native of Barre, Vermont, is married and now resides in Burlington.

Origin of "Cotton Babes" Belongs to KW Tradition

by Linda Herzenberg

Each year, as the middle of February arrives and Kake Walk approaches, the UVM campus is filled with the strains of Percy Wenrich's "Cotton Babes". Since 1913, "Cotton Babes" has been the theme song for Kake Walk.

At the time it was popular, "Cotton Babes" was a favorite cake walking melody. Once a year, Percy Wenrich's song relives its past glory.

Little known in Vermont is the fact that the composer of "Cotton Babes" was one of the most famous and productive songwriters of the 1910's and 20's. Wenrich is still remembered by music lovers for his biggest hits which included "Moonlight Bay", "Put On Your Old Gray Bonnet", and "When You Wore a Tulip and I Wore a Big Red Rose." When "Cotton Babes" became the UVM theme song for Kake Walk, the music was first played by the Burlington Military Band, under the direction of George D. Sherman. Since 1921, Joseph Lechnyr was the only one who ever performed "Cotton Babes". When the Hayward Building burned down in 1929, Lechnyr rewrote Wenrich's "Cotton Babes" from memory, thus saving the melody for the sake of posterity.

Percy Wenrich was born in Joplin, Missouri in 1887. His father loved to write music for political conventions and rallies in which he was usually involved. His mother, an accomplished musician taught him to play the piano and the organ. Showing his musical talent in his youth, Wenrich used to perform his compositions with the aid of his glee club at political rallies. At the age of twenty-one, Percy was sent to the Chicago Musical College to study the organ. However, once he had been removed from the watchful eyes of his parents, he broke away from his interest in the organ and began to write popular songs. As is the way with many young artists, Wenrich's first attempts were unsuccessful. His first break came when Frank Buck of Buck and Carney Music Publishers gave Wenrich the opportunity to write a song about Africa. Buck, having just returned from Africa thought there might be potential in such a song and even supplied the young writer with the title, "Ashy-Africa." Along with this publication was another song, "Just Because I'm From Missouri." His immediate success from these songs established Wenrich in the songwriting business.

When his profession was on the downgrade and Wenrich was about to return home to Joplin, he landed a job plugging songs in the music department of Gimbel's Milwaukee department store. It was then that another song of his became a local hit - "Under The Tropical Moon." This provided Wenrich with enough confidence and money to get to New York. The road from here was not all clear sailing, but in the following years several other songs, such as "Rainbow" which established him as a professional composer, led him on to success. One of his songs, "Put On Your Old Gray Bonnet", became President Wilson's favorite song. In the fruitful years that followed, Percy Wenrich composed such greats as "Moonlight Bay" and "When You Wore a Tulip and I Wore a Big Red Rose."

Wenrich, although still composing, set up his own publishing firm in partnership with Homer Howard which he soon sold to Leo Feist along with the rights to publish his songs. During World War I, Wenrich produced such war hits as "Where Do We Go From Here, Boys," which was sung by the Marines. This was Wenrich's last great popular song but not his last success.

Turning to the musical stage, Wenrich produced Castles in the Sky, an operetta (in collaboration with Ray Peck), and The Right Girl, a musical comedy. From 1914 till 1929, Percy Wenrich toured the vaudeville circuit with his wife, Dolly Connelly.

After his retirement from vaudeville, the composer lived in Hollywood until he was stricken with tuberculosis. He and his wife moved to Saranac Lake where she too became ill and was hospitalized for the rest of her life. During this time, Wenrich became an ardent member of the Lambs. In 1948, he wrote "Missouri, My State". His last musical effort was in 1952 when the Civil Air Patrol asked Wenrich to compose an official song. The completion and acceptance of his work, "Cadets of the Civil Air Patrol" - was too much for the elated composer and several days later he died, in March of 1952.

But every year, as there is a tense silence a drop of the handkerchief and the "Cotton Babes" melody fills the auditorium marking the beginning of a new Kake Walk. Percy Wenrich composer of so many well-known hits lives again on the UVM campus.

Four different ways to make going more fun than getting there

You can see why one of America's favorite outdoor sports is driving Chevrolets, with four entirely different kinds of cars to choose from. There's the Jet-smooth Chevrolet, about as luxurious as you can go without going overboard in price; the low-cost Chevy II, a good-looking car that would send any family packing; another family favorite, the sporty Corvair, whose rear-engine traction will make you think that ice and snow are kid stuff; and for pure adventure, America's only sports car, Corvette—now in two all-new versions with looks that can stop traffic like a rush-hour blizzard. Picked your favorite already?

The next thing is to take the wheel at your Chevrolet dealer's. If that doesn't have you thinking of places to go, maybe you'd rather just have a ball around town!

Cynic Cover Stars 3 Frats

For the University of Vermont's sixty-sixth Annual Kake Walk, the Kake Walkers of Tau Epsilon Phi Fraternity star on the cover of the Vermont CYNIC. Representing their fraternity are Steve Bernstein and Terry Finkel. Steve is a senior from New York City, majoring in accounting. This is Steve's third year as a walker "fo de Kake."

Terry Finkel will be high stepping with Steve for Tau Epsilon Phi. Terry is a junior from Great Neck, New York. He is also majoring in accounting. This will be Terry's second appearance as a Kake Walker.

The walkers of Phi Sigma Delta and Sigma Nu Fraternities both grace the back cover of this year's Kake Walk CYNIC. Jerry Drescher and Richie Greenberg were Phi Sigma Delta's walkers for Kake Walk, 1962. Jerry is a junior from Hewlet, New York, majoring in Business Administration. Richie Greenberg is a senior from Fairfield, Conn. He is a pre-medical student.

High stepping with Phi Sigma Delta, on the back cover are Skip White and Chad Morse. Skip is a native of Ridgewood, New Jersey. He is a senior, majoring in Accounting. Skip walked for Sigma Nu last year.

Skip White's partner is Chad Morse. Chad is a sophomore from Cambridge, New York. He is in the college of Arts and Sciences. Chad will be walking for Sigma Nu this year.

BROWNELL TO SPEAK AT GYM DEDICATION

A former member of the President's Citizens Committee on Youth Fitness will be the main speaker at the dedication of the gymnasium-field house at the University of Vermont.

Dr. Clifford L. Brownell, chairman and professor emeritus of the department of health education, physical recreation, and recreation at Columbia University, will speak at dedication ceremonies on Feb. 23. He served on President Eisenhower's committee from 1955-58.

A native of New York State, Dr. Brownell received his diploma from Oswego State College and his B.S., M.S., and Ph.D. degrees from Columbia. His work in the field of education has ranged from teaching in a one-room rural school before World War I to heading up educational departments in Massachusetts and Connecticut. From 1927-29, he was the director of health and physical education for the Ohio State Department of Education. In 1929, he returned east to his alma mater and in 1940 he became chairman of the department. He also was Visiting Professor at Springfield College and the University of Connecticut.

He holds membership in a number of professional organizations. He was president of the American Association for Health, Physical Education and Recreation from 1952-54 and has been a member of the board of directors of the National Commission on Safety Education of the National Education Assn., the Athletic Institute, the New York Tuberculosis and Health Assn., the AAHPER, and the American Book Co.

Happy Kake Walk

Ghosts From Kake Walk Past

by Betty Fuchs

Kake Walk 1963 will soon be only a memory. Will anything make this 66th annual Kake Walk unique? Besides the excitement of the walking, the hilarity of the skits, will some spontaneous and unusual event make Kake Walk '63 memorable?

Many other Kake Walks stand out in UVM's history. Take, for example, that of 1894, the second annual Kake Walk held in the "Loft" of the Old Mill. A keg of beer, furnished for the occasion, was the cause of some embarrassment the next morning when some of the beer trickled down into the old chapel below. The incident sealed the doom of Kake Walks '95 and '96 when the faculty lowered the ban.

Kake Walk proved itself versatile in 1918 when all proceeds from the weekend's activities were turned over to the Red Cross. There were some patriotic innovations in the walking, too. One pair of walkers carried knitting and worked for the soldiers as they walked. Another pair was rolled into the gym in a watermelon. To complete the picture of Kake Walk in wartime, a collapsible dirigible was gloated from one end of the gym to the other.

The year 1921 saw the birth of a new cinema star - Kake Walk took to the silver screen. Movie photographers from the studios of Pathe, Universal, and Underwood photographed the walkers and the skits put on by Phi Mu Delta, Sigma Nu, and Delta Psi. Kake Walk 1952 ran a close second prestigewise, gaining coverage in Life magazine.

One of the best stunts on record was put on in 1912 by Alpha Zeta, honorary agricultural society. A gong struck! Through the utter blackness of the hall appeared miscellaneous arms, legs, a head, and dismembered bodies of a phosphorescent character, all of which kept disappearing and appearing here and there in remote parts of the hall. Suddenly a comet with a fiery tail shot through the air. Instantly all the dissected bodies vanished and in the middle of the hall, there arose a huge, glowing devil which danced through the darkness with wierd, fantastic steps and then gradually faded away into invisibility. The lights flashed on. Not a sign of apparatus or of human life was to be seen on the floor!

Kake Walk today, a guaranteed success almost before it is begun, makes it difficult to imagine a time when enthusiasm for the annual event could have been lacking. But the year 1900 came close to marking the end of Kake Walk. Initiated as a project to raise money for athletics, the majority of UVM students in 1900 felt that Kake Walk had outlived its usefulness. A group of supporters, led by the Vermont CYNIC, campaigned so vigorously that Kake Walk was reinstated. During another lag of spirit in 1912, the following appeared in the CYNIC:

"Any man who does not take enough interest in his college to enter - and do that back-bending, knee-bending, glorious old Vermont walk - is unworthy to be a son of Vermont and should have his diploma denied to him at the end of his four year sojourn here." Apparently, it was Kake Walk or else!

And so Kake Walk survived, and grew, and changed. At various times Kake Walk has included a sugar-on-snow party, a masquerade ball, a winter sports competition. There were Kake Walks that lasted only one night. Kake Walks that saw women doing the walking, and even one Kake Walk where curfew was extended to allow for a sunrise dance after the walking. Where refreshments were served in the small hours of the morning and breakfast served at sunrise. Unlikely to appear again is the photograph snapped of Ira Allen in 1958. The dignified gentleman was photographed on his pedestal, his right arm clasping a whiskey bottle, while across his chest he bore a sign saying "No Dry Kake Walk."

Yes, Kake Walk has changed, and will go on changing. While you listen to "Cotton Babes" and watch the walkers doing the same routines that were done 66 years ago, keep one eye on the past and one on the future. What will Kake Walk '64 be like?

The symbol of triumph.

A Smashing Success At SAE

In the interest of promoting Kake Walk auto safety and its Kake Walk king candidate, Loren Disque, Sigma Alpha Epsilon held a "Car Smash" last Thursday afternoon. The car that was smashed was a 1946 Cadillac and the instrument of destruction was a 12-pound sledge-hammer. The whole endeavor may be justly called a "smashing success," as it did get across the message of driving safely over the Kake Walk Weekend, that is for all who have seen it, and it did receive quite a bit of publicity.

The first blow was wielded by Assistant Dean of Men, Carl Eycke, Dean Roland Patzer, Dean of Men, who out-weighs Dean Eycke by close to 60 pounds, was scheduled to take the first whack but a last minute meeting denied him the dubious honor of imparting the first dent on the helpless auto. In his stead, Dean Eycke did an admirable job. He raised the 12-pound blunt tool over his head and let fly with a crashing blow to the hood. He rapidly recovered his balance and delivered another glancing shot that hit the hood ornament. This powerful blow knocked off the Cadillac ornament which was quickly scooped up by John Stahler, part owner of the unfortunate Caddy.

John, who owns 2/3ths of the car along with 1/3 owner Duane Barber, hated to see his faithful jalopy deflowered in such an undignified fashion. The night before the smashing, he had to be convinced that the car would be consumed for a worthy cause. He balked, contending that it could be repaired but, at the urging of his fraternity brothers, he finally conceded and gave his reluctant approval.

The event was submitted to local radio and television stations for possible publicity. Radio station, WJOY, liked the idea and gave it extensive coverage. They played Peter, Paul and Mary's hit song of a few months ago, "If I Had A Hammer", along with the announcement of the "Smash" hourly, Wednesday. This progressive station, sensing the appeal of such an uncommon happening, covered it live, interrupting their regular broadcast for a few minutes to give their radio audience the sounds of a "Car Smash".

Television station WCAX featured the "Smash" on their News Time show as a local sidelight. They played-up the "get rid of your frustrations, unleash your tensions" angle and showed a film-clip of the actual smashing. The Free Press ran a picture of mighty Dean Eycke and Disque welling the first blows simultaneously. To all these forms of local communications, Sigma Alpha Epsilon would like to offer its thanks for their cooperation.

Now that all the dents have been delivered and all the windows have been broken (Incidentally, the girls liked to break the windows which may have some psychological implications.) The Caddy stands beat and battered as a reminder to all UVMers to drive safely during this festive weekend. Some of the "Smash" safety slogans were: "Smash a care with a hammer and not with your life," "If you plan to get smashed -- don't drive," and "Don't drive if you drink like a fish -- swim."

Financially, the event was a fiasco. The car is worth $15, and, at 2 shots for a quarter, a total of $12, was raised to cover operating expenses. It is hopeful however that the Caddy can be junked for what it was worth before the "Smash" because the same amount of metal is still there, only it is in a different form.

AT PRATT & WHITNEY AIRCRAFT...

YOUR EYES CAN BE ON THE STARS BUT YOUR FEET MUST BE ON THE GROUND

The glamour and excitement of space age programs often obscure a fundamental fact. It is simply that farsightedness must be coupled with sound, practical, down-to-earth engineering if goals are to be attained. This is the philosophy upon which Pratt & Whitney Aircraft's position as a world leader in flight propulsion systems has been built.

Almost four decades of solid engineering achievement at Pratt & Whitney Aircraft can be credited to management's conviction that basic and applied research is essential to healthy progress. In addition to concentrated research and development efforts on advanced gas turbine and rocket engines, new and exciting effects are being explored in every field of aerospace, marine and industrial power application.

The challenge of the future is indicated by current programs. Presently Pratt & Whitney Aircraft is exploring the areas of technical knowledge in magnetohydrodynamics . . . thermionic and thermoelectric conversions . . . hypersonic propulsion . . . fuel cells and nuclear power.

If you have interests in common with us, if you look to the future but desire to take a down-to-earth approach to get there, investigate career opportunities at Pratt & Whitney Aircraft.

To help move tomorrow closer to today, we continually seek ambitious young engineers and scientists. Your degree? It can be a B.S., M.S. or Ph.D. in: MECHANICAL • AERONAUTICAL • ELECTRICAL • CHEMICAL and NUCLEAR ENGINEERING • PHYSICS • CHEMISTRY • METALLURGY • CERAMICS • MATHEMATICS • ENGINEERING SCIENCE or APPLIED MECHANICS. The field still broadens. The challenge grows greater. And a future of recognition and advancement may be here for you.

For further information regarding an engineering career at Pratt & Whitney Aircraft, consult your college placement officer or write to Mr. William L. Stoner, Engineering Department, Pratt & Whitney Aircraft, East Hartford 8, Connecticut.

As was pointed out last week, one would think that with all the progress we have made in the education game, something might have been done by now about roommates. But no. The roommate picture has not brightened one bit since Ethan Goodpimple founded the first American college.

(Contrary to popular belief, Harvard was not the first. Mr. Goodpimple started his institution some 75 years earlier. And quite an institution it was, let me tell you! Mr. Goodpimple built schools of liberal arts, fine arts, dentistry, and tanning. He built a lacrosse stadium that seated 102,000. Everywhere on campus was emblazoned the stirring Latin motto CAVE MUSSI—"Watch out for moose." The student union contained a bowling alley, a clock, and a 16-chair barber shop.

And as for shaving, they didn't

(It was this last feature—the barber shop—that, alas, brought Mr. Goodpimple's college to an early end. The student body, being drawn from the nearby countryside, was composed chiefly of Pequots and Iroquois who, alas, had no need of a barber shop. They braid their hair instead of cutting it, and as for shaving, they don't. The barber, Tremblatt Follicle by name, grew so depressed staring all the time at 16 empty chairs that one day his mind finally gave way. Seizing his vibrator, he ran outside and shook the entire campus till it crumbled to dust. This later became known as Pickett's Charge.)

But I digress. We were discussing ways for you and your roommate to stop hating each other. This is admittedly difficult but not impossible if you will both bend a bit, give a little.

I remember, for example, my own college days (Berlitz, '08). My roommate was, I think you will allow, even less agreeable than most. He was a Tibetan named Ringading whose native customs, while indisputably colorful, were not entirely endearing. Mark you, I didn't mind so much the gong he struck on the hour or the string of firecrackers he set off on the half-hour. I didn't even mind his singing chicken feathers every dusk and daybreak. What I did mind was that he singed them in my hat.

To be fair, he was not totally taken with some of my habits either—especially my hobby of collecting water. I had no jars at the time and just had to stack the water any-old-where.

Well sir, things grew steadily cooler between Ringading and me, and they might have gotten actually ugly had we not each happened to receive a package from home one day. Ringading opened his package, paused, smiled shyly at me, and offered me a gift.

"Thank you," I said. "What is it?"

"Yak butter," he said. "You put it in your hair. In Tibetan we call it grog see kidstuff."

"Well now, that's mighty friendly," I said and offered him a gift from my package. "Now you must have one of mine."

"Thank you," he said. "What is this called?"

"Marlboro Cigarettes," I said and held a match for him.

He puffed. "Wow!" he said. "This sure beats chicken feathers!"

"Or anything else you could name," I said, lighting my own Marlboro.

And as we sat together and enjoyed that fine flavorful Marlboro tobacco, that pure white Marlboro filter, a glow of good fellowship came over us—a serene conviction that no quarrels exist between men that will not yield to the warmth of honest good will. I am proud to say that Ringading and I remain friends to this day, and we exchange cards each Christmas and each Fourth of July, firecrackers.

Wherever you or your roommate may be—on any campus in any city, town, or hamlet in any state of the Union—you will find Marlboros at your favorite tobacco counter—soft pack or flip top box.

Mixes And Matches

by Sue Milman

An old fashioned New England winter has transformed the UVM campus into a white fairyland. What a perfect setting for our 66th Kake Walk Weekend! In addition to the crowning of the King and Queen, the Walking, exciting parties, and snow sculpture competition, many other wonderful things have happened. Cupid has been more industrious than ever.

The sisters and pledges of AE-Phi extend their congratulations to Andy Becker, '66 and AEPI's Larry Scudder, '64 on their recent pinning. Congratulations to three couples who recently became engaged: Gamma Phi's Barbara Lourie, '64, and AEPI's Steve Lutzger, '64; Tri Delta's Carol Murray and Kappa Sig's Larry Cohen; and Sue Northrop, '64 and Mark Sperry of Yale Law School. Best wishes also to AGR's James Bushey, '65 and his pin-mate Carol McDonald.

Cupid's charms must have enchanted the brothers of Tau Epsilon Phi. Two brothers became engaged and five were pinned. Best wishes to Rick Nalin, '63 and Carol Mesh of Queens College and Mike Nagurney, '63 and Vicki Lopez of Chicago. Congratulations to the following brothers and their pinmates:

Stu Leventhal, '64 and Maggie Godfried of New York City;

Steve Bernstein, '63 and Nancy Brigadier, '64;

Don Grossman, '65 and Rhoda Cappel, Brooklyn College;

Harvey Tauber, '64 and Susan Rooder, NYU;

Howie Caston, '64 and Bonnie Adler of New York City.

Congratulations to Tri Delta's Sharon Stickle who was initiated February 18th.

Also to Ann Maynes who was pinned February 14 to Dave Nelson of Sigma Alpha Epsilon.

KAKE WALK DELIGHTS

Many the student with "Kake" time in sight,
Would give anything to "Walk" on that night.

Many are eager, but two get the break,
To bring home the cup, and of course the "Kake".

Weeks of practice and instructions so clear,
For that night of glory and the roaring cheer.

The spectra of color as teams come into sight,
Will always make it a remembered night.

Friends on the sidelines cheering them on,
Letting them know they really belong.

To that fraternity of men, not of boys,
Walking "Fo-Da Kake" and all its joys.

The beat of "Cotton Babs" ringing in your ear,
Heralds "The" event of the UVM year.

The King and Queen, The Kake Walk Ball,
Jazz Concert, Peerade, and that's not all.

The invitation which went to someone dear,
Was answered in person and brought very near.

The years will go on as time has before,
And no one will forget that "Walk" on the floor.

Robert V. Giroux

Drop-Out Rate Shows Decline

Academic failure claimed fewer than five percent of University of Vermont undergraduate students in the first semester this year, the second year in a row in which the mark was under five percent, according to UVM Director of Admissions Harold C. Collins.

In fact, this year's record is an improvement over last, according to Collins, who reports that the number and percent of those dropped for academic failure decreased to 136 or 4.2 percent from the 153 or 4.8 percent lost last year after the first semester.

Collins said the freshman class showed "Marked improvement." Last year 68 of 1087 freshmen were dropped after the first semester for academic failure - a 6.2 percent loss. This year the number is 45 of 1003 freshmen - a 4.5 percent loss.

Congratulations!

and Best Wishes!

Pledges Inducted Into Pershing Rifles

The University of Vermont's Company L-12 of the Pershing Rifles conducted a highlight of its year last week-end with the initiation of new pledges into the brotherhood.

Pledging in Pershing Rifles is an arduous experience designed to make the pledge demonstrate his determination, and develop self discipline. New pledges were accepted shortly after the beginning of the fall semester, and since then have participated in weekly drills, pledge classes and have assisted the brothers-in-carrying on the activities of the unit. Also included in the pledge program were early morning drill and calisthenic sessions as well as a week-end bivouac at Fort Devens, Massachusetts. The program was brought to its close Friday night with the traditional pledge guard detail at the Redstone dorms. Sub-zero temperatures added to the pleasure of the detail in a large degree.

On Saturday evening the pledges were formally initiated into brotherhood; then a party and dance was held at Waterman Lounge in their honor.

Among other things, the new brothers look forward to making ready the second semester pledge class for brotherhood. Other coming events are a Regimental Drill Meet, and another tactical exercise at Fort Devens (which second semester pledges will be privileged to attend).

The new brothers are: J. Angelis, R. Bouvier, R. Brooks, M. Caggiano, S. Dates, R. Dubois, K. Fahey, M. Jarvis, J. Jonas, A. Leake, W. Lubin, P. McGregor, R. Nettleton, N. Wheeler, and D. White.

Following this 4th Music Faculty Recital will be a Sunday Evening recital March 10th, at 8:30. At that time Mrs. Auchter will give a piano recital.

UVM Instructor Given Grant

Mary Hall

(Credit: Eldred, Audio Visual)

A University of Vermont English instructor is one of 40 faculty members from colleges and universities in the United States to be awarded a one-year grant for graduate study by a national foundation.

Mrs. Mary Starritt Hall has received a grant from The Danforth Foundation of St. Louis and plans to work on her Ph. D. at Harvard during the 1963-64 academic year.

The Danforth Teacher Study Grants program was established in 1954 to enable men and women already serving as full-time faculty members to complete programs of graduate study. The award provides a calendar year of graduate study in a university of the candidate's choosing with reappointment offered on a competitive basis.

Mrs. Hall, who did her undergraduate work at Smith, received her Masters from UVM in 1959 and joined the English faculty in the fall of 1960. Her husband, Robert, is an assistant professor in the department of philosophy.

She plans to start work at Harvard this fall, concentrating on a study of the history of myth. She hopes to complete her resident requirements for her Ph.D. then return to UVM and complete her dissertation. Her husband plans to do research for a book at Harvard at the same time Mrs. Hall is doing her Ph. D. work.

ESSEX FARMER TO FORM
PROGRAM AT UVM

An Essex Center farmer is joining the University of Vermont Extension Service staff as Rural Defense Information Specialist. It has been announced by University President John T. Fey.

Dr. Fey said Noah Thompson is being appointed to the UVM staff under a federal grant program of the U.S. Department of Agriculture which provides funds for rural defense information programs in each of the states. The grant to Vermont requires no matching state or local funds, Dr. Fey said.

Aim of the program is the development of a rural defense information and education program with emphasis on rural shelter involving farm families and others in rural areas. The program will deal with informing these families of means of reducing vulnerability of homes, crops, livestock and forests in the event of an emergency.

Under the program, federal funds are provided to hold training meetings for Extension personnel, and to provide educational programs and materials concerning rural defense.

Thompson is a native of Colchester, and a graduate of the University of Vermont College of Agriculture and Home Economics. A WW II veteran, who also served with the Materials Air Transport Service, he is a past president of the Chittenden County Farm Bureau, a director of the Milton Cooperative Creamery, and secretary of the Essex Town School Directors. Since 1952 he has operated his own farm in Essex Center.

AGR To Help Community Chest

The members of Alpha Gamma Rho fraternity at the University of Vermont are hoping for a weekend of snow -- in fact a blizzard would suit them fine -- and if their wishes come true the Community Chest will be the big winner.

As a project to help raise funds for the Chest, the fraternity has undertaken "Operation Snow Removal." If it snows during the weekend and anyone would like his walks or driveways cleared all that is necessary is to call the fraternity and a member or members will quickly "be off and shoveling."

All proceeds will be turned over to the Community Chest. If the snow comes and help is wanted in removing it, the number to call is UN 2-2090.

Catamount Skiers Gaining Status As College Ski Power

by Prentice Phelps

For the first time in many years, the Vermont ski team is beginning to make a name for itself. Although the team has held a class A rating for a number of years, the competition they had to beat in order to hold it was not very tough. However, the competition in the last few years has begun to get alot steeper. As a matter of fact, the going got so rough that UVM was knocked from their classification to a B level last year. To regain their A rating back again, they had to win the B championships this year.

The team took this challenge and at the beginning of this year. They started training under the direction of new head coach, Jake Stewart. They had one race on their minds: The Class B championships. If they were to win this race, they would regain their A rating, and would qualify to enter the E.I.S.A. Championships at Middlebury, which is open to class A schools only.

The class B tournament was held last weekend, and the final results showed The University of Vermont Ski Team in first place by a large margin. The Catamounts swept the alpine events, taking the first three places in the slalom, and 1st, 2nd, and 4th in the downhill. The rigorous training schedule set up by Coach Stewart at the beginning of the year paid off in the nordic events, where we did much better than we have ever done before. There was alot of pressure on each team entered at St. Mike's, but due to excellent material, a top coach, and added support, the Catamounts rose to the occasion as true competitors.

In addition to winning carnivals, the ski team has been working on another project. This project was that of having a winter race carnival of their own. The team travels to five carnivals this year, but does not host one of their own. After much avoidance of this subject, by the Athletic department, something is finally being done. Coach Stewart has taken the matter through the proper channels, and is now beginning to get results. The plan he has is to add races and a jumping meet to Kake Walk Weekend. As soon as a jump is financed, UVM will have it's winter carnival. Races will be held at Stowe, and the cross country will be held here.

Car Smash-A New Sport?

It may not be a part of UVM's new sports expansion or President Kennedy's Physical Fitness Program but it is good sporting fun. SAE's car smash gave Bob Barnaba a chance to show his strength by creasing the roof with one blow. (Credit: Bush, S.P.S.)

Swim Team Looks To Next Season

When UVM's first formal swim practice was called for last December 10, a large turn-out greeted this first call for Vermont swimmers. From this turn out evolved an enthusiastic group which worked hard for the first meet with a strong Norwich University team. The meet was held at the new Norwich University Pool, before a packed house of cadets.

Norwich which had been working since early fall and all through Christmas vacation held a conditioning edge over the Cats. The loss of both relays worth seven points apiece, along with a couple of tactical mistakes cost UVM the meet by the final tally of 65-30. The meet was not without its highlights, Steve Slack's victory in the 200 yd. freestyle and Jim Nixon's victory in the 200 yd. breaststroke.

This loss which was closer than it seems, when you consider the value of the relays, inspired the team to work even harder. Enthusiastically the team worked under the guidance of Coach Leggett through finals and the inter-semester break in preparation for the February 8th meet.

The Cats quickly demoralized the Cadets in the first relay with an impressive pool length victory, beating the previous N.U. time by 18 seconds. UVM won six of the remaining ten events to take the meet 58-37. In doing so the team bettered, in some cases considerably, the times of the previous meet.

Norwich has decided to host a Vermont State Invitational Meet on March 9, 1963.

The UVM mermen are working hard in the hopes of winding up their first year on a happy note, with a sweep of the State Meet.

Next year the Cats face a much sterner test when they meet the redmen of U Mass and the Huskies of UCONN along with McGill of Montreal and of course our state rival Norwich.

4', and finally 6'7". Charlie O'Rourke were disqualified within the last ten minutes.

The sometime erratic UVM quintet was completely overpowered by revenge-seeking St. Michael's the night before. The Knights, lead by Dick Tarrant and Ed McDonnell, out-shot the Cats and bottled-up the Vermont offense to win the contest easily, 88-62.

For the first time in thirty-one games, Benny Becton was held scoreless. Benny got into foul trouble early in the game and had to spend valuable minutes on the Vermont bench. Ralph D'Altilla played very well in Becton's stead, but it didn't help for St. Mike's was too hot to handle. D'Altilla only scored six points. The Knights held a 50 to 36 halftime lead and the Cats didn't have a chance for the Michaelmen were not going to let-up as they poured 38 more points in the second half.

The Cats play New Hampshire on Wednesday before Kake Walk for their last Y.C. game, and three more games after that. If the Evansmen play their sometimes great brand of basketball and sweep the rest of their schedule, they could wind up over the 500 mark at 12-11.

Vermont Initiates Two New Sports

Hockey Team Meets Storm Kings Saturday

The UVM hockey team won its first informal scrimmage of the season against St. Mike's on Saturday, February 16. The score was 18-3.

With fourteen players figuring in the scoring, Vermont dominated the play throughout the afternoon in a fine team effort. Coach Ruffer used his third and fourth lines a great deal. This will undoubtedly add to the depth of the squad in the remaining three games.

Paul Barrett and Jim Savis

were the individual standouts. The former had four goals while the latter had three.

Kake Walk, Saturday the Hanover Storm Kings will play the Cats. This will be UVM's first official game with the Cats donning new uniforms. Game time is 2:30. There will be I.D. admission for students and 1000 reserved seats for $1.50.

This is the game many have been waiting for and a large crowd is anticipated.

UVM's Mayland Wins AAU Pole Vault Championship

Donald Mayland, a very promising freshman pole vaulter, captured the New England AAU pole vault championship last Wednesday night at a meet held at Phillips Academy in Andover, Massachusetts.

Mayland cleared the bar at 13-6 to take the title. In doing so, Mayland topped Bob Patton of the University of Rhode Island who won the outdoor pole vault title in last year's Yankee Conference and New England meets. Patton missed at 13 feet.

Mayland is from Merrick, New York, where he attended Wellington Mepham High School. As a senior he set the New York State pole vault record of 13-53/4. His winning vault Wednesday night was only 1/4 of an inch better than his high school record. Don should definitely improve with a little more experience with the tricky, fiber glass pole he uses.

The way the 16-foot vaulters attain the most height with the springy, fiberglass pole is by waiting for it to snap, an action which catapults the vaulter over the crossbar with the minimum of body motion. The way Mayland is now working, someday he may clear 15-feet and maybe even the incredible height of 16 feet.

The previous high by a Vermont pole vaulter was 12-8 by Pete Perkins of Rutland in 1955.

Shabel drives against the Saints for an underhand lay-up. The Cat unhorsed the Knights in the first game '90-77 but got badly beaten the second time 88-62.

Kittens Stay Undefeated In 9 Games

by Richard B. Raccoon

UVM's freshman basketball team is well on the road to an undefeated season. They have won their first 9 games with two games remaining with Middlebury and Champlain.

The LaPointemen thus far have scored 695 points, 72.7 points per game; and have given up 547 for 60.8 points per game.

The spark plug of this year's team was little Bob Hillas. Bob, at 5'-10", from Union City, N.J., in the six games he played, averaged 19 points. He was one of the few freshmen who had to leave after the first semester.

The little man out front who does most of the ball handling for the Kittens is Ken Spalter of Brooklyn, N.Y. Ken keeps the big men on their toes and is the playmaker of the team. At present Ken is averaging 9.3 points per game and his season's high was against Norwich when he pumped in 23 points to lead the Kittens to an 86-65 victory.

One of UVM's top rebounders is 6'5" Milt Goggans of Hoboken, N.J. Milt uses his height and his 215 pounds effectively under both offensive and defensive boards. Milt played his best game against Norwich at Northfield, where he connected for 25 points to lead the way to a 78-62 Kitten victory.

Layne Higgs from Barre, Vt., was rated the number one player in the state last year, and his play this year shows why. Layne is the steadiest performer on the team. He can always be counted on for the big defensive play, clutch basket, and important pass. Layne has averaged 12 points per for UVM. His biggest total came against the Squires of St. Michael's in the Kitten's 78-76 overtime victory at the Auditorium.

Big is the only word that can describe Steve Ross from Orange, Conn. He's 6'5" and tips the scales at 220 pounds. When Steve teams up with Milt under the boards, it can get rough for the man in the middle. Steve saw his best game against St. Michael's in the Auditorium when he lead the scoring parade with 24 points. Steve is averaging 12 points per game.

The newest man on the starting quintet is Jay Hurewitz who hales from Yonkers, N.Y. Jay had a tough job ahead of him in filling the shoes of Bob Villas. But Jay rose to the occasion and is doing a great job on the starting five. At present Jay is averaging 4.9 points, but that is no indication of the job he is doing.

Rounding out the squad are Jim Pelton, Jim Lange, Bernie Zaccaro, Scott Renfrew, and Mike Karel. If the Kittens continue their present brand of ball they should finish the 62-63 season with an unmarred record.

Defending champion UVM finished in third place at the Yankee Conference fifth annual Rifle Championship with a total of 1,376. Massachusetts won the event with a 1,393 total while Maine finished in the runnerup position.

The Vermont individual scores were Al Farrington 280, Bob Tremblay 278, Seth Pillsbury 274 and Chris Glinck and Dave Haurilick both with 272 scores. Farrington's 280 score was good for third place in the meet.

UVM will next participate in the Northern Division group of the New England Rifle League on March 9 in Durham, N.H.

Independents-Greeks Vie In Intramural Athletics

by Martin Wolf

The intramural athletic program at UVM encompasses the entire student body, including fraternities as well as independent groups. Norman Strassburg, director of intramurals, has initiated many reforms in the direction of strengthening the competitive spirit in the various events.

FOOTBALL

The season opened with the annual touch football competition. For the first time in over a decade, an independent group, the Leftovers, captured the all campus title by crushing Phi Delta Theta 25-0. The Phi Delta, composed of Valicenti, Hathorn, Towle, Wilkenson, Hayward, Musson, Conder, Willis and Davis captured the fraternity title by defeating Delta Psi 6-0 in a semi-final and shutting out Sigma Nu in the final, 7-0. Sig Nu, a perennial football power qualified for the finals by defeating Sigma Phi Epsilon 20-18.

The Leftovers gained their division crown by destroying Buckham "B" 52-12 and duplicating that score in obliterating the Bunsen Burners, 52-0. The championship team included: Peter McDonald, Dave Cioffi, James McKinnon, Norman Duby, William Downs, Mike Jablow, Dick Rappaport, Jack Silven and Mike Delli Santi.

BOWLING

Following the football tournament, IFC bowling occupied the intramural spotlight. Alpha Tau Omega, replaced last years' winner, Alpha Epsilon Pi as all-campus champion. ATO defeated the "Apes" in the semi-finals 984-926. The champs then met Lambda Iota in the finals, defeating the Owls, 1438-1430. ATO's winning unit consisted of: Leskowicz, Alterman, Angney, McQuin and Emberley. The Owls' squad included: Douglas, Hudson, MacQueen, Carpenter and Watson.

BASKETBALL

Basketball dominated the latter half of the first semester and continued into early February of this year. The competing groups were divided into four leagues, A and B being Fraternity groups and C-D, independents. The Fraternity contest was decided in a playoff between Sigma Alpha Epsilon and Sigma Phi Epsilon. In regular competition, both squads had perfect 7-0 records. Sig Ep proved to be the superior squad defeating SAE 46-27. The SAE squad of: Bob Whittaker, Ed Healey, Bill Burke, John Tartara, Peter Sarno and Fred Boese deserve credit for an excellent season.

In the independent race, league "C" champion, the Leftovers, met the "D" champion, the Checkmates (Dorm councillors and grad students), both teams having 6-0 records. The Checkmates squeezed by their opponents, 39-31.

Remembering the football upset, Sig Ep was determined to defeat their independent adversary for the all-campus crown. Their squad, including: Jerry Torch, Bob Brown, John Bosst, Dutch Cassini, Lee Pantas and Jay Harding, succeeded, nosing out the Checkmates, 39-34. The Independent champions consisted of: Santa Croce, White, Bolden, Walsh, Felton, Huber, Montecello and McPeck.

ALL-SPORTS TROPHY

Handball and squash are currently occupying the intramural scene. The schedule of matches is posted on the bulletin board in the gym. As the semester progresses, track, swim, ski, volleyball and softball competitions will be held.

At the end of the semester an All-Sports trophy will be awarded to the fraternity or group compiling the highest number of athletic points. The point system is based on an initial 20 points for entering an event, with added points for league, division and all campus championship titles. The winners of these group crowns will be awarded 10 additional points, for each level attained. For open competition, such as handball, track and swimming, points will be awarded on a per-man basis. The official point system is available in the athletic office.

The All-sports trophy will not circulate but will be on display in the trophy case in the Patrick Gymnasium. The current point standings are as follows:

Fraternities:
SPE - 110 1/2
KS - 106 1/2
SAE - 103 1/2
AEP - 103
ATO - 100 1/2

say about 50-miles. Special training must precede the playing of such games as basketball, football or baseball, but supposedly everyone should be in shape enough to take a long walk without any special preparation. Stop and think of all the walking one does in a day at UVM. Just going back and forth from the dorms to the Waterman Building constitutes a fair distance. On the average, UVMers, without cars, walk close to three miles a day. Is this the necessary training for the long 50-mile hike? Ask Bob Grant who is hobbling around his office in the new gym. He'll say no, but remember, Bob owns a car.

Now, about those 4-D's. It is a fact that every one is not born physically equal. This is a fact that can be verified at any beach during the summer. Some people have physical advantages over others, such as height, weight and the like. In order to compensate for what one is lacking physically, one must resort to the 4-D's - desire, determination, dedication, and discipline - in order to succeed.

In Mr. Grant's case, he had the mental determination and the dedication to start and finish the long journey, even though he is 37 years of age and tips the scale at about 210 pounds. This is an object lesson to any of the so-called athletes who give up something without really giving it their all. Going all-out in athletics will never be regretted.

GETTING BACK TO KAKE WALKIN'

Walkin' fo' de kake is a tradition and will last for years to come, but walking 50-miles for the sake of getting notoriety is a fad and will soon cease, just as telephone-booth stuffing, bed-rolling, and here's one for the older alumni, swallowing goldfish. But for the present it is a challenging feat and one, that if completed, will merit a picture of the hikers feet in the CYNIC.

It is doubtful whether this form of physical activity will put Vermont Transit out of business, but it will help to toughen-up some of the more flabby, soft Americans.

62-63 Season In Review

by Bernie Zaccaro

The Catamounts of the University of Vermont started off the year by losing a thriller to the Big Green of Dartmouth by a score of 76-63. The Cats slacked off in the second half and thereby missed many easy shots which proved to be the reason this and many other defeats for the 62-63 season. Benny Becton scored 20 points and Dick Ader 13 to lead UVM in their cause.

The cagers then lost two straight to the University of Maine by scores of 86-73 and 74-71, respectively. Benny Becton, in the second clash, scored 27 points and pulled down 29 rebounds to set a school record and to make a return to his old form.

The brand new Roy L. Patrick Gymnasium was christened on December 11, 1962. The Catamounts played excellent hosts to the Wildcats of the University of New Hampshire by tossing them aside with a score of 78-73. Jack Shabel, one of the all-time great backcourt men in Vermont history, led the Cats with 23 points. Also starring for UVM were Ralph D'Altilla and Chuck Glick, two note-worthy substitutes who bailed coach Fuzzy Evans out of many a tight spot.

At Northfield, Vermont, the boys from UVM toppled the cadets from Norwich in the first state series game of the year, by a score of 95-62. The second meeting of this state rivalry held much more excitement until the Cats ran up a score of 94 points to the cadets 77. Dave Strassburg piled up 21 points while Benny Becton had 20. Dick Ader, recovering from a mid-season slump, played a fine game and tallied 14 points.

A great moral victory for UVM was the winning of the Blue Nose Tournament in Nova Scotia over the Christmas holidays. The Ethan Allen boys broke all sorts of records in the first game by demolishing St. Francis Xavier 110-55. Ralph D'Altilla was the big gun in this tilt with 29 points. On the second night of this classic, UVM took an inspiring double over-time victory from MIT, 78-70, thereby securing the Tourney final. Benny Becton and Jack Shabel were selected for the All-Tourney Team for their display of marksmanship and all-around basketball "know-how!"

After the triumph in Nova Scotia, Vermont was twice defeated by a strong University of Rhode Island quintet. In the second game, the Cats put on a final surge led by Benny Becton and Jack Shabel, but to no avail, as the height and sharp-shooting of the boys from URI far out-classed that of the Catamounts! The final score of that thriller was 90-81.

On January 8, things were looking up for a while as the Felines gained a tie at the final buzzer in the game against Union College of Schenectady, New York. However, once again the boys from the Green Mountain state lost a close one, 85-83, in the five minute consolation period.

In another state clash, Vermont beat Middlebury by a score of 76-67. There will be another contest between these two teams shortly after Kake Walk. A win for UVM will give the Catamounts a first place tie for state honors.

In other Yankee Conference competition, the Cats were overpowered by the giants of the University of Connecticut. The two outrageous beatings were chalked up as 95-62 and 88-67. The boys from Vermont also took a pasting from the University of Massachusetts in their first meeting this season by a score of 92-57, and upset the men from Boston in their second, 81-73.

The crowd-pleasing, arch-rivalry between UVM and St. Michael's of Winooski was as stimulating this year as in any previous year. The Catamounts played their best game of the season by whalloping the Saints 90-77. Led by Jack Shabel, who had 29 points, and Benny Becton, who, besides tallying 22 points, ripped the backboards apart with his rebounding efforts, UVM bettered their chances for acquiring the state title.

Dave Strassburg and Bobby Nurse led the Cats in their charge on the Judges of Brandeis University, but were overcome by an excessive amount of fouls. As Benny Becton, Jack Shabel, and John Stahler were forced to sit out the remaining minutes of the game, the Cats lost a close one by a score of 74-69.

A NEW KIND OF WALKIN'

It's Kake Walk time again at UVM and just as in the past 65 years, the Kake Walkers have been polishing-up their routines and subjecting themselves to limbering-up exercises during the final week before the two big nights. These dedicated athletes have been conditioning themselves for months. Some teams have been practicing as many as six months for the actual walking routine, which lasts only a short, but grueling three minutes. A short time that requires endurance, coordination, strength, finesse, and above all, teamwork, if the team wants to succeed.

This type of walking has been admired and respected here at Vermont for 65 years. Now, a new kind of walkin' has been added to this year's Kake Walk. It is a 107-mile walk to de kake. This ambitious endeavor is being undertaken by two UVM sophomores, Mike Fay and John Beckwith. The kake in this walk is the one that is going to be baked by Fay's mother. This will be the boys' reward for walking the 107 miles, from Burlington to Dorset, Vermont, over hill and dale and through the muddy slush of a thawing Vermont countryside.

"TOUGH AMERICANS"

Ever since Robert Kennedy, Attorney General of the United States, took the first 50-mile walk a few weeks ago for promotion of the President's physical fitness program, there have been many "tough Americans" who have followed in his foot steps. Among them in this area are the two ambitious UVM sophomores, who are probably well on their way by now, since they started yesterday morning at 9:00 am; a group of boys from St. Mike's, who braved the freezing weather a few nights ago to complete their 50-mile jaunt, a local businessman who has challenged other area businessmen to a 50-mile walk race; and the University's Head Athletic Trainer, Mr. Bob Grant, who just completed a 50-mile walk a few days ago with radio station WJOY's programmer, Ted Barker, and two high school boys. This trip was made for various reasons. Mr. Barker did it for publicity, Mr. Grant as a matter of practicing what he preaches, and the two youths for the exercise.

THE 4-D's IN ATHLETICS

Mr. Grant's life work is the training of athletes and he knows better than anyone the value of training for an athletic event, be it a football game, a game of squash, or an extended walk,

Vermont May Break .500

The sometimes great Catamounts of Coach John "Fuzzy" Evans upset the Redmen of the University of Massachusetts 81 to 73 last Saturday night at the Patrick Gymnasium. They were drubbed the night before by a spirited St. Michael's College team, 88 to 62, at the Cats' old home court, Memorial Auditorium.

The Yankee Conference victory placed UVM at 2-7 in-conference play while it raised the overall record to 8 wins and eleven defeats.

The loss to the Purple Knights of Winooski on Friday night denied the Cats a possible state title and, instead, insured SMC of at least a tie. The Cats meet Middlebury on February 27 and, if they win, will finish the season with a 5-1 state record, tying them with St. Mike's for the Vermont crown.

The action Saturday night was a see-saw battle until the last six minutes when UVM pulled ahead to stay. The Vermont five had a slim 41 to 40 halftime edge and surprisingly held up for the remaining twenty minutes to keep the lead and win.

Benny Becton, UVM's all-time great, lead the home team scoring parade with twenty-two points, followed by Captain John Stahler with seventeen. Stahler played one of the best games of his college career as he gathered fifteen rebounds, along with his five field goals and seven free throws. Becton grabbed fifteen rebounds against the tall U. Mass. squad that sports three men taller than 6'5".

The game was won at the free throw line for Vermont, as they sank 25 of 37 attempts while the Redmen were limited to only nine charity tosses out of seventeen tries.

The men from Mass. out-shot the Green Mountain boys 32 to 28 with ALL-Yankee Conference choice, Roger Twitchell pumping in eleven baskets and five of the team's nine free throws for twenty-seven points.

A big factor in the upset was the excessive fouling by Mass. big men. Three of them, Mike Johnson, 6'7", John Reynolds, 6'7", and...

Blue Lane Series To Feature Helen Hayes, Maurice Evans

Renowned actor and actress Maurice Evans and Helen Hayes will present various selections from Shakespeare.

On March 4 at 8:30 P.M. in Memorial Auditorium, the Blue Lane Series will present Helen Hayes and Maurice Evans in Martin Tahse's production of "A Program for Two Players." The evening will be comprised of dramatizations of selections from Shakespeare's plays, such as As You Like It, The Merchant of Venice, Richard III, Hamlet, Macbeth, Midsummer Night's Dream, The Tempest, Taming of the Shrew, etc.

The production began its national tour on October 15 in Detroit and will end on March 9. It marks the first time in twenty years that the First Lady of the American stage and America's foremost Shakespearean actor have appeared together. According to critic Lewis Funke of the New York Times, the presentation is "thoroughly diverting. A noteworthy demonstration of performers enjoying a theatrical field day. A lively evening revisiting Shakespeare."

Mr. Evans and Miss Hayes will not only be seen in roles for which they have become noted, but also in several of the minor roles that are considered the gems of the Bard's gift for character. These are parts that all actors dream of doing, but because of their star status, Miss Hayes and Mr. Evans would never have a chance to play.

When Broadway's Fulton Theatre was renamed The Helen Hayes seven years ago, it was a belated honor to the great actress, long known as the First Lady of the American theatre. Born in Washington, D.C., Miss Hayes made her first stage appearance with the Columbia Stock Company at the age of five playing Prince Charles in "The Royal Family".

Discovered by the famed comedian Lew Fields, she played the part of Little Mimi in his 1908 production of "Old Dutch". The rest is history, marked by long remembered performances, among her most recent being in O'Neill's "Touch of the Poet", Anouilh's "Time Remembered", "Victoria Regina" and "Mrs. McThing". In the past few seasons Miss Hayes has been acting as an ambassador to the theatre, touring plays in Europe, the Near East and South America. She starred in the Theatre Guild-American Repertory production of "The Skin of Our Teeth" and "The Glass Menagerie" which went on an international tour by the U.S. State Department. She is past president of the American Theatre Wing and the American National Theatre and Academy. In addition, honorary degrees have been granted her by such schools as Columbia University, Princeton University, Smith College, Southern Illinois University, Brown University and Hamilton College.

Maurice Evans received his first big break through his performance in Hamlet at London's Old Vic in 1935. It was then that Guthrie McClintic decided to bring him to America to play Romeo to Katherine Cornell's Juliet, and subsequently as the Dauphin in Shaw's St. Joan. His notable performances are, of course, many, including those in Richard II, Henry IV, Part I, Twelfth Night, Macbeth, "Man and Superman" and "The Devil's Disciple". His theatrical experience has included production as well as acting, and appearances not only on stage, but also in motion pictures as a pioneer actor and producer on television.

Top honors in the skit competition this year were shared by Phi Sigma Delta and Tau Epsilon Phi for their colorful, comical and song-filled skits.

Phi Sigma Delta's "It Ain't All in the Books" captured top prize Friday night. Phi Sigma Delta attempted to show that the first Roman to say "Niglo demaritus sublim egestrata" certainly started something. This Roman was shown to have more on the ball than a lot of people gave him credit for.

Tau Epsilon Phi's "Up, Up, and Away" took first place honors Saturday. The skit depicted the UVM football team twenty years from now when they finally became Vermont State Champs with the aid of a mysterious newcomer, Sooper boob, from the planet Krypton.

Sigma Nu also presented a skit entitled "New Pastures" concerning events at 1600 Pennsylvania Avenue. The White House inhabitants had to make a critical decision which affected the small state of Vermont and its university when an unknown member of the first family was about to go to college. The solution and succeeding events projected UVM into the national limelight.

The Skit Judges this year were Associate Professor A. Moazzamul Huq, Assistant Professor Daniel J. Scheans and Professor Jack Trevithick on Friday night, and Professor Edwin Grief, Assistant Professor Samuel Hand, and Miss Nola Marberger on Saturday night.

TEP and Phi Sig will share the Borgman Cup which is presented to the first place skit winners in honor of Dr. Carl Borgman, UVM's sixteenth president.

The 66th Annual Kake Walk, held for the first time in the new Patrick Gymnasium, saw ten out of the sixteen fraternities on campus take home one or more trophies. This number shows that the Kake Walk spirit was at its highest in many years.

Precision and variety were displayed by all of the sixteen houses, but, as usual, only four received the plaudits each night. Friday night Kappa Sigma's team of Jeff Harvey and Tom Perras captured the top honors with their fast stepping walk. Alpha Epsilon Phi's Steve Frankel and Ray Haas took second place while Tau Epsilon Phi's veteran walkers Steve Bernstein and Terry Finkel brought home third place. Honorable mention went to Phi Mu Delta's Andy Nadeau and Dave Rowe.

Saturday night, with new judges and less nervous walkers, the results changed. Phi Delta Theta's Frank Willis and Bill Perkins walked off with the top prize, Tau Epsilon Phi moved up to second place and Phi Sigma Delta's Barry Bloom and Howie Jacobs placed third. Sigma Alpha Epsilon's Pete Carr and Pete Weiss took honorable mention.

The Walking judges this year were Professor Robert Babcock, Mr. George E. Piper and Professor James N. Schoonmaker on Friday night, and Professor

Thomas J. Spruston, Jr., Associate Professor James E. Pooley and Associate Professor Richmond J. Bartlett on Saturday night.

Kake Walkers were judged on the position of their head and shoulders, their kicks, teamwork and smoothness and special stunts and steps.

The Lechnyr Cup this year was won by Sigma Alpha Epsilon, who placed fourth in Walking Saturday night. They also had the honor of having Loren Disque reign as Kake Walk King. The Lechnyr Cup is a rotating cup started in 1960 in memory of Dr. Joseph Lechnyr, former director of the UVM band. It is presented to the fraternity which most nearly exemplified the spirit of Kake Walk - from Pops Nite to the end of Kake Walk. Lieutenant Governor of Vermont Robert Foote awarded the cup to SAE.

UVM DEBATERS PLACE

Two University of Vermont debaters brought a third place trophy home from Bowling Green, Ohio, over the weekend.

Elaine Zak of Burlington and Michael Cronin of Richmond defeated six colleges and were eliminated during the semi-finals at the second annual Forensic Honorary Debate Tournament at Bowling Green University.

In six rounds, debating both sides of the question, the UVM pair defeated Illinois Wesleyan University, Bloomington, Illinois; Concordia College, Moorhead, Minnesota; the University of Pittsburgh, Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania; Bowling Green; William Jewell College, Liberty, Missouri; and Ohio State, Columbus, Ohio.

In the semi-finals against Wayne State, Detroit, Michigan, UVM dropped a split ballot decision (2-1). Wayne State was defeated by Butler University, Indianapolis, Indiana in the finals.

Debate coach of Butler University, Nicholas Cripe, taught at the University of Vermont during the 1950s.

GLAD RAGS

The hounds of spring are on winter's traces. Soon buds the crocus, soon trills the giant condor, soon come the new spring fashions to adorn our lissome limbs.

And what will the American college student wear this spring? Gather round, you rascals, and light a Marlboro Cigarette and enjoy that fine mellow tobacco, that pure white filter, and possess your souls in sweet content, and listen.

As everyone knows, campus fashions have always been casual. This spring, however, they have gone beyond being merely casual: they have become makeshift.

The object is to look madly improvised, gaily spur-of-the-moment! For example, why don't you girls try wearing a peasant skirt with a dinner jacket? Or matador pants with a bridal veil? Or Bermuda-shorts with bronze breastplates? Be rakish! Be impromptu! Be devil-take-the-hindmost!

And, men, you be the same. Try an opera cape with sweat pants. Or a letter-sweater with kilts. Or a strait jacket with hip boots. Be bold! Be daring! Be a tourist attraction!

But all is not innovation in college fashions this spring. In fact, one of the highlights of the season turns time backward in its flight. I refer, of course, to the comeback of the powdered wig.

This charming accoutrement, too long neglected, has already caught on with in undergrads everywhere. On hundreds of campuses the bossa nova is giving way to the minuet, and patriotic undergraduates are dumping British tea into the nearest harbor. This, as you may imagine, does not sit well with King George III who, according to reliable reports, has been stamping his foot and uttering curses not fit to reproduce in this family newspaper. For that matter, a lot of our own people are steamed up too, and there has even been some talk about the American colonies declaring their independence of England. But I hardly think it will come to that. I mean, how can we break with the mother country when we are dependent on her for so many things—linsey-woolsey, Minié balls, taper snuffers, and like that? She, on the other hand, relies on us for turkeys, Marlboro Cigarettes, and Route 66. So I say, if Molly Pitcher and those other Radcliffe hotheads will calm down, and if gentlemen will cry "Peace! Peace!" we may yet find an amicable solution to our differences. But let not our British cousins mistake this willingness to negotiate for weakness. If fight we must, then fight we will! Paul Revere is saddled up, the rude bridge arches the flood, and the ROTC is armed!

But I digress. We were smoking Marlboro Cigarettes—O, splendid cigarette! O, good golden tobaccos! O, pristine pure white filter! O, fresh! O, tasty! O, soft pack! O, flip top box! O, get some!—we were, I say, smoking Marlboros and talking about spring fashions.

Let us turn now to the season's most striking new feature—pneumatic underdrawers. These inflatable garments make every chair an easy chair. Think how welcome they will be when you sit through a long lecture! They are not, however, without certain dangers. Last week, for example, Rimbaud Sigafos, a sophomore at the University of Pittsburgh, fell out of a 96th story window in the Tower of Learning. Thanks to his pneumatic underdrawers, he suffered no injury when he struck the sidewalk, but the poor fellow is still bouncing—his seventh consecutive day—and it is feared that he will starve to death.

Fashions come, fashions go, but year after year Marlboro Cigarettes, sponsors of this column, bring you the tastiest tobaccos and a pure white filter too. Try Marlboro soon.

Snow was abundant this year for all houses to build those big, beautiful snow sculptures. By Saturday morning, after fighting sub-zero temperatures, the fraternities and sororities were ready to have their creations judged.

First place in the fraternity division was awarded to Alpha Gamma Rho's "Walkin' in de Land of Plenty." This depicted two walkers walking towards a cornucopia filled with easily distinguished fruits and vegetables. Gamma Phi Beta's "Turtle necks the Style for KW" captured top prize in the sorority snow sculpture division. It presented two turtles snuggling with each sporting a turtle neck sweater.

The second and third places in the fraternity division were won by Acacia's "Nest Egg" and Sigma Nu's "Hoff with the Winning Step".

Delta Delta Delta's "KW is a Grand Ole Party" and Kappa Alpha Theta's "... And miles to 'walk' before I sleep" a tribute to Robert Frost, took second and third places.

Dr. Glade Researches Regeneration

Dr. Richard Glade of the department of zoology at UVM studies an axolotl, a member of the salamander family. One he is studying is about four years old while ones in right foreground are about a month old. Salamanders were once a mythical creature.

A salamander is a small, harmless lizard-like animal once popularly supposed to be capable of living in fire. Through the centuries it became a mythical and not clearly defined creature.

Salamanders are thousands of years old but a species not discovered until the 19th century is proving of particular interest to a University of Vermont professor.

Dr. Richard Glade of the department of zoology is conducting experiments with axolotls (Siredon mexicanum), amphibian salamanders discovered in Mexico in the 19th century. Axolotls grow to about 10 inches in length, adjust very easily to new surroundings, and have a life span of around 15 years.

Dr. Glade is interested in the problems of regeneration and how the pattern is established. How do the cells know what to do? Tail tissue can be transplanted on limbs and the new growth will be tail-like while limb tissue can be transplanted on tails and the result will be a limb-like growth.

Axolotls are good subjects because, while many animals can regenerate, age is no handicap to axolotls whereas it is to other animals such as frogs.

The proof has never previously existed but from Dr. Glade's findings it is apparent that the dermis cells can determine the pattern for regeneration. "We have wrapped tail epidermis around limbs and gotten normal limb growth but when we used tail dermis we got an abnormal growth with tail-like features. We have been able to show that connective tissue cells carry the patterns for skeletal and muscle differentiation that is specific for the organ from which the connective tissue was taken. However, we haven't been able to determine yet whether these cells are redirecting the differentiation pattern of cells of limb origin in regeneration or whether they are becoming the tail-like parts themselves."

Dr. Glade hopes that eventually he will be able to isolate an extract from a cell, such as protein. This would then enable him to get at the actual mechanism of how a cell is working in this particular system. With this finding it would become possible to determine the pattern of regenerating and the results might be applicable to fill in missing gaps in higher forms of life, although Dr. Glade's chief goal is to make as complete a study as possible of the salamander system.

The research has been conducted under an University grant and another from the National Science Foundation. Honor graduate students in zoology have also helped.

In addition to continuing these experiments, Dr. Glade is planning to write a textbook on general embryology in which he hopes to achieve a balance between the classical and experimental approach to embryology.

While the salamander remains an obscure and perhaps mythical creature to many, it may eventually supply answers about cell structure previously unknown.

U of Michigan Symphony To Play At UVM In Spring

The University of Michigan Symphony Band will give a concert at the University of Vermont in April as part of the band's spring tour.

The April 5 appearance in the Patrick Gymnasium will be one of eight stops made by the band during its tour which will take it to upstate New York, New Hampshire, Connecticut, Pennsylvania, and Washington, D.C.

In 1961, the band was selected under the President's International Cultural Exchange Program to present an extensive series of concerts in the Soviet Union and the Near East. The first university band to be sponsored on such a mission by the State Department, the band traveled to the Soviet Union, Egypt, Greece, Turkey, Jordan, Cyprus, Lebanon, Rumania, and Poland on a 15-week, 30,000 mile concert tour.

The band's membership consists of the 110 most talented and musically gifted students on the Michigan campus where there are four bands with combined membership exceeding 350.

On its annual concert tours, the Symphony Band has played in most of the leading concert halls in the United States, including Carnegie Hall, Boston Symphony Hall, Symphony in Chicago, and the Philadelphia Academy of Music.

WUS To Raffle Deans' Services

World University Service, an organization designed for and by students all over the world to provide scholarships, medical care and often food for unfortunate educational communities and individuals, will be holding a week of varied events from March 7th through March 15th. Dean Harris, Dean of Women and Dean Patzer, Dean of Men have consented to have their services raffled during the week, the "services" being the serving of breakfast in bed to the winners of the raffle.

Other events to be staged during the week include a pancake race around the Women's Campus (entries invited), a twenty to one chess match and the raffle of a large mystery prize of unique quality!

One of the few Englishmen on campus, Dr. Howkins of the Physics Department, has issued an open challenge to any would be baseball pitcher to knock his wicket down. Dr. Howkins, a well known club cricketer in England has offered half a dollar to anyone who can manage this.

sity Service which has been proceeding throughout the year is to educate students of UVM on the responsibility that is theirs as members of a community that is World-Wide. A second, less ethereal aim, is to raise money for a student to student program of aid which completely bypasses all government agencies and hence goes directly to the people who must need it. As an example of the sort of work being done we can cite the scholarships given to South African Bantu, who are not allowed a University Education in South Africa, to study here or in Europe.

W.U.S. is already on many campuses throughout America and Europe. The University of London, England, last year raised $30,000 about $90,000 for W.U.S. in a concentrated effort of two weeks. The American students certainly must be just as aware of the value of such a program and indeed have already done a great deal; nevertheless Vermont has sadly lagged, a fault which we hope will soon be rectified.

MORTAR BOARD OFFERS LECTURES ON MAJORS

CALLING ALL SOPHOMORES

- Have you decided on your major yet? You say registration is just around the corner and you still can't make up your mind as to whether to concentrate on English, physics, zoology, poli. sci, or art? Well, Mortar Board has come to your rescue with a lecture series entitled "MAJOR DECISIONS."

Mortar Board has taken on as their project this year a new method of "guidance" aimed at helping students make the most important decision in their college careers - what shall be my major? The general consensus of opinion on campus seems to be that students are oftentimes unable to obtain enough information on exactly what is entailed in being an "X" major to make an intelligent decision as to what field to choose. Mortar Board hopes to begin to remedy this situation by making available to the sophomores - and the freshmen too - specific information on various majors.

Beginning in the week of March 4th there will be a series of four lectures given by the heads of four departments in the College of Liberal Arts. These professors will discuss such topics as graduate school and fellowship opportunities in the said field, specific occupational opportunities after graduation, summer jobs available to undergraduates, and other related subjects. After the formal talk, there will be ample time to discuss your own special questions over a cup of coffee with the members of the department and with seniors majoring in the field.

These discussions of "Major Decisions" will begin at 8:00

P.M. in the Marsh Lounge of the Billings Student Center. The departments involved and the dates on which they will meet are the following:

Psychology - Tuesday, March 5

Zoology - Wednesday, March 6

Political Science - Thursday, March 7

English - Tuesday, March 12

See all your bewildered sophomores interested in these fields at the new Student Center next week.

New Vermont Research Center

In two organizational actions, the Vermont Board established within the Agricultural Experiment Station of the University a Vermont Resource Research Center, and also approved the transfer of the department of commerce and economics from the College of Technology to the College of Arts and Sciences, the latter effective July 1.

The purpose of the Vermont Resource Center will be to coordinate, promote, and facilitate research in the development and management of natural resources in Vermont and in regions of which Vermont is a part, University President John T. Fey said.

Summer Tuition

In another action looking toward the summer activity, the Vermont Board approved an increase in Summer Session tuition $15 to $17 per credit hour for Vermont residents, and from $25 to $27 for non-residents.

"Will I find exciting, rewarding challenges at W. E.?"

They happen to be our specialty. Consider just a few of our project areas in Western Electric's role of developing manufacturing techniques for Bell System communications: miniaturization, electronic switching, computer-programmed production lines, microwave radio relay, television telephones, optical masers, data transmission. Working closely with our research team-mate, Bell Laboratories, W. E. engineers are even now creating and implementing communications progress planned for the 1970's - and beyond. You will start participating right away in unique, creative challenges. Oppor-

The Vermont Cynic

The Official Student Newspaper of the

VOL 80

FEBRUARY 28, 1963

NO. 24

Editor's Scrapbook

A Look To The Future

With this issue, the 80th volume of the Vermont CYNIC will be completed and eventually bound and placed on the shelves with its 79 predecessors. Some of the volumes are thick, others thin; some vary in length and width from others. They all bear one basic characteristic in common. They have all endeavored to bring the news to the student, and the student into the news.

During some years the efforts of the CYNIC were almost in vain, funds and journalistic talent at a low, student apathy at a premium. Other years the student newspaper has devoted its efforts to the best interests of the students with a great deal of success and with some startling results.

This year has been a most interesting one, one which introduced many "firsts," paved the way for a couple "lasts," and had its share of "only once" innovations, which will not, of course, be mentioned.

It is difficult to look back on the past year without becoming maudlin and sentimental. The year has seen a complete cycle in terms of the living quarters the CYNIC occupies. During the summer the CYNIC was notified that it would move into "temporary quarters" in East Hall. With a bit of apprehension a couple of us packed cardboard boxes and tied filing cabinets for "The Move."

Early one hot August morning, the CYNIC found itself in three dismal rooms in East Hall, never again to occupy Waterman.

And so, dear readers, as you occupy yourselves with these lines, the paper is once again moving, this time from East Hall to its "permanent" quarters in Billings Center, just as this administration steps out of office.

The staff has jostled with its fair share of windmills this past year, has passed some rather crucial moments, and has on many an occasion had a good time in accomplishing its goals.

The CYNIC, as published in the very first editorial under this administration, stated its hopes of "growing with the University," and has, to a great degree, attained this goal. Circulation has increased; the total number of issues during the year has increased; diversity of interest has been attained in the pages of the CYNIC, and if an outgoing editor may be so presumptuous, the general quality of the paper has improved to a degree.

And now it is to the future that we must look. The CYNIC must continue to improve and diversify, it must pulsate as the rhythm and beat of the student body dictates it to move, and it must truly reflect the aims, ideals, and goals of the University and the student body in general.

Perhaps it is time to end this "editorial" before it continues to degenerate into a sobbing compendium of the "Life and Trials of a Student Newspaper." It is with fond memories of the past and best wishes for the future that the outgoing CYNIC staff, and this editor closes the cover on the 80th volume of the Vermont CYNIC.

Letters To The Editor

SAE Unfair To St. Mikes

Dear Sir,

I believe that I can state with a fair amount of certainty that both you and I are justifiably proud of our respective institutions of learning. It is because of this fact that I now write this letter to you.

On Saturday, February 16, Sigma Alpha Epsilon presented a skit in which they referred to St. Michael's College in a most vulgar and crass manner. It would be hypocritical of me to say that all S.M.C. acted in an exemplary manner, during the last contest between our two schools. I would also be incorrect if I were to say that there are no immature or gross students here at St. Michael's. Every school is faced with a problem of this type. But I was appalled to see the above mentioned fraternity act as they did during their skit.

If you were not present you were fortunate as I am sure you would have been embarrassed along with many of your fellow students. Two remarks will serve my purpose. The first was in the form of a rather childish riddle: How do you separate the men from the boys at St. Michael's College? The hilarious answer: With a crowbar! To my mind this is not an example of adult humor. The second humorous little ditty was stated in the form of an informative fact: When one wants to answer a question, he usually raises his hand, but at St. Michael's he picks his nose.

These were not the only two incidents in which this fraternity displayed its ability to cut up S.M.C. I will not dignify these remarks with a request for an apology. I would, however, like to bring to the attention of the UVM student body the fact that one of their leading fraternities would go on the stage in front of a large body of men and women, (it is my contention that most of the Vermont students are young men and women), and proceed to down grade a neighboring school for no apparent reason.

We both know that we have a fine rivalry, but one that exists only on the field of athletics. Our two institutions are not pitted against each other at any other time. It is a shame that S.A.E. has not taken the time to check some of its own men before they began criticizing others. To me, and others, their words and actions were hardly adult.

Sincerely yours,
David M. Gravel, '64

To The Editor

Panhell Protests

Dear Sir,

The Panhellenic Council of the University of Vermont would like to go on record as protesting the low calibre of this year's fraternity presentations at Pops Nite. Since this event is open to the public, and since we, as sororities, participate, the low standards of the fraternity skits not only place the University as a whole in a poor light, but also reflect unfavorably upon the fraternity and sorority system.

We heartily recommend that in the future some system of acceptable standards be adopted and adherence to these standards be enforced. Our intention is to uphold the high ideals and principles which have historically been an integral part of Greek letter tradition.

It was the unanimous decision of the Council members to send copies of this letter to the Interfraternity Council, the Alumni Interfraternity Council, the president of each fraternity, and to the CYNIC.

The Panhellenic Council

Ahmad Jamal Shown Lack Of Respect

To the editors,

It appears to me that the directors of Kake Walk have somewhat of a lesson to learn from our recent jazz concert. They must realize now that they never should have before, and should never again invite a jazz group or any group of the character of the Ahmad Jamal Trio to perform in our hallowed gym. It must be obvious after last Friday afternoon that such a group is out of line with the cultural needs (e.g. the Clancey Brothers) of the general student body here. Furthermore, it must be seen that the invitation of such a group to perform here is definitely an insult. We all saw how bored and restless our sensitive students became after Mr. Jamal started playing. Soon most of them became so bored that they forgot all about Mr. Jamal's futile attempts to reach them in the pursuit of meatier subjects. In view of this insulting situation it would seem to me that an apology is due from the directors of Kake Walk or perhaps even the S.A. I am sure that even a very small note of regret for the lack of respect shown for Mr. Jamal at the concert would help lighten the impression he must have formed of our student body.

Dellin Named To Advisory Committee

A University of Vermont economics professor is one of five American scholars named to the editorial advisory committee of a new quarterly journal specializing in Eastern European economics.

Dr. Lubomir A.D. Dellin, associate professor of economics at UVM, joins four other well-known authorities on Communist affairs to edit the new periodical, "Eastern European Economics."

The magazine, the first issue of which is just out, is published by the International Arts and Sciences Press of New York City which has nine similar publications in the social sciences field. Articles appearing in leading journals of Communist countries are selected by the five members of the editorial board and translated into English. The editorial committee selects articles to appear as a group but one member serves as editor of each issue. Dr. Dellin will edit the second issue.

The other four advisory committee members are from Yale, the University of California, and American University (Washington, D.C.).

Dr. Dellin, who is also chairman of the program of Russian and East European Studies at UVM, is the contributor to five books on Eastern Europe and to many journals here and abroad. He has been a consultant to the U.S. House Committee on Education and Labor, was a contributing author for the Colliers Encyclopedia, and is associated with the U.S. Joint Publications Research Service and Free Europe Committee.

Among his forthcoming publications are a study on Eastern European Agriculture, an article for "Current History" on recent developments in Bulgaria, and articles on Eastern Europe for inclusion in the English version of the Italian encyclopedia, "Il Milione."

Editor's Athletic Dept.

To the editors:

Due to the lack of insight the Athletic Department of the University of Vermont fails to recognize the true interest in soccer. During the fall of the past year a few ambitious men tried and failed to promote a soccer team. Why did they fail?

There are numerous reasons why they failed, but two reasons stand out above the rest. A field and a soccer ball. Since much of the men's time was spent in acquiring a few square feet of earth near Redstone Campus, they had little time to practice. Another problem arose from the ski team's authority to use the three University of Vermont "soccer balls". After much trouble one was obtained, but not from the University.

Through their coach, Mr. Gregg, a scrimmage had been arranged. They played and beat Essex Junction by a score of four to nothing. It was quite impressive since they had never practiced working together as a team before. By the way, Essex Junction was six and one at the time.

To get back to the point, the University of Vermont needs a soccer team. It could and will, if given a chance, become one of the outstanding sports on the campus of Vermont. Why not give the soccer team a chance? Make soccer a varsity sport at the University of Vermont.

Macquarrie Lectures

This Thursday evening at 8:00 P.M. in the Waterman Student Lounge the John Dewey Club will present John Macquarrie, Professor of Systematic Theology at Union Theological Seminary, speaking on "Heidegger's Existentialism and The Interpretation of Christian Theology."

Professor Macquarrie has had a very varied and interesting professional career as evidenced by his biographical sketch. Born in 1919 in Renfrew, Scotland, Mr. Macquarrie received both his M.A. and his Ph.D. from Glasgow University and his B.D. at Trinity College. Being ordained by the Presbytery of Parley into the Church of Scotland in 1944, he then served as minister of St. Ninian's Church in Brechin, Scotland from 1948-1953. Mr. Macquarrie was not only a member of the clergy at that time, but also a member of the Royal Army Chaplain's Dept. from 1945-1962; he received the Territorial Decoration in 1962. During the latter part of his army career he was also a lecturer of Systematic Theology at the University of Glasgow. Last year Mr. Macquarrie came to New York City to continue the teaching end of his career at Union Theological Seminary where he is now a Professor.

This theologian's publications are almost as varied as his life itself. His deep interest in existentialism began to be noticed as early as 1955 when his first work, An Existentialist Theology, was published. After the success of his first book, Mr. Macquarrie continued to put forth other scholarly works including: The Scope of Demythologizing, Twentieth-Century Religious Thought, and Being and Time, joint translation with E.S. Robinson of Mr. Heidegger's Being and Time. The last book provides the basis of his lecture Thursday evening on Existentialism and Religion. This lecture should be of great interest to anyone who enjoys contemplating contemporary religious trends.

THINKING OUT LOUD

by Kim Boriskin

A Lexicon Of Modern Usage

academe - Traditionally, a place of higher learning and gaining useful knowledge.

academy - (no relation to academe) In modern times, a place where Sophomores go to have parties.

adolescence - The period of transition between childhood and adulthood; it is the time when a person is most susceptible to the opinions (mostly erroneous) around him, since at this stage a person can begin to reason formally but does not recognize any but the grossest fallacies, and thus falls prey to false logic, which stays with him for the rest of his life.

adulthood - The stage of a person's life directly following adolescence and lasting until death; by the beginning of this phase a person has laid in his stock of prejudices, opinions, neuroses, inhibitions and frights, most of which are essentially unchangeable. Having reached adulthood, a person is incapable of any natural reactions; one thinks of what has happened and gives a "definitive response," generally irrelevant.

Amalgam - A mythical land of milk and honey, the invention of politicians. It is populated almost exclusively by people with vested interests, good causes and sure cures. It floats on a column of hot air.

Capitalism - The economic system where, for the ostensible purpose of helping the government collect taxes (see tax), a merchant can compile a fortune by buying eggs for seven cents each and selling them at five cents each.

childhood - That period of a man's life, approximately from 5 to 12 years of age, where he is a genuine human being. He reacts naturally at this time, the civilized world not having had enough time to stifle him yet. One's powers of perception and discernment are maximum during childhood, and children see facts, not mirages.

civilized - 1) Stifled by the proximity of other humans, mostly neurotic; 2) vicious, but with finesse and polish.

Compromise - A method of getting one's own way without anyone else catching on.

creative - A word, now meaningless through misuse, that originally meant imaginative and inventive beyond the average, and applied in a purely personal and subjective sense. Today if a thing is not called creative in one way or another it is a nonentity as far as anyone is concerned.

crusade - A sort of witch hunt engaged in by people with a large set of morals (see morals). It is almost always accompanied by a lot of noise, and carried out against those who are having a better time than the crusader.

Decalogue - A set of Biblical commandments, ten in number. In reality there are eleven, so Decalogue is a misnomer. There are two contenders for the title of Eleventh Commandment. The first is "Never hesitate if nobody is looking," or, alternately, "Thou shalt not be found out." The second is "Mind thy own business," and is probably the correct one, since everybody obeys the first and nobody obeys the second, which puts it in the same class as the other ten. Dewey, Thomas E. - Former Governor of the State of New York and President of the United States, sometime in 1948. Unfortunately, this is a lost chapter in American history as no records remain of Dewey's administration. The only living authority on this period is H. V. Kaltenborn.

diploma - A piece of parchment handed out by academies to show that the recipient has been ground through the mill (Mill?). Some of the more pompous academies print the diploma in Latin, which is somehow supposed to make both recipient and academy dignified, but succeeds in making the diploma meaningless in text as well as purpose.

Golden Rule - Who's principles, yours or mine? Golden Rules generally come with a sliding scale.

insane - Differing noticeably from the norm. In a world where insanity is the norm it is only the sane people who are called insane.

liar - A person who is addicted to telling embarrassing truths, especially about other people.

loose - According to most modern playwrights, the universal solvent, a panacea. If they are right, love will cure a terminal case of gangrene, for instance, or a classical case of acute paranoia.

Man - That animal which defines itself. In so doing it sets up a scale of values and criteria whereby Man comes out as the end product of everything that is and was good and desirable, thus making Man into his own God. The single trait that every member of the species possesses is that they all commit the Sin of Pride.

morals - The prevailing set of bugaboos and prejudices against common sense and pleasure.

advice - Disregarding age, see childhood.

scribbler - Any writer you happen to disagree with.

taste - A matter of personal preference, the basis of which one can not determine. To say that something is in "bad taste" (the cardinal sin) is to say that you do not like what was said or done, but can not justify your stand.

tax - The portion of a person's money paid to the government. In return for his money the government gives the taxpayer certain privileges: the right to pay more taxes next year, of listening to politicians defame each other, and of offering his uninformed opinions to his elected representative, who generally ignores them, having uninformed opinions of his own.

thermometer - An ingenious scientific device that tells us whether we are hot or cold.

witch doctor - 1) According to the American Medical Association, President Kennedy; 2) according to President Kennedy, the American Medical Association.

Billings Center, Rich In Tradition, Resumes Place In Student Life

The Old Library, once a place of learning, has been transformed into an edifice of leisure. (Credit: S.P.S.)

The Billings Center, which was the University's library from 1885 until the fall of 1961, was the gift of the late Frederick Billings, Class of 1844, a prominent lawyer who made his home in Woodstock, Vt.

In 1885, when Billings was opened, it was generously suited to the needs of the University's total enrollment of 354 students, and the library collection estimated at about 20,000 volumes. With the tripling of the University's enrollment following World War II, however, the library's 175 seats were inadequate to meet the needs of the student body, and Billings' shelves had long since ceased to provide room for the University's library collection. The need for new facilities was apparent and, in the fall of 1961, Bailey Memorial Library was opened, made possible by a $2,100,000 bond issue approved by the 1958 Vermont Legislature, the major share to be repaid by students through the library fee.

Mr. Billings was one of many philanthropists who made it possible for UVM to have such buildings as Waterman, Williams Science Hall, the Fleming Museum, the Ira Allen Chapel and others. He was, in terms of buildings, the first of these generous donors.

The Billings Library had an original value of $149,775.00 but by the late 50's its replacement cost was considered to be $561,400.00.

The architect was the famous Henry Hobson Richardson. Billings Library has been called an example of the best work of this famous man. The contractors were Norcross Brothers of Worcester, Mass.

The library came into being because Mr. Billings wished to purchase for the University the George P. Marsh collection of about 11,000 volumes and to provide a suitable building for this valuable material. It was his original plan to house the collection in the apse of the new library but he apparently became dissatisfied with the arrangement and with the consent of the trustees enlarged the library by the addition of a wing at the rear, completed in 1887 (see date on the fireplace).

In 1956, a University student, Patricia Kolk, '56, prepared a thesis on the library as an assignment in a course in Modern Architecture. Much of the material which follows is taken from this source.

"The library is divided into three main parts (excluding the east reading room). The apse is a regular polygon rising to a central apex. The central portion is characterized by its lofty gable roof and high windows and it is flanked by a tall, graceful central tower. The north wing contains the galleries and alcoves."

The apse is 47 feet in diameter, 52 feet high; the central portion, 62 feet from the ground to the apex of the central gable and this area is 58.6 feet wide. The central tower is 90 feet high. The porch-like entrance is 28.8 feet wide and 10 feet deep; "the head of the arch is carved with a rough, flowing pattern—reminiscent of scroll-work and floral designs. The caps over the windows and the columns of the tower are carved in a basket design which is quite indistinct today. On the front of the gable, at the intersections of the arches over the windows are four carved heads—two humans and two beasts. At the corner of the gable, next to the north turret, is a carved head and body of a dragon. The transom over the massive oak doors of the porch is carved with what appear to be two wolves' heads and other intricate designs."

The library was constructed of Longmeadow sandstone. The interior was finished in Georgia pine. The floors are of birch, "although they are allegedly brick underneath."

"The roof is of open timber-work, appearing somewhat like the ribs of Gothic vaults. These converge at the apex, and at the bottom are carved projecting hammer beams, vaguely reminiscent of buttresses..."

The building's construction in 1885 followed provisions believed at that time to be suitable for its use as a library, adequately lighted and ventilated in its day. It underwent no major alterations until plans were made for its use as a Center.

"Romanesque as Billings is... there are aspects... which point to it as an admixture of earlier styles. The Baroque element is quite apparent... (and it) retains some of the classical order and restraint of bygone days."

"Billings is an interesting example of building principles put into action before the academicians can reduce the concepts which a building exhibits to neatly packaged formulae."

Reminiscent of University history is the fact that the latch on the east door came from the home of Professor McKendree Petty whose house formerly stood on this site.

Many senior proms were held in Billings Library at Commencement time. Formerly, class banners in silk and satin hung on the columns in the apse. It is believed that the logs in the Marsh Library fireplace are from trees cut down when Billings was built.

The transformation of Billings from library to center for students was undertaken with a view to preserving the Nineteenth Century charm of what is considered nationally to be an architectural gem. Most who have seen the change agree that the central goal has been successfully achieved. Color, fabrics and furnishings have been chosen in the same spirit, and the result will provide for Vermont students what may be unique on any American college campus—a student center which is an acknowledged and architectural treasure of long

Architects for the remodeling were Barr, Linde and Hubbard of Burlington.

Contractor was Kenneth Adams of Milton, Vermont.

Billings Student Center, officially opened last weekend, is presently being governed by a temporary governing board made up of faculty members and student association representatives. This board, made up of representatives from Panhellenic Council, WSGA, IFC, Men's Residence Hall Council, and Student Association, has been active in deciding space allocation, formulating the policies and purposes of the building. Its members, Mr. Emil Spees, Dean Harris, Dean Patzer, Mr. Mosser, Dr. Boller, Phyllis Levine, Pat Farrand, Harvey Tauber, Marty Singer, Norbert Zebny, Betsy Lisman, and Sue Firth will soon set up a permanent governing board. Under this board will be a programming committee whose function will be to set up programs supported by funds from student associations. These programs will consist of any activities campus organizations wish to put on.

Billings Student Center is open every weekday from 7:00 A.M. until women's closing hours.

The Catamount Den is open weekdays from 7:15 A.M. until one-half hour before women's closing hours, and Sunday from 9:15 A.M. until 10:00 P.M. The Catamount Den is operated by Saga Foods.

Furnishings for the Student Center are on order and will be completed during the semester. Lounges, though somewhat sparsely furnished, are now available for meetings and study. All allocated office space should be filled within the next two weeks.

Planned for the use and convenience of the UVM student body, the Billings building will contain several interesting facilities. An AM-FM radio-television console will be found in one of the lounges. A sound system is planned for amplification throughout the building.

WRUV, the campus radio station, may be taped into the snack bar occasionally. A ride bulletin board, enabling students who need rides and students who want riders to get together will soon be designed and installed. Class-boards from the now-defunct Class Club will be available. An attempt is being made to secure home town newspapers from different geographical locations. In short, every aspect of the student's needs and desires should be covered by Billings Student Center and suggestions are welcomed.

Fey Explains New Budget

The following is reprinted from the Bulletin of the University of Vermont. This is the Report of Dr. John T. Fey, President.

THE BUDGET

The first thing apparent about the University's proposed biennial budget, as will be seen by comparing the 1961-63 and 1963-65 pie charts at the right, is that it proposes an expenditure increase of $3,866,889 for the new biennium. It may also be seen that the University is asking the state to assume the major, or $3,481,097, share of this increase.

In fact, though actual income expected from other sources is expected to increase by $420,000 in the coming biennium, it will be noted that the share of UVM's operating budget provided by these other sources of income may be expected to decrease from the 66 percent they provide in the current 1961-63 biennium to 55 percent in the proposed budget.

In effect, the University is asking the state to increase its share of the total operating budget from 34 percent in the current biennium to 45 percent in the coming biennium. This is still considerably less than most states provide for their state universities. A recent study showed the average to be nearly 60 percent.

STATE APPROPRIATIONS REQUESTED FOR UVM'S OPERATING BUDGET

WHY AN INCREASE?

There are four basic reasons why UVM's Trustees have approved a budget calling for a $3,866,000 increase over the next two years. One of the most important reasons is illustrated by chart three which shows that a substantial part of the requested increase is necessary just to maintain the salary level reached in the current year of the 1961-63 biennium. The chart projects the seven and eight percent faculty salary increases UVM plans for 1963-64 and 1964-65 respectively; but also shows that - even without these necessary salary increases - a substantial budget increase is necessary just to maintain the budget level reached in this, the second year of the current biennium.

Similar existing commitments are involved in three of the four reasons for the proposed increases, which are:

1. Salary increases authorized during the 1961-63 biennium as noted above, and salary increases of seven and eight percent respectively planned for 1963-65 as noted above;

2. Increased expenditures for wages, largely due to new physical plant facilities, including the new gymnasium, the second phase of the medical building program, and anticipation of completion of the new engineering building;

3. Increased operating expenses anticipated in connection with operation of these new major facilities; and a normal 5 percent increase in anticipated operating costs;

4. New positions authorized during the 1961-63 biennium, and new positions anticipated in the coming biennium.

WHY MUST THE INCREASE COME FROM THE STATE?

As already noted, the University is asking the state to provide $3,481,097 of the $3,866,000 increase needed for the coming biennium if the University is to meet existing commitments and provide the proposed seven and eight percent average merit salary increases planned for 1963-64 and 1964-65.

The request to the state to meet the major share of the increase needed comes only after a careful study of all available sources.

The charts show that the two major sources of income available to the University are the appropriations it receives from the State of Vermont, and the income paid by students in tuition and fees. Subsequent charts will show that University of Vermont tuition and fee totals are already high - in fact the highest charged by any state university. Furthermore, the University simply cannot expect to find the increased income it needs to meet existing commitments and increase faculty salaries even with a substantial tuition increase.

The budget proposed by the University is, to be sure, a budget based on the insistence of UVM Trustees that the University should continue to strive for quality and, indeed, excellence, in the education programs it provides for its students. But this does not mean that it is a luxury budget.

Quite simply, the major share of the proposed increase is necessary to make it possible for the University to meet existing commitments in terms of current salary levels and operating costs; and to provide seven and eight percent average merit faculty salary increases in the new biennium. Subsequent charts will deal with the reasons UVM is proposing these faculty salary increases. New positions and programs account for a very small percentage of the proposed increase.

FACULTY SALARIES

In the now famous 1956 report of President Eisenhower's Commission on Higher Education, it was recommended that American colleges and universities move to increase faculty salaries and, specifically, to double them in ten years!

The Board of Trustees of the University of Vermont accepted that challenge, as chart number four shows. To be sure, even with the salary increases proposed for the coming biennium, the University will remain behind schedule, but the chart shows that effort and progress are being made toward the goal.

Obviously, however, all worthy colleges and universities are striving to increase faculty salaries, both out of the need to compete in a tightening market, and out of recognition of the fact that salaries paid to teachers still lag behind income of the other professions and that of workers in many industries.

Fey's New Budget

The University of Vermont competes with its sister institutions of higher learning and with business and industry both to maintain its faculty and staff and in seeking to attract new faculty and staff. Actually, the University has increased salaries substantially in the decade just ended, but chart five shows that UVM has actually lost some ground within the past three years even though it has increased faculty salaries for all ranks in each of these years.

It may be seen, then, that the proposed seven and eight percent salary increases for the coming biennium may not be expected to place the University in the forefront of its competition. Rather, since most if not all other colleges and universities seeking to maintain quality programs may be expected to endeavor to increase faculty salaries, the salary increases planned by the University of Vermont may be expected, at best, simply to keep the University in a reasonably competitive position.

TUITION

University of Vermont tuition and fee charges are the highest, both for residents and non-residents, charged by any state university. Resident tuition is currently $416; non-resident tuition was increased in the fall of 1962 from $1040 to $1200. A study by the Office of Education reports "the average charge for tuition and fees to the typical full-time undergraduate student in 1961-62 was $185 in 473 public institutions and $731 in 829 private institutions."

OTHER COSTS

In addition to tuition, students at the University of Vermont are required to pay student activity, library, and athletic fees totaling $75 annually. Room charges are $335 annually, board is $440. Books and supplies may be expected to cost approximately $150. Thus it may be seen that the average Vermonter may expect a year of college at the University of Vermont to cost over $1300, not including transportation, laundry, and other personal expenses. The cost for non-residents is over $2100.

TUITION DOESN'T COVER COST

It may be noted that few, if any, colleges or universities charge in tuitions what it actually costs to educate a student. UVM like almost every other sister institution, subsidizes the cost of every student's education from endowments, gifts and grants, and federal and state appropriations.

Hanover Tops Vermont, 8-5 In Special Kake Walk Game

UVM played its first official hockey game last Saturday afternoon before a spirited Kake Walk crowd of 2,000 at the Gutterston Field House. The Cats lost to an experienced team, the Hanover Storm Kings, 8 to 5.

In losing, Coach Ruffer's young Catamounts showed fine potential. There is only one senior on the whole squad. He is Tony Russo who had to miss the first game because of a recurrent leg injury. Russo, the team's goaltender, was voted honorary captain last week by his teammates.

As is the case with most inexperienced hockey clubs, the Vermont play was erratic. One mistake led to another and at the seven minute mark the Cats were down 3 to 0. Kenny Berger, Doug Hamilton, and John Drake all scored within the short span of 27 seconds for Hanover. This did not dampen the spirit of the skating Catamounts. They were determined to show the home crowd what they could do.

looking very good.

Hanover jumped ahead to a 5-1 lead on two goals by Barry Lawson. UVM's Lyman hit the nets at 6:06 for Vermont. Kenny Sausville followed at 8:27 with a well placed 30-foot shot. The crowd came alive as sophomore Art Garvin pushed home a goal at 9:38 for the Cats. With Hanover now ahead 5-4, Lawson, who was a thorn in Vermont's side all day, broke in all alone on goalie Mickey Steinberg. Steinberg cut down the angle of the shot and blocked the break away Storm King. The rebound was out in front and Lawson had a simple slap shot but Steinberg again blocked the puck and saved a score.

Once again Vermont lapsed and goals by Marshall and Haehman put Hanover in front, 7-4. Marshall Stevenson, playing his usual good game, scored unassisted at 13:57. Then Marshall followed with another goal for the Storm Kings to put icing on the cake. The game ended that way with Hanover winning it 8 to 5.

Steinberg stopped 36 of 44 shots fired at him to 31 out of 36 for the Hanover goalkeeper, Bill Ronish.

PLAYING COACH - Hockey coach Bill Ruffer, a former hockey player himself, skates with two of his players. They are Bob Cook (left) and Mike Scheidt. Both men have helped the Cats in their first year and promise to do so next season also.

Up for grabs.

Patrick Gym Dedicated KW Saturday

Dr. Clifford L. Brownell, chairman of the Physical Education Department at Columbia University, was guest speaker Saturday morning during dedication ceremonies at UVM's new Patrick Gymnasium.

Brownell commented that physical fitness alone is not enough, it must be accompanied by total fitness of the individual.

Brownell expressed the hope that many future teachers of physical education would receive their training at the facilities of the new $2,000,000 gym.

Other speakers at the ceremony were Governor Philip H. Hoff and Burlington Mayor Robert Bing.

Hoff pointed out that UVM receives dedicated help from Vermont legislators, and that they are extremely proud of the new structure.

Bing, a 1953 graduate of UVM, declared he is impressed with the University's progressive building program.

Howard A. Prentice, speaking on behalf of University alumni, contrasted the new facility with the old gym constructed in 1902. "We are all proud of this new building, and it is a gratifying experience to stand here today," he remarked.

The Patrick gym honors Roy L. Patrick, class of 1898. Patrick served the University as a member of the Board of Trustees and in 1949 received the honorary degree of Doctor of Laws from his alma mater. The gym seats 4,400 for varsity basketball and can hold upwards of 7,000 for conferences and convocations.

The new pool is 75 feet by 42, has six lanes, an adjustable diving board for one and three meter diving, and will have seats for 250 persons. The field house has a hockey rink in one half and a track baseball diamond in the other. The rink seats 3,700.

Presenting his dedication remarks, UVM President John T. Fey observed that alumni and friends of the University contributed over $900,000 of the gym's cost. "This is a significant and worthy achievement," Fey said. "To all who have shared in making this new physical education facility possible, we gratefully dedicate its use."

Nobody Asked Me, But...

by Ray Bello

Vermont had a population explosion last weekend as 50,000 people invaded the usually quiet and serene Green Mountain State. This figure represents one-eighth of the state's total population during an ordinary, non-Kake Walk week. Of course, not all 50,000 came to indulge in Kake Walk, although thousands did and thoroughly enjoyed themselves. The bulk of the multitude of outsiders were skiers.

When is the glass for the breezeway going to be installed? Going to the field house from the gym is like taking a cold shower. Trackmen have to brave the cold northern wind to get to the cage.

Oh yes, we have a freshman indoor track team. There are 11 men on the squad but on the average only three men show up for practice each day. Coach Archie Post would be grateful if the other 8 men would come to practice.

We lost to New Hampshire in overtime, 97 to 94, last week to finish our YC schedule with a 2-8 record.

Last weekend, while walkers were walking, pledges were shoveling, and everyone was having a wonderful time, the UVM ski team was at Middlebury College representing their school in the EISA championships. The Catamount racers placed an overall third behind the winner, Dartmouth and second place Middlebury. By finishing third, UVM beat Williams and Norwich for the first time this year.

In the downhill event, Rick Hubbard took fourth place, Chris Quimby finished 10th, and Nash Lamb was 14th to give the team third place, just 4 of a point behind the big green of Dartmouth. In the slalom, Hubbard placed third and Nash was 10th to give us a third in that race, and a third place in the alpine combined.

The nordic team turned in sixth place in both the cross-country and the jump. Steve Lozinski placed 14th in the X-country out of over fifty of the top runners in the east.

Besides being the Eastern Championships, this race was also the qualifying race for the NCAA's to be held in Utah during March. The Vermont team qualified for these championships, but will not go as a result of lack of financial backing. However, Captain Rick Hubbard, as a result of his second place in the skimeister, is eligible to race in all four events. It is possible that he will obtain the backing from the university to attend this big meet as an individual.

YC Scorers; Becton Sixth

The Conference leading Rams of Rhode Island also possess the Yancon's leading scorer, Steve Chubin, who is presently averaging 23.0 points per game. Chubin has been plagued by an injury and has missed URI's last two games. The Rams play second place Connecticut on March 2, for the YC Championship. It is hopeful that Chubin will be healthy for this game.

Vermont has three men in the top 15 scores in the 6 team league. Benny Becton has a 15.2 average in conference play which ranks him sixth. Becton is also one of the leading rebounders in the nation with a 14.8 per game average. Jack Shabel (13.6) and Dave Strassburg (10.6) rank ninth and fourteenth respectively.

Budapest String Quartet To Honor Chamber Series

by Betty Fuchs

The famous Budapest String Quartet will appear here on March 14, at Ira Allen Chapel. It was first established in the Nineteen-Twenties. By 1929 the Budapest had already achieved the musical leadership it has enjoyed ever since as the world's most famous string quartet.

The group originally included three Hungarian and one Dutch musician and had its headquarters in Budapest. Later, one by one, the original members were replaced by musicians from Russia until, in the Nineteen-Thirties, the Quartet's membership was constituted as it is today. Thus it happens that a group which bears the name of the Hungarian capital is made up of four famous musicians who were born in Russia.

Due to the illness of Joseph Roisman, violinist, the Budapest's appearance in Burlington will be as a trio. The remaining three members of the Quartet, Boris Kroyt, violist, Alexander Schneider, violinist, and Mischa Schneider, cellist, will present a program for a string trio. Mr. Roisman is under doctor's care for a back injury.

The Budapest Quartet today spends most of its time performing in the United States. But they are old and admired friends, not only here and in Europe, but in nearly every corner of the globe. There is no continent where the Budapest has not appeared and been acclaimed.

In spite of their busy schedule, they find time for their personal lives and their favorite diversions - swimming, chess, bridge, gin rummy and, especially, reading. Each of them has individual specialties, too. Boris Kroyt, the violist, is a gadgeteer. Joseph Roisman, violinist, collects Mereschau pipes. Alexander Schneider, the other violinist, is also a collector - he collects houses! He is the owner of city and country houses not only here but also abroad. Mischa Schneider admits to one major non-musical hobby - he is a voracious reader.

In addition to their continuing concert successes and their long series of fine recordings, the Budapest recently achieved new laurels in a new medium - television. They made their successful television debut in 1957 and made a deep impression in a medium that is not usually considered to appeal primarily to the ear. Since then the "Budapesters" have been featured on television programs, notably the distinguished new Festival of Performing Arts series.

Tickets for the Budapest's performance will be available at the door and sell for $1.50 each. Next in the Lane Chamber Arts Series will be the Dancemakers, a modern dance company which will appear at Burlington High School Auditorium on March 30.

SA Requests '63 Budgets

All organizations seeking funds from the Student Association for the fiscal year beginning of September of 1963, must pick up their budget request forms at the main information office in the Billings Student Center on Thursday, March 14, or Friday, March 15. The finance committee of the Student Association view failure to do so as an indication of the organization's desire not to request funds this year.

Anyone interested in running for a S.A. office, pick up petitions at the Billings Information Desk. Petitioners must have 150 signatures by March 13, 1963. Further instructions will be given when the petitions are obtained.

On Wednesday, March 13th, Alpha Epsilon Phi Sorority will sponsor two performances of "Black Orpheus", the winner of the Golden Palm Grand Prize at the Cannes International Film Festival of 1959. This is the first movie of its kind ever to be presented and sponsored by a UVM organization. Amid the splendor of Carnival in Rio, Lopert Films will present "Black Orpheus" starring Marpessa Dawn and Breno Mello. The screenplay is by Jacques Viot and the movie is directed by Marcel Camus and produced by Sacha Gordiner.

The annual and colorful Carnival in Rio de Janeiro serves as a background for Director Camus' modern interpretation of the famed Orpheus and Eurydice legend. According to the legend, Orpheus was so endowed with musical talents as a son of Appolo and Calliope, that his playing could tame wild beasts, cause rivers to stop and listen, battles to end and the sun to rise. His love for Eurydice, who was to die a tragic death, prompted Orpheus to charm Cerberus and persuade Pluto to bring his love back to the land of living, only to lose Eury-

Cast Posted For "The Fantasticks"

John Dancoes (the Mute) has both the shortest and the longest roles in THE FANTASTICKS, the satirically romantic musical comedy opening at the Arena Theater on March 21st (and running for four evenings). It is short because the lines are at an absolute minimum -- none, since he is portraying a mute. But he is also on stage for longer than any of the other actors and has more than 400 cues to memorize. For he is the musical's property-man who, in full sight of the audience, will re-arrange a vast collection of boxes, planks, ribbons, scarves and other paraphernalia to indicate the changes of scene, and he will scatter vast amounts of confetti and colored cards at the appropriate moments.

He is himself a prop from time to time. For example, he will have to hold his arms out straight for a full eight minutes without moving, to indicate a wall, while Bill Perlow and Barbara Unger sing the duet, "Metaphor," across this "wall."

Other members of the cast will be Paul Bristol (the narrator), Timothy Finney (the girl's father), Dick Lennon (the boy's father), Barry Beckerman (the Old Actor), and Errol Selsby (the man who dies).

Scholarships

The Political Science Department has announced two scholarships for seniors interested in the study of law. One is to the Boston College Law School, and the other to the University of Chicago.

Any graduating senior certified by the Political Science Department will receive full tuition to whichever of the two schools he chooses.

Any senior interested in the scholarship to Boston College should contact Prof. Lyman Gould by March 21. Those interested in the University of Chicago should see Prof. Rolf Haugen by the same date.

Saga Holds

Saga Food Service will be conducting a food preference survey in each of the three dining halls on the following days:

Waterman Dining Hall
Dinner, Monday, March 11, 1963
Marsh Dining Hall
Dinner, Monday, March 11, 1963
Simpson Dining Hall
Dinner, Tuesday, March 12, 1963

It is hoped that all boarding students will use this opportunity to express their particular likes and degree of preference for the various food items on the survey. The results will be tabulated by school, region and nationally. As the tabulation will be done by a light sensitive electronic scoring machine, all participants will be asked to bring a #2 or softer pencil with them for recording selections. Results of this survey will be available later.

WUS Projects Will Result From Week Of Events

by Sandy White

World University Service (WUS) is sponsoring a week of varied events from March 10 through March 16. The money raised at these events will go directly to one of the two projects cited below as a gift from the students at the University of Vermont.

Starting the week, on Sunday, March 10, will be a twenty to one chess match. A Master chess player has agreed to play twenty chess games against twenty opponents at the same time and plans to win them all. If this presents a challenge to you, make reservations to play against the master with Mr. Colin Connelly at the physics department, Science Hall.

Secondly, and highlighting the week is the bidding for the Deans' services. Dean Harris, Dean of Women, and Dean Patzer, Dean of Men, have volunteered to serve breakfast in bed to two chosen members of the residence which contributes the most (bids the highest) towards the WUS Week project. A thermometer will be placed on the Billings' bulletin board so the bids can be noted as they come in. Each residence (fraternities, sororities, and dorms) will receive a specific notification of this event. Meanwhile, the Deans are anxiously awaiting their assignments.

The third event is a Guess the Beans booth in Billings, Wednesday through Friday of next week. This event necessitates writing down the figure which you think most accurately describes the number of beans in a special jar. The prize offered to the winner has the prestige of the "College Bowl."

The fourth event of the week will feature a champion cricket player, "straight from England."

Dr. Howkins of the physics department. Dr. Howkins has issued a challenge to any would-be baseball player to knock his wicket down. If anyone meets this challenge and is successful he will give them half a dollar. This event will take place Saturday night, March 16, at Southwick.

All through the week, WUS buttons will be available, in donating money towards a WUS button the contributor will also be voting for the project to which he wishes WUS to send the accumulated profits from WUS week. This brings us to the primary purpose of WUS and WUS week.

World University Service is an organization present on many campuses (Dartmouth, Smith, Harvard, Springfield College for example) whose main purpose is to help students in foreign countries obtain an education. These students, for lack of food, funds, and other material items necessary for education or because of poor health are not able to obtain higher education on their own. WUS at UVM intends to carry out the goal of national WUS. Therefore, during WUS week we hope to earn money which will go to help underprivileged students in either South Africa or Hong Kong. The specific project which WUS will send its money to will be decided upon by the votes of each button-buying student.

The first project is scholarships for the Bantu, the largest tribe in South Africa.

In 1959 the white government of South Africa closed the white universities to colored students. Any attempt to enter any university by a colored person thereafter resulted in staunch government opposition. This meant, and still means, that colored students have no opportunity for advanced education as there are no universities for colored students in South Africa.

In 1960 World University Service offered ten scholarships to Bantu Students, and in 1961 offered fifteen. These scholarships have enabled twenty-five students to attend universities in the United States, England and Western Europe. So far WUS is the only organization which has offered aid to the Bantu.

The second project is to aid a student health dispensary in Hong Kong. Today approximately eighty per cent of the university students there suffer from some form of tuberculosis. Although there are four or five hundred doctors at work in Hong Kong, this still means that there is only one doctor for every two or three thousand people.

The ship Hope visited Hong Kong last year, and has emphasized the need for medical aid there.

WUS week will culminate in a dance Saturday, March 16, at Southwick. At the dance, "Red-stone Rock," winners of the contests and the project which the University of Vermont will sup-

The Vermont Cynic

The Official Student Newspaper of the University of Vermont.

Editor's Scrapbook Under New Management

Once again the CYNIC hangs out the "Under New Management" sign. Perhaps it has become a ritual of sorts, but, if one may be so presumptuous, we like to think that it is more than a ritual. We have not only inherited a newspaper, but a new set of offices (permanent, at last) as well. For all of us, it is quite a change.

Fortunately, the retired staff left the CYNIC in good condition, and we intend to keep it that way. We would like to thank the old staff for all they've done for us; in a very real way they were our mentors, and we hope that we don't let them down.

In the past year, the campus has grown by a leap and a bound, as the saying goes, and the CYNIC tries to keep up with it. To a large extent they succeeded, as we hope we shall succeed as the campus continues to grow.

A STATEMENT OF PURPOSES . . .

The primary purpose of the CYNIC, as with any college paper, is to cover the campus news. Accomplishing this, the CYNIC will try to go further. There will not necessarily be bulletins from the big wire services like Reuters, but editorial coverage need not be kept at home. It should be the place of the college paper to offer editorial comment on national issues and on international issues if they are of such a nature that we are all involved. This, the CYNIC will try to do.

OF ASPIRATIONS . . .

At one time the CYNIC came out twice a week. To be sure, it was not a large paper at that time, but it did come out twice a week, and the interest in timely things was not lost. Maybe this method of preventing news from becoming stale is a pipe dream, but maybe it isn't. It can be done, difficult though it might be.

AND OF THE STUDENTS

We will try to continue what was once a regular feature, but has, of late, come to be a rather sporadic affair. The feature is, of course, the "Studentes" and "Professores" columns. At one time we had no trouble with these columns, but apparently everyone, students and faculty alike, has lost interest. The columns will be continued, that is, if anyone cares enough about anything to write them.

Speaking of columns, there are two openings for regular columnists. As in the past, anyone who wishes to write a column need only submit a sample of his work to the Editor. Again, that assumes that someone cares enough to write.

Or are you annoyed about something? Did you enjoy something? Has the CYNIC slipped again? Or have we actually done something worth praising (typical reaction: who is he kidding)? There is still, needless to say, the "Letters to the Editor" column. Don't be afraid to speak up; the "Letters" column is made for you.

But then, the whole CYNIC is yours, believe it or not. People complain that we don't give enough coverage to this class, or to that dorm, or to some other club. And perhaps we don't. But the CYNIC staff is not omniscient. We can not pay a man to stand around the White House all day, so to speak, and report on everything the President does or says. While we can come to you most of the time, it very often helps if you can come to us. A little hint here, a tip or clue there, and the results might surprise you. Surprise of surprises, but we have classes, do homework, write term papers and have exams just like the rest of you.

In brief, the CYNIC is still a student paper, and a UVM student paper at that. The CYNIC will not change radically, but with a little cooperation and interest it will change, and the change will be for the better.

An open letter to the students of UVM:

Have you noticed as of late that the pictures in the CYNIC are becoming of increasingly poor quality? We, the members of the Student Photography Staff, could offer as explanation, improper control of temperature in our old run-down darkroom, or other technical problems we constantly incur. However, this past week, the day of reckoning arrived. When we moved our offices to the new Billings Student Center, with its new, custom equipped darkrooms, the Editor of the CYNIC, noticing no change in the picture quality, called me into his office and confronted me with the long feared question . . . WHY?

I explained our plight to him as follows . . . At the present time, the mainstay of all photographic work done for the CYNIC and Ariel is being handled by five or six people. Most of the real burden falls upon our President, who is left with the work that some other member finks out on. Thus, by reason of various personal problems arising with the remaining members, the actual working staff is cut to three people. This is too much work for five or six people, not to mention three or four. WE NEED HELP!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!

Surely there must be some amongst the masses of you that are interested in the fascinating hobby of photography. Why not drop by our offices in the new Billings Center and learn the whole story of how we function and how you can learn and profit from membership in the SPS.

Thank you,
A tired photographer

Excellent Performance Given By Hayes & Evans

On Monday, March 4, the Blue Lane Series proudly presented Helen Hayes and Maurice Evans in Martin Tahse's production of "A Program for Two Players". The Lane Series had good reason to be proud of their most recent presentation because the originality of the program and the highly professional performance of Miss Hayes and Mr. Evans made the evening one which will stand out in Lane Series history.

"A Program for Two Players" is comprised of dramatizations of selections from Shakespeare's plays. The presentation is especially interesting because not only did Miss Hayes and Mr. Evans appear in roles for which they have become noted but also they appeared in some of the minor roles from Shakespeare which have charmed and captivated audiences always. Because of their star status it would be impossible for them to play these parts in productions of the entire play from which they were taken.

The laughter and applause which continually resounded throughout Memorial Auditorium were evidence of the audience's obvious enthusiasm for the program. The performers, entirely capable of projecting themselves throughout Memorial, were aided by some very interesting and elaborate settings and very adequate lighting.

During the first part of the evening Helen Hayes delighted the audience with her characterization of Henry V's French wife, Katherine, trying to speak English to her new husband. Another very powerful section in the first part of the evening was "O, that this too too solid flesh" and "Scene: Hamlet and Gertrude" both from Hamlet.

The second Act was opened with readings from texts about Shakespeare by noted critics. Especially well received during the second act was "Pat, pat, and here's a marvelous convenient place for our rehearsal" from A Midsummer Night's Dream. In this scene Evans takes the part of each clown who speaks and turns out a smashingly professional performance. Other strong parts in the second act were "The quality of mercy is not strained" (Portia) from A Midsummer Night's Dream and "I am not mad" (Constance) from King John.

"A Program for Two Players" proved to be a thoroughly enjoyable and worthwhile evening. What might have been expected to be a somewhat monotonous evening of only two actors reciting Shakespeare, lacking freshness and continuity, was turned into a lively and colorful presentation by the magic of Miss Hayes and Mr. Evans for the capacity audience at Memorial Auditorium (despite the heavy snow).

Once again the UVM campus has settled down after an exciting Kake Walk Weekend. Election of new officers was the agenda for the coming year. The sisters and pledges of Alpha Epsilon Pi congratulate their new executive board - Barbara Leff, President; Judy Korman, first Vice President; Lynne Feder, second Vice President; Joan Klonsky, Secretary; and Micki Austern, Treasurer. Something else exciting at the AEPhi house. The sorors and pledges are sponsoring an exclusive showing of the Academy Award Winner "Black Orpheus." There will be two showings of the feature on Wednesday, March 13, 1963, at the Strong Theater, one at 7:00 p.m. and one at 9:00 p.m. Admission for the performance will be $1.

Congratulations also to the newly elected officers of Sig Ep - President, Jeff Graham; Vice President, Roger Ames; Treasurer, David Hebert; Recorder, G. William Bray; and Corresponding Secretary, Peter Joslin. The Sig Eps also won the campus basketball championship. The Sig Ep five clinched the fraternity title on Feb. 5, by defeating SAE 47-26. The following Thursday, the campus championship was taken in a tilt in which Sig Ep topped the Checkmates 40 to 32. The men chiefly responsible for the successful season were: capt. Jerry Torch, Dutch Cassini, John Bossi, Jim Jealous, Lee Pantas, and Bob Brown.

Other team members included Jay Harding, Roger Potter, and Carmen Loffredo. A tip of the hat for a job well done.

Congratulations to the following brothers of SAE and their new pinmates:

Chris Mumford, '63 and Pi Phi's Bonnie Stewart, '63; Ralph Nicholson, '64 and Peggy Stearns, Wagner College; John DeLuca, '65 and Kathy Combes, Hofstra College; Sherm Proudly, '65 and Judy Rubiski, Brockton, Mass.; and Paul Schoonmaker, '64 and Judy Godbout, '65.

The Gamma Phis have finally come back down to earth after a heavenly Kake Walk. Two recent pinnings at the house are Vivian Collins, '64 to Sig Ep's Tom Neapolitano, '63, and Dina Babson, '64 to Phi Sig's Steve Teplich, '63. A new Gamma Phi pledge, Lynn Keppelman is wearing an AEPhi lavalier belonging to Dick Berliner. Lynn is President of her pledge class, Elaine Verrier is Vice President, Tina Henn, Treasurer, and Sue Scoble is Secretary.

The brothers of AEPhi have elected a new executive also. Congratulations to the new master and successful Kake Walker, Steve Frankel; Lt. Master, Howie Jacobson; Scribe, Steve Weisberg; Treasurer, Lenny Levy; and Member at Large, Larry Chelder.

Victor Borge Captivates Audience

by Sandy Flaster

Playing to a capacity audience last Thursday night, Victor Borge captured the attention of music lovers and comedy cravers alike. He was twoderful, as he might have said in his own "inflated" language.

The show was called "Comedy in Music" and lived up to that name. Borge supplied the comedy with a few interjections of serious music, and Leonid Hambro supplied the music in the second part of the show. Mr. Hambro, a "crack pianist," was more than Borge's foil.

Coming 20 minutes late, Mr. Borge proceeded to spoof Vermont parking problems and the weather. Instant laughter! What he did next was accomplished so fast that the people involved probably didn't realize what was happening. Because the spotlight was shining on some of the people sitting on stage, he had the spectators move their chairs until they could see without being blinded. The expressions on these people's faces (a la Candid Camera) was enough to throw one into hysterics.

After more Borgean capers (fooling with the p.a. system until we either couldn't hear because the volume was too low or because it was too high) the grand moment arrived when we were to hear our first note. I think the song was "Clair De Lune." My reason for saying this stems from the fact that it was not too recognizable. Lucky for me that the student next to me was a music major. The whole evening progressed in a similar manner. Beethoven was made to sound like "Mary Had a Little Lamb," and "Row, Row, Row Your Boat" was put in the style of Bach.

The "Great Dane" lived up to his name. He showed us the other side of music; the side that all can appreciate. We saw how he brought our folksongs to Europe remodeled in a classic style. When we thought that he had exhausted his supply, he reached in deep and pulled out another side-splitter.

Victor Borge proved his worth as an extraordinary entertainer. In his own words, "I'm a twoderful perfivemer."

Sculpture in New York City, where he received his Bachelor of Fine Arts Degree in 1956. It was while at Columbia he met his wife, known to Burlingtonians as Alexandra Noble, sculptress.

Following graduation, Heller taught art at the Potomac School in Washington, D.C., for two years. After this time, Heller felt the need for more experience in his field and sailed for Italy and Germany to paint on his own. The fifteen canvases on view at the museum represent some of his works in the period from 1961-63, which coincides with the length of time the Hellers have made Burlington their home.

In his review of the exhibit in the Burlington Free Press, Mr. W. Paul Aschenbach, Instructor (in) Art at UVM, said, "You will find no covered bridges, cows, sailboats, or gorgeous nudes among these pictures, but I think the deep and pleasant feeling you will find in them makes the trip up the hill for a look worthwhile."

LAPOINTE LECTURES ON BASEBALL

College baseball is not dead nor is it dying. On the contrary, it is on the rise and the major leagues are placing more faith in the nation's colleges to supply the pro ranks with baseball talent. This fact was stressed by UVM's head baseball coach, Ralph Lapointe, last Monday night at a discussion held at the Marsh Resident Hall lounge.

Coach Lapointe started his talk by sadly relating that baseball used to be more popular a long time ago than it is now. He told the small but interested group that back in the 1880's, Vermont was a baseball powerhouse. In those days UVM played most of the Ivy League schools and consistently beat them. But these were the pre-football days at the University.

Baseball regained some of its popularity in the thirties but it subsided after the war. To prove the point that Vermont baseball enthusiasm is extremely low, Lapointe stated that probably half of his audience had not seen a University of Vermont baseball game. He declined from asking for a show of hands, but the gathering acknowledged the fact by lowering their heads.

Lapointe, a former major leaguer who played for the Philadelphia Phillies and the St. Louis Cardinals, went on to show how the role of college baseball is becoming more important. The minor leagues are slowly fading out of the picture because of lack of support from the big league teams that financially support them and from the fans that no longer desire to go to Class Triple D games when they can sit at home with a glass of beer and watch the Yankees.

MURDEROUS EMOTIONS

Baseball is a slow, relaxed game in comparison with football, basketball and UVM's newest sport, hockey. People today live in a fast-moving world that is crammed with tensions and pressures. They enjoy watching a basketball game with all its action and excitement. And in the case of football, the fans derive pleasure watching two teams engage in a mock battle. This helps them relieve some of their primary aggressive emotions by yelling and shouting in accord with the physical violence down on the field. And with hockey, there is always something exciting going on. Where does this leave baseball?

In Coach Lapointe's opinion, this leaves baseball out on Centennial Field on a sunny Spring day with a sparse but relaxed gathering of spectators basking in the gamma rays, enjoying their peanuts and sodie-pop or whatever while watching the so-called slow game of baseball. And this is exactly where it should be. This is baseball's biggest selling point, a relaxed form of athletics to watch, but one that does at times activate the fan to the point of murderous emotions-- "Kill the umpire".

SUMMER LEAGUES?

What is being done to replace the dying minor leagues. According to "The Sporting News", the bible of baseball, giant steps are being taken in the direction of forming organized summer leagues composed mostly of college baseball players. A Collegiate Baseball Foundation has been formed to oversee the formation of these leagues. Both the NCAA and major league teams will be represented in this liaison between amateur athletics and professional baseball. The pros will sponsor the teams and the prudes (NCAA) will see that all the rules of amateur athletics will be observed. This means that none of players will receive pay. However the men involved will be given good jobs, which, in most cases, will be recreation jobs.

Lapointe hopes that one of these leagues will be formed in Burlington. Last year, Lapointe's assistant Don "Ace" Santa Croce attempted to set up a modified version of a summer league but encountered difficulty. Now that the majors are seriously considering this idea, Vermont stands a good chance of being selected as a possible sight.

SKATERS DEFEAT

by Ed Bennett

The UVM pucksters, on the strength of an overpowering offense, chalked up their second win of the season with an 11-7 victory over the Swanton Flyers. The Cats 11 goal total would have proved much higher had it not been for a very busy Swanton goaltender who turned away 54 shots.

George Cook opened the free scoring battle for Vermont at 8:35 of the first period. UVM continued to press the opposition with aggressive line play netting three more tallies on goals by Lane Morrison, Paul Barrett and George Cook. However, Vermont was unable to hold their four goal advantage as Swanton finally hit the scoring column on a 20 foot slap shot by Gellinas at 15:13 of the initial stanza. The Cats stormed back and rallied on goals by Jack Storms and Kenny Sausville to finish out the scoring in the first period with Vermont leading 6-1.

Swanton, undaunted by the score, flashed back with a quick goal after only 50 seconds had elapsed in the second period. They continued to chop away at Vermont's lead with their third tally of the afternoon, 16 seconds later. UVM's offense, however, playing an inspired brand of hockey, began clicking once again and struck back, registering goals by Kenny Sausville, Paul Barrett and Art Garvin to put the game out of the Flyers' reach. Swanton, trailing by a 9-3 count, was able to push over two more tallies, making the score at the end of two periods of play, 9-5. Coach Bill Ruffer's icemen continued the attack in the third period, widening the margin of victory on goals by Tim Davis and Mike Moore. Swanton still playing gamely, fought back from an 11-5 deficit, hitting the mark with two more goals to finish out the scoring.

George Cook, Paul Barrett and Kenny Sausville were the big scoring guns for Vermont, each collecting two goals apiece. Bob Cook proved to be a stalwart on defense and in the process picked up two assists. Likewise, the goaltending combinations of Mickey Steinberg and Captain Tony Russo continually frustrated Swanton's attack, notching 31 saves between them.

'63 Southern Sojourn

The Yankee Conference Champions of the 1962 baseball season, the UVM Catamounts, are readying themselves for their annual Southern trip. Since 1892, Vermont has scheduled this circuit, and has high hopes of repeating last year's performance. The return of veteran All-Yankee Conference pitcher Dick Cassani gives reason for the optimism of coach Ralph Lapointe. The Cat's slugger-outfielder, Levi Brown, a 1962 graduate of the University, is at the present time in Florida at the spring training camp of the Milwaukee Braves. Brown, Dick DeNicola, Maynard Ducatte, were also UVM representatives on the All-Yankee Conference team.

Bates Routs UVM Track Team In First Indoor Meet

Coach Archie Post sets sprinter Al Brown in the starting blocks. The Catamounts are competing in their first indoor track campaign in the University's history.

At Gutterson Field House Saturday afternoon, the UVM track team took a heavy defeat at the hands of Bates College, 82-40. Bates took nine of fourteen events as it swept past the Catamounts for its fifth victory in nine outings.

Those who scored for UVM were Bill Thurber, taking first place in the discus throw with a heave of 126' 10 1/2" Dave Sequist, with a 42' 10" throw in the shot put event, thus taking first place; and Carl Frattini of Barre, Vermont, who with a 20' 7" leap, won the broad jump. Also scoring for UVM was Pete Voytek of St. Albans, Vermont, in a three-way tie for first in the high jump, with a 5' 10" jump, and Tim Simpson, who won the 1,000 yard run in 2:23.2.

The UVM freshman track team proved more successful in their first contest of the season. The Kittens downed the Bates JV squad by a score of 53-36.

The outstanding figure of the day was Don Mayland of Merrick, Long Island. This well-co-ordinated freshman took first place in three of seven events: the high jump, the pole vault, and the 55 yard low hurdles. Also contributing to the victory were Pete Stickney, who copped two events, as did Larry Pearlmuter. Thirty-eight of UVM's fifty-three point total was scored by these three men.

Next Saturday, the Vermont varsity will travel to Schenectady, N.Y., to compete in the Union College Invitational Track Meet.

INTRAMURAL SPORTS

by Martin Wolf

Intramural volleyball competition will begin next week, on March 12th. All teams must have registered official entry blanks to be eligible to compete. Courts are presently open for practice sessions.

In track events, the relay races will be held on March 18, 20 and 25th. Deadline for all entries is Friday, March 15th, at 5 o'clock. The relays will consist of races between teams of four men, each running 440 yards, for a total of one mile.

Before any team may compete, each contestant must have had six running workouts recorded by March 16th. A health service physical examination must also be administered to each participant before March 15th. Physical exams will be given on the following dates only: Wednesday, March 13th and 20th at 4-5:30 P.M.; Thursday, March 7, 14th and 21st at 4-5:30 and 7-8 P.M.; Friday, March 8-15 and 22nd at 4-5:30 P.M.

The Intramural Track Meet will be held as a separate event, April 1-3. All entries must be in by Friday, March 29th. Rules regarding eligibility are the same as for the relays.

No contestant may compete, however, in more than three events, or in more than two running events. In team competition, no team may enter or start more than three men in the dashes and hurdles. In all other races and field events, a maximum of four men entered is allowable. First five places will count 5-4-3-2-1. N.C.A.A. rules will govern the meet.

For the All-Sports Trophy, no more than thirty points will be awarded to any organization. Points are awarded on a five-per-man entered basis, in individual competition. Any contestant who has been entered in an event and does not compete shall cause his team to be penalized by ten entry points being subtracted from their standing. The athletic department will make no exceptions to this rule.

While major league baseball teams are beginning spring training camps in the warm Florida or Arizona air, UVM is starting its in the Gardner-Collins Cage of the new Gutterson Field House. Last year's Yankee Conference champs are busily at work preparing for the 1963 campaign under the masterful eye of Coach Ralph Lapointe.

SAN FRANCISCO BALLET TO GRACE LANE SERIES

by Betty Fuchs

The world acclaimed San Francisco Ballet will perform in Burlington on March 19 and 20, as part of both the Red and the Blue Lane Series. In addition, the company will perform a children's matinee March 20.

In 1933, the company was founded as the San Francisco Opera Ballet. Its main purpose was to keep the famed San Francisco Opera supplied with dancers. Although it is now a separate entity, the San Francisco Ballet still provides dancers for the San Francisco Opera Company.

Even in its first years, the San Francisco Ballet began to make a name for itself apart from its association with the Opera. Under the leadership of Adolph Bolm, its first choreographer, it staged many successful independent productions and established ballet as part of the permanent culture of San Francisco.

In 1937, Serge Oukrainsky succeeded Bolm as choreographer and continued to enlarge the company's scope. The future development of the company was pre-saged when Oukrainsky appointed William Christensen as premier danseur. Christensen succeeded Oukrainsky a year later, and a new era for the company began.

Christensen made the company a full-scale organization. The company ventured its first tours, taking its art to many cities in America's western states. William Christensen remained as head of the company until 1951, when he was succeeded by his brother, Lew.

Lew Christensen had joined the company some years earlier after accumulating a wealth of experience with various New York companies as dancer, choreographer, and director. The present character of the company results in no small part from his efforts. Carrying on in the tradition of progress established by his elder brother, he added brilliantly to the company's repertoire with his original ballets and guided the company to ever greater artistic achievement.

Christensen's work constitutes most of the repertoire of the San Francisco Ballet, and has contributed greatly to the company's unique reputation. Some of his ballets are also part of the active repertoire of the New York City Ballet, thanks to an exchange agreement between the two companies.

In the Red Series performance March 19, the company will perform Divertissements d'Amber, Fantasma, and Caprice. The March 20 Blue Series performance will see the presentation of Variations de Ballet, Fest of Cards, and a third ballet to be announced. All of these ballets were choreographed by Lew Christensen and have never been seen here before.

New IFC Governing Board Elected

by Roberta Levy

On Tuesday, March 5, I.F.C. elections were held. The Inter-Fraternity Council itself, consisting of three representatives from each fraternity on campus, elected four new officers.

The new I.F.C. president is Bob Collier, a junior in Alpha Epsilon Pi, who was president of his fraternity last year and also participates in the University Players. The vice president is Dick Dutton, a junior in Lambda Iota. Dick is very active in I.F.C. and has worked very hard as chairman of I.F.C.'s Constitutional Revision Committee. The revised constitution improves I.F.C.'s program as a whole. The new secretary is John Hendee, a junior in Theta Chi. John was chairman of Greek Week last year and has been very active in all I.F.C. activities. Steve Bloom, of Sigma Phi Epsilon is treasurer, and aside from having avid interest in the fraternity system and the means of improving it, was a Kake Walker for his house this year.

I.F.C., this year, is very busy in executing its long range self-study program, which was begun 2 months ago. Investigations are being made by I.F.C. Council and fraternities to examine the faults and benefits of the fraternity system on campus and to make improvements to benefit fraternities and the entire campus. This extensive program is a "self-study" plan made by the fraternities themselves to improve themselves.

I.F.C. will sponsor a better Greek Week program which will take place this coming fall. There has always been a relatively short allotment of time for Greek Week activities, usually just one lecture, I.F.C. sing and a Greek chariot race, but this fall Greek week will hopefully be extended over a longer period of time, possibly 5 days. There will be the usual contests and chariot races and also banquets and more lectures. It will be a better, more informative Greek Week that will be beneficial to the whole campus as well as the fraternities. The enlarged program will include speakers and guests ranging from national fraternity advisors to specialists in education and public relations. Fraternity men will benefit themselves and try to improve their chapters as a result of this year's Greek Week. This year, as usual, we will have I.F.C. sing in the spring.

Wellman Elected WSGA President

On Monday, March 11, WSGA held elections for new officers. The officers for the coming year are: President, Linda Wellman, '64; Vice-President, Phyllis Perry, '64; Chief Justice, Pat Shanahan, '64; House Chairman, Ginger Loyd, '64; Secretary, Janet Roch, '65; Treasurer, Ruth Baldwin, '65; Fire Marshal, Ruth Lichten, '64; Scholarship, Jean Lawson, '64; Social Chairman, Mary Ann Modarelli, '65; Secretary to Judiciary, Judy Cod-bout, '65; Assistant House Chairman, Clair Berka, '66; and Public Relations Chairman, Karen Preis, '66.

SA Senate Postpones Elections, Announces Campaign Rules

At the regular SA Senate meeting of March 6, 1963, it was announced that the date of SA elections was changed from March 22 to March 27. There were two reasons offered for this change, to allow greater use of CYNIC coverage and to provide a larger spread for campaigning (now 7 days). The rules for elections were announced and voted upon. These gave the qualifications for candidates and campaign rules. There will be penalties imposed for banners and posters which are put up before March 20 and not removed by March 27. This year there will also be four balloting places, Waterman, Billings, Marsh, and Simpson. Ronald Guttman was elected chairman of the Elections Committee due to the resignation of Bob Silverstein. The names of those to work on the Elections Committee were also voted upon by the Senate and passed.

The Senate also discussed Club Evaluations which are presently being carried out. This is to determine if the clubs are to continue to receive funds from SA. WRUV was the club evaluation discussed at the meeting. It was recommended to continue funds to this group as they are one of the most active clubs on campus and are on the upswing with the change in transmitting facilities.

The present problem of the Central Research Committee is the subject of academic honesty on the campus. The committee plans to submit a questionnaire to the faculty and then one to the student body at random to determine feelings on the matter. After the results have been tabulated and statistics obtained, the committee will draw up for Senate confirmation a policy on academic honesty.

The last thing discussed was the Student Center. There will be a juke box installed within two weeks with classical and rock and roll music, or possibly FM music piped in. The matter of the long lines for food in the Den was discussed and it was announced that for items which are self service (as coffee), the students may just walk up and take it without waiting in the line.

Requisitions for office space were also mentioned. There are two temporary offices available for any organization which needs desk space for an event or the like on a temporary basis.

Ariel Seeks Staff Members

On Wednesday, March 20, 1963, at 6:30 P.M., there will be a meeting in lower Billings for anyone who is interested in working on the 1964 Ariel. No experience is necessary, but we urge only reliable people, willing to devote some time and energy to the yearbook to join the staff. Are you a member of the Class of 1964? Then we encourage you especially to take an active part in the preparation and production of YOUR yearbook.

The following positions are available: Assistant Editors, Business Manager, Section Heads of the Art, Typing, Features, Seniors, Sorority and Fraternity, Faculty, Activities and Sports Sections, and general staff members.

For the benefit of the prospective members, the responsibilities of the individual positions will be explained at this meeting. If for any reason you can not come, but wish to be on the staff, leave your name and the section on which you prefer to work in the Ariel Office (located across from the "Den" in the Student Center) any time before March 20.

Budget Request Forms Due Friday, April 19

Budget request forms for the coming fiscal year must be picked up at the S.A. office, Billings Student Center, on the 14th or 15th of March. Each form is to be filled out in triplicate and returned to the S.A. Office on or before Friday 19th of April.

NO BUDGET FORMS WILL BE ACCEPTED AFTER THIS DATE without prior consultation with the S.A. Treasurer.

Ethan Allen Rifles To Sponsor Second Annual Blood Drive

by Steven D. Adler

In the near future the students of UVM will have an opportunity afforded to them but twice a year. It will be the second annual blood drive conducted by the Vermont-New Hampshire Red Cross Regional Blood Program and sponsored this term by Ethan Allen Rifles. Before you learn how this program affects each and every one of you personally, here are the facts you'll want to jot down about your soon-to-be-had opportunity to save a human life.

EVENT: Red Cross Blood Drive

DATE: Monday, March 25, 1963

TIME: 10 A.M. - 4 P.M.

PLACE: Billings Student Center

Do you happen to be from Barre, Burlington, St. Albans or White River Junction? You'll be surprised to learn that in these communities alone, the Red Cross has distributed over 77,000 pints of whole blood to the local hospitals. In fact, since 1950, the hospitals of Vermont have received some 166,500 pints of whole blood through the Red Cross. How does the Red Cross get this blood? There's only one possible way - as a PERSONAL DONATION FROM YOU. There is no substitute for whole blood. It can neither be grown nor manufactured. Animal blood is lethal to humans. The only source of supply for a human in need is another human.

Because of this demand for whole blood, the Vermont-New Hampshire Red Cross Regional Blood Program was established in 1950 at the request of local doctors and hospitals. Since then it has supplied every pint of blood needed by the 62 hospitals in the two states - without cost or obligation. In case of accident or any other such emergency, all residents of Vermont and New Hampshire, as well as all visitors within their borders, receive all the blood they require at no charge for the blood itself.

Well, how does this all affect you as students at UVM? If you are a full-time student hailing from areas other than Vermont and New Hampshire, the Red Cross considers you a legal resident until your graduation. That means whether you battle the California surf this spring vacation or ski at Sun Valley this summer, you are assured of whole blood in time of need without cost or obligation - if you simply notify the Vermont-New Hampshire Red Cross Regional Blood Program as soon as possible.

Sometime during the coming year either you or a friend or a relative will require a blood transfusion. We all hope the time will never come, but when it does we are mighty thankful for blood supplied by the Red Cross. So let's have a record turnout at this semester's blood drive on March 25. By donating one pint of blood, you will be fulfilling a completely unselfish and humanitarian opportunity. You will receive neither money nor glory. The recipient will never know that you were the donor. Your only reward will be the deeply satisfying knowledge that you have helped save a fellow human being.

(Just one additional note. If you are under 21 years of age and unmarried, you must have the written consent of your parent or guardian, even if you have donated previously.)

THE BELL TELEPHONE COMPANIES SALUTE: BOB FISK

Bob Fisk (B.A., 1954) joined New England Telephone in Boston during 1957 and in less than three years was promoted to the position of Accounting Manager.

Quite an accomplishment when you consider Bob is responsible for the work of five supervisors and 45 employees! He needs a staff this large to handle the immense job of preparing monthly bills for southeast Boston.

Bob earned his latest promotion after outstanding performance on earlier assignments as a Supervisory Assistant and Directory Staff Assistant.

Bob Fisk and other young-men like him in Bell Telephone Companies throughout the country help bring the finest communications service in the world to the homes and businesses of a growing America.

The ninth Annual Festival of Arts at UVM opens this Friday evening, March 15, with a public lecture and an exhibition.

Speaking at 8 o'clock in the Fleming Museum is Emily Genauer, Art Critic of the N.Y. Herald Tribune, on the topic of "Critical Standards in Times of Change." Following her lecture, a reception will open an exhibit of paintings by Harrison Hampel, visiting Professor of Art at UVM.

The following week the departments of Music, Drama, and Speech, together with the University Players, will present a raffish musical, "The Fantasticks," the current off-Broadway hit by Harvey Schmidt and Tom Jones. It will be given four consecutive nights, Thursday, March 21, through Sunday, March 24, at 8:30 P.M. in the Arena Theater in the Fleming Museum.

Two other events associated with the Festival are the annual Spring Choir Concert Sunday, March 31 at 4:30 P.M. and the University Orchestra Concert, April 4 at 8:30 P.M. -- both to be presented in the Ira Allen Chapel.

Miss Genauer's opening lecture will focus on the problems of the critic in grappling with avant garde movements, but also deal with the movements themselves, particularly the New Realism. Following her talk, the floor will be open for discussion and questions, the more pointed, the better.

A distinguished writer in her field, Miss Genauer has received the N.Y. Newspaper Womens Club Annual Award four times, and has also received the Columbia University's Journalism Alumni Award. Her most recent book is a biography of Chagall.

Harrison Hampel's exhibit comprises 25 oils, all done since 1961, most of them this year. Students and faculty have had a preview in the Bailey Library, where one of Mr. Hampel's paintings, "Schuykill Idyl" has been featured during the past week as Picture of the Month.

Taking Professor Francis Colburn's place for the current year, Mr. Hampel has been teaching in the University of Vermont Summer Session since 1961. A native of Oakland, California, he studied painting at the California School of Fine Arts in San Francisco, then came East to Philadelphia to attend the Pennsylvania Academy of Fine Arts and to earn a Master of Fine Arts at the University of

SPS Elects New Officers

The Student Photography Service has elected its officers for the coming year. They are: Mike Adess, President; Chuck Grutman, Vice-President; and Andrew Bush, Treasurer.

Mike Adess, a graduate student who has worked for SPS for two years, is from Dorchester, Massachusetts. He is working for his Master's Degree, after which he plans to attend Veterinary school. His job is to give out assignments and to see that they are carried through.

Chuck Grutman, who comes from Elmont, N.Y., is the newest officer of SPS, having belonged to the organization for one year. He is in charge of the files and is also serving as acting secretary. This entails taking notes at the meetings and handling the correspondence of the Service.

Andrew Bush, treasurer, hails from Mount Vernon, N.Y. He has worked on SPS for over a year; his duty is to handle all financial affairs, from obtaining materials and supplies to sending bills.

The main function of the Student Photography Service is to take pictures for the CYNIC. They also cover such functions as campus elections and Lane Series. In addition, they take approximately 75% of the photos for the Ariel, take the photographs for the Centaur, the University Players and Dance Workshop.

In addition to this, however, the members of SPS do outside, individual work, such as placement pictures and portraits. In this respect, they are "partially a staff and partially a club."

It is interesting to note that the SPS has a three year file, which is open to anyone. Prints of these photographs are obtainable.

Also interesting is the fact that photographic instruction is given to new members. In spite of this, outgoing president John Sulton has stated that, although the volume of work is constantly rising, the number of members is not.

MARKING ON THE CURVE—AND WHAT TO DO ABOUT IT

Twonkey Crimscott was a professor. Choate Sigafos was a sophomore. Twonkey Crimscott was keen, cold, brilliant. Choate Sigafos was loose, vague, adenoidal. Twonkey Crimscott believed in diligence, discipline, and marking on the curve. Choate Sigafos believed in elves, Julie London, and thirteen hours of sleep each night.

Yet there came a time when Twonkey Crimscott—mentor, sage, and savant—was thoroughly outthought, outfoxed, outmaneuvered, outplayed, and out-witted by Choate Sigafos, sophomore.

It happened one day when Choate was at the library studying for one of Mr. Crimscott's exams in sociology. Mr. Crimscott's exams were murder—plain, flat murder. They consisted of one hundred questions, each question having four possible answers—A, B, C, and D. You had to check the correct answer, but the trouble was that the four choices were so subtly shaded, so intricately worded, that students more clever by far than Choate Sigafos were often set to gibbering.

So on this day Choate sat in the library poring over his sociology text, his tiny brow furrowed with concentration, while all around him sat the other members of the sociology class, every one studying like crazy, every one scared and pasty. Choate looked sadly at their stricken faces. "What a waste!" he thought. "All this youth, this verve, this bounce, chained to musty books in a musty library! We should be out singing and dancing and cutting didoes on the greensward! Instead we are here."

Then, suddenly, an absolute gasser of an idea hit Choate. "Listen!" he shouted to his classmates. "Tomorrow when we take the exam, let's all—every one of us—check Choice 'A' on every question—every one of them."

"Huh?" said his classmates. "Oh, I know that Choice 'A' can't be the right answer to every question," said Choate. "But what's the difference? Mr. Crimscott marks on the curve. If we all check the same answers, then we'll get the same score, and everybody in the class gets a 'C'."

"Huh?" said his classmates. "So why should we knock ourselves out studying?" said Choate. "Let's get out of here and have a ball!"

So they all ran out and lit Marlboro Cigarettes and had a ball, as indeed, you will too when you light a Marlboro, for if there ever was a cigarette to lift the spirit and gladden the heart, to dispel the shades of night, to knot up the ravelled sleeve of care, to put spring in your gait and roses in your cheeks, it is filtered Marlboros—firm and pure and fragrant and filled with rich, natural, golden tobacco. And, what's more, this darlin' smoke comes in soft packs that are actually soft and flip-top boxes that actually flip.

Well sir, the next morning the whole class did what Choate said, and, sure enough, they all got 'C's, and they picked Choate up and carried him on their shoulders and sang "For He's a Jolly Good Fellow" and plied him with sweetmeats and Marlboros and girls and put on buttons which said "I DOTE ON CHOATE."

But they were celebrating too soon. Because the next time shrewd old Mr. Crimscott gave them a test, he did not give them one hundred multiple choice questions. He only gave them one question—to wit: write a 30,000 word essay on "Crime Does Not Pay."

"You and your ideas," they said to Choate and tore off his epaulets and broke his sword and drummed him out of the school. Today, a broken man, he earns a living as a camshaft in Toledo.

A Matter Of Manners

One of the favorite pastimes of UVM students seems to be that of creating bottlenecks and traffic jams, especially on stairways. Not every student participates in this sport, but those who do, make life hard for the large majority who don't. What follows is a typical scene.

The bell signaling the end of class has just rung, and students are pouring out of the classrooms and onto the stairways. On the steps of Waterman, congested with rushing people, or with people leaning against the walls and bannisters trying to talk to someone else, a girl meets some boy she hasn't seen since 2:00 yesterday afternoon. She stops right in the middle of the stairs, as does the fellow she is talking to.

GIRL: Hiya, Buzzy, Howya dooin'?

BUZZY: Pretty good, Linda. Howa yoo dooin'?

LINDA: Great! I just bombed a Psych . . .

BOY TRYING TO GET THROUGH THE KNOT AND DOWN THE STAIRS: Excuse me.

LINDA & BUZZY: (no response)

BOY (louder): Excuse me, please.

LINDA & BUZZY: (no response)

BOY (yelling): EXCUSE ME!!!

LINDA: (gives boy a dirty look)

BOY (disgusted): Will you please get the Hell out of the way! (He pushes LINDA aside and walks by the two conversing students.)

At this point one of three things can happen. Both the students who were clogging up the thoroughfare can be so stunned that by the time they realize that someone has the nerve to try to get by, the BOY is gone. Or BUZZY will immediately leap to LINDA's defense and try to start a fight (though the BOY will probably ignore his antics). Or, finally, LINDA will be so angry and upset that she will try to yell and cry at the same time. Imagine, someone pushing her!

Come spring the problem will become even worse. In nice weather students cluster on the front steps of buildings, first leaning against bannisters and sitting on side steps, then starting to stand and gab right in the middle of everything. The phenomenon is particularly noticeable on the front steps of Waterman, which is often impassable during the nice weather.

Is all this necessary? Can't these people just step off to the side somewhere if they have to talk? Are they really that lazy? Apparently they are. And it is not the New Yorkers either, by and large, despite the reputation of New Yorkers for being impolite. It is mostly the Vermonters, who are supposed to be polite and considerate.

Undoubtedly this is because the Vermonters are used to open spaces, and don't stop to think that if they stop in the middle of the road they might be impeding other people. New Yorkers, on the other hand, learn to step off to the side as a matter of course. Living in New York, if they stopped in the middle of the street they would be trampled to death; it's a simple matter of survival, and one with which the Vermonters are not acquainted.

But Vermonters or New Yorkers, do you really have to stop in the middle of the road? Is it too hard to just walk a few feet off to the side somewhere, where you won't be in people's way? Try it some time. It won't hurt.

Homeowners Request Student Co-operation

During the past few weeks there have been an increasing number of complaints from the residents and the management of University Heights concerning the number of students who are using their private property for a pathway to the new gymnasium. The management of University Heights once again contacted us and requested that we inform all students to discontinue using this area as a short-cut or they will be required to take legal action.

For the convenience of students who walk to the gymnasium and field house, a new pathway has been made, which leads from the Redstone Campus walk across the crest on the hill, down to the front of the gymnasium. Students from the Chittenden, Buckham, Wills and Converse Complex can cross at the Dental Hygiene building to reach this new pathway.

The University, appreciates your cooperation in this matter and encourages you to refrain from infringing upon the privacy of the residents of University Heights.

African Students Meet Prejudice In Bulgaria Have To Leave Country Because Of Persecution

EDITOR'S NOTE:

The following story may seem out of place in the CYNIC, but we believe that it is in the best interests of the students of UVM to print it, and we strongly urge you to read it.

The story itself is perhaps not the most exciting development in international relations. However, it sheds an interesting light on race relations in countries other than the United States, and the episode may have very far-reaching repercussions. The events also provide some insight into the workings of at least one Communist state (Bulgaria), and into the minds of the officials of that state. And it may possibly make those persons who think that all Africans are becoming ardent Communists think a little.

Please read the story; we think you will find it interesting, and thought-provoking as well.

(Late note: Stanford University students have put forward a plan to offer five scholarships for the African students who left Bulgaria. The scholarships depend on the Stanford community's interest, and the State Department's willingness to bring them over.)

by Robert Kotey

ACCRA (CPS - COSEC) It has been my unhappy lot to serve as the informal leader of a group of 20 Ghanaian students, studying in Sofia, Bulgaria, who have been forced to interrupt our studies and seek new countries in which to pursue them. It was a painful decision which we and almost all other African students in Bulgaria have taken when police protection was refused us in the face of a pattern of consistent racial discrimination, when we were denied the right to organize an All-African Student Union and when our lives were threatened. My own experience began when I applied for a scholarship to study economics, and my government, which has worked out scholarship agreements with other governments in both the East and West, selected me for a position in Bulgaria. In December 1961 a number of Ghanaian students, including myself, flew from Accra to Sofia to begin our higher education.

We had come to Communist Bulgaria with open minds. We received a friendly welcome, were placed in the same hostels, indeed in the same rooms, with our Bulgarian fellow students. We set about the formidable task of mastering the Bulgarian language. We were filled with high hopes.

Early in the year, however, we began to experience difficulties. Living conditions turned out to be poorer than we had expected -- not as good as they were for University students in Ghana itself. We were unhappy at being cramped four in a room which was only 14 feet by 9 feet, with four beds, one table with a chair at either end of it. Studying was very difficult, as some in the room had to lie or sit on the bed while trying to read.

Our living allowance was only about $68.00 per month. We had to spend $50.00 on food, and this left little for books, recreation, transportation and supplies.

We had all arrived in tropical-weight clothing and were given no allowance to buy warmer things for the cold, Bulgarian winter.

University authorities told us there was no way out of our difficulties. We appealed to the Minister of Education. He told us something would be done. Nothing was, and finally we turned to the Ghanaian government who gave us an additional $28.50 living allowance per month.

As time went on our relations with the Bulgarian students and people took a disturbing turn. We had been impressed from the beginning with the large number of misconceptions about modern Africa. Both students and professors were in total darkness about our continent; all they appear to have been told is that it is "too hot" that we still have snakes in the streets, and that people go about naked.

After we had been in Bulgaria a short time people began questioning us about the size and source of our living allowance. They seemed to resent the fact that we received larger allowances than the Bulgarian students, even though they could also receive money from their families and did not have to buy cold weather clothing. Some said we were living a bit luxuriously compared with Bulgarian standards, and that when we wore neckties with our suits -- as we had always done in Ghana -- we were being "bourgeois."

Harassment set in. Both students and workers began calling us "black monkeys" and "jungle people", which were insults not only to ourselves, but to all of Africa. Some of our group was spat on from buses and trains. Water was poured on their heads as they walked beneath windows.

A vicious rumour, alleging we all suffered from venereal disease, was started. Boys in the streets would shout "syphilis" at us as we passed. We finally had to demand medical examinations to disprove this charge, and although the tests proved none of us was suffering from the disease, the government refused to give any publicity to the results.

Racialism in Bulgaria frequently took violent forms and policemen would often watch

African Students

Africans being beaten by Bulgarians and do nothing about it, protesting he was assigned to another district, or merely dispersing the crowd and letting the beating continue.

A particularly ugly incident occurred in August, 1962. Half a dozen Ghanaian students missed dinner at the hostel dining room and went into a nearby restaurant. Music was playing and one of the Ghanaians asked a Bulgarian girl in the restaurant to dance with him.

While they were dancing, a Bulgarian soldier went to them and asked the girl: "Is it not a shame for you to dance with a black monkey?" The Ghanaian did not want to make trouble, so he returned to his table, but just as he was about to sit down another Bulgarian pulled his chair from behind him and he fell unconscious. The Ghanaians were furious, and a general fight ensued between dozens of Bulgarians in the restaurant and the six Ghanaians.

There were some Bulgarian policemen in the restaurant at the time the fight broke out but they left immediately and returned only when it became apparent the Ghanaians were holding their own even though outnumbered.

They stopped the fight and arrested the six Ghanaians but made no effort to find the Bulgarian who had started it.

Four of the six Ghanaians were hurt in the fight and were flown back to Accra. The remaining two were jailed in Sofia for a month before they came up for trial. The only witnesses called were Bulgarians. One of the Ghanaians was sentenced to one year in prison and the other was to serve three years. As a result of the pressure from the Ghanaian government the two were released and sent home, but the incident created much concern among the African students remaining in Bulgaria.

We continued to have some good friends among the Bulgarian students and people, but the Bulgarian government took no steps to stamp out hooliganism against us, and this led us to conclude that it was being supported from "above."

Until we had arrived in Bulgaria there had been few African students in that country. However we Ghanaians found ourselves staying at the same hostel, so formed a Ghana Students' Union, of which I was elected secretary. We never thought to ask official permission to form such a group.

We had gone to Bulgaria to study, not to engage in politics, and we had in the beginning resisted the formation of an All-African student organization for fear it might become involved in politics. It was only after we were convinced an all-African organization in Bulgaria need have nothing to do with politics that we agreed to form one.

In November of 1962 we took definite steps toward the organization of all All-African Students Union. We had three main objects in mind: to defend our interests in the absence of police protection, to have an organization that would bring us together in the true spirit of Pan-Africanism, and to try to foster friendship between Bulgarian youth and the Africans.

By December we had a constitution and members from 22 African countries. We invited the Ghanaian Ambassador and the Bulgarian Minister of Education to be patrons of the group. Shortly after the invitations were issued, the president of our group was called before the education minister and told such a group was against the "principles" of Bulgaria and we would have to disband.

We heard rumours that the authorities feared the AASU was intended to be a political organization hostile to the government. We sent a delegation to the Minister with a copy of our constitution to explain our non-political aims. He took the constitution, asking us to see him later.

On Feb. 6, 1963 the president of the AASU, Tetteh Tawiah, was ordered expelled from the university for having been irregular at classes and failing to write an examination. In Bulgaria each student must carry an attendance card and have it signed by professors and lecturers to show their attendance at class. In every case Tawiah's book was signed.

It is true he had missed an examination, but he had received his professor's permission to do so as he had not been able to get a text until one month before the exam and had to master the difficult Bulgarian.

In spite of the obvious falsity of the charges against Tawiah, we would not have been convinced of the full implications of his case had it not been for the fact that the vice-president of the AASU, an Ethiopian, was also warned the next morning that he would be expelled if he did not abide by the regulations of the university. We knew then that the actions of the authorities were not based on the personal conduct of the two students, but rather on the hostility of the Bulgarian government to the formation of an organization which would unite all the African students in the country.

On Feb. 9, Tawiah was ordered to leave Bulgaria within 12 hours. As news of the order spread, about 150 African students gathered at the hostel and marched down Lenin Street to demand the reinstatement of Tawiah and the withdrawal of the deportation order against him, as well as recognition of the AASU, of the Bulgarian Prime Minister.

When we arrived at the Ministry we were told, by a man who identified himself as a member of the Young Communist League, that the Prime Minister was not available, but we could meet with him at 9 a.m. Feb. 11. Our delegation returned then and waited in vain for five hours. Finally we were told the Prime Minister would see them later in the day.

Later that afternoon the Sofia police commissioner arrived at the hostel and told us he had been instructed to say demonstrations of the type we had carried out (we had walked informally together for several kilometers, without signs or noise) were illegal in Bulgaria. He said persons involved in such demonstrations, who had not been warned by the police, were liable to imprisonment for three years, and those taking part and who had been warned by the police, were liable to 15 years in prison. He said we should consider ourselves officially warned.

We said we did not want to demonstrate, but wanted an interview with the Prime Minister. He promised to arrange such a meeting for us.

His sincerity, in the light of later events, was doubtful. At about 3 a.m. the next morning at least 100 policemen surrounded the hostel and made an attempt to arrest the leaders of the AASU. We had been warned by friendly Bulgarian students, and all but two of the executive members were hidden in rooms other than their own. The two that weren't hidden were arrested. I tried to aid one of them, who was in the room next to mine, but as I opened the door a policeman forced me back at pistol point.

Later that morning we all decided that as fighters for African unity we were not interested in staying in a country where the authorities were working so actively against us. We therefore determined to leave Bulgaria. At 7:45 a.m. two hundred of us began our march down Lenin Street to the Ministry of Education. There we planned to demand the release of our two comrades and exit visas and plane tickets home. We were almost there when 600 armed policemen pulled up in jeeps. They, and other civilians attracted by the crowd, began attacking us indiscriminately, beating and slapping the girls among us as hard as the men. One girl was hit so hard on the face she bled profusely from the nose and mouth. The police arrested us by dozens and finally arrested all executive members of the AASU.

He has exhibited at the DeYoung Museum and the Palace of the Legion of Honor in San Francisco,

All the arrested students were taken to jail, but later released; all except the executive members. By their detention of only the executive members of the ASSU the Bulgarians demonstrated they were against a unified African student organization. The government agreed to give us exit visas, good for three days, but refused to provide us with air tickets to which we were entitled under the terms of our scholarships. On Feb. 14, the government sent a group of students and professors who asked us to remain in the country, promising things would get better. We had had more than enough assurances, however, and we resolved to stay in our hostel and not attend lectures until the tickets had been provided. The authorities finally said we could leave but we had to do it on our own. We pooled our money so that some of us could get tickets out. There was only enough money to get students from Ethiopia, Nigeria, Mali, Guinea and Ghana out of Bulgaria. Those remaining, except for the Sudanese, who are political refugees from their own country, are there only because they have not enough money to get out. We have heard nothing of the seven AASU executives who were jailed.

and the Pennsylvania Academy of the Fine Arts and the Art Alliance in Philadelphia.
The Festival will carry through the whole spring semester, underlining the strength of the Arts at UVM. After spring vacation comes "The Crucible" by Arthur Miller, produced by the Department of Speech and Drama with the University Players, directed by Mr. B.G. Ackley; and a harpsichord concert by Nola Marberger, a music department recital. Also scheduled are two exhibitions -- one on Paul Aschenbach's studies of the Bailey Library Sculpture, the other on the designs of H.H. Richardson -- and successors -- for the old Billings Library.

Student Nurse Week Serves A Dual Purpose

by Lois Allison.

Student Nurse Week, held from March 4 to March 9, saw nursing students from UVM, Mary Fletcher Hospital, Jeanne Mance School of Nursing at DeGoesbriand Hospital, Vermont Junior College and Castleton State College participating in a series of activities sponsored by the State Student Nurses Association. The program served the dual purpose of making people aware of the student nurse curriculum in Vermont, and of raising funds to send a Vermont representative to the National Student Nurse Convention held in May in Atlantic City, N.J.

On Monday, March 4, at Billings Center, Lt. Governor Ralph

Footo launched the week's activities with an address to a mass meeting of nursing students from all over Vermont. He advised them to work hard during their week in order to show the people of Vermont their goals as student nurses. Following his speech, the state song of the State Student Nurses Association was introduced.

On Saturday, March 9, a luncheon was held for the nursing students at Marsh Dining Hall with Miss Katherine Davis as the featured speaker. Miss Davis, who teaches maternal-child nursing at UVM, compared the hospitals and nursing schools she had seen and spoken at during a recent trip to Thailand and Japan with those in the United States. Two dances rounded out the timetable of events. On Friday, March 8, a twist dance featuring the Falcons was held at Burlington High School. On Saturday, there was a semi-formal dance in the Roof Garden of the Hotel Vermont. Bill Keller's Band provided entertainment.

In addition to these scheduled activities, student nurses throughout Vermont did volunteer work through the week. Students worked at the Bloodmobile, the Municipal Nursing Home in Burlington, and with the Visiting Nurse Association, and one girl from each school spoke at Rice, South Burlington and Burlington High Schools, about student nursing.

NEW SERVICE FRATERNITY ON CAMPUS

A chapter of Alpha Phi Omega, the National, non-Social, Service Fraternity, is presently being organized at UVM. APO has 300 chapters across the country and is dedicated to campus and community service. As a non-social group, APO would co-ordinate both Fraternity and Independent men interested in working for the betterment of the University.

The first meeting will be held Tuesday, March 19, 1963 in Billings Student Center, at 7:00 P.M. All are invited.

Nota Bene

The Kake Walk Dispositions Committee will soon be meeting to discuss and decide upon the apportionment of the Kake Walk funds. If you desire any money for your organization, please have your petition in the IEC mailbox in the Director of Student Activities office, by Friday, April 5, 1963. These petitions for funds will be discussed by the committee at a later date.

On Tuesday evening, March 19 at 7:30 P.M., in the North Lounge of Southwick Hall, Miss Mary Louise Kolk, College Relations Assistant for New England Telephone and Telegraph Company will conduct a discussion on Career Opportunities for Women in the New England Company. She will also cover Summer Employment as well as some thoughts on Career Preparation and Interview Taking.

All Academic Majors are welcome.

The office of the Director of Student Activities has announced that the Lost and Found is now located in Billings Student Center, and not in the Information Office in Waterman.

All inquiries about lost articles should be made at the Billings Information Desk. All found articles should be turned in at the same place.

There will be meetings for all continuing students applying for financial aid in 1963-1964 on Wednesday March 20, at 4:00 in the Hills Building, and Thursday March 21, at 7:00 in the Ira Allen Chapel. All students who expect to apply for aid should plan on attending one of these meetings. Applications for financial aid will be available at these meetings.

Seniors To Meet

There will be a meeting of the Senior Class at 4:00, Wednesday, March 20, in the Marsh Room at the Billings Center. Co-chairman for the Senior week committee will be elected at this meeting.

Graduation announcements may be ordered beginning Monday, March 25, in lower Waterman and the Billings Center. Seniors will be notified should this service become available before the 25th.

AT PRATT & WHITNEY AIRCRAFT...

YOUR EYES CAN BE ON THE STARS

BUT YOUR FEET MUST BE ON THE GROUND

The glamour and excitement of space age programs often obscure a fundamental fact. It is simply that farsightedness must be coupled with sound, practical, down-to-earth engineering if goals are to be attained. This is the philosophy upon which Pratt & Whitney Aircraft's position as a world leader in flight propulsion systems has been built.

Almost four decades of solid engineering achievement at Pratt & Whitney Aircraft can be credited to management's conviction that basic and applied research is essential to healthy progress. In addition to concentrated research and development efforts on advanced gas turbine and rocket engines, new and exciting effects are being explored in every field of aerospace, marine and industrial power application.

The challenge of the future is indicated by current programs. Presently Pratt & Whitney Aircraft is exploring the areas of technical knowledge in magnetohydrodynamics... thermionic and thermoelectric conversions... hypersonic propulsion... fuel cells and nuclear power.

To help move tomorrow closer to today, we continually seek ambitious young engineers and scientists. Your degree? It can be a B.S., M.S. or Ph.D. in: MECHANICAL • AERONAUTICAL • ELECTRICAL • CHEMICAL and NUCLEAR ENGINEERING • PHYSICS • CHEMISTRY • METALLURGY • CERAMICS • MATHEMATICS • ENGINEERING SCIENCE or APPLIED MECHANICS. The field still broadens. The challenge grows greater. And a future of recognition and advancement may be here for you.

Middlebury Invites UVM To Conference

Middlebury College has invited a representative body of students and/or faculty of UVM to take part in the Twenty-first Annual Middlebury Conference to be held March 22 and 23 at Middlebury. The title of this year's Conference is "Who's Afraid of Modern Art?", a discussion of the relation of the artist to his audience.

Middlebury feels that this year's group of speakers is a very distinguished and capable one. The four participants will be Edward Albee, prominent playwright in the theater of the absurd whose plays include "The American Dream" and "Who's Afraid of Virginia Woolf"; Elaine deKooning, an abstract expressionist painter; Ralph Ellison, author of Invisible Man; and Otto Luening, a pioneer in electronic music. Malcolm Boyd, modern critic of the arts, will serve as moderator.

The Conference will open Friday evening, March 22, with a presentation of Samuel Beckett's play, "Waiting For Godot" and an address by Albee. A coffee hour and discussion period will follow. On Saturday morning Ellison and Miss deKooning will speak on their respective arts. A concert and address given by Luening will take place in the afternoon. Following this each speaker will lead his own discussion group. The Conference will close on Saturday evening with a panel discussion.

Further details will be given next week.

Middlebury College hopes that all interested people will take the trouble to attend this informative and interesting event.

Dr. Ashley Montagu

Dr. Montagu's Lecture On Education

Last Monday evening Dr. Ashley Montagu, a physical anthropologist now working at Rutgers, presented a fascinating lecture on Human Nature and Education in lower Waterman Lounge.

Dr. Montagu was primarily concerned with his personal definition of education; et, love. He feels that parental love is definitely lacking in most western civilizations. Maternal love is an instinct which, along with many others, has been lost during man's evolutionary process. The human adult today has lost his ability to love his children effectively.

According to Dr. Montagu, love should be an integral part of a child's education. In order for a child to develop knowing how to love, he must first learn by being loved. A loveless family breeds children incapable of love. The pathetic thing about this is that all babies are born with equal potential for love but very few are given adequate food for its development. Any baby will learn how to give and accept love if there is only someone to teach him. The adult, incapable of love, merely has never been taught the art.

Dr. Montagu supports his theories with accounts of observations he and his colleagues have made of the effects lack of love has on young animals as well as men. For example, he states that infant cats, well fed and sheltered, will invariably die without the loving presence of their mother. And human babies, brought up under comparatively loveless conditions, definitely show much higher sickness and much lower development rates than do well loved children.

Dr. Montagu's presentation was humorous and entertaining as well as very informative. Audience reaction indicated that the lecture was thoroughly enjoyed.

New Cage Bears Names Of UVM Baseball Greats

Larry Gardner and Ray Collins are two names synonymous with baseball greatness, not only at their alma mater, the University of Vermont, but also in connection with sparkling major league careers.

Gardner and Collins had careers that paralleled one another. Both were members of the Class of 1909, both played for the Boston Red Sox, and both later returned to the Green Mountains to coach the baseball teams at their alma mater. Today, both also reside in Vermont.

When they were American League teammates at Boston, they weren't too far apart in the field, either, Gardner holding down the third base position while every fourth day Collins strode out to the mound.

A native of Enosburg Falls, Gardner came to UVM in 1905 and for three years tore up the baseball paths. After his junior year he went to the Red Sox where he quickly claimed the third base job for himself. During his stay, he played on three world series championship teams (1912, 1915, 1916). After World War I, Larry was traded to the Cleveland Indians and there, in 1920, he played with another world series winner.

His major league career ended, he managed in the minors until the late 20s when he returned to UVM as baseball coach and as an instructor in the athletic department.

In 1942 he was named athletic director, a position he held until his retirement in 1952.

In 1959, Gardner was named third baseman on the All-Time, All American collegiate baseball team selected by Collegiate Baseball.

Gardner lives in Burlington. Following four years of brilliant pitching for the Catamounts, Collins also made the "campus to the majors" jump and became a permanent fixture with the Sox until 1915.

Ray's major league highlights include an iron man effort which found him picking up a pair of wins against the Tigers in a doubleheader, and a victory against the Giants in the 1912 series which the Sox took in seven games.

Ray once did what many another player might have considered to be a bit foolhardy -- he issued an intentional base on balls to get to the immortal Ty Cobb. The strategy worked perfectly as the great Georgia Peach grounded back to Ray. The great hitter that he was, Cobb was never able to solve the slants of Collins.

In the mid twenties, Collins handled the UVM baseball coaching chores.

Following his baseball career, he returned to his native Colchester to manage the family farm which has remained in the Collins' family for more than 100 years.

Stickmen Rout Barre Team

by Ed Bennett

Vermont concluded its hockey season Saturday afternoon with an impressive 16-3 victory over the Barre Black Hawks. The Cats, completely dominating play throughout the game, had little trouble in gaining their second consecutive win.

The contest, highlighted by three hat tricks registered by UVM's Paul Barrett, Tim Davis and Marshall Stevenson, showed the potential power which Vermont will bring against their opponents in next season's 10 game varsity schedule.

Marshall Stevenson, high scoring Catamount wingman, led the team in total points scored for the season with 11 goals and 11 assists. Paul Barrett's output of 11 goals and 5 assists gave him the second place position. Rounding out the top three scorers was Tim Davis with 8 goals and 4 assists.

The team by demonstrating gradual improvement throughout their first season of play, has shown that when the hockey season again visits the UVM campus, the student body can look forward to some top collegiate hockey.

UVM Also-Ran At Union Meet

On March 9th, the UVM Cindermen traveled to Schenectady, New York, to compete in the Annual Union College Individual Invitational Indoor Track and Field Meet. Seventeen teams were entered in the competition.

Due to the size of the competing field, it was necessary to limit the field of entrants in some of the events such as the 50 yard dash, the 55 yard low hurdles, and the 55 yard high hurdles. In the 50 yard dash Vermont was represented by Deane Kent and Al Brown. Due to bad starts in their trial heats neither made the finals. This poor showing persisted in the mile, the 600 yard run, the pole vault, the shot-put and the mile relay.

In the broad jump Vermont entered Karl Fratini, Dave Burrows, and Tim Simpson. Though none of these boys took a place, all jumped at least 19 feet.

The second highlight in an otherwise dismal picture, involved Tim Simpson, who was entered in the 1000 yard run.

In trying to analyze last Saturday's relatively poor performance, Coach Post expressed great dissatisfaction with the manner in which the meet was run. He gave as examples the delay in the start of the pole vault and the short-put was run off 30 minutes to early, not allowing the competitors enough time for their warm-up tosses.

The manner in which the meet was run was not the sole reason for the final standing. Though as Coach Post stated, we were up against some pretty good competition, one must also take into consideration the fact that, though the Cats indoor season has just started, the other teams are finishing their competition on the indoor boards and are getting ready for outdoor competition.

Perhaps next season with a full indoor track schedule, the "Postmen" will be able to defeat this

Frosh Baseball

The Athletic Department has announced tryouts for Freshman Baseball. All who are interested in trying out for the team, or in becoming a manager, should be at the cage of the Gutterson Field House at 6:30 P.M., Monday, March 18.

The Vermont State Swimming Championships were held at Norwich U., Saturday, March 9. The Mermen of UVM did a fine job in finishing first in 5 of the 9 events and placing well in the other 4. This meet, being a championship meet, did not have any team events, such as the relays.

The 200 yd. freestyle was won by Kendall of Vt. in the time of 2:19.1 followed by Shae of Vt. and Manson of Norwich.

The 50 yd. freestyle was won by Clegg of Norwich in 25.6 seconds, followed very closely by Pietch of Vt., Woodley of Norwich, and Ravitz of Vt.

The 100 yd. freestyle was also very close with Clegg of Norwich winning in 57.0 seconds, followed by Pietch, Stanton, and Eoley of Vt.

Chuck Kendall again showed his fine form in the 100 yd. butterfly, winning in 1:14.6 followed by Badger of Norwich.

The gruelling 500 yd. freestyle was won by Shae of Vt. in 7:00.3 followed by Lyall of Vt. and Manson of Norwich.

In the diving Anderson of Vt. finished second behind Rich of Norwich.

The 200 yd. individual medley was won by Olsen of Vt. in 2:43.9 followed by Badger of Norwich.

Jim Nixon of Vt. won the 200 yd. breast stroke in the time of 2:49.2 followed by Clifford of Vt.

The 200 yd. back stroke was won by Bale of Norwich followed by Olsen and Cheney of Vt.

The team did very well, and in every case bettered their previous times. They will continue to work this spring and summer in preparation for next year's expanded schedule which includes meets with Norwich, UCONN, McGill, U. of Mass., Union, and Plattsburg (N.Y.).

Mayland Vaults To Success

If by chance any UVM student should wander through the new Gutterson Field house about 4:00 in the afternoon, he would come upon a typical athletic sight. Here, in the hustling, panting atmosphere, he would find the Vermont Freshman Track team. And, along one stretch of the Rub-kor track, he would find a lone figure in deep concentration. This is Mr. Donald Mayland.

Don hails from Merrick, Long Island, a small village on the south shore of the peninsula. He is now recognized as the biggest prospect for coping state honors in the pole vault. Don stands six feet-one inch tall, and weighs one hundred-seventy pounds. While attending Mempham High School in Merrick, Don conscientiously worked at perfecting, not only his vaulting form, but also his physical condition. He is now in top shape and is progressing rapidly towards success.

His jump of 13 feet 5 inches awarded him the All-Eastern Pole Vault Championship in his senior year. And now, through the help of Track coach, Archie Post, Don has reached a height of 13 feet 7 inches. The young freshman claims that the assistance of coach Post has been an invaluable factor in his progress. Not deriding the ability UVM's track coach, it is quite evident that the major element in Donald Mayland's success is his devotion to athletics. Throughout his track career Don studied various techniques of famous pole vault champions, in hope of finding out his mistakes.

Intramural Volleyball

by Martin Wolf

Shifting into high gear, the spring intramural season begins with the annual volleyball competition. The various fraternity and independent groups are divided into three leagues, "A" and "B" fraternity, and "C", independent. League "A" consists of: TC, DP, TEP, SAE, SPE, AGRA, KS, PSDb, and ATO. "B" is made up of: AEP, SP, SN, PSDa, PMD, A, PDT, LI, and AGRb. The independent group includes: Marsh, Tupper, Austin, Checkmates, Screammers and the Leftovers.

All matches will begin 4:15 on Tuesday, Thursday and Friday and 4:30 on Mondays and Wednesdays. Each team will supply one referee, when it is scheduled to play. One official shall act as referee, the other is umpire. One man will be designated as scorer.

The volleyball competition will run through April 4. On that date the fraternity playoffs and all campus championship will be held. Teams are awarded twenty entry points toward the all sports trophy.

Mayland's success is his devotion to athletics. Throughout his track career Don studied various techniques of famous pole vault champions, in hope of finding out his mistakes.

An independent, Don is studying in the Commerce & Economics Program. As in the past, he is still interested in sports, and is seriously considering Physical Education as a teaching profession.

UVM, Becton 16th In Nation

Latest NCAA basketball statistics for major colleges find UVM occupying two categories in the top 20 rankings.

In individual rebound leaders, Benny Becton, although standing only 6-2, ranks 16th in the country with a total of 341 rebounds in 23 games for a 14.8 game average. Becton and Connecticut's Toby Kimball, who is 13th, are the only New Englanders in the top 20.

In team offense, Vermont also holds down the 16th spot, having averaged 78.6 points per game, in their 23-game season, the Catamounts scored 1806 points, marking only the second time in UVM history that a Catamount club has scored more than 1800 points in a campaign.

Track Relays

The deadline for entering a team in the intramural indoor relays is Friday, March 15th at 5:00 P.M. If a group has not registered by that time, it will be eliminated from competition.

RPI Dropped From '63 Slate

The Army B football team has replaced Rensselaer Polytechnic Institute on UVM's 1963 schedule.

J. Edward Donnelly, Director of Intercollegiate Athletics, made the announcement Monday afternoon. He said that Army would replace RPI in a one-game series to be played in Burlington on Sept. 28. The second game of the two-year home and home series between Vermont and the Troy, N.Y. institution was to have been played on that date.

The Catamounts open their 62nd season on Sept. 21 at Springfield, Mass. against American International and close on Nov. 9, at Middlebury. Included in the eight-game schedule are four Yankee Conference dates.

The 1963 schedule:

Sept. 21, at American International; 28, Army B (State Day). Oct. 5, at Maine; 12, Rhode Island; 19, New Hampshire (Homecoming); 26, Norwich. Nov. 2, at Massachusetts; 9, at Middlebury.

UVM Players Spotlight Love In "Fantastics"

Preview of a scene from the "Fantastics." (Credit: Adess, S.P.S.)

The "Fantastics," a disarming romantic musical fantasy starts today, March 21, at UVM's Arena Theatre. This story of two young lovers whose fathers stir their romantic imaginations by pretending to oppose the match, will be presented each night at 8:30 p.m. through Sunday, March 24.

The CYNIC would like to present a cross section of reviews that the play has received since it opened in 1959 at Barnard College.

New York Journal American, John McClain: "It is a delightful, bewitching, bright, and tasteful."

The New Yorker, Donald Malcolm: "A cynic might say that the author's view of real life is quite as romantic and theatrical as the illusions once shared by the youngsters. The tunes are exceedingly pretty and the lyrics are frequently clever."

New York Herald Tribune, Walter Kerr: "It begins with a narrator setting the imagined scene, and this narrator progresses in due time to the role of a professional abductor who is prepared to quote various prices for various (quite mythical) kinds of rape. The evening itself is entirely concerned with the nation that children - of whatever age, probably - cannot fall in love unless their love is forbidden."

Los Angeles (Hollywood Reporter): "The adjective 'delightful' must be repolished and pinned like a shining star on this show."

New York Times, Brooks Atkinson: "Through the first act it is sweet and fresh in a civilized manner, luminous and gay. After the intermission, the author substitutes sunshine for moonlight. Disillusion destroys the rapture of the first scene. The music has grace and humor."

UVM Represented At NSA Conference

On March 1, 2, and 3, Paul Chervin and Maurice Singer attended the United States National Student Association Conference on the Proposal for Youth Service Corps for Domestic Peace Corps. in Washington, D.C. at American University.

Two years ago, a very similar meeting was held at American University in which student reaction was sought to the proposed International Peace Corps. Our purpose in attending was to discuss student opinion both in favor of and against the President's proposal for a domestic Peace Corps. The following is what we believe to be pertinent information in relation to the proposed Peace Corps from the President's study group.

Millions of Americans are willing to serve their less fortunate countrymen but have no national rallying force to challenge them. There are private, municipal and state agencies whose greatest need is for volunteers.

The citizen volunteer is a tradition of our democratic society. He naturally adopts the youth program of his luncheon club and spends some of his evenings with youngsters who have no fathers to guide them. She naturally leaves her own children with a baby sitter while she takes a turn at the neighborhood house.

This contribution to the public wealth can be made by millions more, but in some of their communities they lack a guide, a person whose example they can discover, respect and emulate.

There is no doubt about the desire of the American to give his brother a hand. The open hospitality of the frontier still lives, born of friendliness, charity and generosity. This enormous force for the general good can be accelerated by a Presidential call for service.

The need for such a program may be realized by looking about the country and seeing that every sixth citizen in the United States lives on submarginal income in our land of plenty, and lacks either the skills, the reading ability or motivation to make a better life for himself.

Local volunteers assisted by members of the corps could help to man the day care centers which might be established or expanded in our large cities to meet the needs of working mothers.

They could help the parents of mentally retarded children by seeing that the children participate in recreation activities.

They could help strengthen and expand a variety of community services for the elderly.

They could follow the stream

Candidates Announced For '63-'64 S.A. Offices Paye, Silverstein Run For President

Once again the time for Student Association elections is here. Among the candidates are several well-qualified, experienced students. The voters will have a difficult choice before them.

Running for president is Bob Silverstein, a junior from Great Neck, New York. Bob is a member of Alpha Epsilon Pi, and a political science major (he intends to go on to law school after graduation). In the past, he has served as S.A. Representative from his fraternity as well as having been active on I.F.C. He was chairman of S.A. Elections Committee and active in Vermont Conference.

Also a candidate for president is Dick Paye. Dick transferred to UVM from the Citadel, a military academy in South Carolina. During his freshman year, he was floor president. Sophomore year he was appointed Parliamentarian of S.A., and has served on the Executive Committee ever since. Last summer he represented UVM at the 15th National Student Association Congress at Ohio State University. Dick is presently vice-president of the junior class and a cadet major in advanced ROTC. He is a brother in Sigma Nu.

Harvey Tauber and Allen Tracy are running for First Vice-President. Harvey, a junior, has been a member of S.A. since he has been here. As such, he was chairman of the Activities Committee and co-chairman of the Greetings Committee during Freshman Orientation. He is the chairman of the Central Research Committee and is on the Governing Board of Billings Student Center. This year, he was a delegate to the McGill Conference on World Affairs. He is also an active member of Tau Epsilon Phi, having served as house manager and a member of the executive board.

Allen Tracy, a sophomore in the College of Technology, was the S.A. representative from his dorm last year. Now he is on the S.A. Finance and Constitutions Committees, and is a floor counselor in Wills Hall. Allen is a member of the Varsity Rifle Team and sings in the UVM choir.

Vying for the position of secretary are Carolyn McCarthy and Eileen Mango. Carolyn, a junior in the College of Arts and Sciences, is an S.A. Senator and a council member of the Woman's Recreational Association. She is the co-chairman of the Parents Weekend Committee, 1963-64, and is active on the Social Committee. UVM Debaters Take Trophy

UVM debaters, operating on home ground, last weekend won the New England Forensic Conference championship and brought home the sweepstakes trophy.

The conference championship, traditionally held at the school of the conference president, was held at UVM since Norman T. London, Assistant Professor of Speech at UVM, is president.

UVM debaters went undefeated in 10 rounds. Thirteen schools took part.

The negative team of Gilbert Tornabene, Weston, Mass., and William Germain of Burlington, defeated Central Connecticut State College, Boston University, Norwich University and Emerson College of Boston.

Affirmative debaters Elaine Zak of Burlington and Mike Cronin of Richmond defeated the University of Maine, Middlebury College, St. Anselm's, of Manchester, N.H., and Boston College.

In the semifinals, UVM defeated Bowdoin College and then beat Bates College in the finals.

This year's debate question is, "Resolved: That the non-Communist nations of the world should establish an economic community."

Ruth Lichten of Manhasset, N.Y., coached by Associate Professor Helen Jane Wamboldt of the UVM Speech Department, won first place trophy in oral interpretation by defeating Emerson, Bowdoin and Bates interpreters.

Betsy Lisman of Burlington won second place in the original oratory contest, defeating Boston College and Bates, but losing to Bowdoin by one point.

The combination of the two first-place wins and the second place win resulted in bringing the sweepstakes trophy to UVM.

Another team of UVM debaters went to the Brooklyn College Tournament this weekend, winning seven out of ten debates.

The affirmative team of James Sanderson, of East Burke, and Cynthia Clark, of Springfield, won three and lost two. They defeated Seton Hall, Bowdoin, and St. Johns University, while losing to Cortland State College of New York and Wooster of Ohio.

Negative debaters Steve Adler of Arverne, N.Y., and Sharon Call of Springfield, won four and lost one. They defeated Syracuse University School of Forestry, of migratory workers and serve as teacher aides or day care workers. At home base for migrant camps, they could serve as recreation or education aides, and, under appropriate guidance, offer advice on nutrition and home economics for the migrant families.

They could serve to expand the staffs of agencies now working to help Cuban refugees adjust to the communities to which they have moved, and to help many of them overcome their lack of basic English.

In Indian communities, many of them widely scattered, they could serve in a semi-professional capacity as community worker aides in health education, nursing aides and assistants, sanitarian aides and homemaker service workers.

Based on the above reasons, we feel that the need is evident for such a program. The proposed recruitment and selection procedures would almost parallel the International Peace Corps. Recommendations have been made to initiate the corps in mid-summer of this year with 200 to 500 corpsmen and to eventually expand the program to an optimum of 5,000 within three years.

Based on prior experience with voluntary programs, it was assumed that national service program participation would appeal particularly to college-age youth and senior citizens. These corpsmen can respond to calls for assistance from American communities. Both the corpsmen by their service and the communities by their display of concern can serve as examples to the nation. Basic qualifications are sufficient maturity, and skill to perform needed services.

Participants would be chosen without regard to race, religion or sex. Educational requirements will depend on the nature of the tasks which corpsmen would be required to perform. The Peace Corps' high standards of selection would be adopted. Some elements of its successful selection techniques might reasonably be adapted to the different requirements of a national service program. Medical standards could be relaxed to allow participation to some people with physical disabilities.

A standard term of one year, including training, is suggested. Re-enlistment for another year may be permitted. A corpsman should receive a minimal living allowance and payment for transportation, training and medical care. At the conclusion of service, he could receive a nominal termination payment. Other benefits might include coverage by Social Security and FECA, suspension of principal and interest on NDEA student loans during service and credit against the loan for actual teaching the field. There would be deferment, but not exemption, from military service.

Principle speakers included Steward Udall, Secretary of the Interior; he mentioned realistically the problem of volunteers for such a program. However, he felt that although the domestic Peace Corps would be less glamorous than the International Peace Corps, it would provide more of a challenge to the corpsmen. Senator Harrison Williams, Democrat from New Jersey, who has worked extensively with the migratory labor problem, asked for "wide-spread support of the service program." Senator Claiborne Pell, Democrat from Rhode Island, spoke on the Youth Conservation Corps, a program similar to the CCC during Roosevelt's administration. Workshops of about fifteen delegates were conducted with resource personnel in each group. These workshops include:

- Selection standards and procedures
- Training objectives and procedures
- College preparation and participation
- Migrant laborers
- Mental health problems
- Urban problems
- Juvenile delinquency
- Indian problems
- Teacher volunteer and tutorial programs
- Problems of the aged
- Control and structure (as part of government, relationship with existing social welfare agencies).
- Living conditions and morale
- Field supervision and coordination.

The closing meetings were plenary sessions at which time 450 delegates voted on proposals supporting segments of the plan for creation and operation of A YOUTH SERVICE CORPS.

It was felt that such reaction will give the administration some knowledge of the opinions which students across the country have on the YOUTH SERVICE CORPS.

THE BELL TELEPHONE COMPANIES SALUTE: TONY DIGIOIA

Tony DiGioia (B.S., 1960), in less than two years, became supervisor in one of the Test Centers in the Plant Department of Pennsylvania Bell. He manages fifteen people who are responsible for the installation and repair of 53,000 telephones in the area.

Tony should handle his present assignment with his customary thoroughness, when you consider his first two assignments. Shortly after starting work, he proved his capabilities by organizing a completely new microfilm filing system in the Engineering Department. And, later, he set up engineering practices covering many phases of the engineering operation.

Tony DiGioia and other young engineers like him in Bell Telephone Companies throughout the country help bring the finest communications service in the world, to the homes and businesses of a growing America.

Money Troubles

Perhaps you've noticed that the UVM Datebook says that Vermont Conference is coming up soon. Perhaps you've also noticed that the CYNIC has not said anything about the Conference or the speakers to appear. The reason is simple: there is no Vermont Conference this year. The reason that there will be no Conference is also simple: Vermont Conference has no money.

It seems that V.C. made out a budget last year and submitted it. Then the S.A. Finance Committee somehow managed not to get the budget request, and nobody seems to know what happened to it. Result, no V.C. this year.

A question comes to mind. Why wasn't Vermont Conference notified that the Finance Committee had not received a budget request? It seems a little rash to assume that if an organization has not turned in a request it does not want funds, even though the S.A. budget request notices state this. When a going concern does not turn in a budget, does this mean that they have decided to just go out of business? It hardly seems likely. A quick phone call might have solved a lot of problems. The phone call was never made.

In part it is Vermont Conference's fault for not being sure of the progress of its budget, but just assuming that everything was being taken care of until a month and a half ago, when it was too late. In part it was the fault of the Finance Committee for not checking, just to be on the safe side. Didn't it occur to anyone that Vermont Conference might have slipped somewhere? Did everyone really believe that V.C. had decided to fold, just like this?

There is a happy ending to the story, however. Next year there will be two Vermont Conferences, one in the spring as usual, and one next fall in place of the one missed now. True, the graduating seniors that might be interested will miss the Conference, but everyone knows that where money is involved a few people are negligible.

Think of it - breakfast in bed. Just lying around, luxuriating, while someone gets a breakfast ready and serves it to you in bed. And during a school year, right in your own dorm. And to be served by a Dean, no less!

It can happen, you know. Right now the UVM branch of the World University Service is accepting bids from every dorm and fraternity or sorority house for the services of Dean Harris and Patzer to treat some deserving people to breakfast in bed. The houses or dorms that bid the highest (one male, one female) will get to elect one person each to be served this treat. Wouldn't you like to be that person?

In a more serious tone, WUS really does deserve your support. In this current campaign for funds they are running badly in the red. The bidding for the Deans' services has been extended two weeks in the hope that a few more houses will bid.

Suppose you were a Bantu student who could not go to college because the white rulers of your country were convinced that they were God. Suppose that an organization was collecting funds to send you to college, but that the American students did not, apparently, want to send you to college. Would you think that America was such a great land then? You do now, but some Bantu students probably will not, and one wonders if they aren't right?

Will it hurt that much to go without a few gallons of gas next week (you probably will not run out of it), or not to buy that extra carton of weeds, "just in case," or not to get that extra bottle of nail polish? If you do indulge in these extravagances the World University Service, and the people it helps, will hurt a lot.

Letters To The Editor

KW-Subtle Discrimination

To the Editor:
"Kake Walk" is a subtle form of discriminating against the Negro. I attended it Saturday night and was very disturbed at how the actions and comments centered around the black faces of the walkers. Even two of the skits had lines unrelated to their play, but related to the blackface.

This "Kake Walk" affair is not a compliment to the Negro, but just another stereotype against which the Negro of today is constantly fighting. The blackface is startling, but the extreme exaggeration of the eyes and lips is worse. No one, I am sure, has ever seen a Negro who looks like that. The Kake Walker portrays the Negro as a funny looking, happy-go-lucky, always dancing and clowning sort of person. A stereotype.

The use of the "Kake Walk" phrases which appear on some of the sculptures and in the news are also centered around the blackface. The spelling of some of the words seems to imply that Negroes do not and can not speak the English language fluently. This again is a stereotype.

The posters which appear in the store windows of downtown Burlington and around the UVM campus shock the in-coming Negroes from other states. They begin to wonder if they may have made a wrong turn on the highway and arrived in the South instead of the North. You see, the North has discrimination, even Vermont; but they are smart enough to polish over the rusty spots and make it appear as a shiny compliment instead of a dull insult.

The walking, I admit, is a great physical feat; for the boys work hard all year to master this dance. However, the blackface should be eliminated from "Kake Walk", and then the above problems and others might solve themselves.

Art Display

by Lois Allison

Peter Heller's painting, "Tensions I," currently on display on the first floor of Bailey Library, represents the first step in a joint effort by the directors of the Fleming Museum and Bailey to bring art directly to the UVM student. Realizing that most students at UVM have not had enough contact with art works to make use of the facilities of the museum, Richard Janson, Director of the Fleming Museum, and Ben Bowman, Director of Bailey Library, decided that a well-attended campus center like Bailey would serve as an ideal "display window" for museum offerings. In addition to providing for a change of scene at the Library, it is hoped that the plan will work as a part of the current fine arts festival at UVM and foster student interest and curiosity about art, and eventually result in an increased student attendance at the Museum.

Enthusiastic audience reaction to a recent exhibition of Prof. Heller's paintings at the Museum prompted the directors to choose "Tensions I" as the initial offering of the program. Other works will follow as students interest and request demand.

STUDENTES

People don't think. Even, or perhaps especially, students don't think. The world is full of questions, most of them unasked. My complaint with life at this university or anywhere, is that no one asks questions. It isn't the vogue to discuss what kind of a society we live in, where we as individuals, as a nation, as humanity are going, what you and I are doing here or anywhere, and most importantly—why. Why anything. You're just a pain in the neck if you ask why. What's more, no one wants to ask why. We are too busy adjusting, accepting, and parroting to think, to ask why.

The "WHY" painted on the water tower at Redstone is a mockery of the "university of seekers after truth and knowledge" below it. We go to classes day in and day out, but what do we learn? We learn facts and methods, but we never seek out the whys and wherefores. It isn't that we all should become philosophers, but simply that we shouldn't be told what to think, because that isn't thinking at all, and we shouldn't let life go by without facing it.

In my unrealistic world of childhood, which terminated late last fall, I thought of a university not just as a place, buildings, and books, but as people in a unique community, asking why together. Even as students prepare to fit into society in their anticipated roles, I thought (loosely speaking) they would know why. I came here not because I had all the answers, but because I hoped to find some. But at this rate, I never will, because every day I don't think, and every day I don't ponder and ask why.

Is all of this right or wrong? I know it's so, because I live here, too. Why do you think—or do you?????

Black Orpheus

endowed with musical talents as a son of Apollo and Calliope, that his playing could tame wild beasts, cause rivers to stop and listen, battles to end and the sun to rise. He married the nymph Eurydice, but on the very day of their wedding or soon after, Eurydice was bitten by a snake as she was running away from Aristaeus, and she died of its bite. Orpheus went to Hades, alive, and by charming everyone there with his beautiful voice, gained the privilege of taking Eurydice back with him to the upper world. But it was on condition that he not look back at her until they were both entirely out of the underworld. At the very portals, Orpheus could not resist the temptation, and he turned around. Eurydice vanished into thin air. Orpheus wandered sadly around the world, and his contempt for women and all human contact roused such fury in some Phrygian women that they tore him to pieces in a frenzy. His lyre went to the heavens, where it can still be seen among the stars, and Orpheus joined his beloved Eurydice in the underworld.

This great love story has excited the imagination of creative minds through the centuries. Gluck wrote the opera "Orfeo"; Tennessee Williams the play "Orpheus Descending," and Jean Anouilh "Legend of Lovers." There are many others. This version stars Maypessa Dawn as Eurydice and Breno Mello as Orpheus.

Maypessa Dawn is the only one of the cast who has ever acted professionally before. The rest of the cast was chosen from people from all walks of life. The great crowds in the Carnival scenes were native Brazilians who were glad to help re-create the Carnival. The whole host of supporting actors are excellent.

Perhaps the symbolism was a little too obvious and the words not precisely dubbed in, but this did not mar the perfection of the whole work. The color, sound, and dancing were overpowering and can be marvelled at. A happy audience filed its merry way home.

WUS Week Unsuccessful

What should have been an exciting and profitable week for the World University Service has instead turned out to be a fiasco.

Through a misunderstanding, the twenty-to-one chess tournament which was to begin the week did not succeed, due to the absence of the chess master. However, it is possible that this event will be held in the future.

The Dean Raffle has been extended until April 1. So far, the only entrants have been Phi Mu Delta and Gamma Phi Beta. The WUS committee hopes that this extension will produce added interest in the raffle. Donations should be sent to Helen Parker, treasurer of the organization.

Redstone Rock II, which was to climax the week, was also far from successful. The turnout was much smaller than had been expected; the cricket match, scheduled for intermission, was not held.

There were, however, one or two bright spots in the week. First of all, the "Guess the Bean" contest was quite successful, netting a profit of $20; the winner will be announced in next week's CYNIC. In addition, the WUS button sale earned $50 for the committee. These buttons are purchased with a small donation to WUS and whoever buys one has a choice as to whether the money will be used for a scholarship for a student in Hong Kong, or for a Bantu student in South Africa. This decision has not as yet been made, since there are still some buttons for sale.

In order to help WUS, the Catholic and Protestant church groups on campus are holding "Starvation Suppers" this weekend. At these, people will be fed a meal comparable to one that a person in an underprivileged country might have. The proceeds will go to WUS.

Open Poetry Tryouts

There will be open try-outs for anyone interested in representing UVM in the following activities:

1. Intercollegiate Poetry Reading Festival at Hofstra College on Saturday, April 27.

2. Second Annual Vermont Intercollegiate Poetry Reading Festival at UVM on Saturday, May 11.

The try-outs will be held in the Huber Recording Room (#205B), Pomeroy Hall, on Tuesday evening, March 26, 1963 at 7:30.

Materials for these try-outs should include three minutes of humorous poetry and seven minutes of more serious poetry — "Reader's Choice". It is suggested that poetry of the present century be selected.

If you have any questions regarding the try-outs or materials, please contact Prof. Jane Wamboldt, Ext. 544.

DR. MILES DISCUSSES NEED FOR GEOGRAPHY

by Roberta Levy

Associate Professor Edward J. Miles states that "the study of geography is absolutely essential for people who hope to pursue work, study or research in any area. One cannot study the history, government, and international relations of foreign or domestic areas without at the same time studying the geography. Geography is a basic starting place for the other social sciences."

Dr. Miles, UVM's professor of geography, came here this fall after having been at Valparaiso University in Indiana for four years. He spent five years from 1950-1955 teaching and doing research in Europe and Africa. Partly in coordination with the overseas program of the University of Maryland, partly on grant, and partly on his own, Dr. Miles' tour was concerned primarily with serious research in Africa, his specialty.

After returning from Europe and Africa, Dr. Miles received his PhD in geography at Syracuse University, in 1958. Originally Dr. Miles had been educated in London, Ontario, at the University of Western Ontario, where he received what would be equivalent to two bachelor's degrees, one in geography and one in history. He then went on to Syracuse University where he received his master's degree in geography.

Here at UVM, Dr. Miles teaches geography I and 2, world regional geography, world economic geography, and political geography. It is a definite hope and aim to try to organize a department of geography that would be greatly expanded by including in its offerings the courses related to geography but which now are parts of other departments. Some courses that might be arranged are Canadian geography, and eventually specific courses that would cover all of the geographical areas of the world.

An expanded geography department is only a proposal; a plan still confined to the drawing board. But in the near future, Dr. Miles hopes to see this plan a reality.

Dr. Miles is currently working on two projects in addition to teaching four separate courses. He is doing research in the geography of politics — in political regionalism — by examining and studying voting returns and their regional character. His second project involves his area of specialty — AFRICA. He possesses avid interest in the development of tropical Africa.

Canadian born and educated, Dr. Miles is devoted to his teaching and studying of geography. He has two sons and his wife is presently working on a substitute basis for the University Nursery School. Dr. Miles would truly like to make it apparent to UVM, through an expanded interest in geography, that "geography is an absolute essential."

Nobody Asked Me But...

by Ray Bello

Since the subject of stairs was brought up in last week's editorial, it is only appropriate that this topic be discussed further. To determine whether Vermonters, non-Vermonters (mostly New Yorkers), or New Englanders are the ones who predominately congregate on the steps of Waterman and various other buildings, is not the contention of this article.

The home origin of those who sit on the steps is unimportant. What is important is the problems caused by those who squat on the steps. The inconvenience caused by this minority affects a great majority of the student body and this added inconvenience is unnecessary.

The doorway at Waterman is narrow enough to cause congestion and confusion. The heavy vault-like doors pose an obstacle because it requires an extra bit of exertion to open them. These two facts, plus the added worry of courtesy when hurrying to and from classes, are sufficient without having the problem of stepping on or over some stationary student to worry about.

Ways of solving this problem will be offered in the spring, but with the advent of the Catamount Den in the new student center, a good part of the Waterman sitters will shift their masses across the University Green to the steps of Billings.

As for now, with the snow finally melting and the ground slowly appearing, there has been a stairs problem that has plagued the University all winter that should be attended to. The stairs referred to are the ones leading down to the lower parking lot near Terrill Hall off Williston Road. They are one of the most used set of steps on campus. The girls who use them to get to and from Redstone know them well. These courageous girls take their lives in their hands every time they descend them. There isn't anything else to take in hand because the existing handrail only extends one-fourth of the way down the incline and what is there is not too sturdy.

There should be a sign at the top warning, "Watch your step(s)" for all the steps are slanted downward. This neither helps one climb up nor walk down them so every step must be made with great caution. With the added danger of snow and ice, these steps become virtually impassable and highly dangerous to the fragile coeds and rugged college men who use them.

With the seemingly never-ending snowfalls the state of Vermont receives each year, these steps should be cleared of snow and salted and sanded to avoid the formation of ice as soon as the snow falls, but it seems that they are always saved for last. Even in good weather, these steps are only wide enough to allow passage of one student at a time.

Steps should be taken to improve the condition of these steps. They should be made wider and a handrail that extends the whole length of the stairs should be built.

Speaking of stairs, did you every notice the flight of stairs at the rear of Science Hall. This set of steps might be called the "stairway to nowhere" because they don't lead to any passageway except windows. Future plans must include breaking out a door at the top of the stairs but as for now, they'll get you nowhere.

A situation analogous to walking up these steps might be a qualified high school senior's quest to gain admission to college but who, when he's finally reached the top of his hitherto intellectual pursuits, finds an economic brick wall staring him in the face.

"Stairway to Success" - Flight of stairs in the rear of Science Hall lead to lofty things. If one wants to get ahead after climbing to the top, he must go through the window. (Credit: Bush, S.P.S.)

Black Orpheus Brought To Life

Scene from Black Orpheus

by Marilyn Austern

A large audience filled the theater awaiting the opening of the film "Black Orpheus." Then the lights dimmed and the audience subsided as a panorama of color and sound exploded on the screen. Filmed in vivid and passionate detail against the thrilling background of the Carnival at Rio De Janeiro, an old legend was filmed with a modern interpretation.

With the throbbing beat of the drum scarcely out of hearing, a story is unfolded of the love of Orpheus, a Brazilian street-car conductor, for Eurydice, who has come to Rio to flee the haunting specter of a man who has vowed to kill her because of unrequited love. When Eurydice is killed, Orpheus goes to look for her. The mystics claim that they can bring back the souls of the dead. Hearing Eurydice's voice behind him, Orpheus turns around and thus loses her forever. His inconsolable grief is noticed by Mira, who had loved him, and in fury she turns on the love-wracked hero and stones him off the cliff. The immortal love story of Orpheus and Eurydice is given new life as Orpheus' young protege, Meca, takes possession of his guitar and plays to the dawn, causing the sun to rise on a new day.

Compare this to the legend. According to it, Orpheus was so

Strassburg To Captain '63-64 Cagers

Dave Strassburg elected captain for '63-'64.
(Credit: Eldred: Audio-Visual)

Dave Strassburg has been elected to captain the 1963-64 University of Vermont basketball team.

A starter since his sophomore year, the 6-2 forward was the third leading scorer for Coach Fuzzy Evans' Catamounts this year, finishing behind seniors Benny Becton and Jack Shabel.

As a freshman at UVM, Dave sparked the young Kittens to an undefeated season and averaged almost 16 points a game. In his first year on the varsity, the former EJHS star was fourth in scoring honors with 287 points in 24 games. This past campaign found strassburg accounting for 274 points in 23 contests, and he led the club in field goal percentage, hitting on 46.5 per cent of his shots from the field. He was also third in rebounding behind Becton and Capt. John Stahler.

While at Essex Junction High, Strassburg played four years of soccer, basketball, and baseball, being named to the all Northern League basketball team in his junior and senior years and being an All Tourney pick in '60 when the Hornets were 19-3.

Dave is enrolled in the College of Technology, majoring in mathematics, and plans a teaching career following graduation. He was a member of Gold Key, men's sophomore honorary, and is a member of Delta Psi fraternity.

Dave's father, Norman, is an assistant professor of physical education at UVM.

Hockey Roundup

The UVM Hockey team finished its first season showing evidence of marked improvement. Including scrimmages, the Cat's wound up with a 3-5 record. It should be noted that the Vermont stickmen won their last two games in professional fashion as they capsize the Swanton Flyers, and the Barre Black Hawks by scores of 11-7 and 16-3 respectively. This young squad will be representing the school next year with much experience tucked under its belt.

Marshall Stevenson, from Potsdam, New York, and Paul Barrett, from Greenfield, Massachusetts, were tied for the most goals scored during the season with 11. Both these freshmen, along with Tim Davis and George Cook, proved to be the offensive mainstays of the team. Fine defensive play was shown by Mike Scheidt, who had the honor of scoring the first Vermont goal of the season. Cabot Lyman, Bobby Cook, George Noyes, and Jack Vivian were defensive indispensables as they dazzled the fans with good tough hockey.

Goal keeping duties were shared by junior Mike Steinberg and senior Tony Russo. These two boys were under constant fire throughout the season as they combined for an average of 45.5 saves a game. Mike's outstanding game was the tilt against the Hanover Storm Kings during the Kake Walk weekend. The goalie made numerous thrilling saves which often brought the crowd to their feet. Tony Russo, the honorary captain of the team, showed great ability during the contests against Norwich, Middlebury, and the Barre Black Hawks.

Coach Ruffer had two outstanding lines with Stevenson, Garvin, and Barrett; and Davis, Cook, and Sausville. The lines were very well proportioned as they both scored 24 goals. The third wave did especially well in the last three games. This crew was made up of Jack Storms, Mike Moore, and Lane Morrison. Other members of the squad who helped the Cat's in their cause are Ed Bennett, Tom Cocoran, John Parsons, Al Himmel and Ward Kenny.

UVM Now A Member Of NEISA

The University of Vermont has been granted membership in the New England Intercollegiate Swimming Association.

J. Edward Donnelly, director of intercollegiate athletics at Vermont, announced that the organization voted UVM into membership at its annual meeting held at Southern Connecticut State.

Swimming becomes a varsity sport at UVM in 1963-64 after a year on an informal basis. The Forbush Natatorium gives Vermont one of the most modern pools in New England. The pool is 75 by 42 feet, has six lanes, and an adjustable diving board for one meter and three meter diving.

From the Northfield, Vt.,
News and Advertiser:

The baseball game which was scheduled to be played between Norwich and Vermont next spring has been cancelled. This severs the last connection in athletics between Norwich and Vermont, and it is probable that sporting relations will never be resumed between the two colleges as Norwich is superior to Vermont in football and it is impossible to get a home game with her in baseball.

Bowdoin Downs Cat's Track Team

The University of Vermont track teams was beaten by Bowdoin College, Maine, by a score of 96-26, last Saturday at the opponent's field. Bill Rounds, Steve Ross and Bruce Frost were double winners for Bowdoin, also sweeping the three places in four events.

The only winners for the Catamounts were Pete Voytek in the high jump, Tim Simpson in the 1,000 yard run, and Steve Bernstein in the pole vault. The inexperience of the Vermont squad was sorely evident in this meet.

Results:

A Survey On Skiers

by Terry Safford

This winter the first attempt to determine, in a professional manner, the size and the rate of growth of the skier market is being carried on. The project under the heading of Sno Engineering Inc., of Franconia, N.H., is being undertaken all over the Northeast. It is felt that a survey of this type will help produce facts and procedural experience to be used in a later national survey of the ski industry.

The Area Redevelopment Administration of the U.S. Dept. of Commerce is paying the greater part of some $20,000. available for this study. The other contributors are the USEASA, the Eastern Ski Area Operators' Association, and the state governments of New York, New Hampshire, and Maine. The study is under the personal direction of Ted Farwell, an excellent skier in his own right. He is the first to use the expensive, but effective technique of interviewing backed by mail questionnaires. The objective is to obtain unbiased and meaningful data, so very strict controls have been applied to the procedure.

Twenty thousand skiers will be interviewed by accepted random methods, and of these some 1500 will be asked to complete a mail questionnaire. The final report will be released by early summer as a public document.

In order to obtain the interviews needed for the survey, the Northeast has been broken up into ten regions each centering around a major school; i.e., UVM, Dartmouth, RPI, etc. Each region has a supervisor, and it is his job to procure, under various statistical controls, about 2000 interviews. Minor ski areas as well as the customary large areas are covered in the survey. The large areas have interviewing days on both weekdays and two weekend days.

The cooperation of both the general public and the area operators has been excellent and should produce meaningful results. It has certainly enhanced the job of the interviewers.

SPEAKING OF SPORTS

by Bernie Zaccaro

A mere glance out of your dormitory, fraternity, or sorority house windows will tell you that Spring is re-awakening. The muddy walks to Waterman Building, to ROTC class, or to the Gym indicate that the "fever" will soon be controlling a great number of students.

There is, however, another by-product included in the passing of Winter; namely, a lull in the UVM sports world. A few weeks back the basketball, swimming, and hockey seasons were in full swing keeping the athletic-minded students of the University on their toes. However, now that these activities have bitten the dust for another year, we find the school in a state of physical educational stagnation.

Of course, there are the daily gym classes and the Intramural Sports Program, which keep Vermont from total idleness. But these, as we all know, are minor functions, and at times are quite bothersome to the athlete and especially to the sports fan. Indeed, we, the students of the University of Vermont, are witnessing a period of transition, a time in which our devotion to school activities is hitting a perilous low.

Fear not. For in a short time the University will be grasped from the depths of recreational unemployment and placed into the Spring Sports Season. Already the Track, Baseball, and Tennis Catamounts are trotting on the path to livelihood. Yes, it's just a matter of time before the avid baseball and track fans flock to Centennial Field, and the Tennis devotees watch the little furry sphere travel back and forth above the net. Then, a new serum will be injected into the blood of the UVM student body. It's sports world will again arise to its paramount, pleasing both athletes and athletic enthusiasts.

So, the next time you happen to peer out of your window and notice the melting snows, don't think of the mud or the floods, think of progress that is taking place in Vermont springtime sports.

Dancemakers Offer Modern Selections

by Betty Fuchs

On March 30, the Lane Chamber Arts Series will present as its final program a modern dance company known as The Dancemakers. The group will perform at South Burlington High School Auditorium.

The Dancemakers is a newly-formed modern dance company and is the only one of its kind in Massachusetts. It was started in 1959 by Martha Baird, with the sponsorship of the Dance Circle of Boston. The group is composed of five professional dancers from the Boston area whose experience and talent combine to make them a dynamic addition to their field. The performers have studied under such well-known artists as Martha Graham, Merce Cunningham, and La Merli.

There are seven choreographers in all, an unusually large number for a dance company. Their combined efforts create programs of exciting variety. Some dances interpret everyday life, some enter the realm of fantasy, and others explore pure abstract movement. A typical program of nine dances created to contemporary poetry, as well as to the music of such famous composers as Bach, Poulenc, Boulez, Vivaldi, and Milhaud, offers a broad perspective of modern dance.

As the only professional modern dance company in Massachusetts, and one of the few that exists outside of New York City, The Dancemakers work together constantly, experimenting and developing new dances, achieving a unity of philosophy and purpose that is unique. During three years of operation, the company has presented eighteen premieres, performing in open concerts, in college concert series, and at the Boston Arts Festival.

Martha Baird, director of the group, also serves as choreographer and performer. Miss Baird graduated from Bennington College with a B.A. in dance. Her training includes two summers at Connecticut College School of Dance and one summer at Perry-Mansfield School of the Dance and Theater in Colorado. With the Dance Circle of Boston, she has studied with such artists as Merce Cunningham and Katherine Litz. She has taught at Chatham Hall, Walnut Hill, Wheelock College, and de Cordova & Dana Museum. For the past six years she has been teaching dance at Pine Manor Junior College. Miss Baird has been Director of Choreography and a performer for the Dance Circle for four years.

The Dancemakers will present an unusual concert of contemporary dance, each dance in a different style including dramatic, satiric, comic and abstract. The program includes Tempo, Medieval Dirge, Construction II, Reflections, Adolescent Suite, Decursus, As Advertised in the New Yorker, Extasia, Span, and Dancer's Dream.

Out-Of-Staters May Pay $1500

President John T. Fey has indicated that the University's Board of Trustees may have to consider an increase in out-of-state tuition two years from now.

Indication of this possibility was made by Dr. Fey in a recent appearance on the University's Living and Learning program on WCAX-TV.

The possibility of the tuition increase comes as a result of a revised "emergency budget" which the University has submitted to the current Vermont Legislature.

The revision, submitted at the request of Vermont Governor Philip H. Hoff following his decision to reconsider the needs of the University, reduces the amount of the increase the University is seeking from the State for 1963-64 by nearly half a million dollars.

The revised budget is based upon the hope that this reduction in funds may be restored in 1964-65. But, Dr. Fey has acknowledged, it may not be possible for the Legislature to make the full restoration from state funds.

If not, the only alternative may be an increase in out-of-state tuition in the fall of 1964 from the present $1200 to $1500.

President Fey has stressed that the University does not feel it can consider an increase in tuition in 1963-64, since tuition for out-of-state students was just raised this past fall.

He has said, moreover, that an increase in tuition can not be expected to produce more than a relatively small share of the increased operating funds the University requires in the next two years.

Dr. Fey said that the decision to increase tuition will be made only if no other alternative is available, but he said he felt students should be informed as early as possible of the fact that an increase may be necessary beginning in the fall of 1964.

Let's Keep It Down!

Perhaps you've noticed that the specter of another boost in tuition is in the air. With the budget troubles the University of Vermont has been having, and despite all the statements by high officials that the Board of Trustees was reluctant about raising the rates again, this should surprise few people.

In 1961-62 the tuition was $1040 per person, but Vermonters paid only $416 of this and the state paid the rest. Last September the out-of-state rate was changed to $1200, making the financial burden on out-of-staters even greater; it may now go still higher, by 25%.

But the University is being generous about it; they will wait a year before hitting the out-of-staters again. It is a rather dubious gift. With UVM having the highest non-resident tuition of any state college in the country, and one of the highest resident tuitions, how much more can the student take?

Vermonters may well say "So What? It doesn't affect me." But it does affect Vermonters, although the effects aren't so immediate. If the out-of-state tuition can be raised by $300, what is to prevent the in-state tuition from going up by $50, or $100, or even more? True, all tuition hikes must pass the Legislature, but rises in tuition have passed before, and this one will probably pass if the Board of Trustees approves. What is to prevent another rise in resident rates from passing? Resident rates may not be going up now, but the possibility is there.

If this rise in tuition goes through, a good many non-Vermonters will have to drop out of college unless they can scare up the extra $300 fast. Then there is the $45 extra for dorm fees, and even these might go up again, for all we know. The Board of Trustees may not believe it, but the students can stand just so much. The Board knows that the state's funds are limited; someone should inform that the students' funds are limited too.

If this were an Ivy League school, maybe the students could afford the extra $300. But Vermont is not Yale, and the $300 is going to hurt a lot of students.

The CYNIC strongly urges the Board of Trustees to consider any boost of the non-resident tuition very carefully. There must be other ways of raising the money, even without getting the full $10,000,000 that President Fey requested of the state. Or if the money can't be raised, there are ways of cutting the school's expenditures back a bit. But a raise of the tuition -- one of such magnitude -- seems rather drastic. The CYNIC again asks the Board to be very careful when they consider any tuition rises.

And we ask the students of UVM to make their views known. Those of you who are old enough to vote (and have paid Vermont's exorbitant poll tax) can write discreet, but firm, letters to your State Senators and Town Representatives urging them to withhold approval of any tuition rises, especially ones of such size as $300. If the Board of Trustees does raise the rates, the Vermont Legislature may still be won over to our side. Remember, it may not be Vermonters this time, but they will be hit soon. The out-of-staters will get just so much before the in-staters get it in the money belt too.

By the way, Governor Hoff will be here Monday night to speak for the Young Democrats. If there is a question period after the speech, come to the meeting and ask questions. Perhaps he will want to limit questions to those pertaining to his speech, but if questions are asked about the effects of higher tuition, he might just be forced to answer them.

Obituary

Richard L. Hill, a sophomore in the College of Arts and Sciences, was fatally injured in an automobile accident last Sunday morning. He was 19 years old.

Hill, his roommate Michael Fay, and Vincent Higuera were on their way back to Burlington last Sunday morning when the Volkswagen they were traveling in turned over. Fay was injured and is still in a Middlebury hospital. Higuera, driver of the ill-fated car, escaped serious injury.

Hill was a native of Sunderland, Vermont. He planned to study political science.

MEMBERSHIP TO KEY AND SERPENT OPEN

Key and Serpent, the Junior Men's Honorary Society, announces that it is considering sophomore men for membership in next year's organization. The selection will be made in accordance with the constitutional revision of 1962 which has been amended to read: "Prospective members must submit, in letter form, their qualifications and reasons for desiring membership in the society. Selection of members should take into account the following qualifications: at least a 75 average (previous semester or cumulative), creativity and ability for college betterment, attitude toward school, general feeling toward others, sincerity, and willingness to assume responsibilities."

In this manner each sophomore man seeking membership will submit a letter stating his qualifications. We feel that this system of selection will be fair to both the applicant and the present members.

Letters should be sent to Fred Weisberg, President, Key and Serpent, c/o Billings Center, and must be received by 4 P.M. Monday, April 1.

HOW TO GET EDUCATED ALTHOUGH ATTENDING COLLEGE

In your quest for a college degree, are you becoming a narrow specialist, or are you being educated in the broad, classical sense of the word?

This question is being asked today by many serious observers—including my barber, my roofer, and my little dog Spot—and it would be well to seek an answer.

Are we becoming experts only in the confined area of our majors, or does our knowledge range far and wide? Do we, for example, know who fought in the Battle of Jenkins' Ear, or Kant's epistemology, or Planck's constant, or Valsalva's maneuver, or what Wordsworth was doing ten miles above Tintern Abbey?

If we do not, we are turning, alas, into specialists. How then can we broaden our vistas, lengthen our horizons—become, in short, educated?

Well sir, the first thing we must do is throw away our curricula. Tomorrow, instead of going to the same old classes, let us try something new. Let us not think of college as a rigid discipline, but as a kind of vast academic smorgasbord, with all kinds of tempting intellectual tidbits to savor. Let's start sampling tomorrow.

He was so moved he wrote Joyce Kilmer's immortal Trees

We will begin the day with a stimulating seminar in Hittite artifacts. Then we will go over to marine biology and spend a happy hour with the sea slugs. Then we will open our pores by drilling a spell with the ROTC. Then we'll go over to journalism and tear out the front page. Then we'll go to the medical school and autograph some casts. Then we'll go to home economics and have lunch.

And between classes we'll smoke Marlboro Cigarettes. This, let me emphasize, is not an added filip to the broadening of our education. This is an essential. To learn to live fully and well is an important part of education, and Marlboros are an important part of living fully and well. What a sense of completeness you will get from Marlboro's fine tobaccos, from Marlboro's pure filter! What flavor Marlboro delivers! Through that immaculate filter comes flavor in full measure, flavor without stint or compromise, flavor that wrinkled care derides, flavor holding both its sides. This triumph of the tobaccoist's art comes to you in soft pack or Flip-Top box and can be lighted with match, lighter, candle, Welsbach mantle, or by rubbing two small Indians together.

When we have embarked on this new regimen—or, more accurately, lack of regimen—we will soon be cultured as all get out. When strangers accost us on the street and say, "What was Wordsworth doing ten miles above Tintern Abbey, hey?" we will no longer sink away in silent abashment. We will reply loud and clear:

"As any truly educated person knows, Wordsworth, Shelley, and Keats used to go to the Widdicombe Fair every year for the poetry-writing contests and three-legged races, both of which they enjoyed lyrically. Well sir, imagine their chagrin when they arrived at the Fair in 1776 and learned that Oliver Cromwell, uneasy because Guy Fawkes had just invented the spinning jenny, had cancelled all public gatherings, including the Widdicombe Fair and Liverpool. Shelley was so upset that he drowned himself in a butt of malmsey. Keats went to London and became Charlotte Bronte. Wordsworth ran blindly into the forest until he collapsed in a heap ten miles above Tintern Abbey. There he lay for several years, sobbing and kicking his little fat legs. At length, peace returned to him. He looked around, noted the beauty of the forest, and was so moved that he wrote Joyce Kilmer's immortal Trees." And that, smart-apple, is what Wordsworth was doing ten miles above Tintern Abbey."

University Of Vermont Holds Management Conference

Representatives from seven colleges and universities arrived on the Vermont campus Friday for the opening sessions of the two-day regional conference of the Society for Advancement of Management.

About 10 more schools were on hand Saturday for the wind-up. Arriving Friday were students from Hofstra, Long Island U., City College of New York, Fordham, St. John's, Syracuse, and Rochester Institute of Technology.

Representatives from General Electric also were taking part in the conference. The UVM chapter of SAM is the conference host.

Speakers Friday afternoon were Dr. A. Moazzamul Hug of the Department of Economics who discussed "The European Common Market," and Herbert Ridgley, manager of the Burlington General Electric plant who talked about "Business Management in the Defense Market."

Saturday speakers were David N.S. Robertson, Dupont Company of Canada, on the topic, "Unions Management and the Public in the 60s," and F.E. Penn of the overseas division of Minute Maid whose subject was "Representative Problems Encountered in Developing a Foreign Business in Europe."

Dr. Lillian Gilbreth, president of Gilbreth Inc., consulting engineers in management, spoke at the banquet Saturday night in the Hotel Vermont. Her topic was "The International Management Movement."

Dr. Gilbreth is known as the world's greatest woman engineer. She is president of Gilbreth Inc., Montclair, N.J., a consulting management engineering firm she and her husband, the late Frank B. Gilbreth, organized several years prior to World War I. In spite of her arduous career, Dr. Gilbreth found time to raise twelve children. Her feat seemed so fantastic that two of her children were motivated to write a book. It was titled, "Cheaper by the Dozen," and became a best seller.

Evening Enrollment Soars

Evening Division enrollment for the 1962-63 academic year has soared to an all-time high of more than 1300 students.

Figures for '62-'63 show 1330 individuals enrolled with a total of 71 classes being offered, including 24 at off-campus centers throughout the state.

In 1961-62, the previous peak year, 1072 persons were registered in the 67 classes given, including 48 on-campus and 19 off-campus. This year's attendance figure represents a gain of 258 or more than a 20 per cent rise.

The Evening Division has shown steady growth since its inception in the middle 1940s.

Course selections range from the more or less standard bill of fare of social sciences and English, to such recent offerings of Russian for a group of students who were preparing for a summer trip abroad, Colloquial

French given in Newport, and in-service training for nurses in Bennington.

In general, the kinds of courses available through the Evening Division are roughly split between the vocational and the avocational. More than one hundred current Evening Division students are either enrolled for graduate credit or are candidates for advanced degrees.

Instructors are primarily from the faculty of UVM although, within the last several years, the Evening Division has drawn on the resources of the University of Sherbrooke, Quebec; Castleton and Lyndon State; the College of Education at Plattsburgh; the State College at North Adams, Mass.; Dartmouth; and from time to time avails itself of teaching talent from business, industry, and from non-educational professions.

Vermont Conference Postponed

The Vermont Conference, originally scheduled to be held here March 27, 28 and 29, has been cancelled due to lack of funds.

According to Ilene Hoffbinder, head of the Vermont Conference Committee, the conference planned for this spring, entitled "The Problems of the Automated Society", will be held next fall, provided necessary funds are appropriated and speakers can be engaged. Scheduled to participate in the conference were George Grant, philosopher and professor at McMaster University, Ontario; James Carey, Labor union leader; and a third speaker, undetermined at the time of the cancellation of the conference.

The annual convocation was originated in 1952 by the Student Association for the purpose of extending the often limited undergraduate perspective. It provides an opportunity for students to examine and discuss topics of current interest and to hear the viewpoints of men prominent in the field being discussed. The events of the three or four days of the conference include a lecture each evening by one of the guest speakers, followed by a discussion in which all may participate. During the entire conference the lecturers remain in Burlington and are available to speak at residence halls and, at professors' requests, in individual classrooms.

Last year's conference, "Limits of Communication", featured Oscar Lewis, noted anthropologist; Jules Feiffer, syndicated cartoonist and satirist; Selig Harrison, a business man; and Ihab Hassan, authority on the contemporary American novel and Professor of English at Wesleyan University.

The conference has been cancelled on two previous occasions. In 1956 a conference concerning politics and national elections was planned, but was cancelled because the tight schedules of political leaders in a presidential election year did not permit them to devote three days to the conference. The conference did not take place in 1957.

Scheans Receives Grant To Study Sociology In Luzon

Dr. Daniel J. Scheans, Professor of Sociology.
(Credit: Eldred, Audio-Visual)

A UVM Sociology professor has been awarded a postdoctoral grant by the National Science Foundation for anthropological research in the Philippines.

Dr. Daniel J. Scheans is one of 185 college and university professors in the United States to receive fellowships which are awarded by the Foundation to assist holders of doctoral degrees or the equivalent in continued research in their respective fields.

He was one of only six out of the 185 Fellowship recipients to be found in the humanities and social sciences group.

Each award, for a year, includes stipend of $5,000, an allowance for dependents, and an allowance to help defray travel costs to the fellowship institutions.

Dr. Scheans, who also holds a Faculty Summer Research Fellowship from UVM, and his family will depart from Burlington in June for the Philippines and Ilocos Norte Province in northern Luzon.

In 1957-58, Dr. Scheans was a Fulbright Fellow in the Philippines in the general area where he plans to travel this time so he has already established a basic foundation for his latest research.

He plans to collect and record data about the social organization of the people of Barrio, Suba. He expects to be gone from 12 to 15 months.

Subans are peasant farmers, most being small land holders who raise small cash crops such as rice, sugar cane, and tobacco. In addition, their incomes are supplemented by fishing.

The purpose of the research will be to provide a new way of looking at the Suban kinship system. In 1958 the population was 446, living in 99 separate households which were located in four settlement clusters. Dr.

Scheans says the kinship system of these people falls into the category of bilateral in that Suban Society makes use of the principle of bilateral descent.

"Subans relate to each other largely by means of a family, and kindred-based social system. By and large, the Subans remain a traditional people whose most frequent, meaningful, and satisfying social relations are to be found within a small scale universe made up of their relatives. The structural center of that small world would be their kinship system."

"Their kinship system, like all of Suban culture, has the grand function of helping people adjust to their environment and to then modifying the environmental adjustment to them. From the Ego point of view, this serves as a stock solution to the basic problem of experience; the taking of the unlike and making it like, the taking of the new and making it assimilable. Another way of saying this is that Subans in Rome would not act as the Romans," says Dr. Scheans.

Dr. Scheans' family will probably live in Laoag, the capital of Ilocos Norte Province, while he is in the field. He plans to participate in activities and live with the Subans as much as they will allow and to discuss experiences with them formally and informally. A journal with daily entries will be kept. Other plans call for a household census, genealogies, mapping, getting life histories from a stratified sample of persons, making tape recordings, and training a native assistant to help in the work.

Dr. Scheans is a graduate of the University of Arizona and holds his Ph.D. from the University of Oregon. He has written a number of papers for archeological journals and is a member of the American Anthropological Association and Sigma XI.

Dr. Cook Named First Dean Of Faculties

Dr. Clinton D. Cook is UVM's first Dean of Faculties. This is a newly created post as a result of one of the major recommendations of the recently completed University-wide self-study.

In his new position, Dr. Cook's primary responsibility is that of general administrative concern for academic matters and development on campus. He is responsible for interrelations between the educational programs. He will also try to formulate plans in various educational areas, strengthen any weakness and develop any new areas which arise. He also correlates the educational activities between the colleges of the University and will plan for the future academic direction of the University.

Dr. Cook will help formulate University policies on hiring and the level of ability for the faculty, salaries, promotions and tenures. He also helps with the research programs, part of the educational scheme, to see that these research efforts develop in a way healthy for the whole school.

He will work with the deans of the various colleges, will serve as a member of the advisory University Council, and will attend faculty meetings as President Fey's representative. Dr. Cook is responsible to President Fey for overseeing this whole area.

Dr. Cook stated, "I feel that any job, the shape it takes, depends upon the individual in it. I can't be very specific about mine until I have been in it for a while. I expect that the emphasis will be on the intellectual activity of the University."

Dr. Cook, a native of Vermont, was born in St. Johnsbury and graduated in 1938 from St. Johnsbury Academy. He earned his B.S. from M.I.T. in 1942, then worked for General Electric Company until after the war. In 1946 he joined the UVM faculty as an instructor and received his M.S. from UVM in 1948. In 1951 he earned his Ph.D. from Ohio State and worked at General Electric Company for a year as supervising chemist.

In 1952 Dr. Cook rejoined the UVM faculty as Assistant Professor of Chemistry. He served as chairman of the Pre-Medical Advisory Committee from 1956-1960 when he became chairman of the Department of Chemistry.

He also has done research in organic chemistry and has served as a member of the Library Committee, the Executive Committee of the Graduate College and of Special Committee which established planning for the development of Ph.D. programs at UVM.

In the summer of 1959, Dr. Cook served as Visiting Graduate Professor at Ohio State. He has contributed about 20 publications to scholarly journals, and last spring was a lecturer in the American Chemical Society Lecture Program in the midwest.

Dr. Cook will continue to serve out his position as chairman of the department until the fall when a new chairman will be appointed.

The View From Here Free Elections?

If you looked at the candidates for S.A. office in the last CYNIC, or if you looked closely enough at the ballots used in the S.A. elections, you noticed one very odd fact. Two of the most important positions were uncontested. Janice Cole was the only candidate for Second Vice-President and Dick Badger was the only candidate for Treasurer.

Things might have been worse. At the last minute Job Silverstein decided to run for President. If he had not made this decision Dick Paye would have run for that position unopposed. That would have meant that the two most important offices would go without a contest.

Without passing on the qualifications or abilities of the candidates at the moment, is it right that these three offices go without a contest? Perhaps the most important office is Treasurer, since he has tremendous power over the funds for all the student activities on campus. If the Treasurer is not the most important, it is second only to the President, and the Second Vice-President is also near the top of the list. Suppose the candidate for any of these offices, especially President or Treasurer, were a dunce or irresponsible? There would be no choice but to elect him. Can you imagine what damage might be done before something was done about him? The implications are staggering, to say the very least.

Perhaps next time something like that happens S.A. can hold up elections indefinitely until they get two candidates for every office. But for such important and vital offices to go without a choice of candidates is not only an abuse of the privilege of electing our own officers and governors, it is downright dangerous.

One would think that an explanation was due the students from S.A., and one would think that the students would demand such an explanation. Apparently, however, no such demands have been made, and no such explanations are forthcoming. The CYNIC, therefore, takes it upon itself to publicly ask the Student Association: WHY? Furthermore, what is being done to prevent such a deplorable situation from occurring again next year?

Is there so little interest in the Student Association that two very important positions were not contested, and that a third almost wasn't?

UVM's student government may not be the best or most effective in the world, but it certainly will not improve with elections like these. The situation can be remedied, but it is up to S.A. most immediately, and to the interest shown by the students in the long run. Let's see what can be done, shall we?

UVM's men are exercising their independence again, this time with snowballs. Lately almost a hundred windows in the area around the freshman men's residences have been broken by snowballs.

Many of these are the products of snowball fights, but a good many more are apparently the products of sheer puerility. Granted that a snowball fight may be one of the least harmful ways of letting off steam, but when windows start breaking it has gone too far. And breaking windows for the fun of it is sheer childish stupidity.

While we have been having some nice weather lately, spring isn't really here yet by any means. In Vermont it snows most of the way through May, and we'll have at least one more good storm before winter finally lets go. That means more snowball fights, and probably more vandalism. Is this necessary? If one must be puerile, please be puerile in a less destructive way. It would be greatly appreciated.

ERRATA

Through a series of unfortunate, and unforgivable, errors two very important things were omitted from last week's CYNIC. First, the byline was left off the "Studentes" column. The column was by Jean Camp.

If the clipping from the Northfield News and Advertiser on the sports page (center column, bottom) looked a little fishy, it was. A line was left out; February, 1913. That makes quite a little difference.

Letters To The Editor

Black Face Discrimination

To the Editor:

The tradition of Kake Walk is an old and honored one. By adopting it, UVM has done much to perpetuate its symbolic beauty. The blackened face of the walkers are as much a part of this tradition as the steps of the walk.

Discrimination against minority groups is something which must be overcome. But we find no such discrimination within Kake Walk. All the activities of this time-honored tradition are not meant as prejudices against any one group and should not be taken as such. The examples used by Sandra Clark are a slanting of the facts. As former Southerners, having been exposed to racial prejudices and its bitter effects, we can see no offense in any aspects of Kake Walk. If Kake Walk and what it stands for can be considered a personal affront to any racial group, then many accepted facets of our society should be abolished.

Othello should not be taught, minstrel shows should be banned throughout the country instead of perpetuated, Al Jolson, backbone of American Entertainment, should also have been banned. Black Orpheus, winner of last year's Cannes Film Festival prize, should definitely not have been shown the world over.

Sandra Clark, obviously, does not realize that Kake Walk was chosen because of its beauty and gaiety. The uninhibited freedom of the Negro is personified in Kake Walk, and her reference to the lines in the skits "unrelated to their play, but related to the blackfaces," is merely an attempt to imbue the spirit of Kake Walk into the whole weekend.

The inscriptions on the snow sculptures are not a mockery of the Negro tongue. Their use, as in literature and in drama, is an attempt to immortalize what the Negro gave to America.

Kake Walk is not meant to be a joke or an insult upon the Negro, but rather a continuation of an ancient American society. The Negro race is a part of traditions and customs of America, and any attempt to perpetuate it as such should be applauded, not criticized.

IFC Sing Postponed

To the Editor:

In view of the fact that no suitable weekend was available for the Interfraternity Sing due to conflicts with spring vacation and Panhellenic Formals, the event has been postponed until the fall of 1963 when it will be staged as part of the new Greek Week. Under the direction of Richard Darling, plans for Greek Week now include guest speakers from various parts of the nation, a workshop program focusing upon specific aspects of the Greek system and a full afternoon of Greek athletic events as well as the traditional IFC Sing.

Parking Lot Suggestion

To the Editor:

Are you tired of cruising the street looking for a parking place? Do the signs "Restricted-Yellow Decal Only" limit your parking choice? Have you picked up a couple of parking tickets and fear getting another? Then try the parking lot behind Buckingham Hall! There is always room there for another hundred cars. It is convenient too - less than a minute to any place on the main campus.

K.W. Tribute To Negro

To the Editor:

I, in addition to many other students, was perturbed to find the CYNIC used as a repository for such tragicomic ludicrum as Miss Sandra Clark's "Letter to the Editor." I hold no skeptical reservations in saying that no one, either student or visitor, has ever viewed Kake Walk as being discriminatory against the Negro, in either a flagrant or subtle manner. However, Kake Walk has been lauded many times as one of the many contributions graciously given to the American heritage and as such, a tribute to the American Negro. To catalogue Kake Walk as discriminating, is also to condemn Negro folklore, Negro spiritual music, and on down to the songs of Al Jolson (who also took to the wig, charcoal, and whitening), as discriminating.

It is quite unfortunate indeed that many members of groups that are discriminated against become so fanatical as to become saturated with prejudice and discrimination themselves. This oversensitivity, when there is no existing prejudice or discrimination, to me, has implications of acute psychopathological lesions.

If all Americans were more objective rather than impulsive or merely sympathetic, the onerous conditions of discrimination and prejudice might cease to exist. But also, such splenetic irrelevancies as mentioned by Miss Clark might never evolve under the terminology of "discrimination."

Dr. Gregg Sends Greetings

To the Students of UVM:

Your kind letter was a pleasant surprise. I do appreciate the invitation to write a brief open letter so that our greetings can reach all my friends at UVM. To any potential friends in the Class of 1966, I can only say -- I'll see you in September. Although we have missed you all since June, 1962, our warm reception by the staff of the Chemistry Department at the University of Florida and by many people in Gainesville have overcome loneliness. Also, we have kept contact news-wise by the CYNIC, alumni magazine, and the Free Press.

Actually, our sabbatical leave has been such a productive and refreshing experience it has exceeded all my expectations. The delightful climate has been a significant factor. Two major ways my way of life has differed from that of last year are no eight o'clock classes and never having to wear either a topcoat or an outer jacket all winter while I walked over a mile both to and from the chemistry building.

During the first trimester I attended all classes in three advanced courses in inorganic. Currently I am in only two such courses. Since I have no teaching duties, much time has been spent doing research. I have also attended many seminars.

I anticipate next September when I shall meet "old" friends, make new friends in the Classes of 1966 and 1967, and use for the first time the new edition of Principles of Chemistry.

Donald Gregg

EDITOR'S NOTE:

One of the personalities which is missing from the UVM campus this year is Dr. Donald Gregg of the Chemistry Department. The CYNIC thought that some of his many friends might enjoy hearing from him, so we asked him if he would like to write an open letter for the Cynic. For those of you who do not know Dr. Gregg, perhaps this letter will help acquaint you with him before you meet him next year, when he returns from his sabbatical leave in Florida.

STUDENTES

by Betsy Bridgen

Here, in this institution for higher education, one's mind can starve. Dutifully going about our work, the gears of the mind automatically mesh with medicine, political science, or math. Light thoughts of skiing, dating, drinking, and the like occupy our thoughts the rest of the time. This leaves a vast region of the mind unused (and unexplored in some). This region I refer to is that which enables two people or more to come together and talk seriously about life, people, or a special thought, and come away from the conversation both enlightened and with a new idea for individual contemplation. This portion of the mind has a driving need; it cannot be satiated by intensive study and academic progress or by light chatter and riotous fun, although these are definitely necessary for equilibrium. It demands delving into one's inner self and taking a good look, finding out what one believes, discovering something confusing, and then sharing this with others involved in the same introspective process. It involves seeing things in a different way, by being more aware of less concrete objects of appraisal like feelings and emotions. Saying that a mind can starve may seem strange but not so if one realizes the stagnation which results by bounding its activity too closely in order to achieve a desired end. The "whole" mind is a living, dynamic entity and therefore needs plenty of room for analyzation and expression.

Advanced Room Payment Required By May 11

All undergraduate male students who are going to live in University residence halls next semester, or who are going to live in a fraternity house, will be required to make an advance room payment of $50 by May 11, it has been announced by Dean of Men Roland Patzer.

Dean Patzer noted that an advance payment has been required of undergraduate women for "some time." The University's Board of Trustees moved in April of 1962 to require the same advance payment of men students, effective this year. In a similar action, the Interfraternity Council has decided to make the advance payment required of all men who wish to live in a fraternity house.

Dean Patzer said that "to facilitate planning for adequate housing for incoming freshmen and returning upperclassmen," the University is asking all undergraduate men students who plan to return next fall to complete a Declaration of Housing form whether or not they are planning to live in University residence halls. The housing forms will be included in the pre-enrollment material, along with the usual material. The forms will be due at the Cashier's Office in Waterman on or before

May 11. Students who are planning to live in the men's residence halls must complete and return the University Housing and Meal Contract at the same time, along with the $50 advance payment.

If any student wishes to change his housing plans he may do so by July 1, without penalty. If he changes his mind after July 1, he forfeits the fifty dollar deposit, and must pay another fifty dollars or stay with his original plans.

Students who are eligible and desire to live in approved off-campus housing may obtain a list of housing in the Office of the Dean of Men.

Eligible students are those undergraduate men who are married, or those who have completed six semesters or more as a full-time student as of June 15, 1963. They may live in approved off-campus housing, in residence halls as space permits, or in fraternity housing. Any male undergraduate who has completed less than six semesters as a full-time student as of June 15 will be required to live in a residence hall or fraternity house. Students living with their immediate families are exempt from the on-campus housing rule.

Dean Patzer invites students having any questions concerning housing for next year to contact his office.

UVM Madrigal Singers And Choir Featured In Spring Concert

by Ellen Rothenberg

On Sunday, March 31, at 4 p.m. in the Ira Allen Chapel, the University of Vermont Department of Music will present the annual Spring Choir Concert, free of charge, as part of the Fine Arts Festival.

The program will be divided into two parts. The Madrigal Singers, under the leadership of Francis Weinrich, will present the first part of the program. This group is composed of twelve students who rehearse regularly during the week and receive credit for their participation in this group. They have recently appeared on television on the "Age of Kings" program in a series of Shakespearean plays. This group is singing a number of selections by John Dowland including "Shall I Sue?" and "Sweet Nymph, Come to Thy Love" and a few selections by Thomas Morley including "Now is the Month of Maying" and "Hark Alleluia".

Dr. Frank Lidal is conductor of the University Choir and they will be the next group to perform. There are approximately sixty-five members in the Choir who were hand-picked out of a large number of students who auditioned for this group, on the basis of their excellent singing ability.

Their selections are varied and they are singing both secular and sacred music. Among their secular selections is "Evening" by Zoltan Kodaly, which will be performed as an incidental Solo by sopranos Kay King and Eileen Abair.

Included in the sacred portion of their concert will be "Mass in G Minor" by Ralph Vaughn-Williams. This selection will be performed by a solo quartet consisting of Kay King, soprano; Mona Ford, alto; Roger Lyman, tenor, and David Bishop, bass.

The choir is also singing "Kyrie Eleison" (Lord Have Mercy), "Gloria in Excelsis Deo" (Glory be to God in the Highest), and "Credo in unum Deum" (I believe in one God), among their selections.

The students participating in this concert have devoted their time and energy to prepare it and they have done a very fine job. This is one performance that no one will want to miss.

Kennedy To Ally Nations

WASHINGTON (CPS) - While President Kennedy attempts to forge an iron alliance between North and South America, the State Department and a number of U.S. universities are laying groundwork to insure its future.

Already underway is a new Alliance for Progress program aimed at Latin America's 550,000 college and university students. Government officials are well aware that the South American student is traditionally in the center of political movements and ideas. With an eye on these future leaders, the government and almost 40 U.S. universities have joined to aid higher education institutions South of the border.

More than $24 million has been committed by the Agency for International Development (AID) for projects at 57 of Latin America's 200 universities. Another $50 million will be spent to complete more than 40 of these projects.

The work includes expansion of training in agriculture, education, public and business administration, engineering and economics. The Social Trust Fund of the Inter-American Development Bank - which includes U.S. contributed moneys - has earmarked $25 million for similar projects. Ford, Rockefeller and other U.S. foundations are also aiding such programs.

Some 37 U.S. universities have made agreements with the 57 South American schools to assist their educational programs. The U.S. schools will send professors and educational technicians to their South American counterparts. Some of the schools involved are Columbia, California, Chicago, Minnesota, Texas A&M, Iowa State, North Carolina State, Michigan, Michigan State, Purdue, Southern California, Indiana, Louisiana State, Tennessee, Cornell, Catholic University, Syracuse, Stanford and Tulane.

The most comprehensive agreement so far is between the University of Pittsburgh and the Central University of Ecuador in Quito.

Pittsburgh will send more than 20 professors from nine different fields to Quito and bring 100 Ecuadoreans to its own campus for training. The program is financed by a $1 million grant.

Under the project, the professors will provide technical advice in their field for academic programs, teaching laboratories and basic libraries, and service training. Most of the assistance is aimed at technical fields. With whirlwind changes in social and economic conditions brought to South America with the Alliance program, Latin universities found themselves at a loss with a limited curriculum.

Latin schools have been shifting money and teachers from such fields as medicine, fine arts and law to the upcoming technical fields. The lack of technically trained college students is one of the major roadblocks in implementing many Alliance projects.

Politically, the United States hopes the program will create good will among students without intensive propaganda barrages. Planners of the program feel that helping people to help themselves will also offset Fidel Castro's exported brand of Communism. AID officials handling the program report growing enthusiasm on the part of U.S. colleges and universities. Marvin Weissman, director of the Office of Institutional Development, said: "More U.S. universities are asking to help than we can accommodate right now."

Enthusiastic Response Given To San Francisco Ballet Company

by Lois Allison

The Blue Ticket Lane Series performance of the San Francisco Ballet ran the full circle in audience response last Wednesday night at Memorial Auditorium. The somewhat tepid initial reaction had grown to an enthusiastic affirmation of acclaim by the finale. In general, the early weakness was not so much in the dancing as in the choice of material itself. As the dances improved, the dancers shone, and the viewers responded in kind.

"Fantasma," the first presentation, was an unfortunate choice for the opening number despite several excellent performances. The thread of the main story -- the meeting of a wanderer and the mistress of a mansion -- was almost obliterated by the constant highlighting of the "background" local revelry taking place at the estate. Confusion predominated over clarity. Nevertheless, Robert Gladstein was properly poignant in movement as the male lead; Jocelyn Vollmar skillfully alternated disdain and passion in her dance as the mistress.

Colorful Evening And Matinee Presented By Ballet Troop

by Judy Myers

On Tuesday night, March 19, the San Francisco Ballet presented a colorful evening of dance to a highly appreciative Lane Series audience.

The opening number, "Variations de Ballet," displayed the ballet abilities of the entire company without the distractions of an interwoven story. An extended intermissions preceded the presentation of "Original Sin," a jazz-inflected ballet depicting the fall of man. The final and most enjoyable number of the evening was "Caprice."

This light-hearted romance with its pretty girls and handsome soldiers sparkled like spring sunshine. The work of Gail Visentin in this last number was the outstanding performance of the evening. She portrayed a young uninhibited coquette who successively captured the hearts of a private, sergeant, lieutenant, captain, and general. The pertness of her dancing and facial expressions displayed not only her ballet abilities, but also her value as an actress. All in all the show was an enjoyable mixture of the old and the new in ballet.

If the dancing had not been superb, the costumes and sets would have stolen the show. The work of John Furness on "Original Sin" resulted in imaginative costumes which reflected the modern learnings of this ballet. Leotards of various colors and distinctive head pieces distinguished the different types of animals. The set consisted of one sinewy tree and masses of jungle vines that descended from over the stage.

Contrasting sharply to "Original Sin" were the costumes for Awesome giant figures and an eerie electronic musical accompaniment characterized the strikingly modern second offering, "Jest of Cards." Costuming, effective in all the sequences, was particularly outstanding here; each suit was represented by colorfully outfitted "ordinary cards" and elaborately robed royalty. The Joker in the deck made a dramatic stand-out in white. Attire is only part of the story though; Terry Orr's performance as the Joker was a tremendous exercise in nimbleness of foot and skill of movement.

"Divertissement d'Auber," the company's final presentation, was a wonderful exhibition of the classic in ballet -- the high leaps, the stiff tulle skirts, the traditional steps. Particularly well-received were the performances of the talented trio highlighted in the second part of this selection. Virginia Johnson, Cynthia Gregory and Terry Orr are exceptionally gifted interpreters in the art of the "pure ballet."

"Caprice." The girls wore pastel underskirts with flowered or striped overskirts. Their bodices with square necklines had three quarter length sleeves ending in lacy ruffles. Flowery hats and white gloves completed the costumes. The black and gold outfits of the guards and red and black uniforms of the soldiers were equally youthful. Even in "Variations de Ballet" the classical ballet tutus of red, white, and gold were delightful.

Wednesday afternoon the company presented a youth matinee of "Variations de Ballet" and "Caprice." The show was well attended by the four-to-nine set. In spite of the few parents present the youngsters were well behaved. Technically the sequences were exactly the same as Tuesday night, but a subtle change in spirit was obvious in the cast. No longer professionals performing for an audience, the company became dancers entertaining children. The difference manifested itself in the warmer smiles of the cast and in the orchestra leader, who waited to commence the overture until an expectant hush had settled. It was as if that invisible curtain that hangs between the stage and audience had been temporarily removed. The children loved every moment. During the intermission they collected autographs from as many members of the orchestra as they could corner. Only one musician, a clarinet player, seemed to mind. He alone was master of the withering look. The costumes and spirit of "Caprice" were almost too much for some children who bounced in their seats in time to the music.

Does a man really take unfair advantage of women when he uses Mennen Skin Bracer?

All depends on why he uses it.

Most men simply think Menthol-Iced Skin Bracer is the best after-shave lotion around. Because it cools rather than burns. Because it helps heal shaving nicks and scrapes. Because it helps prevent blemishes.

So who can blame them if Bracer's crisp, long-lasting aroma just happens to affect women so remarkably?

Of course, some men may use Mennen Skin Bracer because of this effect.

Player's Performance In "Fantasticks" Hailed

by Lois Allison

Greeted with genuine acclaim and enthusiasm, the University Players' production of "The Fantasticks" on March 21-24 at the Arena Theatre represented a near perfect match of material and performers. The dry whimsy and startling acuteness of the work was very well captured by the actors; the cleverness of the songs was further promoted by a group of generally effective voices; even the pathos of the disillusionment of youth plot evoked a real communication between the actors, their play, and their audience.

Paul Bristol did an admirable job in a dual role; as Narrator, he was an amused, affectionate reporter on the events of the play; as the Bandit, he was appropriately dashing and menacing. In the latter role, he was particularly effective in the abduction duel, and in his musical cataloging of the world's pleasures in "Round and Round."

Graced with a truly wonderful voice and the essential vivacious spirit, Barbara Unger was excellent in the role of the girl, Louisa. Her singing was superb throughout; her "Much More" number perfectly caught the essences of an awakening teenage girl.

Bill Perlow, playing the boy, Matt, was also very effective in communicating to the audience the conflicting desires and difficulties of youth. His performance was somewhat weakened, however, by a limited voice range in the singing.

The parts of the "feuding" fathers were extremely well-played by Timothy Finney and Dick Lennon. Timothy was amusing as the familiar bumbling, but well-meaning, father of the girl; Dick did a fine job as the brusque, no-nonsense father of the boy. Their duets on the plights of bringing up children gained quick response from the older members of the audience.

Comic relief from all these problems came in the form of two ragged road actors, Barry Beckerman, a mis-quoting Shakespearean, and Errol Selsby, a man who does a good dying act. The antics of these two at the mock abduction were completely hilarious.

Cast in a most difficult role was John Dances, the Mute. As a silent dividing wall, and a convenient manager of props, John was effectively dead-pan and nimble throughout the performance.

Fine musical accompaniment was provided by Nancy Sturzenegger, piano; Mona Ford, bass; Robert Levis, percussion; and Elizabeth Dahl, harp. The dancing, under the direction of Norma Albert was lively and spirited. Costumes and scenery were simple but imaginative.

Young Democrats Offer Forum

For the past month the Young Democrats, headed by Barbara Lawrence and Ronald Guttman, have been very busy reorganizing their off year election campaign. They have decided to reach the public demand by creating a series of lecture forums concerning world politics in general. The first of these events will take place this Thursday, March 27, at 7:30 P.M. in the Marsh Room of Billings Center. The speakers will be Dr. Daniels of the History Department and Dr. Dellin of the Economics Department, discussing the Sino-Soviet Schism.

On Monday, April 1, at 4 P.M. Governor Hoff will appear in the Billings Center to address the student body. The Young Democrats, along with the International Relations Club, invite you all to attend these events.

Pfeiffer College Without Student Government

MISENHEIMER, N.C. (CPS) - The student body of Pfeiffer College is without student government - at least for the time being.

The student government of this small Southern school voted to dissolve itself following college administration officials' refusal to grant a student petition to establish a locally-drafted student bill of rights. Pfeiffer College President J. Lem Stokes said that he was in favor of a student bill of rights, but that he wanted one designed after the prototype bill of student rights for all American college and university students adopted by the U.S. National Student Association several years ago.

The 800 students of the Methodist school, led by their student government, had asked the college administration to grant a student bill of rights drawn up locally, but were repeatedly turned down.

Irate at the administration's refusal to grant the students' petition, the student government voted to disband. The administration, acting under regulations governing inactivity of student government, took over the functions of the student government temporarily, and set new student elections for April 4.

Student body vice president Fred Davenport said that he was "dismayed and disillusioned. I feel there has been misunderstanding of the intent of the student government association."

The college president said the locally-drafted bill would allow students to usurp responsibilities which the faculty should solely have, something which the generally accepted USNSA prototype bill of student rights does not do. The Pfeiffer student government is a member of USNSA.

"Sloppy" Skiers Slalom In Outing Club Event

by Mary Ellen O'Brien

UVM's big, happy confused ski family united for two beautiful hours on Sunday, March 22, for the Outing Club's annual Sloppy Slalom. A bright array of red, yellow, and blue flags set in a cross between a slalom and giant slalom either conquered or was conquered by approximately 40 enthusiasts.

Teams of 4 men or women, representing dorms, sororities and frats, or just a group of friends, vied for 4 trophies, 1 each to the fastest man and woman racer and 1 each to the fastest men's and women's team. Scoring was based on the best 3 of 4 times. Members of the two winning teams, Tri Delta and SAE, also copped individual honors. They were Chris Economo, leading the lassies in 23.8, and Bill Aja who set the pace for men in 20.3 seconds.

A spirit of comradie rather than do-or-die competition prevailed. The flags were not the only colorful aspect of the day. For instance, two girls inadvertently raced in the men's division on the Marsh Hall Foursome!

Later in the day a novelty three-legged race was won by Bill Aja and Joan Dare. The racers sped along with snowshoes on their outside feet and skis on their taped-together, inside feet. Second place in this event went to John Rie and Meredith Holden.

Honorary Tea

The spring semester initiation of Alpha Lambda Delta took place on Sunday afternoon, March 24th, at 1:30 in Terrill Hall. Inducted as pledges into the freshman women's honor society were sixteen girls, all of whom had attained a minimum average of 87.5 last semester. They are: Judy A. Brown, Judy L. Claypoole, Gabriele P. Frost, Janice A. Hackbarth, Dina L. Hackett, Cheryl A. Holman, Margaret K. Kidder, Marjorie R. Kisellik, Julie S. Kove, Donna M. Kristiansen, Gail A. Lauzon, Roberta E. Levy, Carol R. Neiman, Linda L. Riggs, Elinor J. Scott, and Jessica M. Tillman.

The purpose of Alpha Lambda Delta is to encourage academic excellence and maintain high standards of honor and character among UVM women.

Annual Shakespeare Festival Returns To Champlain Area

Return of The Bard - The award-winning Champlain Shakespeare Festival will open its fifth season of Shakespeare this August on the campus of the University of Vermont. Plays to be offered include "Merry Wives of Windsor," "Othello," and "Richard III". Scene above is "Richard III", offered in 1962 season.

(Credit: Eldred, Audio-Visual)

The award-winning Champlain Shakespeare Festival will open its fifth season on campus this August, once again offering a round of comedy, tragedy and history in continuous repertory.

Plays to be offered this August will be "Merry Wives of Windsor," "Othello," and "Richard III."

Directing the Festival company of young professionals this year will be Prof. Edward J. Feldner, who served as co-director last year with Prof. Gregory A. Falls, inaugural director of the Festival who is now Director of the School of Drama at the University of Washington.

The Festival was established in 1959, the year in which Vermont, New York State and Canada celebrated the 300th anniversary of Lake Champlain. In its first year it won a regional award of the New-England Theatre Conference, and last year was called "one of seven major Shakespearean Festivals of North America."

In its first four seasons, the Festival has offered "A Midsummer Night's Dream," "Macbeth," "Twelfth Night," "Hamlet," "The Taming of the Shrew," "Richard III," "Much Ado about Nothing," "The Tempest," "Henry IV, Part I," "Henry V," "Measure for Measure," and "Julius Caesar."

In addition, special children's matinees of "The Tempest," "As You Like It," and the pre-Shakespearean farce, "Gammer Gurton's Needle," have been offered. Special children's matinees will be offered again during the final weeks of the coming season, according to Feldner, who said casting for the Festival is now underway.

This year, Feldner said, UVM Summer Session students interested in participating in the Festival will have an opportunity to work with the young professional company by enrolling in a drama course to be offered during the six and eight week sessions.

Annual Sugar Party Successful

On Sunday afternoon between 2 and 4 P.M., Dean Hill's Sugar Party - UVM's annual harbinger of spring - took place at the parking lot between Patrick Gymnasium and Gutterson Field House. The event was a tremendous success and the more than 400 people who attended had an enjoyable afternoon. The culinary delight of the party was, of course, sugar on snow along with coffee, doughnuts and dill pickles to neutralize all the sweetness.

Although there were announcements and posters on campus bulletin boards and in downtown Burlington, many who attended found out about the party via unusual bovine channels. On the Friday and Saturday preceding the event, members of Alpha Zeta, the sponsoring organization, led a large black and white Holstein around campus carrying a sign that read, "I may only be a cow, but at least I know that Dean Hill's Sugar Party is this Sunday afternoon." Many a student was more than a little surprised to find the animal lazily sunning itself near the fountain. The cow was loaned to Alpha Zeta as a publicity stunt by the University Farm and the Dairy Department.

Highlighting Sunday's events, besides the sugar on snow, were log-sawing contests and tugs of war. Entries in the log sawing contests included two-man teams, two-woman teams, man-woman teams and youngster teams. Winners of the Men's division, sawing through a 5 x 6 log in 0.16 minutes, were Harvey Waterhouse and Larry Yarkin. Championing the women by sawing through a 5 x 6 log in 0.29 minutes were Kathy De Boer and Caroline Mullen. Leading the co-ed division by finishing in 0.26 minutes were Larry Yarkin and Ann Bergeron.

Dean Hill's Sugar Party, named in honor of Joseph L. Hill, past Dean of the College of Agriculture, is the oldest such sugar party in the regional area and has an interesting history at UVM. The first party was held about 1920 and run by the Aggie Club, an organization of students in the College of Agriculture. When the Aggies disbanded, the event was taken over by UVM's Green Mountain Chapter of Alpha Zeta, the national honorary agricultural fraternity. The first sugar parties were held at the University Research Forest in

ISC Gives Grants To Bulgaria

LEIDEN (CPS) - Responding to the concern voiced by many of the member national unions of students of the International Student Conference (ISC), the ISC's administrative arm, the Coordinating Secretariat of National Unions of students (COSEC) has granted financial assistance to nine additional African students who recently left Bulgaria, charging Bulgarian officials with racial discrimination and political harassment.

All of the nine students are from Kenya, and all of them are either students of the sciences or of medicine.

The students arrived in Amsterdam via Vienna last week, and were greeted by officials of COSEC, representing most of the national unions of students of the free world, (including the U.S. National Student Association). Some 80 national unions participate in the International Student Conference. The International University Exchange Fund, the scholarship assistance agency of COSEC, will arrange for the Kenyan students to continue their studies in the West.

Meeting the students at the Amsterdam airport, COSEC Finance Secretary Gwyn Morgan (England) said "It should be understood that COSEC, in helping to obtain passage for African students in Bulgaria, and in assisting their resettlement in the country of their choice, has responded to the wishes of the students in every continent in the world who have expressed concern that, where students are oppressed by racial injustice, COSEC, in accordance with the principles of the International Student Conference, should take clear measures to effect the speedy amelioration of their condition."

All of the Kenyan students, as well as a large number of students from Ghana, Nigeria, Togo, Ethiopia, and other African countries, decided to leave Bulgaria after they were refused police protection in the face of violence against the students. They also charged that the Bulgarian authorities refused to permit the formation of an All-Africa Student Union to represent all African students in Bulgaria, that a police raid on their student hostel was made, that police physically attacked demonstrating students, and that leaders of the student union were arrested and deported.

A spokesman for the Kenyan group, Hongo Nyandeje, said that the majority of the more than 200 African students still in Bulgaria wish to leave, "but in some cases the Bulgarian government is deliberately delaying the issuance of exit visas."

The Kenyan students are staying in the Netherlands as guests of the Netherlands national union of students until scholarships can be arranged for them by COSEC. Offers of assistance to the students have been made by the national unions of students of the Netherlands, Germany, Denmark, United Kingdom, France, Norway, Austria, Italy, Sweden, and the United States. USNSA United States has inaugurated an "African Freedom Fund" to meet the needs of the African students leaving Bulgaria, and has already raised over $10,000 donated by U.S. students and student governments.

Present ROTC Program Is Undergoing Revision

WASHINGTON (CPS) - An intra-service debate is currently delaying Congressional action on a drastic revision of Reserve Officers Training Corps (ROTC) programs at U.S. colleges and universities.

Pentagon officials hope to have the revised ROTC program on its way to Capital Hill within two weeks for hearings by the House Armed Services Committee. But a debate between Army, Navy, and Air Force officials will have to be ironed out first.

Essentially, the revised ROTC legislation will end compulsory ROTC at land-grant universities, where male students are now normally required to take one or two years of military training. The new program would be selective and voluntary, with outstanding participants becoming eligible for government scholarships ranging from $1,000 to $2,000.

The new proposal grew out of a marriage of Air Force and Navy thinking on the efficacy and efficiency of the compulsory ROTC program. All three services, however, are not yet agreed as the amount of scholarships, the length of training in college, and the degree of selectivity on the program.

Defense Secretary Robert S. McNamara and the Bureau of the Budget have approved the new program in principle -- but are leaving the services to thrash out their finer points of difference before the final proposal goes to Congress.

If the reserve representatives of the three branches of the armed services reach a stalemate in the negotiations on the ROTC question, it will be up to Navy Capt. W.S. Bradway, Jr. to smooth over the debated points. Bradway is the Pentagon officer assigned to the development of the new program by the Defense Department. He described the current negotiations between the service branches as "crucial" to the success of the proposal.

The Navy pioneered the new plan when it introduced the so-called "Holloway Plan" offering scholarships to outstanding students who would plan on a Navy career. The NROTC "regular" program provides books, fees, tuition, and a living allowance for students on the program.

Air Force officials soon borrowed the Navy idea; after instituting a few changes of its own, the Air Force came up with essentially the program currently being debated. As envisioned, the new program would enroll only juniors and seniors. Freshmen would be interviewed each year, and those selected would enter training during the summer preceding their junior year. Formal military training would begin after completion of the summer camp, and would continue through the senior year, with a second summer training period after graduation.

Also being debated; when the student would be commissioned. One faction says after graduation, another says after the summer camp.

The section of the new proposal expected to come under the closest Congressional scrutiny is the size of the scholarships the services hope to be able to offer. The Pentagon, however, isn't too worried about passage of the measure. The new program would certainly be cheaper than the tremendous overhead now required by mass compulsory ROTC.

The financial aspects of the new plan are also eliciting support of many college and university officials. Pentagon proponents assert. The smaller, selective ROTC program will be a boon to many schools with crowded physical plants burdened by large ROTC units. And, Pentagon officials are hopeful that all three services can be represented at many schools under the new plan.

Pentagon officials also note that many universities have decided not to wait for Congressional action to unburden themselves of compulsory ROTC programs. Land grant colleges and universities are required by law only to maintain military training programs -- not mandatory ones, and a number of schools have switched to voluntary ROTC in the past few years, often after concerted student pressure had worked for some time to effect the change.

Pentagon personnel report that over a dozen schools have already eliminated compulsory ROTC in anticipation of the new plan, and many are offering only an advanced two-year program.

It is expected that the final version of the plan, as approved by the Defense Department, will be unveiled in Congress by the first of April.

Six years ago the event moved to the parking lot behind Hill's Hall where it was successful for a couple of years. Catamount Skiing News

"It's sloppy but it's still skiing."

A sophomore has been elected to captain next season's skiing team.

Langdon Quimby Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. Langdon Quimby of Bingham, Maine, will lead the Catamounts on the slopes next year.

Chris was one of only two members of this year's squad to hold an A rating. In his best showing of the year he took a second place in the slalom behind UVM Co-Captain Rick Hubbard, at the Class B Championships. He also finished sixth in the downhill competition at the William's Carnival.

He and Hubbard have also been named as alternates on the Eastern squad for the Olympic Alpine tryouts.

Varsity letters have been awarded to nine members of the ski team and freshman numerals to eight by the Athletic Council.

This year's varsity enjoyed the best season since 1956. Season highlights included winning the Class B championship and a third place finish in the Easterns. Co-Capt. Rick Hubbard of Middlebury, a senior, is in Utah this week, participating in the slalom and downhill events in the NCAA championship meet. Hubbard was one of the top eastern collegiate performers in these events all season.

Grant and Hubbard are the only seniors in the group.

Frosh numerals went to Albert Berwick, New Haven, Conn.; Peardon Donaghy, Burlington; Alan Goedecks, Manchester, N.Y.; Anthony Leake, Bennington; David McLelland, North Adams, Mass.; Donald Miller, Jr., Burlington; and Glenn Steen-Johnsen, Greensburg, Penn.

SPORTS CORNER

by Bernie Zaccaro

The boxing world was stunned this past Monday morning when Davey Moore, world featherweight champion, died from injuries inflicted upon him during a championship bout with Sugar Ramos. His wife and five children will forever remember that Davey had mentioned that this was going to be his last year in the ring. Indeed, it is a shame that his prediction came to pass in such a sorrowful way.

The subject of whether or not to ban boxing arises. It has been a major controversy for many years in the minds of all sports promoters. The question has been brought up time and time again, "Is boxing really a sport?" Many people favor the activity and answer the question by finding things wrong with the methods or equipment involved. They claim that headguards would decrease the number of injuries, or that better trained referees would solve the problem. Many sports enthusiasts detest boxing and label it as an outlet for the animalistic tendencies in both the boxer and the boxing fan. Those who fall on this side of the argument claim that boxing is kept alive because of the financial relations entailed.

One very sound argument expressed by boxing supporters is that deaths occur in other sports also, such as football. They hold, and can statistically prove, that the number of high school, college, and professional football players that die in one year surmounts the total number of boxing deaths since the sport was legalized. However, the opposition states that the purpose of any sport is to score points against an adversary to secure a victory. In boxing, the same purpose exists. But, in boxing the only means to score points for a victory is to beat, and in some cases permanently injure, the adversary. This, they assert, is not sport, but rather pure barbarism.

Both sides of the dispute seem to offer tangible points in their favor. The pros and cons are surely clear enough for anyone to understand. Since this is true, why hasn't something been done to settle the disorder? While the chief figures of the boxing world sit at their desks attempting to reach a decision, the fights go on, the injuries multiply, and the number of deaths resulting from boxing increases.

So far I have endeavored to remain unbiased. But now I must join ranks with the objectors to boxing and ask: Is boxing really a sport? Can we justly permit this moral deprivation of human beings to continue? What do you think?

Basketball Finals

Final statistics for New England's 14 major collegiate basketball teams show that Benny Becton was the third leading rebounder and Jack Shabel the eighth top scorer in the recently concluded 1962-63 season.

Becton, who concluded his career as the second all-time Vermont scoring leader and as the top rebounder, had a 14.8 rebound figure for 23 games to nail down the show position. Connecticut's Toby Kimball was the New England pacesetter with a 15.6 average while Boston University's Dick Moreshead was next at 15.4.

Shabel, who chased Becton for individual team scoring honors as a sophomore and junior and finally passed him as a senior, tossed in 388 points for a game norm of 16.8. Another Yankee Conference standout, Rhode Island's Steve Chubin, was first with a 20.4 mark. Shabel became the fifth UVM player in history to surpass the 1000-point career mark, finishing with 1048. Becton had 1146 and 986 rebounds. Becton's 14.2 average was good for 15th place in this season's individual scoring race.

In the individual free throw department, for those with more than 100 attempts, Shabel ranked ninth, converting 94 of 146.

Intramural Volleyball

Intramural volleyball competition has reached the mid-way point with the league championships still in doubt.

League A is currently being led by Delta Psi with a 5-0 record. However, Kappa Sigma and Sigma Phi Epsilon are close behind with 4-0 and 4-1 marks respectively.

League B is being dominated by Alpha Epsilon Pi and Phi Sigma Delta. The Phi Sigs currently lead with a 4-0 record, but the AEPis, having played two more games, possess a 5-1 mark. The two teams will meet each other on March 29th, in what will probably be the most exciting match of the competition.

The Independent League C is being led by the Leftovers. This squad won their division championship in football and basketball and at present, look to be sure winners in volleyball. The Checkmates, Austin and Tupper were dropped from competition after forfeiting their games.

The all campus championship match will be held April 14th.

Lapointe Gives Baseball Preview

by Ken Spalter

"Getting ready for Omaha." That's the battle cry of the 1963 University of Vermont baseball team. In early June, the best teams in the nation will be battling for top rank among college baseball squads. The Catamounts intend to be there, fighting for top honors.

The club has been practicing in the new cage under the watchful eyes of coach Ralph Lapointe since the beginning of March. He is thankful for these new facilities, yet he expresses some dissatisfaction over the fact that cross-netting has not been supplied. This lack has greatly reduced the number of lanes open for the batters. Consequently, it has put the hitters a little behind in their schedule. However, Mr. Lapointe has stated that this new area is a great improvement over the old cage. Also busy keeping the men working is Lapointe's assistant coach Ace Santa Croce. He does a fine job helping the catchers and is temporarily coaching the Freshman team.

The Catamount nine has five starters returning from last year's Yankee Conference Championship team. However, filling the four open berths will not be an easy task. Nick Carmoli, Maynard Ducatte, and Levi Brown were the team's three top sluggers and Dick DeNicola was a nine game winner.

Coach Lapointe has many young sophomore prospects who are working diligently trying to earn a starting position. Lapointe hopes Dick Whittier or Peter MacDonald can do the job at shortstop. If not, Mike Benway will have to move from first base, the position he played last year, to take it over. Behind the plate trying to fill Ducatte's shoes will be Bill Rundle, a junior, who played in half of last year's games, and Mike Behan, a sophomore.

The two biggest problems facing this year's team will be the task of replacing Brown, a 400 hitting outfielder, and DeNicola. The returning veterans in the outfield are Bill Sheriff, a .298 hitter last year, and Wayne VanHam, a .302 hitter. Seeking the third outfield position will be Bob Johnson, a defensive ace, Steve Morse, and Al Foster, who is also a pitcher. These three men will also compete with Dick Cassani, whom Lapointe likes to have in the lineup when he's not pitching because he "swings a good bat."

Cassani is the ace of the pitching staff. He's a hard throwing fastball pitcher whose 9-0 record last year proved his capability. He had an 0.99 earned-run average for 72 innings pitched and he struck out 21, walking only 21. He's a fine pro prospect, and many big league clubs have been trying to get his name on a contract. Fortunately for Vermont, Cassani decided to continue his education in favor of playing professional ball. The rest of the pitching staff lacks varsity experience. However, Coach Lapointe hopes that the sophomores on the staff will develop quickly and give the club depth. They are Jim Brennan and Al Foster, two right handers, and southpaw Carl Martin. Also seeking a starting berth are Jim Howe, a junior, and Ted Jones, a senior. Of the sophomores Brennan has impressed Mr. Lapointe the most with his fine pre-season showing.

This year's infield is rated as one of the best in the Yankee Conference. Besides Benway, who will either play first base or short stop, are second baseman Dick Boutilier, a junior, and third baseman Joe Pare, a senior. Both of these men are excellent fielders and Pare batted .318 last year.

Mr. Lapointe has said that many people don't rate this year's team with previous championship teams because of a lack of hitting power and an experienced pitching staff. However, he also stated that he is sure that any shortcomings in material will be overshadowed by the hustle, desire, and spirit his boys have shown so far in pre-game training.

Gridders Await Spring Practice

by Rusty Brink

"Football games in the fall are won in the winter." This is the motto of the UVM Catamounts as they go through their winter workouts in preparation for spring football. Most football teams throughout the country employ similar winter workouts as an integral part of their football program. Approximately seventy-five students are currently involved in this training.

This program is composed of two one-hour workouts per week with a third workout being optional. Each one-hour period is divided into three twenty-minute sections, one in the field house, one in the handball courts, and one in the weight room. The period in the fieldhouse is for ball handling for backs and ends, blocking for linemen, and running for all. On the handball courts the men develop coordination, agility, and lateral movement.

The workout in the weightroom is composed of eight basic exercises. These are performed both isometrically (with fixed apparatus) and isotonicly (weightlifting). Eight exercises are required, but there are some other optional exercises such as other isometric exercises, rope-skipping, and a modified form of boxing. The purpose of this part of the program is to build muscle tone, size, and strength.

The program is set up in the following manner: There are six groups with about twelve boys in each group. Three of these groups work out Monday and Wednesday and the other three work out Tuesday and Thursday. The three groups work simultaneously, one in the field house, one on the handball courts, and one in the weight room. At the end of each twenty minutes the groups rotate.

With this winter program, the excellent coaching staff, and the new enthusiasm expressed by the ball players, the UVM Catamounts will make their presence felt in the Yankee Conference next fall.

Despite claims that we could never do it, UVM has won for five straight weeks on General Electric's "College Bowl" television program. In a rousing battle of wits that went right down to the wire, the Vermont four beat the team from Taxidermy Tech., 15 to -5.

In its first four matches UVM beat Pippipikkkick University, 20 to -5; Hadjecanadol College, -5 to -15; Pavlov Institute, 5 to 0; and a good team from the University of Millinery Polytechnics, 0 to -35.

The four UVM students who performed so brilliantly were G. Noeval, Heernoe Val, S. Peekno Eyvol, and Mr. Rotingole Pelican, the team captain. Serving as coach for the team was Professor of Tax Dodging Clyde Finque.

At first it was feared that if UVM were to go on the program the whole image of the college would be destroyed, and that all the gain derived from our appearance on the program would be educational, so that G.E. would derive no commercial benefit from our appearance. "It is our belief," said President John T. Fey, "that if value is given (UVM's profit by appearing on television), value must also be received (G.E. should derive some profit by UVM appearing). After all, we would hate to exploit an American corporation simply for the purposes of education."

It was also feared that UVM would get, from appearing on College Bowl, a reputation as a staid, puritanical school where it was all work and no play, which makes Clyde a nowhere cat. In order to dispel this image, Mr. Pelican made an eloquent speech when introducing the school to the audience:

"Founded in 1791, the University of Vermont has many things to be proud of in its past, its present, and its bright future. For instance, in 1893 the oldest Winter Carnival in the nation was founded; Kake Walk. This is the big event of the year, and fraternities and sororities work day and night to prepare for it, studies notwithstanding. By the time the big weekend rolls around everyone is so excited that classes are completely forgotten.

"Here is our beautiful new gymnasium and field house. It houses all of our many athletic teams, none of which ever win many games. Then there is our beautiful library, which the students good-naturedly turned into a shambles almost as soon as it opened. Here is the new student center coffee shop, where most of the students spend their every waking hour; it is soon to be converted into a night club, complete with floor shows.

"However, liquor will not be served there. Alcohol is forbidden on the Vermont campus. Nonetheless, our fraternities (16 of them) have, through the years, built up one of the largest, most efficient, and most lucrative college bootlegging operations in the country.

"So you see, with all this, UVM has something for everybody. It is a truly fine institution of higher learning. And the Prexy drives a black Corvette, hey."

Now, with the College Bowl cup permanently in Vermont's possession, QINAO eul can say "Team, we salute you, and to everyone, Bottoms Up!"

East Hall Besieged ROTC Repels Angry Horde

Though most UVM students don't know it, a small war was waged right on our own campus. True, it took all of 16 minutes to fight, but it was a war nonetheless.

On Tuesday, February 30, the freshman class, or the male portion of it, with placards flying, singing folk songs and songs of social protest, brandishing their weapons (clubs, banners and flagpoles, slats ripped from East Hall, and paper airplanes), invaded the portals of East Hall en masse in an attempt to capture that bit of enemy-held territory. However, the ROTC department had been warned in advance and were laying in wait for the Freshman Men's Expeditionary Force. After a hard fought battle of 16 minutes duration, the FMEF withdrew, a defeated band of troops.

What follows is a short chronology of the battle and preparations:

0700: 30 Feb.; Military Science dept. is warned of pending assault by anonymous phone call, mobilize for action.

0735: M-1 rifles are distributed to all advanced cadets; defense of East Hall is planned, named Operation Underlord.

0745: Plans completed, cadets disembark to East Hall.

0750: Cadets arrive at objective, take up battle stations.

0800: Cadets realize that M-1's have no firing pins, disorganization, confusion, set in.

0805: Half of the Cadets are dispatched to Old Gym to return M-1's, get large display mock-ups which do have firing pins.

0810: Frosh attack from east, surprising cadets, confusion sets in.

0812: Cadets use makeshift weapons to fight off FMEF, tear splinters from walls of East Hall, use in slingshots, try to beat FMEF off by hitting them with ROTC hats, make hands into classical shapes of pistol and say "Bang! Bang! You're dead; I got you."

0815: FMEF and Cadets begin arguing about whether Cadets hit Frosh with "pistols," Frosh begin shooting back.

0819: Cadets begin to come back to East Hall from Gym, carrying few large working models of Army weapons; FMEF thinks it is enveloped from south with bazookas, called for help.

0821: Frosh kept in reserve in Waterman Dining Hall get into troop carrier, are driven around from Prospect Street to parking lot behind Science Hall, Frosh prepare to unload when driver realizes that he is in a "Yellow Permit Only" area and is parking illegally, pulls out of lot and begins to go around to lot in front of Frosh Dorms.

0823: Arrives in lot, only to discover Burns men giving out tickets to Frosh cars since Buildings and Grounds made that lot "Yellow" also as emergency measure.

0824: Frosh park and join battle anyway, but main force is in rout.

0826: Frosh surrender, give up their placards as token of defeat, ROTC department re-joices. Battle officially over.

After the smoke had cleared, the Military Science claimed a great victory. A spokesman for the Cadets, Alfred E. (Old Four-Star) Newman, said that it was a great strategic and tactical victory for his comrades-in-arms. "Why, if we hadn't thought of the envelopment, we would have been outnumbered. But then, we're better fighters than the FMEF, so we would have won anyway. And we're patriotic, too. With these boys as your future Army officers, you can be sure the country is in good hands," he said.

However, in a rebuttal statement, the spokesman for the FMEF (whose name is being kept secret until his war-crimes and Rebellion Against The Glorious State court martial comes up) had a different story. "Bah!" he said, "It was a comedy of errors. They didn't win; we lost. Why, if they had as many brains as they made mistakes they'd be geniuses. Envelopment indeed; they were lucky that they all didn't get their thumbs jammed in the bolts of the rifles. And the restricted parking! I tell you we're being discriminated against."

In a gesture of friendship and magnanimity, the ROTC department made the special announcement that all drills will be canceled for all those Cadets who aided in the defense of East Hall in any way. In order to make up for those that are excused, all freshman men have to take two drills next week.

"We think that we're being quite generous," said the ROTC department.

"Bah! Humbug!" said the Frosh spokesman.

We, the valiant ROTC heroes, rest after a hard a battle. (Credit: Bushy Andy, S.P.S.)

Second Car Smash Held Fey Donates Corvette

Gov. Hoff To Take First Crack

The Car!!

The second Car Smash of the year at UVM will be held today, April Fools Day, 1963, on the University Green. The car to be smashed was donated by Vermont's youthful and progressive president, John T. Fey.

The student body will have a chance to unleash its pent-up emotions today by taking a whack at Dr. Fey's sleek black Sting Ray Corvette.

Gov. Philip H. Hoff will be on hand to wield the first blow. Gov. Hoff volunteered his services after being asked by a DINAD reporter outside the State House in Montpelier. Hoff was leaving a meeting that decided the amount of state aid the University was to receive from the Hoff administration when he was approached by Sam Scoop, star reporter.

Sam reported that the Honorable Gov. Hoff was smiling and pounding his fist when he agreed to take the first swing.

A large crowd is expected.

Fey On TV To Do Ad For Crest

Initiates 'Winning Smile' Series

University of Vermont President John T. Fey has been elected by the makers of Crest toothpaste to initiate a new advertizing campaign. The theme of the ads will be "The WINNING Smile."

Crest, you will recall, is the toothpaste that has a statement on the box saying that if you brush your teeth often enough, and go to the dentist often enough, you will not get cavities if you use Crest. (That courtesy of the American Dental Association.)

In kicking off the new campaign, James (Toothy) Billboard, manager of the new campaign, said that Crest "wants masculine, dynamic men who have the image of warmth, vitality, sincerity and feeling in their smiles. Crest wants the WINNING Smile!"

President Fey was chosen because he apparently fits all the categories, a fact to which any UVM student can attest.

The advertisements will begin in May, and run through June and into July, at which time another Vermonter, former Governor F. Ray Keyser, Jr., will phase President Fey out.

Also set for these ads are Loretta Young, Nelson Rockefeller, Teddy Roosevelt (his estate has given permission to use the picture and name of Grinnin' Ted), and Bert Parks.

Waterman Becomes Garage Building Now Huge Parking Lot Lot "Off Limits" For Students

Everybody, by now, has heard of Parkinson's Law, even if they don't know what the law is. But it is not so well known that Parkinson's Law is now three laws. The Third Law states that "Expansion means complexity, and complexity, decay."

A corollary of the Third Law (called the DINAD rule) maintains that "For every seven students in a modern university, there must be one Professor, one and one half Administrators, three Secretaries, two Clerks, two Administrative Underlings, and one Policeman. In addition, there is a set number of people that any university has, generally doing peripheral things like running schools for faculty children. These number around 300."

Thus, with approximately 3500 students at UVM, it will be seen that Vermont has 500 Professors, 750 Administrators, 1500 Secretaries, 1000 Clerks, 1000 Administrative Underlings, and 500 Policemen. Also, there are 300 Peripheral Beings, making a total of 5550 employees at the college.

With all these people running around, almost all of whom have cars, something had to be done, and it was. Waterman building has been expanded to cover the Waterman Parking Lot, another story has been added, and the whole thing turned into a huge garage.

The building now has five stories, including the basement. The basement has been kept as a faculty-administration, coffee shop, an employee lounge, and a private garage for the cars of the President and Deans. The first, second, third and fourth floors are all devoted to parking space for the rest of the employees. The new roof of the building has been made into a small race track so that anyone wishing to practice for Indianapolis or Daytona can have a convenient place to do so. The sub-basement remains the property of the Maintenance Department, which numbers 69 employees for the garage alone.

The new parking lot will hold 4000 automobiles. It does not look that big, but a new arrangement of stacking cars (putting them in "upper," "middle" and "lower" "berths") allows almost three times as many cars per floor as would otherwise be the case.

The university feels that the new facility is an important step forward in the educational process at UVM. An unidentified administration press release said that the accommodations are going to make Vermont one of the most attractive institutions in the country. There will be a problem of what to do about classroom space, but the administration expects to solve that by eliminating student parking areas and building three more East Halls on those sites.

Says Billboard, "We expect sales to start booming. This should be one of our greatest campaigns yet. Why, next thing you know we'll be selling the people of the United States a President this way," he said lyrically.

UVM Self-Study

Dr. Norman Slamecka

by Norman J. Slamecka

With a view toward meeting the current financial goals of the University, and averting any financial crises in future years, we submit the following long-range program, with the advice that it be implemented as soon as possible. If these points are followed, UVM will be always in the black, in more ways than one.

I. The Faculty. We regard the faculty as a family important if not indispensable part of the University setting, so long as it does not monopolize the resources or interfere unduly with the primary aims of the institution. The main responsibility of a faculty member is to achieve a maximum of student contact-hours, consistent with his committee assignments. To this end, we feel that there should be a sharp (if not complete) reduction in so-called "research" and "scholarly" activities such as experimentation, writing of books and papers, participation in conventions, and keeping abreast of the literature. Such luxuries can no longer be tolerated in today's demanding world. We recommend as follows:

A. Install a system whereby each faculty member punches a time-clock upon arrival at his office. Tardiness will result in docking of pay, commensurate with the number of minutes involved.

B. The teaching load should be 30 hours weekly, leaving at least 20 hours for committee meetings and the filling out of administrative forms.

C. Salaries should be reduced to a more reasonable level. It is recommended that the University salary schedule be set just below that of the average southern teachers college.

D. Instead of giving large salary raises, only token raises should be granted, but these should be accompanied by more frequent promotions. The number of academic ranks should be increased to at least 12. Suggested titles for these are: 1. Journeyman Instructor, 2. Assistant Instructor, 3. Super Instructor, 4. Assistant Assistant Professor, 5. Assistant Professor, 6. Assistant Associate Professor, 7. Associate Professor, 8. Associate Professor Extraordinary, 9. Assistant Full Professor, 10. Associate Full Professor, 11. Professor Extraordinary, and, the highest rank of all, 12. Junior Administrator Professor.

E. As a natural consequence of steps C and D above, the competence of the staff will decline steadily until it reaches a level of mediocrity, or a bit lower. This will be accompanied by the desirable by-product of complete employee turnover stability, since no faculty member would ever be hired by any other institution (except possibly a few southern teachers colleges), and could no longer badger the administrators with threats of departure. Replacement of deceased faculty members would be guided by the following selection criteria: 1. applicant must not have a Ph.D. degree, and preferably not even a Master's degree; 2. he must not have ranked in the upper 25% of his graduating class; 3. preference will be given to those who did not graduate from certain other universities of high caliber. A list of such schools should be in the possession of the Dean of Personnel.

F. In order to prevent accidental entrenchment into the faculty of any woolly-minded individualist who may become interested in scholarly research, (thereby causing untold additional costs), there should be no tenure appointments, but only yearly appointments.

G. We must venerate and guard jealously the concept of full academic freedom for all staff members. No one, therefore, should be allowed to jeopardize these precious freedoms by attempting to exercise them in any way. This will conserve energies that would otherwise be diverted into time-wasting debates about petty matters.

H. Since it is well-known that major college football is a profitable enterprise, we should recruit the finest football coaching staff in the country by offering salaries so high that no other school could possibly match them. Games should be scheduled with such teams as Alabama, Texas, Ohio State, etc.

I. Since it is also well known that research grants are a profitable enterprise, we should retain one very brilliant and very creative person to work full-time writing research proposals. Once the grants are obtained they can easily be renewed over and over, regardless of whether any actual research has been carried out. Thus, our research revenues (laughingly referred to as "overhead"), should increase steadily.

II. Administration and Allied Matters. We feel that the backbone of any well-managed university is a sound administrative staff. There can be no effective management without sufficient administrators and secretaries. There has been too much concern over student-faculty ratios, and not enough concern with the really important question of administrator-faculty ratios. We recommend as follows:

A. More deanships should be invented. To name but a few, there should be a Dean of Personnel, a Dean of Maintenance, a Dean of the Calendar, a Dean of Kake Walk, and a Dean of Deans. Further, each dean should have an Assistant Dean, an Assistant to the Dean, and a Liaison Dean (the last to arrange meetings with other deans). For each of these, of course, there should be a secretarial staff to type and file memos, replies to memos, etc.

B. All administrative secretaries should have electric typewriters. All old mechanical typewriters should be passed on to faculty secretaries.

C. The campus police force should be enlarged and put on a self-sustaining commission basis. Their pay would come out of stiff fines levied for such offences as, having no yellow sticker, smoking in the classroom, indecent exposure, etc.

III. The Plant. We take the position that a well utilized campus is a sine qua non for a successful university. It should be recognized that UVM has already gone a long way toward achieving an architecturally integrated physical plant (in the beautiful Neo-Vulgar style). However, we have these further suggestions:

A. All the books in Bailey Library should be moved back into the old Billings Library, possibly by initiating a "Bailey-to-Billings" day, to save moving costs. The name of Bailey Library should then be changed to Bailey Student Center. Thereby, at one stroke, we would have the finest student center in the world!

The former library staff would be retained, but would serve as recreational advisors, waiters, and student adjustment counselors.

B. The useless campus green should be cleared of all trees, given a coat of blacktop, and used as a much-needed student parking lot, with meters.

C. Waterman Building should become exclusively an administration building. The few academic departments yet lingering in Waterman should be moved to East Hall, where they would be closer to the library.

D. First priority for new construction should be given to a modern football stadium with a capacity of 150,000 spectators. To maximize profits from ticket sales, the stadium should not be built on campus, but instead near a large population center such as New York City. It would pay for itself within three years, and profits from succeeding years would go toward administrators' cost-of-living bonuses.

E. In order to use the plant fully, the University should operate on a double trimester system. A double trimester is simply two trimesters in session simultaneously, one of them in the daytime, the other at night. It would be possible for a student to attend full time and graduate within 16 months, thus insuring a healthy turnover rate for the University. Naturally, each faculty member would be expected to work only two-thirds of the calendar year, that is, only 4 trimesters per year.

IV. Student Fees, Scholarships, and Requirements. No university is solvent without a student body. Today we are fortunate in that the increasing population pressure will assure us a practically unlimited supply of applicants, regardless of how low our academic competence becomes, or how high our tuition rates soar. In accord with these facts we suggest the following:

A. Raise the tuition even higher, to such a level that out-of-state students would not only pay for themselves but would also defray the entire costs of all in-state students, as well as the maintenance costs of the new gym. Such a tuition level would insure that the majority of our student body would also be rich, as well as stupid.

B. Tuition profits should not be limited by outmoded residence requirements. If any out-of-state student has paid his full tuition and cannot be accommodated on campus, he will do his course work by correspondence.

C. The Honors requirements should be revised. A student will graduate "cum laude" if he agrees to contribute 6% of all his future earnings to the University, payable monthly by paycheck deduction. He will graduate "summa cum laude" if he contributes 10%.

D. Scholarships should be increased sharply to aid the deserving student. That is, football scholarships, of course, since they are the only kind that would bring any real prestige and profit to the University.

E. Any student whose graduation is in doubt because of academic reasons will be examined by a committee from the Brandon Training School. Only if he is found acceptable as a patient at Brandon will he fail to graduate. This latter procedure should ease the annoying "drop-out" problem that has lost us so many promising athletes and potential wealthy alumni in past years.

Lane Series To Feature Hague Philharmonic

William Van Otterloo, Conductor of The Hague Philharmonic.

by Lois Allison

The Hague Philharmonic, one of the world's truly great musical organizations, will perform on Wednesday, April 17, at Memorial Auditorium as the final season offering of the Blue Lane Series.

Under the expert direction of Willhem van Otterloo, the orchestra will present the Elektra Suite by Diepenbrock, the Symphony in D Major, K. 385, by Mozart and the Symphony No. 4 in E minor, Opus 98 by Brahms. The orchestra is making its American debut during the 1962-63 season. Throughout its European career, the extraordinary freshness and enthusiasm of the orchestra has won the acclaim of many capitals.

Serving as conductor of the Hague is the able and gifted Mr. van Otterloo, veteran of more than a 100 concerts with the orchestra. Backed by a distinguished career as assistant conductor, and later conductor of the Symphony Orchestra of Utrecht, Mr. van Otterloo has gained international recognition for the Hague for the highest standards of performance. He has earned the highest official decorations from the governments of the Netherlands, Denmark, France and Austria.

Out of the 150 performance presented annually by the Hague, Mr. van Otterloo is on the podium for about 90. In his absence, the orchestra has been led by most of the world's most distinguished conductors -- Arturo Toscanini, Richard Strauss, Igor Stravinsky, Leopold Stokowski, Leonard Bernstein and Charles Munch, to name a few.

Founded in 1904 by Dr. Henri Viotta, the Hague Philharmonic has amassed an extraordinary record of 7,000 concerts under 260 conductors in the past 58 years. The orchestra is subsidized by the government as well as by the municipality of the Hague, and it is making its current tour under the gracious patronage of her Majesty Queen Juliana of the Netherlands.

Honors Applications Are Now Being Accepted

The University of Vermont established its present Honors Program in the College of Arts and Sciences in 1920. The Honors Program for Juniors and Seniors in Arts and Sciences and Education and Nursing is designed for the superior students who wish to pursue special projects and independent study under the direction of the department of their own choice.

Any student who possesses intellectual curiosity and an average of 85 or above the previous year, may enter a program of reading, research or creation. This is undertaken without the restriction of the classroom during his junior and/or senior years. If a student is eligible to pursue such a project he may obtain an application from his dean before the beginning of the semester in which the Honors are to be taken, and then obtain permission from the chairman of the department in which Honors are sought.

Dr. Littleton Long, Associate Professor of English and chairman of the Honors Program Committee in Arts and Sciences, states, "There is so much pleasure in seeing the eagerness of a student as he tries something new, fresh, and different. It is exciting for the faculty member to give time and guidance to the exceptional student, for, very likely, the teacher is reminded of his own undergraduate days when he, too, was receiving similar guidance."

All of the Sophomores and Juniors who made Dean's List for the fall term 1962-1963, will be invited to attend a dessert to discuss the Honors Program with their professors and stu-

Gov. Hoff Explains State View On Tuition Raise

Primary & Secondary Schools To Get Priority

by Betty Bergman

STOP once again became the cry of the UVM student body as they "welcomed" Governor Philip H. Hoff to Billings Center on Monday afternoon, April 1. Gov. Hoff faced a crowd of some 300 students who were protesting a suggested further raise in tuition.

Cries of "1500 is too damn much," greeted the governor upon his half-hour late arrival. The protest was spurred by a flyer sent around campus by the specially formed "United Student Committee to Keep Tuition Down."

Speaking on the problems of the State of Vermont, Hoff outlined the "serious" economic situation of the state. Although Vermont has one of the highest per capita income taxes of any of the states he explained that "we have simply run out of money."

Hoff emphasized the point that he ran and was elected on a platform that called for increased state aid to education. However, he stated that a priority list must be established. He rated the elementary and secondary schools as being higher on this list than the University of Vermont. "During my campaign, I made it abundantly clear that the University would have to wait,"

If the University needs more money then it is obviously the students who will have to absorb the additional costs. Hoff then proposed that a tuition hike be instituted in the fall of 1963. He suggested that in-state tuition be increased by $100 and out-of-state by $200. This statement was in opposition to President Fey's proposal of a tuition increase of $300 for out-of-staters to be initiated in September of 1964.

During a question and answer period, following his talk, Hoff stated that he was not in favor of a sales tax to raise additional revenue for the state. He said that it is the last major untapped source for revenue.

In reply to a question, that won't Vermont price itself out of the education market, the governor replied that as of 1965 the post-war crop of babies will be upon us, thus further increasing the number of students going to college.

He did not feel that a substantial number of students would transfer due to a raise in tuition, nor did he feel that any appreciable number of faculty members will leave to receive higher paying positions at other schools.

On the question of federal aid, he said that the State of Vermont is receiving as much as it can, and that there is no hope for an increase in this area in the near future. He assured the group that if any additional funds were made available that the University would receive its share.

"We cannot have everything in this world," he told the students. "If you get all you wish, there are those in this state that will have to do without."

"What you're saying is that we can and must come first and the devil with the rest!"

Paye To Head New SA Slate

by Roberta Levy

On Wednesday, March 27, students could be seen streaming into the crowded voting headquarters in Waterman, Billings, Marsh, and Simpson, in order to cast their ballots for the new S.A. officers:

RICHARD PAYE, new S.A. President, is very enthusiastic about the self-evaluation program that S.A. will conduct. S.A. will examine its activities and aims in order to better the Student Association and the student body as a whole. Dick feels that "S.A. represents a potential which has not been fully realized in the past. S.A. is not simply a treasury for the student body. We have the capability of being an active and effective student government. The purpose of our self-evaluation will be to determine how we can perform our governmental functions more effectively."

HARVEY TAUBER will serve as First Vice-President and JANICE COLE as Second Vice-President. Harvey is on the governing board of Billings Student Center. He, and those closely associated with Billings, know that much of S.A.'s funds will go to Billings. Since the University's funds are mostly allotted for the maintenance of Billings the primary source of S.A. funds - the $7.50 S.A. fee per term - is spent on Billings. This fee is actually being put to use to benefit the student body in the long run, Billings is utilized by the students and is a Student Center for the students. As a result, other clubs and organizations who need money will have to have their allotments cut down to a minimum.

UVM Bids Farewell To S.A. Officers Chervin And Singer

by Betty Fuchs

Two outgoing Student Association officers will be leaving both their offices and UVM this spring. Paul Chervin, President, and Marty Singer, First Vice-President, are both members of the Class of '63.

Paul, active throughout his four years at UVM, served as president of Chittenden fourth in his freshman year. He was a member of the Outing Club and served on the Hillel executive board. Paul's sophomore year saw him elected class president and president of Gold Key, the sophomore men's honorary society. In his junior year Paul belonged to Key and Serpent, the junior men's honorary. Besides serving as S.A.

President his senior year, Paul was a member of the senior men's honorary, Boulder Society.

After his graduation from the College of Arts and Sciences, Paul and his fiancée, Sarah Alpert, '65, are planning to be married June 26. They will spend the summer at Wood's Hole on Cape Cod, Massachusetts, where Paul will be working at the Marine Biological Laboratory. In September Paul will enter medical school at Duke University.

Marty Singer, a brother-in-Phi Sigma Delta, served as representative of his freshman class to the S.A. Council, where he was chairman of the Elections Committee. As representative of his sophomore class, he again held the office of chairman of the Elections Committee. He served on the Religious Activities Committee, and on the committee for remodeling the Student Lounge, which eventually led to the opening of Billings Student Center.

As an S.A. representative in his junior year, Marty served as National Student Association coordinator. This year he was again N.S.A. co-ordinator for UVM, a member of the temporary governing board of the Student Center, S.A. First Vice-President, and a member of the University Players.

An Economics major, Marty plans to enter the Army in October as a Second Lieutenant. After his military service, Marty hopes to go into television or the legitimate theater as a director.

The officers of S.A., who serve for one year beginning April 15, serve as a liaison between the administration and the student body. Each week they meet with a different member of the faculty to bring to light student problems. Reports of N.S.A. conferences attended by Paul and Marty are on file in the S.A. office and are available to any interested student.

Paul, presently in the hospital, was unavailable for comment, but would undoubtedly agree with Marty that serving on S.A. was one of the most worthwhile experiences of his college life. Holding an office makes one realize that his responsibility extends beyond the individual to the student body and the administration.

Many of them admire our shirts so much they sell them under their own names. High praise indeed, and we should like to reciprocate by advertising their (our) shirts. But it's hard to know just where to start. Obviously we can't say things like "None Genuine Without This Label" when they are all quite genuine, you know. And it would be silly to say "Try An Eagle Shirt Today!" when it is likely you already have a draw-erful; even though you didn't know it until just this minute. So all we can suggest is that you send in for your Eagle label. Write Eagle Shirtmakers, Quakertown, Pennsylvania; Attention Miss Afflerbach.

WSGA Conference In April

On the weekend of April 19, the University of Vermont Women's Student Government Association will be host for the annual New England Women's Student Government Conference. There will be four student delegates and one Dean of Women from each of the following schools: Bates, Middlebury, Jackson, Colby and the Universities of Connecticut, Maine, New Hampshire, Massachusetts and Rhode Island. The girls will stay in the women's residence halls and their Deans at the Cupola Motel.

After registration on Friday from 1:00-6:00 the conference members will be entertained at a buffet in Simpson dining hall. Dr. Ester Lloyd-Jones, head of the Guidance Department at Columbia Teachers College, will be the guest speaker. Saturday's agenda entails panel discussions on the "Purpose, Potentialities and Power of Women's Student Government." There will also be a guided tour of the campus Saturday morning and a Dean-Student panel Saturday afternoon in which questions that have arisen during the previous discussions can be clarified. President Fey will be the guest speaker at the banquet Saturday evening, which will be held in the faculty dining room in the Waterman Building.

The host committee is looking forward to a successful and profitable conference.

Angola Subject Of Recent SCOPE Program

by Ira D. Feirstein

"Angola: Journey To War" was the title of an NBC White Paper which was featured in the Thursday evening, March 27, SCOPE program on Angola. Following the film, which covered the 1961 revolt in the Portuguese colony in Africa, the Angolan situation was discussed by two foreign students presently at St. Michael's College.

A Portuguese student, Antonio Amaro Cirurgiao, defended his country's stand on Angola. Cirurgiao, a native of Lisbon and Estoril, Portugal, is at St. Michael's taking a special course in English which will prepare him to enter Boston College in September. Presenting the Pan-African viewpoint on the Angolan situation was Wenceslaus Kilama from Bukoba, Tanganyika. Kilama has been a student at St. Michael's for 1 1/2 years.

"Angola: Journey To War" was the work of two NBC correspondents, Robert McCormack and Robert Young. Young actually lived with the Angolan rebels and most of the film dealt with what he saw on an extended trip into Angola from the Congo with them. The film was opened with background scenes which helped explain the situation at the time. Shots of Luanda, the capital of Angola, which itself is some thirteen times the size of Portugal, showed it to be one of the most beautiful and modern cities in Africa. Pictures of Portuguese and Africans living together appeared to uphold Portugal's claim of near perfect race relations in Angola. Not shown, but commented on, were the extremely low living standards, the fantastic illiteracy (99%) and the system of forced contract labor which existed up until last year.

When the rebellion broke out in 1961, Portugal refused to admit an investigation committee of the U.N. General Assembly. Although other African countries strongly protested, Portugal insisted that the trouble was caused by outsiders and Communists while the native population remained loyal to Portugal, and that the matter was an internal problem of Portugal and of no concern to the U.N. The film appeared to show otherwise; during an interview with Holden Roberto, the leader of the Angolans, he declared that "We do not think that the Communists are the only ones who want freedom for the people".

The rest of the White Paper was made up of films made by Young on his journey with the rebels. Some of the scenes were truly frightening and horrible -- town after town which had been either bulldozed over or destroyed by napalm bombs as reprisals by the Portuguese; the wretched condition of the half-clothed, poorly armed, and wounded and sick rebels; mass graves of 19 Angolans murdered by Portuguese; an interview with two men who had been shot in a similar manner, through their heads, left for dead, and survived (one was totally blind and the other horribly scarred where the bullet passed through his face); pictures of the face of an Angolan who had been beaten with a special interrogative device of the Portuguese (the audience's reaction to this picture was both vocal and sickened in tone); an interview with an Angolan man who spoke of the forced contract labor system, which included both women and children and told of the death of his own eight year-old son of a coffee plantation. The tone of the NBC White Paper clearly condemned the Portuguese actions in Angola.

The discussion period opened with a brief resume, by Dr. Wolfe Schmokel of the Department of History, of the happenings in Angola since the film was made. At present Angola has been pacified by the Portuguese, except for an area four times the size of Vermont, where the rebels are still extremely active.

In his opening remarks, Cirurgiao called the NBC White Paper "the most perfidious document ever made against Portugal." He tore into the credibility of the film and did come up with a few interesting facts (one of the deformed Angolans, he claimed, was a leper). He also attacked Robert Young and pointed out that he has since been dismissed by NBC. He denied that there has ever been a nationalist revolution in Angola and attempted to prove the Communists' role in the rebellion. He pointed out the fact that Angola is an integral part of Portugal and therefore the situation is no business of the U.N. He called the U.N. "color-sick" and compared the Portuguese action to that of Texans who defended themselves against the Comanche Indians in the 1860's and 1870's.

Cirurgiao read a photostat of a letter written and signed by Holden Roberto which called for Angolan aid to Patrice Lumumba (the late Congolese Premier) and presented some very strong pro-Communist sentiments. The letter closed with "First Lumumba and then us. Long live Communism." He also read selections from articles from Catholic View and Reader's Digest which played up rebel atrocities in Angola and Communist support (reports of Russian and Czech arms going to the rebels).

Cirurgiao finished by praising the gifts the Portuguese have brought to Angola -- peace from tribal wars which had plagued the area, order, and civilization. He also praised the multi-racial society in Portuguese Angola.

Wenceslaus Kilama opened his remarks by agreeing that the Portuguese have brought many benefits to Angola, but he pointed out that the Portuguese have been in Angola for five centuries and when what they have accomplished is compared to what the British and French accomplished in their African colonies in one century, it is evident that the Portuguese have mercilessly exploited Angola all these years. He issued a general attack against colonialism and the right of one nation to rule over another.

Kilama said that the Portuguese destroyed all existing institutions in Angola when they arrived. He pointed out that the people of northern Angola are closely related to the people of the Congo but were separated from their brethren by the Imperialists. Presently, all administrators are brought to Angola from European Portugal. All aspects of social welfare are handled by private organizations. Literacy is a shocking 1%. Forced contract labor which included men, women and children, entirely destroyed Angolan family life. The incorporation of Angola as an integral

The View From Here

The KW Stereotype

Two weeks ago Miss Sandra Clark wrote a letter that raised a small storm. In her letter she condemned blackface, the old Southern Negro slang, and the lines along which Kake Walk seems to be running as being harmful to the Negro.

All sorts of indignant letters were written, some of which were published last week, the rest appearing today. The first letters were all opposed to Miss Clark's stand; now the campus liberals have started to write and defend Miss Clark.

It is true that you have to admire the courage of Miss Clark for writing a letter that was bound to win her much abuse. But, like so many of the other points raised by the letter-writers, it is irrelevant.

The point is made, this week, that Kake Walk is not meant to be anything, insult or compliment, to anybody, white, Negro or otherwise. Another point is made this week; that it is really all right for a Negro to make fun of a Negro, or for a Jew to satirize or caricature a Jew, but that it is an insult for an outsider to do it. These two points are actually the nub of the whole question.

Too many people these days, both Negro and white, are becoming much too self-conscious and sensitive. It has gotten to the point where, if Wilt Chamberlain gets a rebound, or Willie Mays hits a home run, and somebody boos, then that somebody is anti-Negro, or if someone disagrees publicly with Supreme Court Justice Arthur Goldberg, then the someone is, therefore, anti-semitic. This is obviously absurd.

It is from this self-consciousness that the "insider" philosophy arises. To say that only a Negro can lampoon, or even characterize in some way, a Negro, is ridiculous. If that is true, Dick Gregory is hardly in a position to make fun of white institutions. But he does, and the only complaints are from confessed and recognized bigots.

As long as a person is not malicious about his portrayal of satire, there can be little harm in the mere act of such a thing as Kake Walk. If someone wants to take offense at it (there is always someone who is offended) it is his undoubted right to do so, even though taking offense may be senseless. Kake Walk is not an insult to anyone, or at least it is not intended to be. It is not, certainly, much of a monument to what the Negro has contributed to our culture, but it is not an insult either.

Perhaps it does tend to prolong a stereotype of sorts, but getting rid of Kake Walk will not get rid of any stereotype, nor will it lessen it. Some people think that if various tangible evidences of stereotypes are eliminated the stereotypes themselves will disappear. However, people will think in types whether we have Kake Walk or not. Indeed, the tendency to think in stereotypes—to put everything into a neat category—is so strong that if one type is destroyed another soon takes its place. People cannot understand, or do not want to wrestle with, abstractions, and stereotypes give them something concrete to deal with. It makes life very much simpler.

It is not the stereotypes that are doing the harm, since these are the products of men's minds, and not, to any large extent, the shapers of the mind. There are problems to be dealt with, but the stereotype (if any) present in Kake Walk is not one of them. No problem is ever solved by attacking a symptom or effect, but by attacking the cause. If Kake Walk perpetuates a stereotype, it is because men think in types, and it is the mind of man that must be fought with, not its products.

Letters To The Editor

Hoff

To The Editor:

Last night Governor Hoff said a few things which some students did not appreciate. But he also made sense to many other students. I am one of the latter. This is not to say that I cherish the idea of increased tuition. But I believe I now have a more realistic attitude after listening to the governor's speech.

Some out-of-staters were obviously irked with the governor's proposed program of increased aid to Vermont elementary and secondary education. The following questions are aimed at these students. I invite thoughtful and serious answers from these students.

1. To those who say "why not institute higher taxes in Vermont (sales tax, room and meals tax, property tax, etc.) to help pay UVM's ever increasing cost? This would eliminate the need for higher tuitions." I ask you this: Why should Vermonters help pay to educate out of state students? Don't you think they have enough of a burden educating "their own"?

2. How many out of staters would actually drop out of school because you could not raise another $200??

3. How many of you work part time to help pay for your own education?

4. To those who say "UVM's tuition is almost as high as the big Ivy league schools. For $1500 (approx.) I could go to Harvard." Why don't you go to Harvard?? Is it because you cannot get accepted there? Better yet, why don't you go to the state university in your own state? Wouldn't it be much cheaper? Your parents as taxpayers, are supporting your own state schools. Why don't you take advantage of this?

5. Suppose I, as a Vermonter, were to enroll in the U. of Conn., N.Y., Me., etc. Your parents write to you at UVM and tell you that their taxes are going up in order to support the university and avoid the necessity of raising the out of state tuition. Would you think this is fair? Do you think your parents should have to pay to help educate a Vermonter?

6. Do you feel that elementary and secondary school children in this state (as well as their teachers) should suffer in order that your tuition should not be raised? Do not forget that this is the University of Vermont—not the University of "out-of-staters."

John L. Bisson
'63 - A Vermonter

P.S. To the person with the expensive black worsted suit who told Governor Hoff after his speech "I, for one, am transferring because I cannot afford another $200." You are a hypocrite. You are the type of person who would merely write home to your father to send a silver platter. Or, if he turned you down and you became really desperate, you could put a $200 mortgage on your impala.

Any comment????????

Money!

To The Editor:

It is with great interest indeed that I have read your front page editorial regarding the proposed tuition raise. It seems a vital enough issue to warrant much introspective thought both pro and con. Allow me, then, to project a couple of thoughts for you and your staff to mull around.

If, indeed, the tuition were raised, what effect might it have upon this University? Since my return to the University of Vermont, I have been rather disgusted by the attitude of some of my fellow students. During the first class meetings, people have been more interested, it seems, in discovering the number of class cuts allowed, and how easy the professor is, than what the scope of the course is, what text is used and if there will be ample opportunity to learn and understand in the short time which comprises a semester. What effect will an extra $100-$200 have on these people, who with remarks aimed at detracting the professor from the subject matter or class cuts, virtually throw away $8.00 for each cut and that amount multiplied by each student in the class for every period of distraction?

Then there is the student who damns UVM for not being Harvard. (Tuition: $1,520). Later, he admits that he tried Harvard but couldn't get admitted. He WAS admitted, however, to UVM. Will he continue on at UVM, transfer to Harvard, or drop out of school because he lacks the money and STILL IS NOT STUDENT ENOUGH TO EVEN GET A LOAN?

And what of the professor, these dedicated people who share their lives with us? Will the University be able to afford to retain those brilliant ones when their fame, along with their family, grows and simple economics force them to accept the enticing offers from other schools? Will they be forced to replace them with those who like the student who wants not to learn but the degree, who want not to teach but to be sheltered from the manual labor of the hard, cruel world? The University of Vermont is supposed to be a place of "higher education." Nowadays it seems this could be defined as a place to receive degrees.

Will more tuition and less State funds solve the situation? Can the University effectively use the monies it now receives? How much more can it expand? Will it be a battle ground for the political parties of the state, or for the crusades of learning?

Blackface

To The Editor:

I would like to reply to the letter which regards Kake Walk as a discrimination against the Negro. This year I got my first taste of Kake Walk, but I have heard it enthusiastically described many times by my parents, both graduates of UVM. I caught "Kake Walk fever" Friday night when I went to the walking and was fortunate enough to return again on Saturday night. Not once while I was watching those sixteen pairs of walkers did I think of their black faces. The actions and comments of the audience did not center around the painted faces nor the exaggerated eyes and mouth, but all eyes were on the skill of the walkers themselves, and the comments were about this skill and about the wonderful spirit of Kake Walk. The black faces of the walkers have become a symbol of Kake Walk, and much of the thrill of "walkin' fo do kake" would be lost if the face paint were omitted. After all, kake walking did start with the Negro in the South, and why shouldn't the walkers represent Negroes? But that's, in truth, all the black faces are: a representation or a symbol of Kake Walk and the spirit behind it. The spelling of the words used to advertise Kake Walk implies nothing except a diction which is symbolic of Kake Walk, and the posters downstreet only make use of this symbol.

I am sure that the majority of the people who watched the walking this year regard it in much the same way as I do. The black faces, to us, are a symbol of the spirit, the thrill, the excitement, and, yes, the origin of Kake Walk.

To The Editor:

I find it impossible to accept the views concerning blackface and Kake Walk as expressed in last week's CYNIC. Perhaps those who reacted so violently to Miss Sandra Clark's letter will someday congratulate her for her courage to speak in spite of an indifferent and hostile majority.

A Third View

Miss Sandra Clark makes an immature evaluation of the "blackface" of the Kake Walkers, but the people who wrote in opposition (Mar. 28) are incorrect. To say that the "blackface" is part of the fine Negro (continued on page five) heritage is ridiculous since the "blackface" minstrel show character just recreates the stereotype of the chicken stealing, crap-shooting, carefree person that has plagued the Negro for the last century because of this image. Is it a tribute that the uneducated Negro slaves and later minstrels gave us the language typified on snow sculptures? The "blackface" image is derogatory and cannot be considered a tribute to the Negro.

However, Kake Walk does not intentionally try to degrade the Negroes. Miss Clark's problem is in not being able to see the "blackface" in the light of what it is, a part of American entertainment and humor. We have the stereotype of the Chinese laundryman, the hot-headed Irish drinker, and the Jewish money-lending "Shylock," to mention a few. These groups are not offended by these stereotypes in American entertainment, but take them in good humor. The Negro should also realize his image in this manner and not see malice intended where it is not. A problem arises though, when people take these stereotypes seriously as Miss Tisi, Miss Crampton, and Miss Parker do with their typical sentence, "The uninhabited freedom of the Negro is personified in Kake Walk." Do these people have data from psychological studies to show that the majority of Negroes are uninhabited, or did they get this idea from the "blackface" stereotype?

Ira R. Adelman, '63

K.W.

To The Editor,

It is difficult not to get emotional when confronted with the blindness in human beings toward their fellow human beings. This is in reference to the attack on Miss Clark's anti-blackface letter.

Why cannot people understand the derogatory nature of the blackface stereotype or any stereotype. Miss Clark and her supporters are attacked as being over sensitive to imagined prejudice. It appears rather, that she holds a normal human sensitivity which a great proportion of people in this world are missing.

The Kake Walk stereotype Negro is traditional, the opening walking dialogue in heavy accent with bumbling, loose mannerisms are funny? Since when is tradition sacred, not to be tampered with, and since when are representations of certain human beings to be laughed at? No matter what race, color or creed you are, can you not imagine yourself being stereotyped and laughed at by an outside-looking-in audience? Can you not see the hurt to a person, or even yourself, who is being represented in a way which is untrue and offensive? Put an image of yourself on a gymnasium floor with exaggerated mannerisms and then try to justify a stereotype such as blackface.

The examples that the three young Southern Belles used to show as the results of blackface sensitivity, illustrate the popular misunderstandings. Firstly, in the interests of literature, "Othello," the Black Moor, marries the white Desdemona. This example has absolutely no bearing on the subject. The only people offended are those opposed to interracial wedlock.

Al Jolson is of a past era. Since his time, public schools have been integrated, freedom riders have ridden, and sit-downers have sat. We cannot cling to past tradition and fond memories to justify modern situations. The contemporary actions illustrated above clearly show this truth.

"Black Orpheus" is a movie done by Negroes, behaving as any other normal, unexaggerated human beings. There is no bias in this movie. It is acted by Negroes portraying Negroes. Even if it did contain stereotypes, it would still be a people making fun of themselves. One group can make fun of itself and enjoy it, but as soon as others make fun of another group, it is the outside looking in, it is unsympathetic portrayal by those who do not know the truth behind the stereotype they mock.

Negroes can make fun of themselves, so can Italians, Irish, French, Spanish, Catholics, Jews, Vermonters and even white, Anglo-Saxon Protestants. But, as soon as someone outside, makes fun of your background, it hurts. It really hurts. Meet some affected people and talk sincerely about stereotypes of their particular groups. Find out that blackface is not petty fun and games. Try and understand that disrespect is malice being shown to your fellow human being by the use of stereotypes.

Fire Results In Damage To SNCC

GREENWOOD, Miss. (CPS) —

The Greenwood voter registration drive office of the Student Non-violent Coordinating Committee suffered severe damage from a mysterious night fire late Sunday night (March 24).

The fire came in the wake of a series of attempts on the lives of student voter registration workers in this small Mississippi town. James Travis, 20 year old SNCC field secretary, was seriously injured last week when his car was sprayed with bullets from a sub-machine gun.

Two SNCC workers, Curtis Hayes of Mississippi and Joe Loftin, a native of Greenwood, told the Collegiate Press Service that they were driving past the local voter registration office when Loftin said that he noticed a light on in the building. Hayes said that no one should be in the office at that time, and the two stopped to check the building.

When they tried to open the front door of the office, the two related, an unidentified person or persons barred the door from the inside. Rather than attempt to force their way into the building, Hayes and Loftin ran across the street to call the police. It was then that they noticed clouds of smoke appearing from the building, they said.

When the two raced back to the office to investigate the smoke, two men jumped out of a back window and ran down an alley, they related. Inside, Hayes and Loftin found large portions of the interior of the building in flames.

The two SNCC workers called for help, and managed to save most of the office records, they said. But before the fire could be subdued, a new mimeograph machine, several typewriters and most of the office equipment in the building had been destroyed.

SNCC officials in Atlanta said that Greenwood police had told them that there was "no evidence" of arson in connection with the fire. Bob Moses, SNCC project director for Mississippi, however, said the fire was an "obvious attempt to burn them (SNCC workers) out, and to intimidate Negroes for registering to vote."

Moses said that several business establishments near the Greenwood voter registration drive office had been damaged by previous fires, and charged that this constituted a campaign of terrorism.

SNCC now has 13 people working in Greenwood in an "all-out" campaign to register every Negro in the area to vote. Moses said that SNCC would not pull out any of its people as a result of the shootings and fires, but would in fact send in more people.

Moses told CPS "We are not going to be chased out. Our program will continue."

Shortly after the shooting of Travis, four SNCC workers were cut by flying glass when a speeding car pumped bullets into the SNCC personnel car, smashing all of the side windows in the automobile.

A similar bill introduced by Rep. George Meader, (R-Mich.) would ask the commission to go one step farther. Meader's bill wants the commission to determine the impact of government research programs on the conduct of science and other scholarly research in the United States.

His measure would also determine the indirect costs to colleges for research program overhead, and academic freedom and federal control of research programs.

Whether the Kake Walk festival is an insult or a tribute to the Negro is an issue that is going to come up with frequency in the years ahead. In this period of social turmoil, it is a rare institution or tradition that is not going to be scrutinized. Acting under the assumption that the older a tradition is the more it needs scrutiny, let's see what validity Kake Walk has in 1963.

On thing I think can be agreed upon, and that is that nobody is using Kake Walk as a conscious anything to the Negro. Those who dress up in the minstrel outfits and write in half-educated English under the snow sculptures can probably be absolved of the desire to punch Martin Luther King in the nose if he ever comes to the Lodge at Smuggler's Notch for a weekend of skiing. Nor could anybody in his right mind ever imagine that by high-stepping around the gym he is furthering the Negro's aspirations to eat in a Jacksonville restaurant or buy a house in Scarsdale. So far as I have been able to discover, outright racists on campus are few, and dedicated advocates of Negro rights are perhaps even fewer. Conscious consideration of Kake Walk as a specifically Negro event is all but absent.

This fact, however, does not dispose of the question. The minstrel Negro is a fossil out of a more tranquil past. People whose memories extend into the 1930s and earlier can dredge up numerous manifestations of this stereotype. About the only surviving example in current entertainment is Rochester, Jack Benny's colored manservant, now an infrequent guest on the Benny show, considerably toned down from what he was in 1940 and tolerable only because he deflates Benny's ego. Amos 'n' Andy, easily the most famous radio comedy team in the 1930s, whose foibles used to bring the mighty American colossus from the President on down to a halt every evening, in the middle 1950s discovered that they were obsolete, even when Negro actors played the roles. Minstrel shows haven't been staged since the death of Vaudeville, and Al Jolson even before the second World War had given up blackface. The Negro now in vogue is Sidney Poitier or Harry Belafonte, not Stepin Fetchit, the archetypal dandy of the early talkies. Any white entertainer starting in show business who walked into a talent agency and started to do Negro imitations couldn't get booking in Rawalpindi.

The reason for this seems plain. When the Negro's place in society was secure -- namely, at the bottom -- nobody gave a thought to the justice or injustice of the characterization. But since the Negro has developed the habit of wanting to vote and sit downstairs at the movies, to depict him as a happy-to-lucky dancing fool with a shambling speech is clearly inadequate. It makes little difference that Vermont as a state is insulated from the Negro's current drive for equality. We are still part of American culture, despite reports to the contrary, and cannot escape whatever events, glorious or miserable, take place in Anchorage, Indianapolis, or Baton Rouge.

Those who say that Kake Walk celebrates "one of the many contributions graciously given to the American heritage" are talking through their hat. Let us imagine that, instead of imitating the Negro in our midwinter festival, we used some other cultural tradition, like the Italian, or better still, the Jewish. The participants could be judged on their stylization of the Yiddish accent, the finesse of their shrugs, their imitation of the East European ghetto squint, their shrewd look of chicanery; we could have, instead of "walkin' fo' de Kake," "valkink for de matzoh." How many people would talk about the "attempt to immortalize what the Jew gave to America"? And call those who might protest "oversensitive"? Such stereotypes, no matter how innocently perpetrated, even by members of the specific group, contribute to the natural but unfortunate desire to see people as types rather than as individuals.

At a time when a great many more people than formerly are aware of the potentially harmful effects of stereotypes, it might be wise to look for some way that the vigor, excitement, and skill displayed in Kake Walk can be preserved without gratuitous, if unintentioned, insult to the Negro.

"Take it easy" - three little words that have become as second nature to us as smoking cigarettes and drinking beer. They are the last passing utterances between two pals as they drift away from each other into the crowd which rumbles daily over the walks and greens of this campus. Imagine three thousand students reiterating just twice a day these three little words. Think of "take it easy" six thousand times a day, echoing off every cornerstone, from every classroom, down every corridor, even in between our ears. They must be pretty significant words to be so popular. In truth, there is no truer expression of the mind of our society. To see how this expression applies, let's take a look at the words which make it up.

"Take" is the word we should know best, being the foundation upon which almost all of our relationships are built. For example, our relationship to the university. We don't think of contributing our service to the activities here or giving any of ourselves; we think only of getting as much prestige and fun as we can, and eventually the diploma which our parents are paying for. On another level of relationship, a boy picks his girlfriend on how much he thinks he can "get" from her. As for how girls pick their boyfriends I wouldn't venture to say as I have never heard any of them say just how they go about it. Thus "take" is very descriptive of our relationships to one another.

"It" is an indefinite pronoun which can stand for almost anything we want, and indeed it does, because everything we want is more or less indefinite. In short, we don't know what we want. It varies from new clothes to getting into the right fraternity. Taking "it" seems to be closely related to the getting of prestige and high status.

Our last little word, "easy," is, of course, the way we must take "it." If we can't take it easy it's not worth it. Easy is the way everything should and does come. If, for instance, Tom wants to get his date drunk, it's easy, at his fraternity house, which is the last place in the world the campus authorities would expect to find anyone drinking. If he needs credits to graduate, "gut" courses are usually available. Women, unfortunately, do have it a little rougher here than men. For instance, if they stay out too late, they must feel the weight of a moral obligation to report themselves. These few disadvantages aside, however, we can see that "easy" is the key word in our whole set up, for, of course, easy is the American Way.

Bill On Federal Aid To Education Being Studied

WASHINGTON (CPS) - More than $1 billion in federal funds for colleges and universities each year would be affected by legislation currently being studied by the House Committee on Science and Astronautics.

Hearings will be scheduled soon on the legislation calling for a Hoover-type commission on science and technology. The commission would determine the best way for the federal government to spend money for research and development programs.

During the past fiscal year, $1.2 billion in federal funds went to U.S. institutions of higher education for research. Education officials have bitterly complained about the imbalance in distribution of these funds.

The House Committee is studying several similar bills including a Senate-passed measure sponsored by Senator John L. McClellan, (D-Ark.) chairman of the Senate Committee on Government Operations.

The Legislation provides for a 12-man commission of representatives from Congress, the White House, science, engineering and institutions handling scientific research.

It would be up to the commission to determine:

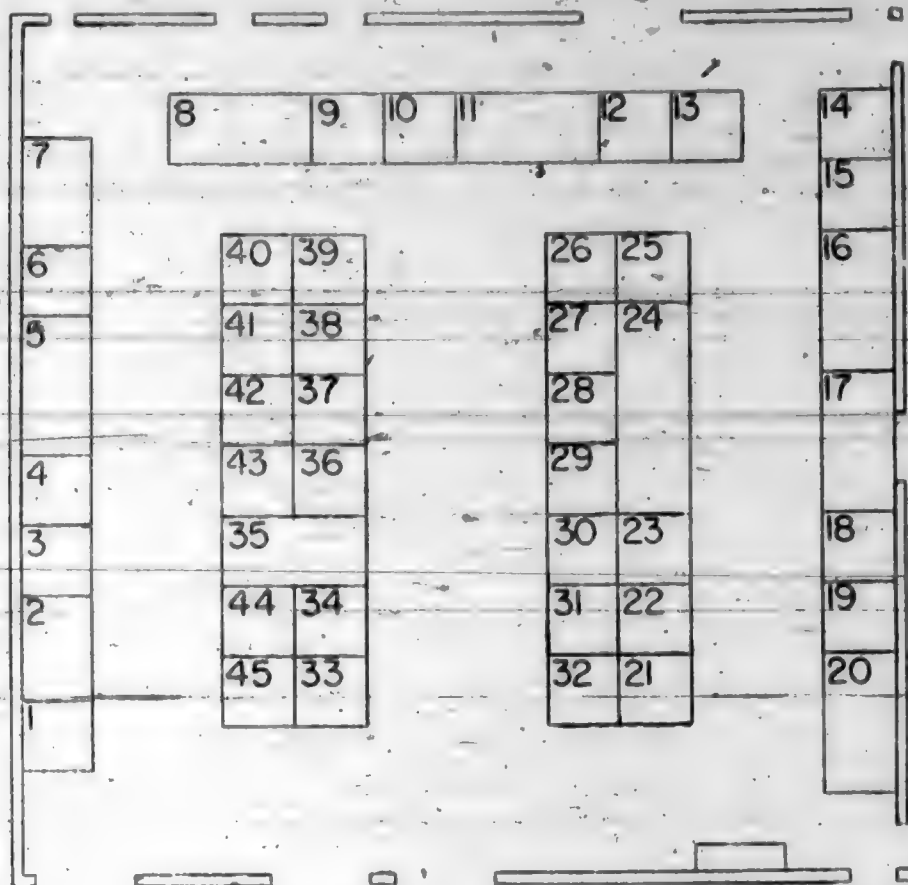

-- how to reorganize federal agencies conducting or financing research programs to insure effective performance.

-- eliminate duplication of agencies in such fields as information storage, processing and distribution; research projects; and use of resources of private industry and non-profit organizations, such as colleges.

-- make maximum efficient use of engineering and scientific manpower.

-- and, most important, the need for a department of science and technology, and what programs, functions and funds it would handle.

Vt. Industry On Exhibit

The second Vermont Industrial Exhibit is intended, as the first, held in 1961, to bring together something of the interesting and significant story of industry in the Green Mountain State.

The sponsors of the Exhibit feel it will be a vital means of better acquainting Vermonters with the rich productivity already active and forceful in their State and its economy.

We believe that many young men and women, now in high schools and colleges of the State, will be given an opportunity through the Exhibit to become interested in the very good career opportunities which exist for them in business and industry in Vermont.

And, of course, the sponsors believe that the Exhibit will serve to call worthwhile attention to the favorable role Vermont occupies in terms of the attractions she offers to business and industry seeking new locations.

It is our hope that you will find the Exhibit both stimulating and informative, and that it will grow with the years to become a time when Vermonters and Vermont business and industry will get together.

President Fey Welcomes Exhibitors

It is with pride and pleasure that the University of Vermont welcomes the return of the Vermont Industrial Exhibit. It helped to inaugurate two years ago. I believe it is symbolic of the sound and stimulating growth of our State that we now are able to welcome this impressive exhibit, which began in the old gymnasium, to one of New England's finest physical education and recreation facilities.

It is also worth noting that many of the businesses and industries represented here today helped to make possible this new facility, joining with the alumni, students and all the people of Vermont in this major venture.

Governor Hoff Praises VIE

On behalf of the State of Vermont, I extend my welcome to this 1963 Vermont Industrial Exhibit. What you will see here is a capsule portrait of the interesting and significant story of Vermont industry.

This display of the many products of our State is evidence of the vitality and varied productivity of our economy.

To those students and out-of-state visitors, this exhibit marks the promise of Vermont's future for it represents the very good career opportunities which exist in Vermont business and industry.

The exhibit also calls attention to the role Vermont plays in development of our national economy and to the favorable position of the Green Mountain State in terms of the attractions we have here for businesses seeking new locations.

We have a heritage of industrial resourcefulness, our labor productivity is high, and we are dedicated to do all possible to encourage and foster the growth of industry in Vermont.

This exhibit is at once a testimony to our past and a means of dedicating ourselves to the future.

Cornell Student Pushed Down Stairs By Police

ALBANY, Ga. (CPS) - A Cornell student was pushed down a flight of steps by an Albany, Ga., deputy sheriff this week, and asked if he intended to "do something about it."

The student, Paul Epstein, had become interested in working for peaceful integration in the South, and was in the second day of volunteer work for the Student Non-violent Coordinating Committee on its Albany project, when he was pushed down the steps of the county courthouse by the deputy, Lamar Stewart.

Epstein said that he had entered the building in the company of several Negro students, and that his companionship with the Negroes apparently enraged the law officer. He said that he told the deputy that he did not want to make anything out of it, and left.

SNCC APPEALS TO JUSTICE DEPARTMENT

ATLANTA (CPS) -- The Student Non-violent Coordinating Committee appealed again to the Justice Department for federal protection for SNCC voter registration workers in the South, this week.

SNCC charges that one of its field workers was injured seriously in a shooting two weeks ago, and that four more were injured in shootings last week. Additionally, SNCC alleges that terrorists set fire to the Greenwood, Mississippi voter registration office of the organization Sunday (March 24).

James Forman, SNCC Executive Secretary, said that it appeared that a "pattern of harassment" was developing in Mississippi. He reported that Travis and his companions in the car at the time he was shot "came within inches of death."

SNCC has emphasized that it will not pull its workers out of the voter registration project in Mississippi in the face of danger -- SNCC will actually send more people into the area, Forman said.

The Student Non-violent Coordinating Committee is committed to a non-violent approach to the integration problem in the South. SNCC's major current project is to register Negroes to vote in areas where few Negroes have ever voted or participated in the decision making process.

NSNSA Requests Protection

PHILADELPHIA (CPS) - The United States National Student Association, the American national union of students, has recently conferred with the Department of Justice, asking federal protection for student integration workers in Mississippi.

Dennis Shaul, USNSA national president, told the Collegiate Press Service that the Justice Department is concerned about the problem, and said that USNSA hopes that federal protection of some sort will soon be provided for voter registration workers in the South.

USNSA's conference with the Justice Department came on the heels of a wave of shootings in Mississippi in which five Student Non-violent Coordinating Committee workers were injured by gunfire, one seriously. Additionally, the SNCC voter registration drive office in Greenwood, Mississippi, was set afire Sunday.

Following is the text of Shaul's statement:

"To the Association, the recent burning of the SNCC office is but one more outrage in a growing wave of barbarism. One hardly has time to recover from the shootings before the burnings or other instances of violence arrest the attention and cause new concern. Obviously the situation calls for more vigilance and action than local authorities are prepared to give. We have met with the Civil Rights division of the Justice Department in an attempt to stir them to further action. We were greatly impressed by their sensitivity to public opinion. No effort would be more worthwhile than a flood of communications of all kinds -- telephone calls, letters, telegrams, visits to that department. It is ludicrous for this country to contest Communism and dictatorship abroad if it neglects its responsibilities at home. If the public cannot be stirred to action by incidents such as these, there is little hope for the democratic process."

Music Dept. Welcomes Spring With Choir Concert In Chapel

by Janet Hadda

This past weekend, the Music Department presented its annual Spring Choir Concert at Ira Allen Chapel, as part of the Fine Arts Festival.

First on the program were the Madrigal singers. By definition, a madrigal is "a lyric, usually amorous, and adapted to musical setting." This group of twelve singers also performed without a conductor. They were very powerful, with clear voices which blended well. Of the six selections they sang, the most impressive seemed to be "Welcome, Sweet Pleasure" by Thomas Weelkes and "The Silver Swan" by Orlando Gibbons.

After the Madrigal singers, the University choir performed with Dr. Frank Lidlal, conductor. Their first selection was "Evening" by Zoltan Kodaly. This was sung beautifully, with softness carefully controlled at first, and then building to an effective climax. The solo of Kay King and Eileen Abair, Sopranos, added to the beauty of the song.

The next work, "Four

Choruses from "Catullus Carmina" by Carl Orff, while excellent, was not quite as impressive as "Evening." The soloist, William Bosworth, Tenor, sang with a great deal of feeling, but, at times, the full force of the choir was not behind him. The most spirited parts were the second half of "Vivamus, Mea Lesbia (Let us Live, my Lesbia)" and the beginning of "Miser Catulle (Wretched Catullus)." After the intermission, the choir performed "Mass in G Minor" by Ralph Vaughan Williams. This, unlike many Vaughan Williams works, is not a modern piece, but is based on an older type of mass. There were six parts and all were sung in Latin. The Solo Quartet, consisting of Kay King, Soprano; Mona Ford, Alto; Roger Lyman, Tenor; and David Bishop, Bass, added much to the effectiveness of the selection.

The concert was, on the whole, very good and the choir sang extremely well. Their voices blended well and, under the able direction of Dr. Lidlal, their voices were controlled as to volume and spirit.

US SUPREME COURT RULES ON LEGALITY OF BIBLE READING

WASHINGTON (CPS) - The United States Supreme Court is expected to rule on the legality of Bible reading in the public schools, before the end of the spring. The high court has already heard oral arguments on the matter.

The Superior Court of Baltimore and the Maryland Court of Appeals have refused Mrs. Madalyn E. Murray's petition to declare unconstitutional the required Bible reading ritual in the school her son attends. The U.S. District Court for Eastern Pennsylvania law, in suits brought by the family of Edward L. Schempp, was supported by the Greater Philadelphia Branch of the American Civil Liberties Union. The losers of both cases - Mrs. Murray and the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania - have appealed to the high court.

The Schempps, who have two children attending the Abington Township Public High School, contend that the Pennsylvania Bible reading law violates the First Amendment, which forbids the state establishment of religion, of interference with the citizen's free exercise thereof.

They claim even the revised version of the state law, which permits students to be excused from Bible reading ceremonies on written parental request, unconstitutionally requires a profession of religious belief or disbelief. In the brief submitted to the Supreme Court by their attorneys, Henry W. Sawyer, III and Wayland H. Elsbree, it is claimed that the present law thus exposes the child to enormous psychological pressures, whether he chooses to hear a doctrine that contradicts what he has been taught, or excuses himself and faces the social ostracism of his classmates.

The Pennsylvania law in question calls for the compulsory reading of "at least ten verses from the Holy Bible" in all public schools. The State supplies the King James version of the Bible. But the Schempps are Unitarians. The three children and their father have previously testified that they not only do not believe, but are offended by, much that has been read to them. They do not believe in what Mr. Schempp called the Old Testament's concept of "Jehovah as a God of vengeance." Nor do they believe in the divinity of Christ.

Expert witnesses testifying for both plaintiffs and defense in the District Court admitted that Protestants, Catholics and Jews cannot even agree about the wording of the "correct" version of the Old Testament, which they supposedly share. Catholics, Jews, and many Protestants do not emphasize Bible reading. Other religions represented in the United States and guaranteed equal religious protection consider different works sacred. The Schempps contend that, in addition to violating the "no establishment of religion" clause of the First Amendment, the existing law violates their right to free religious practice, since their children must attend public schools, and they must support these schools with taxes.

Attorneys for the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania reason the elimination of such vestiges of religious tradition as Bible reading could logically lead to abandonment of the motto on U.S. legal tender and replacement of the Christian calendar. They also argue the government - meaning the courts - should remain "neutral" toward religion, not interfering either for or against it. The Schempps retort that in pleading for neutrality, the state is really asking for the preservation of a prejudiced status quo. "This," says the Schempps' brief, "is neutrality with a vengeance."

On Campus with Max Shulman

(Author of "I Was a Teen-age Dwarf", "The Many Loves of Dobie Gillis," etc.)

NOW YOU CAN BE YOUNGER THAN SHE IS

It is a scientific fact that girls reach emotional maturity earlier than boys. For this reason freshman girls are reluctant to make romantic alliances with freshman boys, but instead choose men from the upper classes.

Thus the freshman boys are left dateless, and many is the night the entire freshman dorm sobs itself to sleep. An equally moist situation exists among upper-class girls. With upper-class men being snapped up by freshman girls, the poor ladies of the upper class are reduced to dreary, manless evenings of Monopoly and home permanents.

It pleases me to report there is a solution for this morbid situation - indeed, a very simple solution: Why don't the two great have-not groups - the freshman boys and the upper-class girls - find solace with each other?

True, there is something of an age differential, but that need not matter. Take, for example, the case of Albert Payson Sigafos and Eustacia Vye.

Albert Payson, a freshman in sand and gravel at Vanderbilt University, was walking across the campus one day, weeping softly in his loneliness. Blinded by tears, he stumbled upon the supine form of Eustacia Vye, a senior in wicker and raffia, who was collapsed in a wretched heap on the turf.

"Why don't you watch where you're going, you minor youth?" said Eustacia peevishly.

"I'm sorry, lady," said Albert Payson and started to move on. But suddenly he stopped, struck by an inspiration. "Lady," he said, tugging his forelock, "don't think me forward, but I know why you're miserable. It's because you can't get a date. Well, neither can I. So why don't we date each other?"

"Surely you jest!" cried Eustacia, looking with scorn upon his tiny head and body.

"Oh, I know I'm younger than you are," said Albert Payson, "but that doesn't mean we can't find lots of fun things to do together."

"Like what?" she asked.

"Well," said Albert Payson, "we could build a Snowman."

"Bah!" said Eustacia, grinding her teeth.

"All right then," said Albert Payson, "we could go down to the pond and catch some frogs."

"Ugh!" said Eustacia, shuddering her entire length.

"How about some Run-Sheep-Run?" suggested Albert Payson.

"You are callow, green, and immature," said Eustacia, "and I will thank you to remove your underaged presence from mine eyes."

Sighing, Albert Payson lighted a cigarette and started away.

"Stay!" cried Eustacia.

He stayed.

"Was that a Marlboro Cigarette you just lighted?" she asked.

"What else?" said Albert Payson.

"Then you are not immature!" she exclaimed, clasping him to her clavicle. "For to smoke Marlboros is the very essence of wisdom, the height of American know-how, the incontrovertible proof that you can tell gold from dross, right from wrong, fine aged tobaccos from pale, pathetic substitutes. Albert Payson, if you will still have me, I am yours!"

"I will," he said, and did, and today they are married and run the second biggest wicker and raffia establishment in Duluth, Minnesota.

© 1963 Max Shulman

Freshman, sophomore, junior, senior—all classes, ages, types, and conditions—will enjoy mild, rich, filter-tip Marlboro—available in pack or box in every one of our fifty states.

Does a man really take unfair advantage of women when he uses Mennen Skin Bracer?

All depends on why he uses it.

Most men simply think Menthol-Iced Skin Bracer is the best after-shave lotion around. Because it cools rather than burns. Because it helps heal shaving nicks and scrapes. Because it helps prevent blemishes.

So who can blame them if Bracer's crisp, long-lasting aroma just happens to affect women so remarkably?

Of course, some men may use Mennen Skin Bracer because of this effect.

How intelligent!

Retaliation Against SNCC

by T.A. Manring

(Miss. - USNSA) - In the past few weeks a serious situation has developed in Leflore County, Mississippi. Area officials administering the federal government's surplus food program have cut 22,000 people off the commodity roles in retaliation against attempts by the Student Non-Violent Coordinating Committee (SNCC) to register Negro voters. Since many of those removed from the roles are unemployed and without visible means of support, this means that a large majority of the Negro population is without food.

What makes the situation worse is the fact that in recent years, with the introduction of mechanical cotton pickers, 80% of all the cotton harvested in the immediate area has been picked by machine. The result has been wholesale and chronic unemployment - this explains the original need for the surplus food program.

County officials in charge of the program attempted to explain their action by citing what they claimed were the exorbitant expenses involved in providing for the personnel, equipment, and facilities necessary for administering the program. But it is significant that since the action was taken the county has not reduced the personnel, equipment, or facilities used during the period when the 22,000 were still receiving assistance.

Already, a number of schools and ad hoc organizations across the country have responded to the plight of the Leflore County Negroes through local campaigns to raise food and money for shipment South. Food drives have been initiated by student governments at the University of Minnesota, Michigan State University, and University of Wisconsin. Additionally the Chicago Area Friends of SNCC, under the sponsorship of comedian Dick Gregory, have sent over 80,000 pounds of food to Leflore.

I realize that you are probably quite busy with a number of other projects and activities, and may have little time to devote to new causes. But this is - in a very real sense - a matter of life and death, and it requires - indeed, demands - that we at least make some effort to alleviate the situation. Won't you, therefore, consider the following suggestions for action:

CAROLYN MCCARTHY is the new Secretary and BEN MACHANIC and PETER MOLFORD will serve as the two Sub-Treasurers for this 1963-1964 year. HELEN KEITH has been elected to the office of Sub-Secretary.

In addition to self-evaluation the new S.A. officers are planning an extensive program for FRESHMAN WEEK 1963. Because Preliminary Days will be more condensed and more academically oriented this year in order to afford the incoming Freshman more personal and academic advice S.A.'s job will be more difficult. S.A. must select qualified and diligent committee members to insure a well-organized Preliminary Days.

The new S.A. officers, RICHARD PAYE, HARVEY TAUBER, JANICE COLE, RICHARD BADGER, CAROLYN MCCARTHY, PETER MOLFORD, BEN MACHANIC and HELEN KEITH, will make a tremendous effort to better the Student Association. But their hands are tied if the students themselves do not show any interest and don't give any indication that they are willing to participate. S.A.'s new officers realize that the system of restricting candidates for major offices to those experienced members of S.A. is somewhat unfair. Until a better solution and program is devised, the students must do all they can to show S.A. their interest.

dents who have done or who are doing Honors Projects. However, some students who possess the initiative, who didn't quite have the 85 average last term, and who will probably attain higher grades this spring term may also apply for the Honors Program.

Usually, 15-20 students undertake Honors Projects in fields concerned with the Arts and Sciences. Students have in previous years investigated and written papers on "The Roman Conquest of Sparta," for the Classics Department; "A Study of Possible Effects of Physiological Saline Injections and Stressful Handling on Certain Hematological Values in Female Albino Rats," for the Zoology Department; "The Devil's Determination: Ambiguity in Henry James' 'The Turn of the Screw,'" for the English Department; "Thomas Mann's 'Der Zauberberg' and 'Doktor Faustus': Comparative Study," for the German Department; and "The Dissolution of the Association of Proletarian Writers (RAPP)" for the History Department. These are only samplings of the subjects of the papers, from 40-150 pages long, which are submitted.

ROTC Department Selects Best Squad Of Brigade

On Friday afternoon, March 29, the Cadet Brigade Staff of the Military Science Department selected this year's best squad of cadets in the Cadet Brigade at UVM. The squad selected was the second squad, third platoon, of Company E. Members of this squad are: Cadet Staff Sergeant George Dumouchel, Squad Leader, Class of '65; Cadet Sergeant Dean Kent, Assistant Squad Leader, Class of '65; Cadet John Beckwith, Class of '65; Cadet Dutch Curtis, Class of '66; Cadet Neil Goldman, Class of '65; Cadet Colin Hunter, Class of '66; Cadet Richard Kash, Class of '66; and Cadet Stephen A. Morse, Class of '66.

The Brigade Commander,

gram, President Fey declared, "American students of today are very serious, and their thoughts and desires are honored more at this time than ever before. It is in recognition of these desires that the University emphasizes its Honors Program to encourage the superior student to undertake special projects, resulting in the enrichment of his academic life."

Cadet Colonel Peter H. Carr, Class of '63, pinned a green honor ribbon on Squad Leader Dumouchel and personally awarded the same to every other man in the squad. Also present at the ceremonies were Cadet Captain William H. Lewis, Commander Company E, Class of '63, and Cadet Second Lieutenant George D. Fraser, Platoon Leader, Class of '64.

The squad selected for this distinguished award has shown excellent and outstanding ability in squad competition during the past academic year. Before being selected best squad in the brigade, it had to work its way up the highly competitive rungs of the military ladder. After initial squad competition it was chosen best squad in the platoon, and then best squad in the company after competition at the platoon level. Finally, after company-level competition and many weeks of determined effort, these eight cadets earned the honor of being selected the best squad in the brigade.

'63 SUMMER IN EUROPE

For the summer of 1963, an economical group rate flight to Europe is being organized.

The schedule thus far is as follows: The group will depart from New York City on the 15th of June for Frankfurt Germany aboard a fully equipped TWA Super Jet. On a prearranged date (to be decided by the group before departure) there will be a flight from Frankfurt to Paris. This flight is optional and merely an added convenience for those who would like quick transportation. On another prearranged date later on in the summer there will be a similar flight, also optional, from Paris to London. These flights will be so spaced as to give adequate time to those who wish to tour each country and its neighbors. The return flight will be from London on August the 18th. It should be noted that return and departure dates are not necessarily set. They may be changed if the majority of the group so desires. The entire transportation cost is a surprisingly low $369.00.

If you are interested and wish to take advantage of this exciting offer, contact James Adams at ext. 355 immediately. If you are a faculty member contact Professor Davidson at ext. 221 or UN 4-9112. You must act now. There is very little time left.

Trend Of Increasing Fees

JOINT OFFICE OF INSTITUTIONAL RESEARCH - Tuition and fees for residents rose 11 per cent at state universities and land-grant institutions in the past year according to figures compiled by the U.S. Office of Education for the Joint Office of Institutional Research.

During the same period, 1961-62 to 1962-63, tuition and fees for non-residents rose by 7.4 per cent, room rates by 6.2 per cent and board charges by 1.7 per cent. Using a national average for these schools, a student who paid $815 for his education at a state university or land-grant institution in his home state in 1961-62 is currently paying $860 for room, board, tuition and fees.

The Office of Education's comparative study covered 90 institutions. Forty-five raised their tuition and fee for residents, 49 for non-residents. Room rate increases for women were made by 40 institutions and for men by 43 institutions. Increases in board charges occurred at 39 institutions for women and 42 for men. Median tuition and fees increases for all institutions surveyed were $30 for residents, $50 for non-residents. The median increase for room and board charges for men was $20, for women $24, while board charges averaged an $18 increase for both sexes.

For 75 institutions attended predominantly by white students, average tuition and fees for residents rose from $263 in 1961-62 to $293 in 1962-63; average tuition and fees for non-residents from $593 to $635; average room rates from $240 to $251 and average board charges from $422 to $435. For 15 institutions attended predominantly by Negro students, residents' tuition and fees rose from $165 to $186 during the period; non-resident tuition and fees from $391 to $422; room rates from $128 to $140 and board charges from $305 to $310.

Individual increases ranged from under $10 to over $100. Area most affected by increases was non-resident tuition and fees, where 25 of the 49 institutions raising charges upped them by over $50 and 11 of this number by more than $100.

Shifting the burden of college costs increasingly from society as a whole to the student is a source of major concern to the institutions represented in the Association of State Universities and Land-Grant Colleges and the State Universities Association. The two Associations have stated: "The process of making students pay an increasing proportion of the costs of higher education will, if continued, be disastrous to American society and to American national strength."

"It is based on the theory that higher education benefits only the individual and that he should therefore pay immediately and directly for its cost - through borrowing if necessary

"This is a false theory. Its adoption will jeopardize seriously our national strength, reduce our standard of living, and reverse the entire tradition of equal opportunity in life for our young people.

"The primary beneficiary of higher education is society. It is true that great economic and other benefits do accrue to the individual, and it is the responsibility of the individual to help pay for the education of others on this account -- through taxation and through voluntary support of colleges and universities, in accordance with the benefits received.

"But even from the narrowest of economic standpoints, a society to finance higher education. The businessman who has things to sell is a beneficiary whether he attends college or not, whether his children do or not. Higher productivity and higher income make better customers for business.

"Are we now to abandon the principle of social responsibility for higher education which has put us and kept us at least relatively ahead, turn back the calendar a century or more, make the amount of money the individual has or is willing to borrow the sole determinant of our supply of trained scientists -- for example? This is what the extremists (and there are many of them) are proposing.

"Since there is little correlation between the intellectual ability of the student and his family income, the American public college or university must not become a device to reverse our historic trend away from a class society. We should continue to open wider doors of opportunity for students of genuine ability without regard to income status."

High School Day

High school juniors from throughout the state will travel to Burlington on April 20, to participate in the 11th annual High School Day at UVM.

High School Day is held to give each student an opportunity to learn more about college, educational goals, and to find out more about occupations and professions open to them.

Following registration, Dr. John T. Fey, UVM president, and student leaders will speak to the students. Meetings on career opportunities have been scheduled in the fields of home economics, education, engineering, science and mathematics, liberal arts, music, sociology, commerce and economics, and medicine.

Sample college classes will be held in art, chemistry, classics, English, philosophy, physics, political science, psychology, and zoology.

Demonstrations and exhibits include ones in agricultural engineering, Army ROTC, the computing center, engineering, the language lab, mathematics, physics, the green frontier (plant science), and the students will have an opportunity to visit the Vermont Industrial Exhibit.

Open house will be held at the Bailey Library, Billings Center, chemistry labs, DeGoesbriand Hospital, Fleming Museum, home economics department, the gymnasium-field house, physics labs, and religious centers.

College admission and financial aid will be explained at three different times so all students will have an opportunity to participate in this session. Lunch will be served in the Waterman dining hall.

The day is open to all high school juniors and it is not necessary that they plan to enroll at UVM.

Dellin, Daniels Discuss Aspects Of Communism

by Kathy Kurdeka

Interested students attended a lecture on the Sino-Soviet Schism sponsored by the International Relations Club and the Young Democrat's Club at Billings Center, Thursday, March 27.

Dr. Lubomir Dellin spoke about the economic aspects of this division between the Soviet Union and Communist China. Dr. Dellin, an Associate Professor of Economics at UVM, is the author of Labor Law and Relations With Communist Bulgaria. He has also been a free lance writer for Radio Free Europe, as well as a contributor to the U.S. House Select Committee dealing with Communist Aggression Reports.

Stressing the Communist myth of the Marxist theory, Dr. Robert V. Daniels developed the ideological aspects of the schism. Dr. Daniels, an Associate Professor of History at UVM, has traveled in Russia and done extensive research at the Harvard Research Center. He is an author, having written the Nature of Communism and a high school textbook on Communism which should appear this spring.

Developing the economic aspect of the split between Russia and Mao's China, Dr. Dellin pointed out the widening economic gap as one factor. The crop failures of China and the withdrawal of Soviet technicians have lead to China's setback because resources must only be used to re-establish equilibrium within the country. As the Chinese deficit to the Soviet Union has grown, trade between the two countries has dropped.

As Soviet aid to China has decreased, Chinese aid to other Communist countries has increased beyond that of the Soviet Union. Communist Chinese aid to other underdeveloped countries also increased in 1961 by 50%, as she strove to gain support outside of the Communist Block.

Dr. Daniels then pointed out that policies of the Communist countries are not entirely in accord with the Marxist concert. Though both the Soviet Union and Communist China pretend to support the Marxist theory, China, since 1949, has formulated policy independently of the Soviet Union.

The schism has apparently developed from a "power conflict within the Communist world with ideological overtones", revolving around the question of "whose formulation of Marxism is more correct theoretically."

This Marxist ideology, even with the controversy surrounding it, has still proved to be the common bond between the two rival powers. The relative diplomatic snapping point between the two countries will occur only when the ideology is no longer a bond but only a subject of controversy itself.

Though the lecture proved interesting and educational to those completely unaware of power politics, it failed to enlighten others. Hesitancy upon the parts of the speakers to give their own opinions on the ultimate resolution of the conflict and the lack of new ideas and material made the lecture appear as only a reiteration of concepts already available to the interested student.

Madras Sale

Genuine bleeding madras from India is a forecast for the campus this spring. In keeping with the trend of fashion, the Home Economics Club will conduct a sale of handmade articles in a selection of multicolored madras plaids. The sale will be held in Billings Center on Thursday, April 18. Scarfs and belts are two of the many features of the sale.

Scope

part of Portugal has only facilitated the exploitation of the colony and, in fact, Portugal without Angola "is nothing."

Kilama finished his remarks by reading from an article which described the beating and torturing of Angolans in Portuguese prisons. The article ended with an interview with the prison leader concerning the interrogation methods in which he stated "Doesn't your FBI do this also."

Most questions following the discussion concerned Portuguese efforts to prepare Angola for independence and the state of Portuguese democracy.

They Asked For Blood, And They Received It

University of Vermont students once again surpassed their quota and donated 177 pints of blood in the spring blood drive, held Monday, March 25, at the Billings Center.

Craig Brodie, publicity director for the sponsoring Ethan Allen Rifles, termed the drive successful, and reported that Red Cross workers were pleased with the added facilities offered by the Student Center. The blood drive, formerly held in the Student Lounge in the Waterman Building, was relocated because of better kitchen facilities and lack of traffic complications at Billings.

The goal, exceeded each spring and fall since the drive was originated at the University of Vermont in 1951, was set this spring at 150 pints. More than the 177 people who finally donated reported to the blood drawing, but there were many rejections.

The blood was contributed to the Vermont-New Hampshire Regional Blood Program, which handled the drawing and served coffee, juice, donuts and sandwiches to the donors. Those over 21, and those under 21 with written permission from their parents, were permitted to donate blood.

The blood drive is traditionally held on campus each spring and fall, with the Ethan Allen Rifles sponsoring the fall drive and Key and Serpent, Senior men's Honorary, sponsoring the spring drive. This year the order was reversed, and Brodie stated that the schedule will probably be continued as it was this year, since the organization's activity schedule in the fall semester makes a spring blood drive more desirable.

The Vermont-New Hampshire Red Cross supplies all hospitals in the two states free of charge, and will also supply any resident, permanent or temporary, no matter where he is at the time that the blood is needed.

Summer Jobs Are Available In Europe

Upon his return from an extensive two-month tour of Europe, Frank X. Gordon, Jr., Director of the International Student Travel Center, told staff members at a meeting yesterday that he had completed final details on hundreds of jobs for the ISTC work-travel program in Europe this summer. "The bulk of the jobs are those we outlined in our brochure and cover factory, hotel/restaurant/resort and construction work," he said, "but in addition, I am pleased to report I was able to turn up a number of jobs of special interest."

Mr. Gordon said he had requests from prominent European families for male students to act as chaffeurs in France and crew on yachts in Denmark, Sweden and Norway. One lucky "Chauffeur," he noted, would drive a Ferrari in Paris. There are also a number of sea faring openings of longer duration in the fall and winter for stewards, deck and engine room hands on foreign freighters and passenger ships.

For girls, he said, probably the most glamorous work will be some modeling jobs in Paris and Brussels (sizes 12-14) and taking care of children in wealthy families. There are also a number of requests for girls to work as private maids with English-speaking European families vacationing in St. Tropez, Juan les Pins and Antibes on the French Riviera.

The best paying jobs this summer, Mr. Gordon pointed out, will be in restaurants and factories. Boys and girls who wait on tables can expect to earn in wages and tips close to $200 a month. Factory pay in several countries will also run to about $200 a month. Mr. Gordon emphasized that the special interest jobs should go to the best qualified students who apply the earliest as most all of the jobs listed by the ISTC would have to be filled by May 15 to meet the planning deadlines set by European employers.

Mr. Gordon also added that the ISTC is now placing students on a year-round basis and has already obtained jobs for 15 students abroad for more than the summer months (6 months to a year). Information may be obtained by writing to ISTC, 39 Cortlandt Street, New York 7, N.Y.

'63 Version Of '62 Y C Champs Embark on 52nd Southern Trip

1962 University of Vermont Yankee Conference Baseball Champs

Lapointemen Have Less Power But More Hustle This Year

The losses were fairly light, eight lettermen, but four were key performers - Levi Brown, of, Maynard Ducatte, c-ss, Nick Carmolli, ss, and Nick Denicola, p. All but Carmolli were All Yankee Conference in '62 while Brown, now with the Braves' chain, was All New England. Brown led team in hitting (.352), RBIs (32), extra base hits (14), and was tied with Ducatte for most hits (32). Ducatte was a handyman who could play anywhere. Was good glove man, steady hitter, and constant threat on base paths (19 steals in 20 attempts). DeNicola, a southpaw, won 10 games and lost only one. Had great control and kept batters off balance with his slow stuff. Carmolli was a great glove man. Ten lettermen return.

Dick Cassani, All Yankee Conference and All New England last year as a junior, Dick compiled sparkling 9-0 mark with an ERA of 1.11. Over two seasons, Dick has hurled 157 innings, striking out 159 and walking only 44 for a two year ERA of 1.31 and a 15-2 record. He can also pay the outfield when not pitching.

Veteran infield, experienced catching, and a potentially fine pitching staff, Mike Benway at first, Dick Boutilier at second, and Joe Pare at third give Coach Ralph Lapointe a tight infield. Bill Rundle is experienced receiver. Cassani is proven hurler. Sophomores Jim Brennan (r) and Al Foster (r), Bill Christie (r) and Carl Martin (l) could give Vermont one of its deepest pitching staffs under Lapointe.

Shortstop, defensive outfield, long ball threat, and proven pitching. If a shortstop replacement can't be found in soph ranks, Lapointe may have to move Benway from first but he hates to do this because of latter's great glove. Wayne Van Ham and Bob Sherriff are lettermen in outer pastures but both are infielders by trade. With the exception of Cassani, pitching staff has yet to be tested under fire.

Vermont won Yankee Conference last year and was 19-4 in regular season. This is hard to duplicate in any league but Lapointe is optimistic as season approaches. Winning baseball is a Vermont tradition and this year will prove to be no different. Whether Cats can again qualify for NCAA playoffs remains to be seen. On paper this team has great potential.

(More power to Coach Lapointe's Cats this season.)

COACH RALPH LAPOINTE -- embarks upon his 12th season at the controls of the baseball fortunes of his alma mater and during this time he has never had a loser and he shouldn't break up this pattern in '63. In 11 previous campaigns, his clubs have won 155 and lost 92. The 1956 and 1962 Vermont teams took part in the NCAA District One playoffs. One member of the '56 nine, Jack Lamabe, is now with the Red Sox. A former Phillie and Cardinal infielder, Lapointe started at Vermont during World War II but left for army duty. After the war, he broke in with the Phils and played professional ball for five years, returning to Vermont to finish his education in 1951. Ralph now also holds his Master's. A fine tactician, Ralph's teams are well versed in the game of baseball. His booming voice is as familiar a trademark at games as is his most constant companion -- a good sized plug of tobacco. Ralph's oldest son is a standout high school athlete in football, basketball, and baseball.

George Shearing, "A Touch of Genius," and his Quintet will present an evening of jazz tonight to holders of Red Lane Series tickets. The British-born pianist has been consistently acclaimed as one of the outstanding foreign-born musicians in the United States.

Born totally blind on August 13, 1919 in London, George Shearing was one of eight children. His education began at the Shillington Street School for the Blind. He received no more than the normal amount of musical training given elementary students until he entered Linden Lodge School for the Blind at the age of twelve. There his singular talents were noticed by instructors, who urged him to continue on to college after graduation. Family needs, however, obliged him to turn down several university scholarships in favor of contributing to the meager Shearing family income.

With his formal education ended at 16, George considered himself lucky to land a piano playing job in a neighborhood pub. He studied classical music diligently during his off-hours, and eventually began getting supper club engagements with a bandleader friend of the family.

Shortly after quitting the pub, one of his former Linden School instructors recommended him to Claude Bampton, who was in the process of organizing an all-blind band for a tour of England. It was on this tour that George made his first contacts with the major figures in the British music industry. At this point, George began writing arrangements for the BBC. An introduction to well-known music critic Leonard Feather led to his first personal BBC broadcast and his first recording date, just before the outbreak of World War II. George landed his own BBC radio show.

By 1946, George had headlined virtually all of the top clubs in London with his own group, and his records were acknowledged best sellers in the jazz field. The acclaim however didn't quite compensate for one notable deficit, i.e., despite his lofty reputation, George was making relatively little money. In December of 1946, he sailed for the United States for a two month visit. The visit was pleasant but unproductive. It was almost a year later that he could be persuaded to return and investigate offers being cabled to him across the Atlantic. Upon arrival, the talent agencies which had lured him here with bright promises suddenly became apathetic. Discouraged and beset with financial troubles, George welcomed the offer to return to England for a recording date.

George's wife, having remained in the U.S. to battle for bookings, finally interested Irving Alexander in featuring him at the Clique, on the Broadway site currently occupied by Birdland, and George was convinced to return here. He immediately began

"Carnival," winner of the New York Drama Critics Circle Award as best musical of the year, will be presented as the final performance of the Red Lane Series on April 30. In producing "Carnival," David Merrick reversed the usual procedure of transferring a successful stage spectacle to the screen, for the story behind "Carnival" had been the prize-winning 1953 film, "Lili."

"Carnival" opens with the curtain already up. It is dawn and the stage represents an empty meadow on the outskirts of a town in southern France. One by one the roustabouts and performers arrive on the scene and Professor Schlegel's traveling carnival -- ambitiously billed as "The Grand Imperial Cirque de Paris" -- begins to take shape before the audience's eyes. Wagons arrive, tents are raised, and an aerialist's high-ladder soars skyward.

It is a carnival straight out of the memories of childhood, with acrobats, jugglers, dancing girls, a magician, trained dogs, a dancing bear and a puppet show. Into their midst wanders a timid orphan girl, Lili, ill-clad and awestruck. Her big sad eyes widen in wonder as Marco, the dashing magician, transforms a flaming match into a flower and as the puppets -- a sympathetic red-headed tyke, a green walrus, an impudent fox, and other impetuous characters -- talk to her.

commanding attention from a growing circle of critics and trade reviewers, and in 1949 George Shearing and his group recorded their first sides on the MGM label.

The years since that first MGM recording session have been crowded with countless accolades and achievements. George has won every trade and disc jockey poll of any significance -- some of them as many as seven times. The demand for personal appearances has swelled to international proportions, and he has been named the No. 1 pianist in a dozen nations.

This proves to be the beginning of a triumphant friendship and an unforeseen success story, for the girl unquestioningly accepts the puppets as real people, and her singing with them becomes the hit of the carnival.

Elaine Malbin, who drew plaudits as the star of the NBC Opera on television, and on Broadway as the star in "Kismet" and "My Darlin' Aida," portrays the coveted role of Lili.

Ed Ames, who became famous as a member of a singing act with his three brothers, enacts the co-starring role of Paul, the sensitive puppeteer. In preparing for his role, Mr. Ames made his acting debut in an off-Broadway production of Arthur Miller's "The Crucible," and received further recognition in "The Fantasticks." Ames and Miss Malbin share most of the memorable Merrill songs that have swept the airwaves since "Carnival" first struck New York.

"Emergency" Budget Passed By Board Of Trustees

The UVM Board of Trustees last Saturday gave their approval to the "emergency revision" budget which UVM President John T. Fey submitted to Vermont Gov. Philip H. Hoff and to the Vermont General Assembly a month ago at Hoff's request after the Governor agreed to reconsider his recommendations for the University.

The revised budget reduces the amount of the increase UVM is asking from the State for the first year of the biennium by about half a million dollars. Fey hopes this reduction can be restored in the second year of the biennium, but said a $300 increase in out-of-state tuition will probably be necessary in 1964 to help restore the cut.

In reporting on the University's budget request, Dr. Fey noted that "There has been increasing interest in the administrative structure and operation of the University."

He told the Trustees that the percentage of the University's budget expended for administration has not increased during the past 10 years, and that the University compares favorably with similar institutions in this regard.

He said that new administrative positions created recently are the result of long study, and that they are related to the growth which the University has experienced in undergraduate and graduate enrollment, research and academic staff.

He said that the only major administrative reorganization in the University's modern history came in the early 1940's when a financial crisis made the reorganization imperative.

"The University learned then," he stated, "that it is important that the financial integrity of the University be protected by a proper administrative structure."

Dr. Fey said that only 10.7 percent of the University's total expenditures are for administrative and general expenses; instructional expense accounts for 45.7 percent of the total; University research for 11.1 percent; operation and maintenance of the physical plant, 8.2 percent. The Agricultural Experiment Station and the Agricultural Extension Service account for 14.8 percent; adult education and public service for .9 percent; libraries, 3.1 percent; and organized activities relating to departments, 5.5 percent.

The figures are for the 1961-62 year. The 10.7 percent for administration that year compares with 11 percent in 1954-55; the 45.7 percent for instructional expense compares with 43.3 percent in 1954. The 8.2 percent for plant compares with 11.5 percent in 1954.

Dr. Fey said the figures for UVM compare favorably with available figures for comparable Land Grant institutions.

Dr. Fey took the occasion to say that "credit for the growth and continued quality of the University must be shared with the enlightened relationship which the State and the University have enjoyed."

He noted that UVM was founded by the Vermont Legislature of 1791, and said it has "traditionally enjoyed a freedom from political and legislative restraint not always historically enjoyed by all state universities."

He said that "while the State clearly exercises controls in terms of auditing the University's financial operation, and in terms of electing or appointing a majority of the University's Board of Trustees, no member or agency of the State government has ever asked or sought control over any areas of administration which have been regarded, traditionally, as necessary for or contributing to the academic freedom which is the basis of our nation's higher education system."

R. B. Fey

Early last Monday morning Mr. Raymond B. Fey, father of President John T. Fey, died of a heart attack at his summer residence in Lantana, Florida. He was 73.

Mr. Fey had suffered a heart attack about two months ago and was thought to be recovering when he had a relapse.

Mr. Fey, who was retired, made his home in Cumberland, Maryland. The funeral was held this afternoon at the Silcox Funeral Home in Cumberland.

The CYNIC would like to express its deepest sympathy to President Fey and his family over the death of Mr. Fey. We believe we are speaking for the entire student body when we say this.

All pre-medical and pre-dental students who hope to enter medical or dental school in the fall of 1964 must obtain a Pre-application form from Dr. C.F. Bond, 316 SciHall and return the completed form to him by May 10.

Panhel Council Honored

Sunday evening, April 21, Panhellenic Council held its banquet in the Vermont Room of the Hotel Vermont, honoring its past council. Sitting at the head table were Deans Harris and Ohanesian, Mrs. Wamboldt, faculty advisor, officers of the outgoing council, and the President, Sue Holt.

Sue gave a brief outline of what Panhellenic Council means and the ideals it should strive for. She stated, in quoting from Gamma Phi Beta's national magazine, that the sorority system, as well as the fraternity system, is in jeopardy on all campuses, and will not survive unless something is done to remedy the present situation, and that this is what Panhellenic Council here at UVM is trying to do.

Sue then introduced Dean Harris, who spoke on "The Long View." The essence of her comments was that no system, fraternity, sorority, or even the human race, can survive unless man can get along with his fellow man. She also gave the council some hints for projects they can work on in the coming year.

Meezie Guyer, past president then presented Mrs. Wamboldt with a gift from the outgoing council in appreciation for all she did for them in the past year, and Sue concluded the program by presenting the outgoing officers with small remembrances of their year of service.

WSGA Conference Held At UVM

by Merry Schron

The New England Women's Student Government Conference of 1963 was held on April 19th, 20th, and 21st, at UVM. Member Schools in order of Conference Rotation are The University of Vermont, University of Maine, University of Rhode Island, Jackson College (not attending), Middlebury College, University of Massachusetts, Colby College, University of New Hampshire, Bates College and The University of Connecticut. New and old Women Officers met for registration on Friday, April 19, 1963 at 4:00. Following a buffet dinner in the Simpson Dining Hall, Dr. Esther Lloyd-Jones, the Head of the Guidance and Student Personnel Administration of Columbia University, spoke. She stressed the women's responsibility to be a leader and the need to instill leadership in others. Later there was a meeting of Group Leaders and the Constitution Revision Committee in Patterson Hall.

After breakfast and a tour of the campus the Convention divided into discussion groups. The main topic discussed was the Purpose of a Women's Student Government. The Convention questioned whether their methods or systems of government are leading to the goal which they have set up and should promotion of leadership be a part of their purpose. After a coffee break, members of the Convention discussed the Power of a Women's Student Government. Questions raised were "How much are the leaders of Women's Student Government expected to sacrifice while in office?" and "Does better education of staff and faculty aid in strengthening the Women's Student Government?" After discussing the problems of communication and how the Women's Student Government is able to communicate and to work with the faculty and staff, as well as the extent and purpose of leadership in the dormitories, members lunched. The day, however, was far from over and members discussed the Potentialities of a Women's Student Government.

A President's Reception was held in Waterman from 6:30 to 7:00 and a banquet followed. The speaker, President John T. Fey, spoke on "The Role of the Individual on Campus". Leon Bibbs, a folk singer, entertained the members of the Convention in the Memorial Auditorium, Sunday morning a final Business Meeting was held.

Linda Wellman, President of W.S.G.A. at UVM, felt that the Convention was a success. She said, "Members of the Convention went back to their schools with ideas for improving their present systems of government."

French-Speaking Dorm Designated

During the 1963-64 academic year Robinson Hall will be used as a French-speaking house for women students. A group of twenty-five upperclass women who are either enrolled in French courses or who speak French fluently will be living in the residence. These women hope that by living together and speaking French whenever they are in the house, they will increase their proficiency to speak the language. There will also be at least one woman student living in the house who is spending 1962-63, her junior year, in France.

Arts And Sciences Offers Major In Religion

The College of Arts and Sciences will offer a concentration in Religion beginning next Fall. The new major meets all the requirements for the B.A. degree and completes the possibility of concentrating in either of the academic disciplines in the Department of Philosophy and Religion.

The courses offered in religion have continued to expand rather rapidly since 1956. Student interest in these courses seems to indicate that the expansion also meets their aim and scope of education.

The Department of Phil. & Rel. announced that expansion will continue with the addition of new courses in religion which will be offered beginning with the Fall Semester, 1963. The new courses which were approved by the College include three hour courses in: "Myth and Ritual," "Methods of Understanding Religion," and more advanced courses in "Area Studies," such as, Religions of Japan, Latin America, the Middle East, etc. A two semester sequence will also be given on "Problems in the History and Phenomenology of Religion," studying specific contemporary concerns of the student of religion.

The new major and additional courses in religion indicate the continued expansion of the College in terms of academic completeness, and student interest.

UVM REACHES SEMIFINALS IN MARX-XAVIER DEBATE

Two varsity UVM debaters made it to the semifinal round of debate at the Marx-Xavier Debate Tournament held at Xavier University, Cincinnati, Ohio, Friday and Saturday.

Elaine Zak of Burlington and Michael Cronin of Richmond, both juniors at UVM, won five and lost one debate in the preliminary rounds of debate which placed them in the quarterfinals.

They defeated Tulane University, New Orleans, Louisiana; Miami University of Ohio; Ball State College, Muncie, Indiana; Augustana College, Rock Island, Illinois; and the University of Oregon. Their sole loss in the preliminary rounds was to Southern Methodist University, Dallas, Texas.

In the quarterfinals they met and defeated Wayne State University, Detroit, Michigan, which qualified them for the semifinals.

They lost the semifinals in a two-to-one split decision to Notre Dame University, South Bend, Indiana, which lost to Ohio State University in the final round.

Assistant Professor John C. Travis of the UVM Department of Speech accompanied the debaters to Cincinnati.

Regional Conference

Scientists from nine states gathered on the UVM campus last week, April 8-10, for a three-day regional conference in Developmental Biology.

Under the co-sponsorship of the Division of Developmental Biology of the American Society of Zoologists and UVM, conferences are held annually on a regional basis to encourage the exchange of ideas and information among investigators with similar interests. Much of the conference dealt with investigators presenting original research reports.

The conference opened Monday morning. All lectures, paper presentations, and discussions were scheduled for room 208 of Williams Science Hall.

Two special evening lectures were also scheduled. On Monday, Dr. John B. Morrill of Wesleyan spoke on the subject "Protein Differentiation Patterns in Molluscan Development." Tuesday's speaker was Dr. Jack R. Collier of the Marine Biological Laboratory, Woods Hole, Mass., and his topic was "The Biochemistry of Embryonic Segregation."

Members of the Conference committee responsible for arrangements are Richard Glade, chairman, Charles Bond, Paul Moody, and Reuben Torch, all of the UVM Department of Zoology, and Dr. Morrill of Wesleyan.

Conference participants were from Albright, Brown, Maine, Swarthmore, Brooklyn College, Middlebury, Yale, the State University of New York, Wesleyan, Dartmouth, Roswell (N.Y.) Park Memorial Institute, the Marine Biological Laboratory at Woods Hole, Mass., and Vermont.

Grant To College Of Medicine Means New Research Center

A $394,680 grant to the College of Medicine from the National Institutes of Health of the U.S. Public Health Service will make possible establishment of a Clinical Research Center for Vermont. The Center will be located at the Mary Fletcher Hospital.

The $394,680 grant covers operation of the new Center for an 18-months period. Additional grants of $214,500 a year for the next six years will support the Center, contingent upon appropriation of funds for the program by Congress.

The Vermont Center is one of approximately 60 that have been established within medical institutions across the country by NIH. Primary objective of the program is to "enhance the quality and quantity of clinical research." It will serve the faculty of the College of Medicine including the staff of the Mary Fletcher and DeGoesbriand Memorial Hospitals.

The Center, to be located on the fourth floor of the Brown Pavilion at the Mary Fletcher, will include a research unit of six beds with laboratory and supporting facilities to serve the special needs of the Center.

The grant will make possible assignment of laboratory, nursing, dietetic, and social service staff to the Center. Program director will be Dr. John H. Bryant, assistant professor of experimental medicine in the University's medical college.

The Center will be served by an Advisory Committee representing the College of Medicine and the Mary Fletcher Hospital, and by an Operation Committee of staff engaged in clinical investigation.

Admission of patients to the Center will be by referral for clinical studies.

Dr. Bryant said establishment of the Center will make it possible for research scientists from many departments to carry on investigations in a wide range of diseases. The advantages include not only the intensification of clinical research in a situation where it can be carefully controlled, but also an increased opportunity for coordinated research efforts.

An additional advantage, Dr. Bryant said, is that a clinical research center provides a "model of excellence for clinical research and clinical research training," with "very promising dividends for the medical community and for the public."

The NIH program under which the Vermont Center will be established was begun in 1959. Grants in the program are made for the support of the basic physical resources and services considered essential to the conduct of a broad program of research, including renovation of necessary space, equipment, costs of the care of patients admitted to the centers, including specialized nursing, metabolic diet kitchens and other services, supporting laboratories, and staff salaries.

Plans call for opening the Center August 1, 1963.

The View From Here

The Farce Of The $$$

EDITOR'S NOTE:

The following story is pure fiction; all people, places and events are totally imaginary. One may be tempted to try to find something in the story that is not there, so Mark Twain's warning from the beginning of Huckleberry Finn comes in handy:

"Persons attempting to find a motive in this narrative will be prosecuted; persons attempting to find a moral in it will be banished; persons attempting to find a plot in it will be shot."

"BY ORDER OF THE AUTHOR

"Per G. G., CHIEF OF ORDNANCE."

In the year 2063 Foulup H. Huffnpuff was elected to the Governorship of a poor New England state, Vermont. In that same year University of Vermont President John T (for Tuition). Fee presented to Governor Huffnpuff the University's budget for the coming two years, and thereby touched off a small war.

It seems that the University of Vermont, according to Pres. Fee, needed $78 million in state funds to operate for two years, while the state was prepared to give it only $6.5 million. This was nothing new; every two years the University needed more money, and every two years the state of Vermont had less money to give it. But this time it looked grave; the only apparent solution was to raise tuition, which the students did not like.

To see how the situation came about, it is necessary to study the arguments on both sides. Pres. Fee argued that with an enrollment of about 3600 students, which ultimately was to be 4000 (a situation that existed for almost a century), Vermont needed money to give these students an adequate education. There were the teachers, who were waiting for a raise - one which had been put off with the excuse that "We'll have enough money to give them next year" for almost 100 years. There were the administrators, who were constantly growing in number, until, in 2063, Vermont had 28 Deans, 61 Assistant Deans, and any number of Directors of One Thing or Another. All of these, according to Pres. Fee, were Necessary and Inexpendable. There was the physical plant which needed caring for: a brand new gymnasium, field house, swimming pool, an artificial lake for boating, a ski center, and new buildings for all sorts of activities: a student center, a faculty center, auditorium, solarium, two garages, stables for the ever-expanding Morgan Horse farm, new chicken coops, seven new medical buildings, a building for the University Store, and East Hall (which had not yet been subjected to Urban Renewal). There was a police force of 93 men (and nine police dogs), valets for the Deans, limousine service for same, and a whole load of other "fringe benefits." There was research to be supported, and several hundred thousand dollars each year were spent chasing down grants. In short, the University of Vermont needed money.

Governor Huffnpuff, on the other hand, told the University that the state had no money for colleges. Firstly, he said that he had made it abundantly clear when he ran for office that teacher's colleges, high schools, junior highs, elementary schools, kindergartens, nursery schools, baby-sitters, governesses, kennels and dog training schools came first, and the University could have whatever was left. Asked why there wasn't enough money to go around, Gov. Huffnpuff never seemed to be able to answer the question. However, it was common knowledge that for the last century the state had been spending a million dollars a year trying to get permission from the ICC to buy the Rutland Railroad, which had since decayed to the point where it was unlocatable (except by archeologists), and was not on any maps. Lately the state had been trying to purchase such other lifelines as Mohawk Airlines, Benway's Taxis, and the Port Kent Ferry. Also, the Governor was fond of investigating things in state government, and had formed committees to investigate every possible phase of the state, and even committees to investigate investigating committees. All these Worthwhile Endeavors cost money.

Billings

To the Editor:

When the Billings center was completed after its long period of renewal, I was delighted to find such a pleasing tribute to its rich past and its work-famous architect, Henry Richardson. A knowing person (many have studied this work as an architectural masterpiece) would be shocked at its present use.

I will not say that there is no right to use it as a student center, but just what is this student center to represent? My main objection is the flashing, screaming, wondrous Wurlitzer which emits a fantastic spectrum of noise to the shouting delight of the seemingly sub-intellectual crowd. I thought things like Gene Pitney, Jimmy Dee, and Elvis went out with high school. For a screaming atmosphere such as this, a "modern," thin-walled, plywood box typically found on this campus would prove sufficient. Even this juke box might be acceptable if one could relax in its presence. (I have even heard some "extremists" go as far as to suggest classical music be piped in from WRUV). If this plaything continues to be loaded with junk and the students can't forego this immaturity dope in their lives, then I will resign myself to this new image -- and Richardson can roll over in his grave.

John Morse, '64

Blackface

To the Editor:

It is imperative that there should be some comment on the letters which appeared in the CYNIC on March 28, 1963. The students who wrote these letters are not looking at the Kake Walk problem realistically. In fact, they have missed the actual issue completely. The issue is the false image of the Negro placed before the public during the Kake Walk festivities. The tradition of Kake Walk as a winter carnival, we agree, is an old and honored one; but use of the stereotype minstrels is not a tribute to the American Negro. It is not a contribution to the American heritage that we would be proud to mention as such.

A stereotype as defined by Gordon W. Allport in The Nature of Prejudice is an exaggerated belief associated with a category. Better still is the definition written by Walter Lippmann classifying stereotypes as simply "pictures in our heads." The humor of the minstrel in Kake Walk is a cunning device for creating such pictures. Many studies have been made of these "pictures in our heads." D. Katz and K.W. Braly have made a study in their Journal of Abnormal and Social Psychology. This study cites, among others, the following stereotyped beliefs about Negroes found amongst college students: superstitious, lazy, happy-go-lucky, inferior mentality, musical, gaudy and flashy in dress, boisterous, etc. Odd isn't it, that these beliefs seem to fit the actions of the Kake Walkers as they joke and high step their way toward the starting position in front of the King and Queen. It is also odd that the outlandish painted facial expression and flashy colors seem to blend in with other stereotyped beliefs. (We know that the colors of the costumes are those of the different fraternities.) Many people will say it's a coincidence, but is it? Place yourself in the shoes of a person belonging to a minority group and look at Kake Walk through his eyes. Minstrels, as characterized by the Kake Walkers, use the perpetuate a group of men as buffoons and clowns. It is like laughing at the tragic effects of the crime of enslavement. Is this what the students of UVM call symbolic beauty and honored tradition?

As far as abolishing "many accepted facets of our society," the point has been missed completely. One must distinguish between these things which are harmful, and those which are not. Anything which hinders the slow progress of any minority group in their rise up the ladder to equality, should be abolished. It is plain to see that Frederic

S. Halper does not understand the present problem at all. He becomes rather excited and uses thoughtless statements in some places. We wonder where he found time to poll all the viewers of Kake Walk to obtain the information which he states as true fact "in saying that no one, either student or visitor, has ever viewed Kake Walk as being discriminatory against the Negro." It is a shame that his mind is not as broad as his

The state had sources of income aplenty, but these were considered inadequate. There was the income tax (averaging just 3% below federal tax rates), the sales tax (11%), the poll tax ($37), automobile fees ($103), margarine taxes, trading stamp taxes, breath taxes, heart beat taxes, pet and animal taxes, taxes on taxes, and pari-mutuel betting on horses, dogs, people, mice and cockroaches. The drinking age had been lowered to 14 for revenue purposes, and savings banks were outlawed in an effort to get people to spend more (sales and income tax revenue). But, being a poor state, Vermont just did not have any money.

As for getting money for the University, Gov. Huffnpuff proposed a boost in tuition from $4000 to $4500, retroactive three years, for non-residents (about 45% of the students), and from $1000 to $1350, retroactive two years, for Vermonters. President Fee, however, pointed out that in-staters were already paying enough, and that the Privilege Of Being A Vermonter At UVM fee was already at $350, and said that the Governor's plan was impractical. He proposed raising out-of-state tuition by $1000, and giving the students fair warning of the rise (two months advanced notice, with the rise being retroactive only a year and a half). He also proposed that the Privilege Of Being A Non-Vermonters At UVM fee be raised from $550 to $600.

When the students heard of the proposed rise in tuition, they were angry. They scheduled a demonstration in Montpelier, printed inflammatory literature, planned a "vote-in" in the Vermont Legislature, and sent letters to the Governor, the Legislature, and to Pres. Fee. A crowd of 500 students in Montpelier stormed the State House crying "Naughty, naughty, Governor" over and over. Gov. Huffnpuff, however, rose to the occasion with a magnificent speech which, unfortunately, nobody could understand because the Governor was speaking on an entirely different subject, thus avoiding the issue at hand completely. To end his speech the Governor looked the crowd in the eye and yelled "Boo!" The crowd fled in terror, and once more Montpelier was saved.

The Comedy and Sham Battle of the Missing Money, needless to say, was never brought to a conclusion, and went down in history books alongside such famous epics as the Hatfield-McCoy feud, the Lincoln-Douglas debates, and the Burlington Free Press's War Against Progress.

PROFESSORES

It is to be lamented that the great talents of that resident gadfly, Professor Chaplin, have, of late, been directed toward Ann Landers, radio programs, and other ephemeral matters. This analysis, one hopes, will by its pitiful inadequacy call back those talents meant for mankind and lure them once again into the service of our school. Look homeward, Angel, now, and melt with ruth!

It has become a commonplace of psychology and literary criticism that a country's myths and tales reflect deep-seated attitudes toward life on the part of its people. Changes in the tales have special significance, therefore, since they are occasioned by changes -- often unconscious -- in the people's attitudes toward life. The story of Little Red Ridinghood is a case in point. In its original form, it is a compressed maturation experience: the girl's parents are destroyed, freeing her from their domination and at the same time exposing her to the dangers of life; then the dangers are destroyed in their turn as she gains a powerful husband and father-substitute. It is significant, then, and rather dismaying, that in the most recent retellings of the story Little Red Ridinghood fails to grow up, preferring to remain a dependent child. A distorted ending makes all the difference.

In its oldest form, the wolf eats Granny, disguises himself as her, and leaps at Little Red Ridinghood; she is saved by a woodchopper who kills the wolf. What happens afterward is vague, but the implication is not: a recent cartoon shows a small but mature Ridinghood frying eggs while the woodchopper lies in bed; she is complaining, "A week already and you haven't even buried the wolf." Clearly she has grown up.

In a transitional version, the wolf eats Granny, but when the woodcutter kills him, Granny jumps out alive from his stomach. Here of course is a fatal weakness. The reborn Granny functions as a substitute mother and a chaperone; the woodcutter can only tip his hat and go away; Little Red Ridinghood has missed her chance.

Latest version, however, is even worse. As the story is now told, the wolf hides Granny in a closet, from which she is later released; the woodcutter captures the wolf and sends him off to the zoo; and the story ends with Granny, the woodcutter, and Little Red Ridinghood picnicking together merrily on the lawn.

At first glance, this version might seem preferable to the others. Violence is avoided, everyone -- even the wolf, within reasonable limits -- is happy, and the ending is bathed in idyllic, pastoral good cheer. Unfortunately, all this sweetness has been achieved at the cost of falsification. Life is not like that; the child must turn against her parents' control, death must take the older generation, and sexual fulfillment ought not to be avoided. In this version (the woodcutter is usually illustrated as smiling not at Little Red Ridinghood but at a youthfully vivacious Granny) the values of growing up are suppressed along with the pains, and the older generation asserts its supremacy over the younger.

The most depressing thing about this version, of course, is that the psychological implications are so accurate. Little Red Ridinghood's willing acquiescence is obvious today in teenage fashions, which attempt to prolong childhood with ribbons and short skirts. The story's details are equally relevant, even to her acceptance of food as a satisfactory substitute for sex.

The assumptions of this new ending are summed up in the latest student center. The dangers of life are prettified away (What sensible child would want to eat, or even to inhale deeply, in a catamount's den?); the insistent tick of time is lost in the blating of the jukebox; and mature intercourse is replaced by the social consumption of high-priced calories. "O brave new world, that has such people in it!"

Dr. Bland Authors New Book

A UVM Associate Professor of Clinical Medicine is the author-editor of 623-page multi-authored medical book, "Clinical Metabolism of Body Water and Electrolytes."

Dr. John H. Bland of the College of Medicine and director of the Rheumatism Research Unit at UVM has written and edited the book which is aimed at emphasizing clinical medicine as it relates to laboratory research and at bridging the gap between basic and clinical investigation and bedside medicine.

He was joined by 21 contributors, including five from the UVM medical college faculty, in writing the book which is published by the W. B. Saunders Co. of Philadelphia and London.

"Contributors were asked to bring their field up to date in regard to progress in research in areas relevant to and usable in clinical medicine. There have been major advances in the past five years, especially in the areas of anatomy of body water and electrolytes, total body composition, intracellular hydrogen ion concentration, aldosterone and antidiuretic hormone regulation of water and electrolyte metabolism, transport systems and the relations among water, electrolyte, hydrogen ion and the connective tissue system. This new information is incorporated in the text," says Dr. Bland.

Contributors to the book represent 11 different schools of medicine. UVM personnel included E.A.H. Sims, George Welsh, Burton Tabakin, John Hanson, and Arthur Kunin.

Dr. Bland, a member of the UVM faculty since 1948, is also the author of two other books, "Arthritis, Medical Treatment and Home Care," and "Metabolism of Body Fluids."

vocabulary. If we are being over sensitive about stereotyped Kake Walk, than the American Italians who are battling to discontinue the T.V. program "The Untouchables" are also over sensitive; as can be said of all minority groups. We respect the differences of opinion of everyone, and Mr. Halper should do the same. If one's viewpoint is presented with an open mind, everyone is benefitted.

We realize that it is difficult to comprehend the difficulties and problems with which people of other races and nationalities are confronted. We suggest that those who see nothing harmful in Kake Walk forget tradition and try to view it through the eyes of those who find it far from being beautiful or artistic. Remember, "art for art's sake" is still harmful if it uses the stereotype to entertain at the expense of a racial or minority group.

Saga

To the Editor:
The date was April 20, 1963. The event was lunch in Saga's delightful dining hall. All the high school daddies were enjoying their first taste of Saga's culinary delights. While these kiddies were eating industriously away at their spaghetti or hot dogs, one college kiddie was eating Saga's delicious salad. This Kiddie, who was busy admiring all the prospective 1963 Freshwomen, suddenly looked down and saw a light brown specimen buried in his salad. Before this year this college kiddie might not have ever been able to recognize this specimen, but having taken almost on full semester of Zoology, he quickly concluded that this specimen belonged to Phylum Arthropoda and Class Insecta. It was a dead moth.

Naturally this college kiddie did not like the taste of moths; it was somewhat too bitter for him. Therefore, he did not eat it, but said to all his college comrades, "In his collegiate way of speaking, 'Comrades, look what I have found. It is a moth. It is a very big moth.'"

This college kiddie immediately rose from his seat and went to find the boss of Saga Food Service. He asked one of the employees, "Where is the boss?" "He is not here," answered the employee. Thereupon, this college kiddie, using his resources, asked to see the man in charge. He found the man in charge, and having shown him the cute little moth in the salad and having undergone 30 strenuous seconds of interrogation, the college kiddie was so very politely told, "Take another salad."

Moral of the story: Look before you eat.

Blood Drawing

To the Editor:

Contrary to public opinion as expressed by the CYNIC article (They Asked For Blood / And They Received It) and the Ethan Allen Rifle Club, the Blood Drawing on March 25 was a colossal failure.

Admitted some 177 donated. But since when do 177 out of over 4000 students and faculty constitute a satisfactory response, much less a "successful" one?

Why not be honest with ourselves? Why perpetuate these lies for the "I don't give a damn about anybody but myself" type of person to take refuge in.

Mr. Stearn, Director of the Regional Red Cross Blood Center in Burlington, has reason to be very, very disappointed. Middlebury, (1200 students approx.) donates 300 pints as does Norwich, which is of about equal size. St. Michael's donates a stupendous 380, or nearly 50%, so don't presume to think that other communities such as ours are cursed with the same mentality predominant at UVM. No, after begging and cajoling we just barely get a 5% response.

Why do you, dear reader, refuse to save someone's life? Are you apprehensive about a little prick in the arm? Or is yours the stock response: "I need my blood, I'm still growing." Better yet: "I'm an anemic." Seldom, indeed, is there ever a legitimate reason.

When a person needs blood, he needs it right there and then and it better be there. To meet that demand the Red Cross Blood Program was organized. Before you say no, consider exactly what it is you say no to.

But in a larger sense, the mentality which says "No" here has also denied the validity of much to which we claim to be committed to. Even an absurd status-quo has a way of acquiring reasonableness by virtue of its prolonged existence. In view of this it seems appropriate to remind ourselves of the true situation which exists only because we would have it so.

When will we dead awaken?

Among those attending the initiation ceremony were E.H. Williams III, son of the founder of Tau Beta Pi and grandson of the donor of Williams Science Hall (on the University's of Vermont Campus).

The banquet, which followed the initiation ceremony, was held at the Lincoln Inn. Guest speaker of the evening was Dr. R.V. Phillips who delivered an address on educational television and the proposed program for statewide ETV. Dr. Phillips has been assigned administrative responsibility for the development of ETV in Vermont.

Roger Brown was awarded the prize for submitting the best elective essay at the banquet. His paper was entitled Automation - A Desperate Dilemma.

Master of Ceremonies and outgoing president A.N. Daudelin noted that the past year has been a particularly dynamic one for the Vermont Alpha Chapter and summarized the chapter's activities and projects.

PLAYTIMERS ENTERTAIN CHILDREN

The Playtimers, a group of student members of the University Players, embarked upon their eighth annual spring tour during spring vacation.

Their nine-day tour found them giving a total of 18 performances for elementary school children in Vermont and Canada of "Doctor Knowall," adapted from a folk tale of the Brothers Grimm by Mary Ann Nicholson. Set in the Black Forest of Germany, the play is filled with the riddles, wit, and good fortune of a wood-cutter, his wife, and their friends.

Although under the sponsorship of the Department of Speech and Drama at Vermont, the entire production is student produced, including the directing.

Directing "Doctor Knowall" as well as playing a role is Bryant Reynolds of St. Albans. Other members of the cast include William Kittell of Richford, Sherri Hawkins of Essex Junction, Marianne Woods of Rutland, Grace Waldo of Randolph Center, Robert Coleman of Londonderry, John Dancos of White River Junction, Marian Moor of Garden City, N.Y., and James Adams of Barnstable, Mass.

A tight itinerary found the group sometimes giving three performances in three different towns, all in the same day. Such was the case when the troupe headed into Canada on April 10, for shows at Granby, Bedford, and Cowansville or on the previous day when they were in Poultney, Manchester, and S. Londonderry. They gave four performances in Bennington, the final leg of the trip, on April 16.

The complete schedule:
Monday, April 9-10 a.m., White River Jct., 11, Hartford; 1, Woodstock.
Tuesday - 9 a.m., Poultney; 12:30, Manchester; 3:30, S. Londonderry.
Wednesday - 9 a.m., Granby; 11, Cowansville; 2, Bedford.
Thursday - 9 a.m., Hardwick; 12:30, Waterbury; 2:30, Jericho.
Friday - 9 a.m., Bristol.
Monday, April 15 - 3 p.m., Williamstown.
Tuesday - 9 and 10 a.m., Bennington Elementary; 1 and 2 p.m., Bennington.

HOW TO SEE EUROPE FOR ONLY $300 A DAY: NO. 1

Summer vacation is just around the corner, and naturally all of you are going to Europe. Perhaps I can offer a handy tip or two. (I must confess that I myself have never been to Europe, but I do have a French poodle and a German shepherd, so I am not entirely unqualified.)

First let me say that no trip to Europe is complete without a visit to England, Scotland, Wales, Ireland, France, Germany, Spain, Portugal, Italy, Liechtenstein, Holland, Belgium, Luxembourg, Switzerland, Denmark, Sweden, Norway, Finland, Poland, Czechoslovakia, Latvia, Lithuania, Estonia, Russia, Greece, Yugoslavia, Albania, Crete, Sardinia, Sicily, Hungary, Rumania, Bulgaria, Lapland, and Andorra.

Let us take up these countries in order. First, England.

The old ones are thrown away

The capital of England is London—or Liverpool, as it is sometimes called. There are many interesting things to see in London—chiefly the changing of the guards. The guards are changed daily. The old ones are thrown away.

Another "must" while in London is a visit to the palace of the Duke of Marlborough. Marlborough is spelled Marlborough, but pronounced Marlboro. English spelling is very quaint, but terribly disorganized. The late George Bernard Shaw, author of Little Women, fought all his life to simplify English spelling. They tell a story about Shaw once asking a friend, "What does g-h-o-t-i spell?"

The friend pondered a bit and replied, "Goatee."

Shaw sniggered. "Pshaw," said Shaw. "G-h-o-t-i does not spell goatee. It spells fish."

"How is that?" said the friend.

Shaw answered, "Gh as in enough, o as in women, it as in motion. Put them all together, you get fish."

This was very clever of Shaw when you consider that he was a vegetarian. And a good thing he was. As Disraeli once remarked to Guy Fawkes, "If Shaw were not a vegetarian, no lamb chop in London would be safe."

But I digress. We were speaking of the palace of the Duke of Marlborough—or Marlboro, as it is called in the United States. It is called Marlboro by every smoker who enjoys a fine, rich breed of tobaccos, who appreciates a pure white filter, who likes a soft pack that is really soft, a Flip-Top box that really flips. Be sure you are well supplied with Marlboros when you make your trip abroad. After a long, tiring day of sightseeing there is nothing so welcome as a good flavorful Marlboro and a foot-bath with hot Epsom salts.

Epsom salts can be obtained in England at Epsom Downs. Kensington salts can be obtained at Kensington Gardens, Albert salts can be obtained at Albert Hall, Hyde salts can be obtained at Hyde Park, and the crown jewels can be obtained at the Tower of London.

The guards at the Tower of London are called Beefeaters because they are always beefing about what they get to eat. This is also known as "cricket" or "petrol."

Well, I guess that about covers England. In next week's column we will visit the Land of the Midnight Sun—France.

©1963 Max Shuman

Wherever you may roam in Europe and in all fifty states of the Union, you'll find Marlboro ever-present and ever-pleasant—filter, flavor, pack or box.

KENNEDY CHANGES COLLEGE AID PROGRAM

WASHINGTON (CPS) - President Kennedy has tightened his grip on legislation for aid to colleges and universities.

After meeting with the President Friday (March 29), House Democratic leaders announced they were dropping plans to push through a $2.7 billion college assistance bill. Instead, Administration backers indicated that the college aid program would be lumped together in the Kennedy omnibus aid to education package.

Administration sources said, however, that medical and dental schools would be getting separate treatment in a $237 million aid program, which House leaders plan to wrench out of the House Rules Committee next week.

Dropped was a college aid bill introduced by Rep. Edith Green (D. Ore.), Chairman of the House Special Education Subcommittee. Her measure would have provided assistance for all types of colleges, including medical and dental schools.

Mrs. Green, reportedly attended the White House meeting hours before her subcommittee was to have approved the program. Attending the meeting were Speaker John W. McCormack, House Democratic Whip Hale Boggs, Chairman Oren Harris of the House Commerce Committee, and Chairman Adam Clayton Powell of the House Labor and Education Committee. After the meeting, Mrs. Green adjourned her subcommittee and disclosed that no further work would be done on her measure at this time.

The Harris committee approved the Medical School Aid bill now in the Rules Committee. A 7-to-7 tie is expected to be broken next week when Administration supporter, Rep. Ray Madden, (D.-Ind.), casts the tie-breaking vote - sending the measure to the House floor.

The legislation provides a three year program with $175 million in grants for medical and dental school construction, and $61 million in loans for medical and dental school students.

The White House meeting reportedly solved a minor battle between Harris and Education Committee officials over who would control college aid. There was some indication that Harris might allow the loans to medical students to be extracted from his bill and handled by Education Committee officials.

New life was given to Kennedy's 24 point education package providing $5.3 billion for aid to education when Mrs. Green agreed to go along with majority opinion and support the omnibus bill. However, other Education Committee sources indicated that some parts of the Administration's package would be dropped, especially those that would fire a church-state dispute on Capitol Hill.

National representatives of colleges and universities were disappointed that Mrs. Green dropped her college aid bill. Strong, bi-partisan support was expected to carry the bill through the House. These supporters feel that if the college aid program is included in the omnibus education package, it could be killed indirectly by a congressional fight over other provisions in the 24-point program.

A Democratic caucus of the House Education Committee will consider new approaches to pilot school aid legislation when it meets this week.

SNCC To Aid Negroes

SELMA, Alabama (CRS) - Field secretaries for the Student Non-violent Coordinating Committee report that in addition to their activities in Greenwood, Miss., they have escorted Negroes to the Wilcox county courthouse in Camden, Alabama to register and vote for the first time in fifty years.

Wilcox county, according to the 1960 Civil Rights Commission report on voting, has 6,085 Negroes eligible to vote, and not a single Negro voter. The report states that 2,634 whites are eligible to vote, and 2,950 are registered (112.4%).

Frank Holloway, a SNCC field secretary, said there has never been a Negro voter in the county, and that when he and Bernard Lafayette, another SNCC field secretary, took six Negroes to register on March 18, they were unable to find anyone in the courthouse who could tell them where they had to go. The group spoke to the circuit clerk, the sheriff, a Probate Judge, and a former sheriff, and none of them had any information.

According to Holloway, Negroes had not tried to register in the county because of the long tradition of brutality against Negroes and the resultant fear.

SNCC field secretaries will make the next try in Camden, Ala. "This time, I hope we are able to find someone who can tell us who is supposed to register people in this county," Holloway said.

At least 27 persons have tried to register in Selma (Dallas county) in the past six weeks, when the SNCC voter registration project began. Staff members hold four registration classes a week, and have formed two Freedom Choirs to "spread the message of Freedom."

Latest registration figures in Dallas county are: (white) 14,400 voting age; 8,953 registered; (negro) 15,115 voting age, 250 registered.

UVM Orchestra Called A Success

The concert of the UVM Orchestra, under the direction of Dr. Frank Lidal, held last April 4th, proved to be a very interesting, if not entirely enjoyable experience.

The orchestra performed the "Il Re Pastore Overture" of Mozart, Haydn's Symphony #104, Bach's Brandenburg Concerto #5, "Aus Holberg's Zeit" of Edvard Grieg, and Kurt Kennan's "Promenade."

On the first half of the program, the group exhibited the qualities of a typically amateur orchestra. The violins slipped and squeaked, the horns faltered, and the winds were obviously all confused. There was also some question as to whether or not the musicians agreed consistently with Mr. Haydn's choice of key. The second part of the program was, however, a refreshing improvement.

Wherein lies the problem? There are several explanations. Firstly, as the players walked on stage, the decrease in adult participants and increase in student members, over those of previous years, were noticed. This factor, while somewhat depriving the audience of musical pleasure, does illustrate Dr. Lidal's noble intention of providing instrumental students, particularly music majors, with the opportunity to improve by experience. His goal is definitely important if he is, as I understand, attempting, with all his youthful vigor, to widen and broaden the scope of teaching facilities in our struggling music department. With some young members of the orchestra, success is evident. They are probably on the way to becoming accomplished musicians. However, among most of the freshman students, there appears to be a sad case of butterflies. As for the audience, they can always go to a Lane Series program.

Dr. Lidal must be complimented on the results he managed to achieve with the material at hand. This is especially true of his maintaining the lively tempo and proper dynamics. It is the observation of this aged critic that most amateur orchestras tend to fall down on the classics, here demonstrated by the Haydn and Mozart works, and to pick up as the music nears the Romantic school, shown by the Grieg. Dr. Lidal exercised his musical wisdom in selecting some works to highlight the more proficient musicians in the group, as evidenced quite clearly in the Bach.

I have heard, from those acquainted with him, of the conductor's warm, sincere friendliness. However, one in authority begins to sense the drawbacks of too much likeability as he matures. It soon becomes obvious that, at a certain point, he must crack the whip and demand respect and accomplishment. Perhaps this is partly the problem, but I am in no position to advise.

As for the soloists, they made the Brandenburg #5 the nearly excellent reading it was. Jane Perlis exhibited fine, articulate command of her instrument. The audience was held almost spellbound (and I imagine some of the lesser pianists were ashamed of themselves) as Nola Marberger ran through her extremely intricate passages on the harpsichord with incredible facility. Mr. Green should be greatly admired by the students on this campus. He performs much better in a group than as an individual. However, among certain members of the general orchestra, in some instances, staunch individuality was in the poorest taste. The last work on the program, the "Promenade," was loud and flashy, as in most modern music, particularly American. This feature tended to distract the audience's attention from its musical value.

I come to the natural conclusion that Dr. Lidal is fresh and young, the orchestra is in a transition period between being old and experienced, and being young and experiencing. One can only hope that all those involved will emulate fine wine and good blue cheese.

Faculty Recital Lauded

A faculty recital of chamber music was given in the Marble Court of the Fleming Museum at 3 P.M., Sunday, April 21. This was the fourth in a series of six faculty recitals announced for the 1962-1963 season.

The program, a recital of baroque music, was staged as a part of the Fine Arts Festival. Featured were Miss Nola I. Marberger, Instructor of Music, at the harpsichord; Miss Jane Perlis, a music graduate student, on the flute; Mr. Roland D. Patzer, Dean of Men, tenor; Mrs. Kathryn Tampas, a faculty wife, mezzo-soprano; and Mrs. Barbara Weinrich, a faculty wife, soprano.

Opening the afternoon's program was "Two Sonatas for Flute and Harpsichord" by Telemann (1681-1767), performed by Miles Perlis and Marberger. Miss Marberger continued with a solo, "Sixth Suite for Harpsichord," by Couperin (1668-1753). Four short selections -- "March" by J. K. F. Fisher (1650-1746), "Symphonie" by Handel (1685-1759), "Rigaudon" by Staden (1581-1634), and "March" by an anonymous composer (c. 1700) -- featured Miss Perlis on treble recorder, Mrs. Weinrich on alto recorder, and Miss Marberger at Harpsichord. The same three individuals also performed "Corydon," a Cantata for Soprano and Flute and "Continuo" by Pepusch (1667-1762).

Following an intermission, Miss Marberger performed "Sonatas for Harpsichord" by Scarlatti (1685-1757). To round out the program, the afternoon ended with two compositions by J. S. Bach (1685-1750). First was "Benedictus," from the Mass in B Minor, with Miss Marberger and Dean Patzer, followed by "Have Mercy, Lord, on Me," Aria from the Passion according to St. Matthew, with Mrs. Tampas, Miss Perlis, and Miss Marberger.

A gallery reception followed the fine performance. Admission was free, and all who attended experienced an enjoyable and rewarding afternoon.

Part-Time Government Jobs Illegal

WASHINGTON (CPS) - The U.S. Civil Service Commission has blocked attempts to turn summer government jobs for students into political patronage.

In a searing statement, the CSC said political clearance for part-time government jobs is "illegal and will not be tolerated."

The commission announced that competition examinations would be held for the jobs, starting next year. The CSC notified heads of all federal departments and agencies against hiring student workers this summer because of political pressures.

The action came after the commission learned of a story in the "National College Democrat," the publication of the National Federation of College Young Democrats. The story reportedly gave detailed information on how students could get political clearance from the White House for the summer jobs. It was reported that students were told to contact the Campus Director of the Democratic National Committee about the jobs.

College democrats were then advised to send their job applications to White House Aide Mrs. Dorothy Davies. Mrs. Davies said earlier, however, that the White House was merely coordinating the summer jobs program and, "making sure the good students don't get lost in the shuffle."

The White House had sent all government agencies requests for data sheets on students they planned to hire for the summer jobs -- specifically asking by whom the summer workers were recommended.

Repeated assurances by Kennedy Administration officials that no politics were involved apparently didn't impress the CSC.

"We were sorry to have to do it," said one commission spokesman, "but we were placed in an impossible situation where our honor and virtue and the integrity of the system were at stake."

To enforce the anti-political order, the commission revoked the authority of government agencies to make temporary appointments. The power won't be returned unless the CSC is convinced that appointments are made without political clearances.

During the summer, the CSC said its staff would make sure all summer appointments comply with its rules and regulations.

Several government agency officials reportedly told the CSC that the summer jobs were to be filled on a political basis despite the commission regulations.

The hard-hitting order was sent to President Kennedy and the press simultaneously. The CSC order will cancel commitments made to hundreds of students for summer employment. The commission emphasized that agencies must use present competitive lists to fill jobs this summer unless their hiring authority is restored.

Students who have passed students-aid, trainee or other federal entrance or qualification exams will have a better chance. They will be on the lists used for the summer jobs.

Last summer, almost 10,000 were hired for government jobs, more than half of them in the Washington area. Kennedy Administration officials and cabinet members last summer addressed student workers, telling them of the need for career civil servants. (continued on page nine)

Douglas Accuses Education Of Dispensing Propaganda

WASHINGTON (CPS) - Supreme Court Justice William O. Douglas has rapped the wrists of American education.

In a recent Washington speech, Douglas accused U.S. education with dispensing racial, religious and ideological propaganda.

Douglas told a National Civil Liberties Clearing House meeting that free inquiry is needed in today's education. "There is, I fear, more propaganda in our education than we appreciate. There is often a failure in our education to acquaint the students with the world as it is."

Douglas pinned some of the blame on textbooks: "Many texts subtly downgrade Negroes in favor of the whites. Some . . . proclaim Protestantism over Catholicism, and Christianity over Judaism by failing to describe the history of religious liberty in a fair way."

Douglas called the teaching of Communism "a fad" in American education circles. "But we found that in spite of our preoccupation in denouncing it, we had few teachers qualified to teach it," he said. "Moreover, the tendency has been to serve a political rather than an educational need." "Is there," he asked, "enough courage and independence left to disclose what features of the Soviet system are not evil?"

"Americanism," Douglas said, "is often taught as a brief for whatever American foreign policy may be in effect, no matter how defeating it may be."

Complementing the propaganda problem, Douglas said, is censorship: "Many groups would restrict education to those materials which reflect that image of America they espouse. These groups have a passion for shifting books in school libraries to find ideological strays."

The "sifters," he said, included economic theorists, puritans, religious groups, isolationists and segregationists. Douglas said the sifters' standard of education is "largely propaganda for one point of view or one school of thought," - a system, he added, used by Communists.

Douglas then listed a number of publications banned in various school districts, noting, with a smile, that one group had outlawed a brochure entitled, "The Rule of Law in World Affairs," by Justice Douglas. Needed, to combat propaganda and censorship said Douglas, "is courage to face competing ideas and confidence that they will not overwhelm us." "It does our youth an injustice to assume that many of their minds can be corrupted by blandishments either from the extreme right or extreme left."

"We need task forces," he said, "which make as sure as possible that literature in our schools is adequate for multi-racial, multi-religious and multi-ideological groups that make up our nation."

"But that's not all," he said. "There is more to the free society than the maintenance of free and open discussion. We need continuous education in (the Bill of Rights) values, and only the task forces that are active in a community can turn the tides of intolerance, conformity and ignorance that often engulf us."

Bad Politics

WALTHAM, Mass. (CPS) - The Faculty Senate of Brandeis University voted to reprimand President Abraham Sachar for committing "an error of judgment which could be interpreted as an infringement of academic freedom."

A man and wife professorial team resigned recently, claiming pressure had been exerted upon them. Vocal support from the wife for Cuban Premier Castro provoked the pressure.

Reportedly, the critical faculty statement was originally intended to be a formal motion of censure.

Referring to an earlier Presidential reprimand of Mrs. Aberle, the statement released on March 28, continued, "(the) resignation prevents a clear test of whether or not this action was a violation of academic freedom."

The Anthropology Professor, a British subject, resigned on March 3, later making clear that she had been pressured out. Her husband, head of the Anthropology Department, resigned the following day.

Mrs. Aberle was reprimanded by President Sachar for an October speech in which she voiced strong sympathy for Castro. In February, when the entire faculty received a salary raise, she and her husband were granted less than half the increase allowed to every other professor. Three weeks later, several members of the Faculty Senate approached her unofficially and warned that she was not likely to receive tenure the following year.

On March 2, the day before her resignation, Mrs. Aberle made a last visit to the President. She reported that, "It was to no avail."

In a statement released to the Justice on March 26, Mrs. Aberle stated, "I believe my case touches on the question of Political freedom in University life."

In a press conference reply, President Sachar declared that he stood by his reprimand and by the University's record of Academic freedom. In Mrs. Aberle's case, however, he objected to her manner and language. He denied that he was denying her academic freedom. He made no comment on the question of salaries or tenure.

The October 24 speech affirmed . . . I am one who supports Castro and his revolutionary government . . . I admire Castro very deeply as one of the great American heroes of the mid-Twentieth Century. I feel pity and sorrow for him in this terrible time and crisis . . . If there should be a limited war, Cuba will win and the U.S. will be shamed before all the world and its Imperialist hegemony in Latin America ended forever."

Area Studies Program Launched At UVM

by Joan Klonsky

Currently in its rapidly progressing developmental stage at the University of Vermont is a Center for Area Studies. Authorized by the University trustees in February, 1962, for the benefit of undergraduate students, the program is intended "to encourage and co-ordinate interdisciplinary study of selected foreign areas, to promote research on foreign areas, and to stimulate general interest in these areas."

Courses are not offered by the Center directly, but rather through the members of the Committee on Area Studies who offer the various courses in their respective departments.

As chairman of the Center, and thereby charged with coordinating the area studies program at UVM, is Professor Daniels. Thus far, two areas have been planned for undergraduate study - Latin America, headed by Professor Gould; and the Soviet Union and Eastern Europe, headed by Professor Dellin. Other areas are presently being considered potentially for study.

The significance of the program is that a student can now major in an area. One has no specific major of minor, per se, but rather, the major lies within overall departmental area concentration. As in other curricula, there are certain prerequisite courses, including history, literature, economics, anthropology, languages and sociology, which provide the student simultaneously with a well-rounded, broad education.

To answer the inevitable question of the practicality of the program, Professor Gould asserts aptly and succinctly that the program is aimed toward providing the student with a liberal arts education, strengthened by an "inter-disciplinary approach with a geographic rationale."

Students interested in Latin America should consult Professor Gould, Department of Political Science, 212 Old Mill. Students interested in Russia and Eastern Europe should consult Professor Dellin, Department of Commerce and Economics, 222 Old Mill.

Vermont Needs New Catamount

by Fitzgerald

Soon, lounging in the enveloping rays of the afternoon Vermont sun, will be seen a golden, soft body... for this is the dormant season.

In the fall, a mighty golden beast of nature will arise from the cooling shadows. Soft, golden... but might... For this is the season of strength, of vitality - yes, even of spirit!

There! That soft, golden, unsullied symbol of spirit arises to lead us - to victory. Yes, for he is the mighty CHARLIE CATAMOUNT (one minute of reverence, please).

Who will inhabit the golden fur trappings of this erstwhile lounging? This September season shepherd? Who, I ask you? Frankly, I don't know.

So, if you like living in a fur coat, basking in Spring rays of sun, and acting abnormal (and by UVM standards, it is), then and only then submit your application.

That's right! You, youth of America, can be the next Charlie Catamount. Just write down your name, telephone number, and qualifications on a slip of paper and hand it in to the PEP COMMITTEE mailbox at the main information desk in Billings.

Tennis Preview

This year's varsity tennis team faces a tough schedule with a team of great potential. Coach Fred Marston has welcomed back four members of last year's team and the four top members of last year's freshman team. Led by Senior Captain Pete Jellinek who played number 1 singles last year, the Cats expect to have a strong squad with great depth. Dick Holden and Jim Freedman, the one-two punch of last year's frosh will figure high in Coach Marston's plans. Holden is an excellent singles player and was undefeated with Freedman in doubles last year. Steve Ratner may be next in line. The remaining positions are a toss-up between four boys. Senior Steve Krintzman, Junior Harry Dickerson, and Sophomores Marty Hackel and Bill Newman. Newman and Hackel will probably work as one of the doubles combinations. Krintzman has a lot of experience and Dickerson is coming along well. The Cats will be facing a tough schedule this year with many away matches. Highlights of the year will be the Yankee Conference Championships at the University of Rhode Island. Vermont has won this championship many times and has a good chance this year. The Cats will also play in the New England at Hanover at the end of the season. As usual the Vermont team is going to have a tough time with arch-rival Middlebury as they too have a strong potential.

by Bernie Zaccaro

It's springtime in Vermont and the air is filled with football. Yes, I said football. The UVM varsity football team is now undergoing its annual spring football practice session.

Coach Bob Clifford has planned a 15 day term for the '63 Catamounts. Over 55 men have turned out for practice, a number which exceeds the expected amount. The boys began drills on April 17 and will conclude the period with the Green and Gold inter-squad game on May 4.

Among the kinks Bob Clifford will be attempting to iron out during spring drills are the tackle and quarterback situations. "We have only one letterman out for practice who is a tackle and that is Tom Mongeon of Burlington-St. Albans; and not a single freshman tackle," moans Clifford, who is embarking upon his second year as head coach of the Catamounts.

Elected to captain the Cats through next year's season is veteran center, George Oelze. Clifford and the team have much confidence in this rugged, offensive-defensive standout. George has already spurred the spirit of the squad to an outstanding point.

Prospects for the quarterback spot are sophomores-to-be Scot Titz of Nashua, N.H., and John O'Dea, of Union City, N.J. Both boys show much experience and depth at the position and will be receiving a close watch from Coach Clifford. Jim Brennan, who saw limited action as an offensive signal caller last fall as a sophomore, is bypassing spring drills in favor of baseball as will halfback Wayne Van Ham, a junior. Halfbacks Ken Burton and Pete Weiss are attempting to combine track and football.

Clifford plans to have contact the first day, saying, "we're going to be hitting early and often." Much attention will be given to the freshmen and sophomores who, at this early stage, could nail down as many as nine starting berths come next fall. GOOD LUCK COACH!

Riflemen Take Crown

Although the Yankee Conference championship and a berth in the finals of the New England Rifle League championship escaped the UVM rifle team this year, Coach Joel Surrall's team has captured even a bigger prize -- the First Army ROTC inter-collegiate Rifle crown. Firing in postal competition against 37 other colleges, Vermont picked up the crown with a 2531 score to finish 16 points ahead of the second place team, Norwich. In varsity competition this season, the Cadets handed Vermont a pair of setbacks.

Ten men fired for each team in the prone, kneeling, and standing positions, 10 shots per firer in each position. The maximum individual score possible was 300, the team score 3000.

Haurilick posted a perfect score of 100 in the prone position and was the only person to do so in any position out of the 380 individuals competing in the match.

MIT, which won the New England Rifle League title, finished 10th.

Freshman Baseball

by Boyd Tomasetti

On Wednesday, March 13, Coach John "Fuzzy" Evans called a meeting for all interested Freshman baseball candidates. At this meeting Fuzzy outlined the practice schedule, and took the names and positions of the candidates. Coach Evans also told the players the schedule that has been arranged. The Kittens will definitely play six games, and there is a possibility of two other games. Included in the schedule are two double leaders with both Dartmouth and Norwich. There are also two single games with St. Lawrence University. Tentatively scheduled are Johnson Teachers, and Vermont Agriculture and Technical Institute.

The following Monday, the thirty hopeful candidates began working out in the cage. Practice had to be held at night because of the varsity. For the first two weeks, Ace Santa Croce, former UVM diamond great, coached the team while Fuzzy was out of town. The first few days was mainly taken up with conditioning, while the boys got accustomed to the new Field House. After that, however, things settled down, and practice began in earnest. While the pitchers loosened their arms, the rest of the team had batting and infield practice.

Golfers Ready To Go

Captain John "Moose" Donnelly talks things over with his father, Ed. (Credit: Eldred, Audio-Visual)

by Mel Bloomenthal

The 1963 version of the UVM golf team initiates this season's competition Thursday against U. of Mass. and Holy Cross at Amherst, Mass.

Heading the ten-man squad this year is Captain John "Moose" Donnelly. Donnelly, a junior, was the Vermont State Amateur Golf Champion last year. Also returning are Bob Opaleski, Vin Higuera, and Joe Zickerman. Dick Melowitz and Gary Pearson have been tied up with studies, but will come out for the team shortly.

Completing the squad are three men who have previously been engaged in other sports. Jerry McGee, who played tennis last spring, Mike Yendzeski, a member of last year's baseball team, and Ted Jayk, tied up with football in the past, will all be "taking to the links" this spring.

Coach Ed Donnelly is definitely handicapped this year, losing the services of two of last season's top men. Mike Fay, the number two man, was injured in an automobile accident, and will miss the entire season. The number three man, Bob Whitman, will be lost due to scholastic difficulties.

Coach Donnelly added that he is "not anticipating a strong golf season, but everybody is returning and the fall golf season should prove stronger."

Last fall the Cats finished fourth in the New England, behind Dartmouth, Rhode Island, and U. Conn. The linksmen are looking forward to this year's New England, which is May 9- less than two weeks away.

Looking at the schedule, Donnelly sees U. Mass, Dartmouth, and Holy Cross as tough competitors, but notes that the state opponents--Norwich, Middlebury, and St. Michael's as also being tough.

Donnelly points out that the late start of the golf season in Vermont leaves the team at a definite disadvantage, since other teams have played in several matches already. The Burlington Country Club course, where the team practices, at this time has only temporary tees and greens. Therefore, the players lack valuable putting experience. However, as Coach Donnelly has said, the team is more experienced by the fall, and he expects them to do well at that time.

Lane Series To Present Summer Music Festival

Thomas Scherman, conductor and music director of The Little Orchestra.

This coming summer, instead of presenting the usual series of concerts, the Lane Committee will offer a festival -- the Lane Summer Music Festival. Featured the sole attraction will be the world-famous Little Orchestra of New York, which will offer six evening concerts and a children's performance surveying "Three Centuries of Music for Chamber Orchestra and Large Chamber Ensembles."

The two-week music festival will be held on the campus of the University of Vermont during July 17-27.

Director of the Festival will be The Little Orchestra's founder and Music Director, Thomas Scherman.

The Festival is being sponsored by the University's George Bishop Lane Artists Series. All concerts will be in the Ira Allen Chapel. Both season subscription and single admissions will be offered. The Festival is open to the public.

Featured with Scherman and members of The Little Orchestra will be three soloists, including soprano Irene Jordan, pianist Eileen Fliessler, and actress Peggy Wood.

In addition to their Festival performances, Scherman and members of The Orchestra will be in residence on the Vermont campus, taking part in a number of activities of the University's Music Department, including lectures and private lessons.

Founded by Thomas Scherman in 1947, The Little Orchestra has given more than 600 programs thus far, including the presentation of nearly 50 world premieres, 40 New York premieres and 30 U.S. premieres of orchestral works and concert versions of more than 40 operas, most of them previously unperformed in our time.

The Orchestra has made numerous tours of the United States and has appeared in eight far-eastern countries under President Eisenhower's Special International Program for Cultural Presentations.

Marion Force, student chairman of the Lane Committee, said that the Lane Committee hopes that The Little Orchestra will have a permanent summer home on UVM's campus and that in time the Lane Summer Music Festival will develop into a festival comparable to those at Berkshire and Marlboro.

The complete schedule of concerts is as follows: Wed., July 17, soloist, Irene Jordan; Thurs., July 18, soloist, Irene Jordan; Sat., July 20, soloist, Eileen Fliessler; Mon., July 22, soloist, Eileen Fliessler; Thurs., July 25, soloist, Peggy Wood; and Sat., July 27, soloist, Peggy Wood.

The three concerts of July 17, 20 and 25 may be purchased on a Series Season ticket for $4.00. The three concerts on July 18, 22 and 27 may be purchased together for $4.00. Single concert tickets will be priced at $1.50 each.

The Youth Concert will be held on Friday, July 26, from 8-9 p.m. Tickets will be 50¢. Adults accompanied by youths will be admitted at the same price.

Proceeding each of the six regular concerts, and beginning at 7 p.m., and lasting for approximately one hour, Mr. Scherman will present a musically illustrated lecture on the program for the evening. These lectures will be free to holders of tickets for the evening concert immediately following.

Tickets will go on sale about the first of June.

National Student Association To Sue State Of Alabama Suit Brought To Admit Negroes To State U.

PHILADELPHIA (CPS) - The United States National Student Association announced this week that it will undertake an action without precedent in the 15-year history of the association -- a law suit against the State of Alabama.

USNSA National Affairs Vice-President Timothy Manning, of the Washington State University, told the Collegiate Press Service that USNSA will bring the suit in an attempt to secure the admission of two Negro students to the University of Alabama. The applications of the two students, Marvin Carroll and David McGlathery, were denied by the university earlier this year when they attempted to enroll for courses at the university's extension in Huntsville.

Both of the students are employed as scientists by the federal government. Carroll works at the Redstone Arsenal and McGlathery is connected with the National Aeronautics and Space Administration. They both wished to take courses connected with their work. Manning charged that their admissions were turned down "on insignificant technicalities." The university asserted that the applications were incomplete.

Manning said that USNSA had been assured of a grant from the Field foundation to cover the expenses of the lawsuit. Charles Morgan, a white lawyer from Birmingham, will be retained by USNSA to conduct the suit. USNSA hopes that the students can be admitted for the summer session this year.

USNSA has taken many positions in regard to student rights and equal rights for students in the South in the past, but this will be the organization's first venture into legal action to defend the rights of individual students.

USNSA, an organization of some 400 college and university student governments, establishes its policies by vote of delegates from each member school at an annual convention. The officers of the group are then charged with carrying out those policies during the year. Manning said that, although the undertaking of legal action in the defense of the rights of two students was unprecedented in the history of USNSA, the action was "clearly in line with the policy of the association."

Manning added that "The officers of the association weighed the case carefully before deciding to become involved. Before taking such a step, we wanted to make sure that the case was clearly in line with the policy of the association and that there were some unique points that could be made through the association's involvement. The case is clearly in line with the association's policy regarding equal educational opportunity for all regardless of race, religion or creed, and with the association's interest in the desegregation of public educational institutions."

Manning asserted that the legal action would demonstrate to the nation the deep interest that American students have in such cases. He added, "USNSA was deeply concerned over the events at the University of Mississippi last fall. We think that the case at the Huntsville extension will help avoid a recurrence of violence when the University of Alabama's main campus at Tuscaloosa is integrated this fall. Because of the clear interests of the federal government, the background, abilities and interests of the two individuals involved make this case one with some unique points. We think it is important to make clear the interest that American students have in such cases."

The University of Alabama is under federal court order to admit Negro students when they apply. The university administration avoided a showdown earlier this year by closing down admissions before the applications of Negroes could be processed. It is expected that the school will have to admit a few Negroes in the fall, and many officials have expressed fear of "another Ole Miss." The state government is pledged to maintain segregation in the state -- the last in the union without a single integrated public classroom.

Furnishing Of Billings Under Way

Billings Student Center, which has been in operation since Kake Walk weekend, will no longer appear bare and unfurnished. Dean Rowell reported that $43,000 will be spent for the furniture that will, by next fall, make our student center a comfortable and convenient place for study and relaxation.

The Furniture Selection Committee: Dr. Trotter of the Home Economics Department, Dr. Jansen of the Fleming Museum, and Dr. Marvin of the Botany Department has ordered for the apse, the round room with the study alcoves, a 10 ft. round table, and some 2-seater couches and lamps. The obstacle-like crate that now lies in the middle of the room contains the circular rug for the floor. Around the table will be placed antique "Richardson" chairs like the ones now being used in the study alcoves. Filled with furniture, the room will be even more conducive to study.

This fall, everything in the main lobby will be centered around the fireplace, which will definitely be in operation. There will be two huge eight-seater couches with a coffee table between them and two padded benches opposite and near the clock.

The Marsh Room will serve as the formal lounge. The room will in a sense be divided by two separate area rugs; one side facing the fireplace will contain chairs and couches and the other the hi-fi, television and a long table.

The areas under the balcony in the North Lounge activities room will be carpeted and furnished with chess and checker card tables. In the center of the room there will be three sections, each containing couches, coffee tables and leather chairs. It is hoped that some day the study booths will be equipped to serve as music rooms.

Financial Aid

The deadline for Financial Aid Applications for continuing students is May 15. They will be accepted after that date only if the student shows extenuating circumstances prevented him from submitting his application earlier. Complete applications should be turned into the Financial Aid Office, 159 Waterman, and an appointment made to see the Director of Financial Aid, Mr. Reed Saunders. Application forms can also be picked up at the same office.

Does a man really take unfair advantage of women when he uses Mennen Skin Bracer?

All depends on why he uses it.

Most men simply think Menthol-Iced Skin Bracer is the best after-shave lotion around. Because it cools rather than burns. Because it helps heal shaving nicks and scrapes. Because it helps prevent blemishes.

So who can blame them if Bracer's crisp, long-lasting aroma just happens to affect women so remarkably?

Of course, some men may use Mennen Skin Bracer because of this effect.

How intelligent!

Shearing Quintet Performance Praised

By Mike Baker

The Shearing touch was certainly in hue last Thursday evening as George Shearing and his quintet gave a very fine performance at the Memorial Auditorium. The Capitol recording artist displayed the excellent musicianship and artistry which critics have applauded since he gained popularity in 1949. Every tune played seemed to show that his group is a well polished, yet diversified one.

Comprising the group were Ron Anthony on guitar, Bill Yancey on bass (Incidentally, he replaced the late Israel Crosby, formerly with Ahmad Jamal), Vernell Forrier on drums, and the nineteen year old Gary Burton, who critics say is probably the best vibist since Milt Jackson of the MJQ. Shearing introduced himself as Erroll Garner and played accordingly.

Although Shearing's performance was flawless, it didn't confirm the fact, in this reviewer's eyes, that the quintet sounded like a "pure" jazz group. Unlike Miles Davis et. al., his technique is lacking in that it misses that dynamic punch which a "pure" jazz group must have. Most of Shearing's improvisations seemed to be rehearsed and boring. On "Folks Who Live on the Hill," "There With You," and various other Shearing standards, there is no variation in the improvisation and it sounded sort of baffled, or shall we say, lacking "soul." On the other hand,

"Lee's Blues" and "Jackie's Mambo" appeared to show Shearing uninhibited and creative. On "Blues," vibist Burton gave one of the finest displays of creativity that this reviewer has seen in a long time. This up-tempo minor blues gave Burton a chance to display his virtuosity and he stunned the audience with some rather odd sounding thirds. On "Mambo," Shearing's congo drummer, Armando Peraza, gave an Olatunji display as he beat out a rhythm that couldn't help but be appreciated. But, it is too bad that these two pieces were the only ones to support the quintet's greatness.

The group has a very "pretty" sound with the piano, vibes, and guitar playing the lead line together. Yet, as some critics say, Shearing has fallen into the pit of commercialism, and rather than playing to a jazz-conscious audience, he plays to the mass, somewhat like Jonah Jones except the talent is present!

Probably the most disappointing thing about this group is that they "tried" to play some bossa nova and drastically failed. This was especially evident in the last tune, the "One Note Samba." Shearing should pack his bags and move down to Brazil for a while!

Yet, aside from all this criticism, one must take Shearing for what he is: an excellent musician, a fine showman, with plenty of talented help behind him. But if he is an example of what is to follow in "jazz," I think I'll start liking Calypso music again!

Helen Keith Presented At Cherry Blossom Festival

by Lois Allison

While Easter saw UVM students sunning on the beaches of Bermuda, toiling in the libraries of New York, and hitching along the East Coast, perhaps the most unique of vacation experiences was enjoyed by freshman Helen Keith, Massachusetts' delegate to the annual Washington, D.C. Cherry Blossom Festival. Helen was one of 52 princesses from all the states as well as Puerto Rico and Guam, and, in her regal capacity, entered upon a week-long whirl of activities jointly sponsored by Washington, D.C. Board of Trade and the Japanese Embassy.

The activities began on Monday, April 1, with the lighting of the lantern by the Japanese Embassy, marking the official opening of the Cherry Blossom Festival. (It was the Japanese, incidentally, who first brought these blossoms to Washington, D.C.) Following this, the princesses were introduced to the officers for the armed forces who were to serve as their escorts for the week.

On Tuesday, the girls were treated to a complimentary hair-do and makeup job by Lilly Dache, as well as two fashion shows at the Mayflower Hotel. The princesses were presented twice the day; first at the pool by the New International Inn, and that night, at a ball held by the Conference of State Societies.

Wednesday and Thursday both brought receptions—first, a state reception held for Helen by the Massachusetts State Society and the Ocean Spray Company. The next day, Thursday, each princess was presented under her state flag at a reception held at the Japanese Embassy. Entertainment was provided for the latter by the Drum and Bugle Corps of the Old Guard, Third Battalion.

Rehearsals for the upcoming pageant were held that Friday at the Washington Monument. That evening there was a televised Coronation Ball during which a queen was chosen from among the princesses by the spinning of a wheel.

There was a parade on Saturday up Constitution Avenue, attended by more than 175,000 people. Each princess had her own float and band; Helen rode a Moby Dick Float accompanied by a New Bedford, Mass. band. The pageant was held that evening with each escort introducing his princess. Sunday saw a repeat performance of the pageant and closing parties for all the princesses and their sponsorships.

Admittedly cynical at first, Helen found the Festival "a wonderful experience and an excellent opportunity to meet people."

Tibetan Art

Displayed At Fleming Museum

A colorful exhibition of 16th and 17th century Tibetan Temple Hangings, or Tankas, loaned by the Olsen Foundation, is now on view at the Fleming Museum, together with related Tibetan material from the Museum's own collection.

The Tankas fused the patterns of Indian and Chinese art with all their intricate design and rich colors highlighted with gold. Part of Tibetan Lamaism, they were painted as "Banners" to hang in Temples and family altars and to be carried in religious processions. Like the Illuminated Manuscripts of Medieval Europe, the paintings were done by anonymous copyists from handed-down models. The makers combined imagination with devoted workmanship. Each represents a deity surrounded by groups of lesser deities and scenes from the lives of Tibetan Saints and teachers.

More than a painting to be admired and prayed to, the Tanka had a magic power all its own. Ceremoniously consecrated by a living Buddha, each Tanka became endowed with a special power associated with the particular Deity it represented, which in turn was passed on to the Beholder, which influenced his station in future reincarnations.

The Olsen Foundation Tankas are framed for preservation, but the Fleming Museum Collection shows one in its original state as a scroll on bamboo rods. Also from the Museum Collection is a Tibetan skull-drum made of two human skulls and covered with human skin, used for rituals, silver prayer wheels, and a charming bronze foot-scratcher used to scrape the feet before entering a Temple. Another bronze piece has petals that open and close around a Buddha, symbolizing the heart enclosing the Deity.

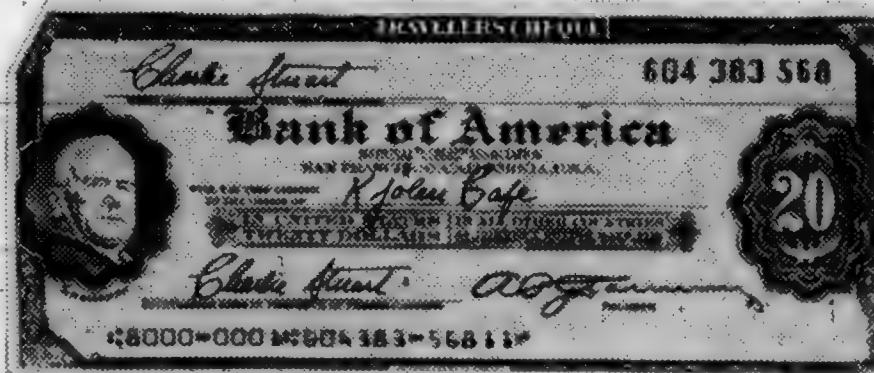

On April 24, a Gallery Talk by Robert Reiff, of the Art Department at Middlebury College, discussed the intricacies of the Tankas and their Art.

The exhibition will continue through May 5.

The View From Here

Study In Self-Delusion

One of the most wonderful things about this country of ours is that it abounds with all sorts of people with plans to save the world. While they all have different plans for the coming Utopia, there is one thing that they have in common: their naivete; and their efforts to try to reform people, are tremendously funny.

One group has even gone so far as to take a full page ad in the Sunday New York Times. The group, called Moral Re-Armament, has never made much noise, but they have apparently gotten in with the right people, or they would not be able to buy a whole page in the Times. It is for everyone's benefit that they did run the ad, since it is one of the most revealing studies in self-righteousness, fallacious logic, and pure naivete ever to appear in so public a place.

The main part of the advertisement consisted of two columns of matching statements of what MRA is for and against. Some of the statements are those generalities which sound so nice but which mean so little, while others are the usual lines one would expect from such a group, and still more are classic non-sequiturs. For example:

FOR Intelligent National Security.

AGAINST
Sexual deviants in high places who protect potential spies.

FOR A Free Press

AGAINST
Those who bully newspapermen for obeying their conscience. And newspapermen who abuse their liberty by distorting or suppressing news of Moral Re-Armament. (Italics ours - Ed.)

FOR Peace.

FOR
God's standard of absolute purity.

AGAINST
Homosexuality, lesbianism, pornography, adultery, lies which say sin is no longer sin when enough people come to like it. Preoccupation with dirt which robs a nation of sweat and skill and helps to lose its market. (Huh? - Ed.)

FOR
Great Art in theater, films, television.

FOR Truth.

FOR
God, Christ as personal Friend (See Ossenberger in Catcher in the Rye - Ed.) and Saviour, a Church aflame with the Holy Spirit. (The same Holy Spirit that caused the useless Crusades (one of which killed 30,000 children) and the Inquisition? Or the Holy Spirit that made the Turks burn the library at Alexandria?)

Aside from the utter ridiculousness of some of the statements, and the self-righteousness of others, something more important emerges from the ad. One can see, by reading this ad, exactly what is wrong with the groups trying to save the world: SANE, War Registers League, MRA, Turn Toward Peace, and all the others.

What emerges is that the basic fault of every one of these groups is their own incapacity to realize that they do not have all the answers. The ad shows, in just a few statements, how one organization (which differs but little from any of the others) is deluding itself with pat answers that have never worked, with horribly bad logic (e.g., the first "AGAINST," above), and with an extremely naive belief that human nature can be changed just by having people resolve to be nice and pure.

Too, each of these world-savers is sure that his particular nostrum is the best one and the only workable one, and that all the others are poor imitations at best, and charlatans at worst. This little war between the many groups of world-savers, some of which are potentially very effective, makes all their efforts futile, when not absolutely ludicrous.

Letters To The Editor

Blood

To The Editor:

While the final total of 177 pints of blood donated at the March 25 UVM drawing was somewhat below the "great expectations" built up prior to the drawing, it did exceed the 150-pint goal set for that day. All of us at the Red Cross Blood Center are grateful for the work done by the Ethan Allen Rifles and Mr. J. P. C. Van Schaik in recruiting donors for this drawing.

Mr. Van Schaik's letter in the April 25 issue of the CYNIC tells only part of the story of the support the UVM student body has given the Red Cross Blood Program over the years.

The first Red Cross blood drawing at UVM was held on December 18, 1950. Since that time, there has been a total of 28 UVM-sponsored drawings, with total donations amounting to 5,050 pints. This is an average of 180 pints per drawing -- a most commendable record.

Moreover, this total does not include donations made by UVM students and faculty members at community drawings held at the nearby Mansfield Avenue Red Cross Center. Our experience has been that a substantial number of UVM faculty members and students have been "walk-in" donors at practically every Center drawing over the years.

This outstanding support has been of major assistance to us in providing all the blood our hospital patients have required for more than twelve years. We trust we may continue to enjoy the same pleasant and productive relationship with the UVM student body and faculty in the years ahead.

Sincerely,
Edward R. Stearn, Administrator

Blackface

To The Editor:

"Never has so much been found wrong with so little by so few"...

This somewhat re-hashed phrase, borrowed from Winston Churchill, entered my mind upon reading the latest article of the "Kake Walk Scandal" series published in the April 25th edition of the Vermont CYNIC.

It is my firm belief -- and this opinion is not exclusive to myself -- that the entire issue concerning Kake Walk arose, perhaps, a bit unjustly.

I have great admiration as well as respect for the Clarks' defense of the Negro (who, I am sure, needs no martyr), yet I feel that Miss Clark has adequately misanalyzed the Kake Walk situation in a manner as to bring unwarranted attention to the "blackface."

I would assert that Kake Walk has no degrading or derogatory association with the American Negro, and prior to Miss Clark's literary objection, I am sure that the matter was given no thought whatsoever. If anything, the association of Kake Walk serves only as a reminder of the integral part played by the American Negro in our vast tradition of folk, jazz and blues music. That association is present -- sound derogatory or insulting? Uhl! Uhl!

With relation to objections concerning The Untouchables, Miss Clark, both my parents are of direct Italian descent, and I still enjoy the capers of Frank Nitti on "The Italian Family Hour." Gill Tornabene, '63

Editorial

In times like these, when the world could destroy itself at any moment, we have the spectacle of many world-saving "peace" groups going at each other in the most blood-thirsty manner imaginable. If these groups, as self-deluded about their effectiveness as they may be, are going to stay at each other's throats, then one may really wonder just what is happening to us, and when the bombs are going to start falling.

Only in the United States can one really see what is often the hilarious spectacle of pacifist groups and world-savers fighting each other furiously, each making ridiculous statements, using preposterous logical arguments, and buying full page ads in the Times to propagandize the public. We can only hope that we have enough time to really enjoy the show before we are all wiped out by the unanswerable logic of 100-megaton bombs going off over our heads.

Every now and then one is lulled into thinking that UVM students are adults, but there is always someone round to shock that ridiculous notion out of one's mind.

In the April Fool CYNIC, on page two, there was a drawing of Joseph Stalin in a Burns cap, and under it the legend "BIG BROTHER IS WATCHING YOU." That drawing is now hanging in the CYNIC office, alongside some other pictures of extraordinary merit.

Some time on the evening of April 3, or early in the morning of April 4, some child came into the office and drew a small figure on the picture, just behind the star on Stalin's right collar. The figure was a swastika. Not only was it stupid and childish, but the swastika was historically wrong as well.

Sometimes one wonders if some students don't need a "Big Brother" to watch them all the time.

Bailey

To The Editor:

It has come to the attention of the Student Association Executive Committee that the senseless defacing of the books in Bailey Library has increased in the past few months.

Students should be aware of the fact that the facilities and resources at Bailey are limited at the present time. The more this vandalism continues, the longer it will be before UVM can point with pride to Bailey Library as the reference and work center that it should be. Rather than another failure on the part of students to accept adult responsibility for what could be a fine addition to a growing campus, we in student government would appreciate anything you can do to make students more aware of the fine potential that is at their disposal.

Nota Bene

"Comrade Student" will be shown this Thursday, May 2, at 7:30 in the North Lounge of Billings Student Center. This is a 60 minute American film taken in Russia. Scenes from Russian homes and classrooms afford a good comparison with American domestic and educational life. The film was shown on television in the Bell and Howell Close-up Series. It will give those who see it a chance to see for themselves where we stand in terms of Russian education.

Dr. Betty Boller, who has studied comparative education extensively, will be present to help answer questions which the film may raise. The presentation will be sponsored by Kappa Delta Pi and the Student National Education Association.

Why Johnny Joined A Fraternity

by H. Dumpty

When Johnny first came to good old UVM he was two "persons". One was naive, trusting, friendly--the other was sophisticated and wise in the ways of the world. In short, Johnny was an adolescent.

Johnny, like most college freshmen, arrived with certain vague sine quae non reasons on the tip of his tongue for wanting to go to school and goals to achieve, which had been impressed upon him by society all through high school, such as: "One must get an education in order to get ahead in this world," and that old saying which has been pounded into his ears so many times, "remember, you're up there to study and get good marks." Johnny, however, had other reasons and goals, less openly expressed yet more explicit than those already mentioned and known to us all.

Listening to people who had already been through a year or two at college he had discovered before he ever set foot on a campus that college was not all books and studying. He had heard reports of co-educational orgies, of drinking bouts, of hell nights and of wild parties. Now this pre-college Johnny, like all humans, had certain basic drives and needs, two of which were sex and social acceptance. This Johnny soon realized that at a college away from home he would be able to seek the fulfillment of his repressed sexual desires with a greater freedom than ever, before. So Johnny arrived with more expectations of college life than his parents suspected.

The quest for sex and acceptance started the first few days. The sophisticated Johnny set about to establish a few contacts at "that cat house on the hill," as one prominent fraternity has called UVM's own sanctuary for purity. Here a problem arose, much to Johnny's difficulty. The naive Johnny was shy and rather awkward with girls whom he didn't know, which more or less put a damper on all his attempts. An even greater problem now arose. Before, Johnny had known his place in society. He had been accustomed to a certain role and had known it well. Now he was in a completely new society seeking social acceptance and not knowing what role to play. In other words, Johnny did not know what he must do and what he was expected to do to be "a part of the school" and accepted as such. Thus we see Johnny, both sexually and socially very insecure in his "ignorance."

There were several orientative activities to help cure the problem, however, including most notably a freshman mixer and a picnic. Here the fraternities, which had previously loomed quietly in the background, won their first victory in two parts and destroyed any security Johnny might have had.

The first battle took place at the freshman mixer with the wise fraternity men showing their tactical superiority by appearing at the front in casual sportshirts and bermudas in contrast to the suitcoated and tied freshman men. The freshman women who were the territory to be gained and held, knew immediately, of course, whom to get grabbed up by. The next day at the picnic the freshman men in sports clothes, having quickly adapted to the informal atmosphere of the place were met by fraternity men who had not changed their tactics but had changed their clothes. There is no need to say what happened. The consequences of this victory were monumental. Johnny, and most of the other freshman men, were painfully made aware of the immense social superiority and advantages of fraternity men.

It was not long afterwards that Johnny went through rushing. He was shown through each fraternity house, treated "sincerely" and "warmly" by all the "brothers", and told of the already quite obvious advantages of fraternity life over and over and over again. Fraternities set themselves up as parent substitutes to him. They offered a kind of brotherly parental love, guidance in the ways of college social life, a "home" at college, and by making admission to their pledge class competitive, a certain amount of prestige. They offered social security and sexual opportunity and what is most important, an identity, a self, for Johnny, as we have seen, was rather desperately in need of a self. All this they offered for little more than it was costing Johnny to live in those close, "dry" dormitories.

So Johnny pledged a fraternity. He was molded by the "brothers" into their own image as they themselves had also once been molded into the fraternity image. He was given a lease on a self, probably the only one he ever had, though it was not his own. He has just "brothered up" recently, and some day a picture of his face will be alongside perhaps twenty others on a framed sheet of paper, hanging with countless other framed sheets of paper, in the rooms of his revered fraternity house.

Labor Secretary Wirtz Sees Bright Outlook

WASHINGTON (CPS) - Secretary of Labor W. Willard Wirtz has painted a generally bright picture ahead for the estimated 440,000 American college students who will receive their degrees in June.

Wirtz also noted that the future is exceptionally bright for the estimated 95,000 students who will be awarded graduate degrees.

In an open letter being prepared for 1963 college graduates, Wirtz says that the largest graduating class in the nation's history will find more jobs at better salaries than ever before. Getting priority in demand - and in pay - will be those graduated in scientific and technical fields.

Industries consuming the $50 billion spent annually by the government for defense needs are battling for engineering, mathematics, and physical science graduates. These graduates, along with accountants, continue to draw the highest starting salaries, while liberal arts majors get the lowest.

Labor Department statistics estimate the salary range for the new graduates to be between $4,500 and $7,200, for a three to five per cent increase over last year.

Wirtz noted that women holding the same degrees as their male competitors will still get less money for their work in most industries, but said the situation is improving. He cautioned graduates not to be overwhelmed by high starting salaries when they are offered. "It's more important," he said, "to find the kind of work which is suited to your aptitudes, training and long-term interest."

The Labor Secretary noted that severe teacher shortages still exist, and that new people are badly needed in almost all fields connected with health, education, and welfare.

Salaries and positions in almost all cases will be far better for those with graduate degrees. Wirtz urged all who are capable to go on to graduate work. "If you can continue on in graduate school," he said, "by all means, do it. And keep in mind that scholarships, loans and other forms of assistance exist to help you pursue advanced study."

Here's how the Labor Department breaks down job opportunities for June grads:

Engineering - prospects are more than excellent. In greatest demand are electrical, mechanical, aeronautical, and chemical engineering majors. A very great need for engineers with advanced degrees, bachelor degree holders with strong backgrounds in pure science and math for research work, especially in communications, semiconductors, electronics, materials sciences, systems technology, and all phases of missile and spacecraft technology. Salaries for a bachelor's degree holder start at $550 to $600 a month.

Physical sciences - Outlook is excellent. Industry, government, and academic institutions want chemistry, physics, and astronomy majors badly. The first two are being almost chased for jobs. Starting pay between $450 and $575 a month for a bachelor's.

Mathematics and statistics - Outlook is very good. Mathematics majors with a background in the physical sciences and engineering are in demand for operations research, logistics, quality control, scientific management, and translation of data into mathematical terms. State majors will find many opportunities. In forecasting sales, analyzing business conditions, modernizing accounting procedures, and solving management problems.

Biological sciences - Prospects very good. Medical research especially needs those with doctors degrees in bio-physics, biochemistry, microbiology, physiology, pathology, and pharmacology.

Forestry-Conservation - Many opportunities. Particularly needed are those with advanced degrees for college teaching and research in forestry genetics and fire control.

Earth sciences - Varied prospects. The demand for geology graduates has improved over the last year, but is still limited. Geophysics majors are needed by the government and the petrochemical industry. Very high demand for meteorology graduates by the U.S. Weather Bureau, airlines, and private companies.

Teaching - In great demand. The intensity of the demand, however, varies from place to place, and according to school level or the degree of specialization needed. More than 120,000 teachers are currently being sought by kindergarten and elementary schools to meet an expected enrollment boom. In secondary schools, there is a great demand for teachers of mathematics, science, home economics, art, music, girl's physical education, and priority foreign languages. Overcrowded fields are boys' physical education and social science teachers. Teachers' salaries have vastly improved in the past few years, and are continuing to rise. Starting salaries run from $400 to $450 a month.

There is also a great shortage of specialized school personnel - librarians, audio-visual experts, psychologists, health specialists, teachers for the handicapped, teachers for gifted students, specialists in remedial reading and research in related fields.

A shortage of holders of doctoral degrees has created a great need for college and university teachers. The shortage is expected to continue as industry and government continue to compete with academic institutions for holders of advanced degrees.

Library work - Excellent opportunities. Demand is acute for librarians with special training in science and technology. Besides the schools, government agencies, research associations, medical institutions, and business and industrial firms also badly need trained librarians.

Law - Excellent opportunities for law students in the top ten per cent of their class. That's where the large law firms, corporations, and important government agencies find their employees. Salaries for lawyers in beginning positions with business and manufacturing firms average around $6,500 a year.

Journalism - Numerous openings, but, as always, low pay. There are plenty of newspaper jobs to be had, and advertising and public relations firms will snap up people who can really write well. Higher salaries are being paid for journalism grads working on trade and technical journals, with specialized knowledge of the field. A strong demand exists for writers in electronics and communications work for the aerospace industries.

Social Sciences - Outlook varied. Most of the 50,000 estimated graduates in the social sciences are expected to go on to graduate work. Those with graduate training will find much better job opportunities and pay.

Economics - Very good employment opportunities for graduate degrees in economics in government work and industry.

Political scientists who specialize in public administration and finance are very much in demand. Increasing employment in teaching and research.

Psychologists with Ph.D.'s are very much in demand in almost every field of specialization and in virtually all parts of the country. But grads with less than a Ph.D. may find themselves hunting for jobs.

Social work grads will find many chances for jobs in settlement houses, YMCA, YWCA, city agencies handling public assistance programs, child welfare services, and medical and psychiatric fields.

Health professions - Shortages are reported in most of all medical professions, particularly in the mental health field. Physicians will continue to have excellent opportunities. Only 7,200 are graduating this year and many more are needed, especially in rural areas. Good opportunities for specialists. Excellent opportunities for osteopaths.

Dentists - Prospects are good for most parts of the country. Special demand in the West and South. About 3,300 will graduate this June.

Veterinarians are in very short supply, and prospects are very good both in private practice and in salaried employment.

Optometrists will find less competition for desirable locations than in past years. Pharmacists are in very short supply for salaried positions.

Nurses are in great demand, and those with extensive college training will find many opportunities in administrative and supervisory work, as well as in teaching. There continues to be a widespread demand for medical technicians, physical and occupational therapists, dieticians, medical librarians, and other health workers.

Performing Arts - Musicians, singers, and dancers with college degrees stand a better chance to get better jobs than those trained only as performers. Teachers in these subjects are in demand on all levels. But inexperienced persons will find great difficulty breaking into this field.

Civil service - Some 70 governmental departments each year hire thousands of fresh college graduates to fill a wide variety of posts. The Peace Corps also wants trained college graduates - and two years in the Corps is proving to be an excellent ticket into exciting work later on.

Business - Accounting graduates are in demand by private firms and government agencies. About 11,000 accounting graduates this June should have little troubles in landing jobs.

Sales representatives and trainees with college degrees are also badly needed. Personnel work and advertising majors will find the going rough. The competition in these fields is keen. Numerous opportunities for clerical and related jobs will also be open to business administration majors or liberal arts graduates, with good prospects of promotion and pay. Women graduates starting out as secretaries will find fast promotions in retailing, banking, and other business occupations.

We believe that in the spring a young man's fancy turns to love... and the proof is in the pinnings:

Warmest wishes to AEPH's Roz Weiner, '65, on her recent pinning to Phi Sig's Carl Kleban, '65. Also to:

AGR's Steve Abbott, '65, to Joan Adams, '64;

AGR's Kerwin Flanders, '65, to Sharon Gilbert;

TEP's Fred S. Halper to Harriet Preische, of Cornwall-on-Hudson, New York.

TEP's Joel Bauch, engaged to Linda Stevens, of Miami Beach, Florida.

The Theta sisters extend congratulations to Peggy Lund, who received SAE's Pete Carr's fraternity pin just after Easter... plus the keys to an adorable, little, white car... that is, as soon as she learns to drive it!

Fashion was the word at the Theta house last Tuesday night as the alums gave the pledge class a dinner, courtesy of the Mayfair Shop and some Kat models. The pledges, incidentally, are now full-fledged sisters, after having been initiated on Sunday, the 28th.

Another initiation of a different sort took place on Friday night at Theta's Spring Formals held at the Cupola House. Saint-Michaelman, Jim Forder, received the honor of being named "Theta Honey" for this year. The Theta's like a man they can "look up" to!

With spring formals soon approaching, the TEP's are full of spirit for the coming year. Congratulations to Harvey Tauber on his recent election to SA Vice President. (and, of course, to all other victorious candidates) Best of luck to Peter Lowe, '63, on his seat on the New York Stock Exchange. Also heartiest congratulations to TEP's Larry Perlmutter - better known as "PM" to yours truly! - on his acceptance to Gold Key.

Sigma Phi has chosen Steve Heald as its President for the coming year. Other officers are Hank Burton, Vice President; Bart Eaton, Secretary; and Steve Slack, Treasurer. Congratulations to the new brothers in Sigma Phi: Tom Boyden, Larry Betts, Vinnie Chesaron, Pete Coleman, Dave Marshall, John Meyer, Bart Eaton, Chris McGuirk, and Frank Pierce.

This week has been busy for the Alpha Chi's. Monday was the initiation for 19 pledges: Diane Curtis, Carol Janne, Judy Pierce, Linda Riggs, Anne Trudelle, Rosemary Harvey, Trudy Coggan, Nancy Farnsworth, Jean Hague, Noreen Tierney, Fran Gibson, Mary Jeffrey, Peggy Luce, Susan Riggs, Karen Ellingson, Connie Doherty, Jan Hackbarth, Diane Butman, and Ande Beebe.

The Alpha Chi's also had the province district convention at their house. They had a nice meeting with girls from other New England states.

Congratulations to Jan Hackbarth and Linda Riggs who were elected to Sophomore Aides, and to Guri Hanson, Staff and Sandal.

The brothers of AEPH congratulate Norm Coleman on his acceptance of Gold Key. The boys are all preparing for spring formals on the 10th... we can hope, can't we??

Pan Hel formals proved to be a huge success... or so our "little birdies" tell us! Now it seems that quite a few girls are waiting for return invites, boys! Too bad the IFC sing was cancelled... we understand that it was caused by an original "marching song" performed by two UVM fraternities during Kake Walk. Anyone care to admit it?

And this week we'd like to close with a most thought-provoking question: OUT-OF-STATERS, DO YOU FEEL UNWANTED??

UVM MUSIC DEPARTMENT PRESENTS CONCERT

BY Geri Sharff

On Sunday, April 28, in the Ira Allen Chapel the University of Vermont's Department of Music presented a University Band Concert. Directed by Herbert L. Schultz and assisted by John Park, the performance was successfully led.

The program consisted of classical as well as typical march selections. Brass Aflame, by John Cacavas, Folk Song Suite, by R. Vaughan Williams, Bolero, by Maurice Ravel, and Americans We by, Henry Fillmore were among the selections.

Other pieces played were Orlando Palamadrino by Joseph Haydn, Psalm for Band, by Vincent Persichetti, March and Chorale, by Robert Washburn, Quevre ton Coeur, by Georges Bizet, and The Phantom Regiment, by Leroy Anderson.

Although the concert was an enjoyable one, the lack of UVM students attending was appalling. This could easily be attributed to the complete absence of publicity concerning the performance, because it is hard to believe that so many of us are indifferent to the hard work put in by the members of the band. They deserve recognition for a job well done.

C&E Honorary Initiates New Members

Eight students have been initiated into membership in the Commerce and Economics Honor Society at UVM.

The eight are Hazel Frigerio, Lyndonville; Richard Perkins, Barre; Charles Jackson, Richford; Lois Rissberger, Slingersland, N.Y.; Robert Holmes, Chappaqua, N.Y.; Elizabeth Hoechner, Scarsdale, N.Y.; Jared Drescher, Hewlett, N.Y., and Martin Dlugatz, Middleton, N.Y. All but Jackson, who is a senior, are juniors.

Membership is based on high scholastic standing.

Fey Addresses Family Associates

NOTE: The following talk was given by President Fey before a meeting of the Executive Committee of the University's Family Associates - an organization of parents of UVM students - on Tuesday, April 16. In it, President Fey discusses the University's budget and the University's position on the tuition increases which Governor Hoff has suggested may have to be considered for both in-state and out-of-state students next year.

I am pleased to have this opportunity to discuss with you some of the current problems which face the University and its staff, its students, and its parents.

While I trust that each of us here today feels a special kinship for and to the University of Vermont, I believe it would be helpful if we consider for a moment how the University of Vermont and its programs and problems are similar to the programs and problems of higher education nationally.

Perhaps the most pressing single problem facing higher education today is that posed by increasing costs, not only for existing programs, but for new programs and for expanded programs where they are necessary or desirable.

The pattern is a changing one at all levels. No longer is it possible to divide institutions into two basic categories - those which are publicly supported, and those which are privately supported. Every private institution today must count on some public support, in one form or another; just as every public institution today counts private support as an important part of its every day operation.

The clear fact is that support for higher education is not keeping up with the cost of education, and this in spite of the fact that private and public support are both increasing substantially.

Part of the reason is the same reason all of us share - costs, generally, are rising. But colleges and universities today, and in the last decade, have faced the additional need of making substantial improvement in faculty salaries. Studies have shown that the college teacher over most of the years of this twentieth century have fallen farther and farther behind in terms of real income; while workers in other professions and in business and industry have enjoyed a continuing enrichment of their real income.

The situation had become so critical by mid-century, that President Eisenhower's Commission on Education Beyond the High School recommended that all U.S. colleges and universities move to double faculty salaries in ten years.

When you consider that approximately 70 percent of the University's operating income is expended for personal services, you can see that colleges and universities virtually have been challenged to double their annual income if they are to meet the goal of the Commission.

The fact of the matter is, education has no other workable alternative. The problem in a situation where we are now on the threshold of the much publicized tidal wave of enrollment, requires that higher education find the means of attracting more talented men and women to the teaching profession. To ignore the practical and moral need to increase college and university salary levels would be to ignore the needs of our nation and the world to educate every young man and woman to the fullest extent of his or her ability.

The Trustees of the University of Vermont accepted the 1956 goal of the President's Commission to double faculty salaries in ten years, and we have made substantial progress toward the attainment of that goal.

Our progress has not been without cost, however, for the University of Vermont has had to pass a substantial share of the increased costs of salary increases along to students through increases in tuition. Room costs, fees and other increased costs of living have added to the burden on the student and his parents.

While the University has been fortunate in receiving some additions to its scholarship and loan funds, these have not kept pace with the increased costs.

I think most of you know that tuition at the University of Vermont is, and nearly always has been, the highest charged by any state university for non-residents. It is well to add here, however, that this University has always given room to substantial numbers of non-residents, whereas many state universities have had little or no room for them. In effect, non-resident tuition at the University of Vermont is and has been generally comparable to tuitions charged by New England's private institutions.

The state of Vermont has, since 1955, contributed funds toward the operation of the University which have helped make possible a reduction in tuition for qualified residents of Vermont. Even so, our in-state tuition and fees are the second highest charged by any state university. For a state with Vermont's low per capita income, this is especially unhappy.

The question of whether the University will need to increase its tuition is now a matter of pressing concern.

The University has only two major sources of income - income from the state and from tuitions and fees. Funds received as gifts and grants are for the most part restricted and not substantially available to meet the annual operating income needs of the University.

In placing its budget requests for the next two years before the 1963 Legislature and before Vermont Governor Hoff, the University's Board of Trustees asked the State to assume a considerably increased share of the University's operating budget - an increase from about a third of the total budget to about 42 percent of it. This would still be well below the average state support for state universities, but still a considerable amount for the State of Vermont; in fact an increase of $3,500,000 in state funds over the next two years.

The proposed budget did not include any tuition increase for Vermont or for out-of-state students in either of the next two years. First of all, the University just increased non-resident tuition effective this past fall. In addition, the University's Trustees did not feel that a tuition increase, unless considerable for both residents and non-residents, could provide the increased income necessary to carry forward the University's programs on the quality level which has been a tradition for Vermont's oldest institution of higher learning.

My uncle.

In this case, nepotism's a pretty good idea. But of course you've got to measure up to get it. To be admitted to Air Force Officer Training School, you've got to be a good student with skills or aptitudes we can use.

Air Force OTS is an intensive three-month course leading to a commission as a second lieutenant. As an Air Force officer, you'll be a leader on the Aerospace Team—and be a part of a vital aspect of our defense effort.

Here's a chance for ambitious college men and women to assume great responsibility. It's a fine opportunity to serve your country, while you get a flying head start on the technology of the future.

We welcome your application for OTS now—but this program may not be open to you in a year or so. If you're within 210 days of graduation, get full information about Air Force OTS from your local Air Force recruiter.

Future Plans Of Peace Corps Members

WASHINGTON (CPS) - 700 Peace Corps volunteers - all charter members of the new frontier program - are beginning to wonder what their next step is after two years abroad.

Wondering about the same problem is Peace Corps Director Sargent Shriver, the Carnegie Corp., and the American Council of Education.

Only a handful will be completing their hitch this year, but 5,000 will be returning next year, and more than 40,000 will be coming home during the next ten years. The Peace Corps and the American Council on Education decided to sample future plans of volunteers in the field. The results of a questionnaire showed that:

-- more than 60 per cent wanted to continue their education - 88 per cent at the graduate level and 12 per cent at the undergraduate level. Thirty-three per cent said they could not pursue further studies without some financial aid.

-- about 34 per cent wanted to work for the federal government. Most of them pinpointed foreign service with the State Department, U.S. Information Agency and Agency for International Development.

-- 29 per cent want staff Peace Corps jobs.

-- more than 25 per cent teaching in underdeveloped nations want to make teaching their career, while 16 per cent in all fields wanted to teach after service.

-- 20 per cent want to work for an international organization; 10 per cent for a non-profit private firm.

-- 65 per cent of all volunteers want to work, sooner or later, abroad.

The State Department has agreed that volunteers who receive appointments as Foreign Service officers will enter the service at a higher level.

Both the State Department and the U.S.I.A. are making plans to interview volunteers for positions while they're still on the job overseas.

The Public Health Service, Indian Affairs Bureau and other government agencies also have their eyes on veteran corpsmen.

Also giving a helping hand is the Carnegie Corp. The corporation has given the American Council on Education an undisclosed grant to establish a placement service for volunteers finishing their tours.

With the grant, the Council plans to hire a small staff to counsel volunteers and present them with offers pouring into the Peace Corps.

Legislation creating the Corps forbids the agency from offering career guidance counseling or running a job placement office. It may, however, through the Corps' division of Volunteer Support, disseminate information about opportunities.

This is done by a Peace Corps magazine and letters to individual volunteers. More than 30 U.S. colleges and universities are doing their part for the returning volunteers.

26 schools have established special scholarships or fellowships for returning volunteers. Seven higher education institutions said they will award academic credit for veteran corpsmen.

Schools offering scholarships and fellowships included Michigan State University, offering a minimum of 20 fellowships; New Mexico State, 10; the University of Pittsburgh, offering 10 in its graduate programs of psychology and education, and Yeshiva University, with a minimum of 20 fellowships in its graduate education program to train personnel for schools in socially and culturally backward communities.

Institutions offering academic credit, varying from 6 to 14 hours, include Columbia University, Cornell, New York State College of Education at New Paltz, Ohio, Syracuse, New Mexico and Pittsburgh.

EFFECTS OF ATOM BOMB

Late effects of the atomic bombing of Japan during the Second World War was the topic of a Yale medical professor when he spoke here last Saturday.

Dr. Stuart Finch, director of the hematology unit (blood division) in the Yale College of Medicine, spoke from 10 to 12 Saturday morning at the DeGoesbriand Hospital during the grand rounds. His appearance as visiting scientist was sponsored by the Vermont Division of the American Cancer Society and the UVM College of Medicine.

Active in clinical and experimental medicine, Dr. Finch served as chief of medicine of the Atomic Bomb Casualty Commission from 1960-62. He has been studying case histories of victims of the atomic bombing for many years.

U Of Miami Institutes Coed Dorms During Summer

MIAMI (CPS) - The University of Miami has announced plans to experiment with a co-educational dormitory during the coming summer sessions, provoking "endless amazement and debate," according to the Miami Hurricane, student newspaper.

At the time the announcement of the experiment was made, the planning committee working on the proposal had not reached any hopes that restrictions in the dorm would be limited to the "bare necessities."

At the completion of its study, the planning committee announced that it looked on the project as an "experiment in student self-discipline." No restrictions on student activity will be imposed at all by the school, but administration and rule-making will rest with a committee, or council of residents of the dormitory, both male and female.

The plan was reported as designed to develop the students' respect for rules which will eventually be established by their elected representatives. The administration plans to deal with the governing student council as a mature and responsible unit of the academic community, and will allow it full control over its own activities.

In fact, the committee has gone so far as to draw up an extremely liberal code of conduct for the dorm, which it will recommend to the first council of residents. Curfew will be eliminated for women as well as men, on the grounds that they should be treated as equally as possible. Rather than restrict the students, the rules would ask that they sign out in the evening by indicating where they intend to be. This will be used only to account for students who are out unusually late, and those not wishing to sign out at all would not be required to.

Students expecting to remain overnight will also be expected to leave a number where they can be reached in case of an emergency. This rule may be upheld more strictly to avoid legal complications, but the number of a friend or relative will suffice.

Similarly, there will be no restrictions on dress or movement through the building. The committee hopes that this will lead into positive programs, and tend to discourage sloppiness and untidy housekeeping. The committee also hopes that it will encourage many combined activities on the part of the dorm residents, such as inter-floor meals and snacks, mixers, and informal get-togethers.

The committee planning the venture has strongly emphasized the experimental nature of the co-ed project, and has urged all students planning to take part in the program to conduct themselves with discretion and maturity, as the results of the summer's experiment will most certainly affect the university's future plans.

Oh yes, and genuine even without this [] label

MANY of you like our button-downs so much that you can hardly bear to wear anything else even on special evenings; now there is no reason why you should. And since we already make button-downs in 386 fabrics, patterns, and colors it would have been unthoughtful of us not to make it an even 387 with this button-cuff button-down of fine broadcloth.* You can find it at the best men's shops although not always under our label (many stores like our shirts so much they sell them under their own names). If you'd like to know which in your vicinity please write us: Eagle Shirtmakers, Quakertown, Pennsylvania.

*Notice it bulges gracefully at the collar just like the other 386. One time a man, new to our button-downs, wrote to say that the collar didn't lie flat. When we told Helen Mohr, in Collars, about it she said that she was relieved.

Budget

Without question, the University's request represents a considerable investment for the people of Vermont. After reviewing this and other requests, Governor Hoff recommended only a fractional increase for the University. I informed him that this would seriously impair the education program of the University and, after further consideration, the Governor agreed to reconsider the University's needs.

He asked if the University would be willing to submit an emergency revision of its budget, asking the absolute minimum amount of increase it could operate on during the first year of the coming biennium.

I agreed to do this, and subsequently have submitted to him in response to his request, a revised budget which I plan to present to the University's Trustees this Saturday.

This budget reduces by nearly half a million dollars the amount of the increase being asked from the State next year. The reduction has been accomplished by postponing new positions deemed necessary for the year, and by reducing the amount of salary increases planned for next year.

It is based on the hope that the reduction can be restored in the following year. In view of all considerations, it would appear that a tuition increase for out-of-state students two years from now will be necessary to help restore the reduction.

Governor Hoff has indicated that he would prefer to have the University increase both in-state and out-of-state tuition next year. His position is that the State cannot afford to provide at this time the increase being requested by the University.

Part of this position is the Governor's belief that the other public education institutions of the state need increased financial assistance more than the University needs it.

The University certainly does not deny that there are many pressing demands upon Vermont's relatively limited financial resources.

Personally, I recognize the difficult problems facing both Governor Hoff and the members of the Legislature.

My responsibility is and must continue to be, however, to present for the consideration of the people of Vermont, a budget which will not jeopardize the considerable resource which the University represents to the people of the State of Vermont.

The University of Vermont traditionally has shown remarkable imagination in building for all the people of the state a higher education institution of quality and integrity. The greatest part of our fine physical plant has come from private philanthropy. More than 50 percent of our budget always has come from sources other than the state's tax dollars.

Yet the University has always offered for all qualified Vermonters an outstanding educational opportunity. We accept all qualified Vermonters who apply and will continue to do so and still be able to find room for many out-of-state students.

In 1955, the State Legislature took dramatic action to make possible lower tuition for Vermonters because it was clear this was the only way to make possible the same reasonable opportunity for college for Vermont's young men and women which the young men and women of every other state have always enjoyed.

I am hopeful that Governor Hoff and the members of the current Legislature will not find it necessary to ask the University to increase tuition for Vermonters either next year or the year after. I am afraid the result would be to deny a college opportunity for many who already find that UVM's tuition and fees place a serious burden on many Vermont families.

Similarly, while I believe the University may have to consider a tuition increase for out-of-state students two years from now, I do not feel an increase in the coming year either fair or practical.

It is not fair because the University has just increased out-of-state tuition this past fall.

It is not practical because a tuition increase next year, on this short notice, may very well force enough out-of-state students to leave the University so that the loss in income would nullify the effect intended.

I apologize for taking so much of your time as your organization of parents meets here today, but it seemed desirable to share with you something of this pressing problem which affects not only your University but which cannot help but have a direct effect on you and your sons and daughters.

Again, let me say that I understand the very difficult problems facing Vermont today. I believe that the University of Vermont is one of the significant resources of the State in terms of meeting and solving those problems.

I can assure you I shall continue to press as faithfully as I can in seeking to present the University's case to the Governor and to the Legislature, and I dare to hope that I may be able to report favorably to you in this matter before the end of this academic year.

Haverford College Students Schedule Own Final Exams

HAVERFORD, PA. (IR) — Faculty members recently approved a system under which Haverford College students will self-schedule their own final examinations. The tests are taken without monitors under the college's Honor Code. The system has been tried with success both last May and this past January.

In essence, the plan permits each of Haverford's 450 students to pick the day and time, and with some restrictions the place, he desires to take each of his term examinations. About a month before the ten day examination period, each student completes a form indicating his courses, instructors, and the date he wants to take each test.

Certain basic qualifications must be met: examinations be started either at 9 a.m. or 2 p.m., senior comprehensives and tests requiring special facilities have priority, and courses or sections which entail the reading of more than twenty pages by any professor must be completed the first week.

Before the examination period, students submit to the Registrar's Office an envelope for each test on which is indicated the course number, student's name, examination time and date. This is to enable the Registrar's Office to prepare lists which allow each professor to know exactly at what time all their tests will be completed and ready for grading.

Examinations are then inserted in their respective envelopes along with special instructions. Fifteen minutes before each scheduled test, a student committee distributes the sealed envelopes to the examinee. They then can complete the tests, unmonitored anywhere in either of two buildings.

After the examination, Student Committee members receive the completed examination and question paper in the original envelope, and then turn it over to the Registrar's Office where professors can pick them up.

By this method the student can usually work out an optimum schedule which evenly distributes his examination load over a period of time—lengthened or shortened to his own desires or needs. The familiar crowding of examinations one on top of another is gone; so, too, is the common situation of a few early examinations and a few late tests, and nothing in between but a long break.

HOW TO SEE EUROPE FOR ONLY $300 A DAY: NO. 2

Last week we discussed England, the first stop on the tour of Europe that every American college student is going to make this summer. Today we will take up your next stop—France, or the Pearl of the Pacific, as it is generally called.

To get from England to France, one greases one's body and swims the English Channel. Similarly, to get from France to Spain, one greases one's body and slides down the Pyrenees. And, of course, to get from France to Switzerland, one greases one's body and wriggles through the Simplon Tunnel. Thus, as you can see, the most important single item to take to Europe is a valise full of grease.

No, I am wrong. The most important thing to take to Europe is a valise full of Marlboro Cigarettes—or at least as many as the customs regulations will allow. And if by chance you should run out of Marlboros in Europe, do not despair. That familiar red and white Marlboro package is as omnipresent in Europe as it is in all fifty of the United States. And it is the same superb cigarette you find at home—the same pure white filter, the same zestful, mellow blend of tobaccos preceding the filter. This gem of the tobaccoist's art, this prodigy of cigarette engineering, was achieved by Marlboro's well-known research team—Fred Softpack and Walter Flip-top—and I, for one, am grateful.

But I digress. We were speaking of France—or the Serpent of the Nile, as it is popularly termed.

Let us first briefly sum up the history of France. The nation was discovered in 1066 by Madame Guillotine. There followed a series of costly wars with Schleswig-Holstein, the Cleveland Indians, and Jean Jacques Rousseau. Stability finally came to this troubled land with the coronation of Marshal Foch, who married Lorraine Alsace and had three children: Flopsy, Mopsy, and Charlemagne. This later became known as the Petit Trianon.

Marshal Foch—or the Boy Orator of the Platte, as he was affectionately called—was succeeded by Napoleon, who introduced shortness to France. Until Napoleon the French were the tallest nation in Europe. After Napoleon most Frenchmen were able to walk comfortably under card tables. This later became known as the Hunchback of Notre Dame.

Napoleon, after his defeat by Credit Mobilier, was exiled to Elba, where he made the famous statement, "Able was I ere I saw Elba." This sentence reads the same whether you spell it forward or backward. You can also spell Marlboro backward—Orobaram. Do not, however, try to smoke Marlboro backward because that undoes all the pleasure of the finest cigarette made.

After Napoleon's death the French people fell into a great fit of melancholy, known as the Louisiana Purchase. For over a century everyone sat around moping and refusing his food. This torpor was not lifted until Eiffel built his famous tower, which made everybody giggle so hard that today France is the gayest country in Europe.

Each night the colorful natives gather at sidewalk cafes and shout "Oo-la-la!" as Maurice Chevalier promenades down the Champs Elysees swinging his malacca cane. Then, tired but happy, everyone goes to the Louvre for bowls of onion soup.

The principal industry of France is cushioning travellers' cheeks. Well sir, I guess that's all you need to know about France. Next week we will visit the Land of the Midnight Sun—Spain.

© 1963 Max Shulman

Next week, every week, the best cigarette you can buy the whole world over is filter-tipped Marlboros—soft pack or Flip-Top box—you get a lot to like.

SPORTS CORNER

by Bernie Zaccaro

Recent developments in the pro football world have it that All-Pro halfback Paul Hornung, of the Green Bay Packers, has been suspended for an indefinite period from league play.

Hornung, a triple threat to any team, had been placing bets, on a personal basis, with a friend, since his freshman year in the pro ranks. Every player in the National Football League has been given full warning concerning betting on games, whether or not unfair tactics are employed. As a result, Hornung, Alex Karass, and five members of the Detroit Lion squad are now involved in the jurisdiction.

Pete Rossell, Commissioner of the N.F.L. was placed in a great dilemma concerning the matter at hand. Since he is authorized by each club in the league, his passing of such a strict penalty might have endangered his position. However, though his position might be in jeopardy, his sense of responsibility exhibited in reaching this decision must be commended.

Although the betting had not reaped great financial success for Hornung, the fact remains that any type of betting is prohibited. As the situation stands, Hornung and Karass have not only been suspended from the N.F.L., but will not receive openings from any other professional football league, namely, the American Football League or the Canadian Football League. The five Detroit players have been assessed $2,000 fines for their lone transaction. Adding to this, the Detroit club has also been fined $2,000 for not reporting that its players were associating with known gamblers, another serious violation of the N.F.L. code.

There have been many pros and cons established concerning this matter. Some people feel that the penalty inflicted was too severe, while others applaud the alternative taken by Rossell.

This decision was a great tribute to the never-ending campaign to prevent professional football from becoming a farcical pasttime. CONGRATULATIONS TO PETE ROSSELL!

Catamount Batmen Off To A Bad Start

The UVM Varsity Baseball Team has gotten off to a slow start this season. The Catamount nine lost two games to the University of Rhode Island last week by scores of 5-4 and 2-1. This past Tuesday the team dropped another contest to St. Michael's, 1-0, a real thriller.

The tilt against St. Michael's was lost on an unearned run. This placed veteran Dick Cassani's pitching record at a weak 1 win and 4 loss mark.

The Catamounts, off to a poor start this season, have lost their last six games in a row. The squad seems to be missing that extra "something." The hitting has descended from last year's superior showing, and the pitching, with Dick Cassani in a vulnerable slump, certainly has drawn from the supply of spunk which highlighted the 1962 team.

At the present time, the overall standing of the Cata is a flimsy 3 wins and 9 losses. Coach Ralph Lapointe is confident that his boys will soon break out of their trance and, once again, become a serious threat to every club in the league.

Rifle Team Shoots Well Haurilick Captain For '63

Varsity letters have been awarded to eight members of the 1962-63 UVM rifle team.

Vermont compiled a 6-3 record, finished third in the Yankee Conference, second in the northern division shoot-off of the New England Rifle League, and won the First Army championship, outshooting 37 other schools.

Dave Haurilick, a junior from Windsor, has been elected to captain of next year's team.

UVM is coached by former M/Sgt. Joel Surrall. He has been elected deputy director of the central group of the NE Rifle League for 1963-64 and will be responsible for coordinating scheduling of central group schools. The central group, which has just been created, will be comprised of the six Yankee Conference institutions. The league champion will now automatically qualify for the New England championship match.

Letter recipients and their averages: Al Farrington, Burlington, 283; Rick Hubbard, Middlebury, 281.4; Bob Tremblay, Woonsocket, R.I., 280.4; Allen Tracy, Northfield, 278.6; Haurilick 278.5; Seth Pillsbury, Enosburg Falls, 278.5; Steve Salma, New York City, 278.4; and Chris Klinck, Concord, Mass., 278.

Phi Sigma Delta Wins Volleyball Crown

Phi Sigma Delta Fraternity has captured the IFC Volleyball Championship from Delta Psi in a best-out-of-three-game series. The boys from Fern Hill won the first game by a score of 15-5, and also took the second game, by a score of 15-8. Dick Ader and Pete Jellinek sparked the Phi Sig's with their steady play and were tremendously aided by the efforts of Chuck Glick.

In the Independent Competition, the Leftovers, after taking their division, were scheduled to play Phi Sigma Delta for the All-Campus Championship, but forfeited this opportunity. Consequently, Phi Sigma Delta has been awarded victory.

Before the playoffs, the final standings for the three leagues stood at:

One Week Left For Gridsters

George Oelze, potential junior, has been elected to captain the 1963 UVM football team. (Credit: Audio-Visual)

The first full week of spring football drills ended Saturday afternoon with Coach Bob Clifford holding a full-scale scrimmage. Vermont winds up spring drills on May 4 with the annual Green-Gold game.

Clifford has outlined pass defense and a more potent offense as the key objectives of the spring drills. Along these lines, he has altered his offense and installed a spread T which features a split end and flanker backs.

"Our ground defense was about the only bright spot last year. Although we outgained our opponents by 200 yards in rushing we gave that all back plus a couple of hundred yards with our pass defense," says Clifford, who is starting his second go-around at Vermont after a 3-5 first year.

In his new offense, he has made a number of personnel changes. Halfback Al Brown has been converted to a split and while fullback Richie Reynolds has become a short back, alternating with Frank Foerster. Guard Dave Baker is being tried at fullback where Clifford figures has good speed and 230 pounds can be put to good use.

Under the heading of "good news" is the return of Tom Perras, former Rice Memorial standout. Injured in his opening varsity game two years ago, Perras is running with the team as a split end, a position not entirely unfamiliar to him as he played end in high school.

Two members of last fall's freshman eleven are running with the White unit, center Rusty Brink and tackle John Sullivan. Sullivan has been moved over from guard because of the lack of tackles. The emergence of Brink has meant that Capt. George Oelze can return to right guard-linebacker after having played center most of last season.

Sophomores Scott Fitz and John O'Dea are battling senior Chris Greer for the quarterbacking job. Another quarterback prospect, Jim Brennan, is playing baseball while several other players are passing up spring drills for track and baseball.

Swim School Formed For Faculty Children

A swim school conducted in the pool Saturday mornings for faculty children will feature the Spring session. A total of thirty (30) children can be accommodated in this program. A limitation of fifteen (15) children per class must be set. Plans call for the lessons to start April 27, 1963, and continue through the month of May. There will be a $7.50 charge and selections will be made on a first come, first served basis.

To enroll in the school contact the Athletic Office and make your checks payable to the University of Vermont and direct them to the Athletic Director's office, in care of Mr. J. Edward Donnelly.

Philosophy Grad Describes Work In Nepal

(Editor's note: Jim Fisher, a philosophy graduate of Princeton, is now teaching English as a second language in Nepal. The following letter describes his work.)

In the middle of final examinations last Spring I suddenly found myself forced into deciding what would happen to me in the world lying outside of Princeton, N. J.: I chose what I later saw advertised as "Land of Yeti and Everest."

The day following graduation I began training an average of 12 hours per day at George Washington University in Washington, D. C. About half the time was concentrated on language study, the other half in world affairs, American studies, and Nepal area studies. The quality of the training program, though shoddy in isolated areas, was surprisingly high, particularly in language training. The entire grueling process was made more pleasant than it would otherwise have been by the strong incentive to learn and the usually boundless enthusiasm of my fellow trainees, most of whom were college graduates. After two months we graduated, and I was somewhat shocked when I was asked to give a commencement address — in Nepal! This somehow made the Latin salutatory at Princeton seem rather pedestrian in comparison.

Scholarships, Jobs Await Volunteers

More than 700 Peace Corps Volunteers will complete their two-year assignments this year. Next year, some 5,000 will be back and over the next decade, 50,000 persons will have served.

So far, the number of jobs and educational opportunities exceed the number of returnees.

More than 30 universities have offered over 100 special scholarships for those who want to continue their education. Interest in obtaining Volunteers to teach in America is high. California and other state school systems will credit Peace Corps teaching experience for teaching certification.

The U. S. State Department has agreed that Volunteers who receive appointments as Foreign Service Officers will enter at an advanced level. Both the State Department and the United States Information Agency are making arrangements to interview interested Volunteers overseas. Other agencies, such as the Public Health Service, want Peace Corps veterans.

PEACE CORPS VOLUNTEER Jess Stone, a liberal arts graduate of Colorado State, is a community development worker in the Dominican Republic. Stone and the 145 other Volunteers in the Dominican Republic are teaching English, sparking self-help school construction and organizing 4-H clubs. They make up the field staff of the first rural extension program the country has known. Liberal arts graduates will start training in June for Peace Corps community development projects around the world.

Tanganyika Engineers Build Roads

Peace Corps engineers in Tanganyika are building roads, constructing bridges, surveying harbors and harbor facilities, river crossings, airports and drainage systems.

"The fact that the job is in Tanganyika adds a touch of the unusual, however," said Art Young, a Peace Corps engineer.

"More than once surveying teams have been driven off the job due to curious elephants wandering too close for comfort."

The engineers' main project is to build a network of small farm-to-market roads in even the most remote agricultural areas.

Tanganyika's economy is based largely on agriculture, yet only nine per cent of her land is under cultivation. Lack of adequate farm-to-market roads and year-round water supply limit further expansion.

Working with the engineers are Peace Corps geologists who have mapped about 7,500 square miles. Volunteers have been in charge of or second in command in the supervision of almost all primary road construction in Tanganyika since they arrived in October of 1961. They're training the Tanganyikans to take over these jobs when they leave.

John Leyden, a distinguished geologist and a member of a committee that advises the British Parliament on foreign aid programs said of the Volunteers:

"They are revealing to the world what Americans are like. They exemplify the American character. They've got guts... these boys have got what it takes. This is the best aid you have ever given anyone. The Volunteers don't know what can't be done. They simply get the bridge built or the road scraped or the mapping done. A top government official said to me: 'I don't know what we would have done without them.'"

ANDRE COLPITTS, 23, a Peace Corps Volunteer from Tulsa, Okla., teaches English, science and math at a high school in Belize, British Honduras. Colpitts received his A.B. in biology and philosophy from Phillips University, Enid, Okla., in 1961. On their arrival, the 32 Volunteers teaching in British Honduras more than doubled the number of college graduates in that country.

Liberal Arts Students Will Fill Many Jobs

More than 4,000 new Peace Corps Volunteers will be selected during the next few months to serve in 45 developing nations around the world. Some of these men and women will be replacing Volunteers who are completing their two-year period of service this year.

Others will be filling completely new assignments requested by countries in Africa, Latin America, the Near and Far East and South Asia. Some 300 different skill areas are represented in the jobs, most of which will be filled by the end of 1963.

Opportunities for Americans to invest their time and talent in helping people to help themselves are greater now than at any time in the brief history of the Peace Corps.

Liberal arts students will teach elementary or secondary school, or serve in community development programs, filling many of these new assignments. Nurses, engineers, carpenters, mechanics, farmers, home economists, lawyers—and many other skills—are also represented.

To qualify for Peace Corps service, a person must, of course, have more than the basic skills required. This second college supplement is designed to inform potential Volunteers about the specific opportunities for service and the types of Americans needed to fill these assignments.

"One of the basic decisions made early in the Peace Corps'

Free Films, Filmstrips Now Available

A 27-minute color film, "The Peace Corps," is now available free to college, civic or church groups interested in a comprehensive program report on the Peace Corps.

The 16mm documentary, narrated by Dave Garraway, includes scenes of Volunteers at work in several countries and an interview with Director Sargent Shriver outlining the entire selection and training process.

Another film produced by NBC News, "The Peace Corps in Tanganyika," is also available at no cost. Both films may be booked through regional offices of Modern Talking Pictures, Inc., or directly from the Peace Corps, Office of Public Affairs, Washington 25, D. C.

Two specialized film strips outlining work of Volunteers in medical and agricultural programs are also available from the Washington office.

A SOIL CONSERVATION WORKER, William Hundley, 23, of Cle Elum, Wash., is serving with the Peace Corps on the Caribbean island of St. Lucia. Hundley received his B.S. degree in agriculture from Washington State University in 1962. More than 1,300 Volunteers have been requested for agricultural projects starting this summer.

history was to feature in all of our informational materials the hardships of Peace Corps service," said Director Sargent Shriver. "We still say it's not easy to serve in the Peace Corps."

"The Peace Corps is not for the visionary or the dilettante. It requires tenacity, self-reliance, dedication. Assignments in many countries are ill-defined—a symptom of a youthful country's growing pains. Volunteers are often on their own . . . in the effective definition and performance of their jobs."

"Some of our early critics said the Peace Corps would only get 'dewey-eyed idealists.' Most of the Volunteers now serving effectively overseas are idealists, in a sense, but they are not dewey-eyed. One of the Volunteers summed up the type of idealism needed when he defined his reason for joining:

"I also hope to find some sort of personal peace, to salve my conscience that I and my peers were born between clean sheets when others were issued into the dust with a birthright of hunger. Perhaps afterwards when I hear the cry of humanity I shall be unashamed that I am not of that cry because I helped to still a part of it."

"Good Volunteers also have a measure of enlightened self-interest. They know their two year experience overseas is an educational opportunity without equal."

More than 2,000 faculty or administrative officers are serving as the link between the Peace Corps and the individual student. The liaison officer as a rule is appointed by the university president.

William G. Toland, a professor of philosophy at Baylor University, is a typical example of a Peace Corps liaison officer.

"The main part of this job is to counsel students and give them up-to-date information about any aspect of the Peace Corps," said Toland.

"This year 125 students have talked to me personally about joining the Peace Corps. I also administer the Peace Corps placement test, which is given here on the campus," he said.

Toland, as do most liaison officers, frequently talks to civic and campus groups about the work that the Peace Corps is doing overseas.

Liaison officers are continually supplied with fresh information from the Peace Corps headquarters in Washington and from the field.

Science Majors Critically Needed

Liberal arts graduates who have majored or minored in biology, physics, chemistry or math have been requested by developing countries round the world.

If new and emerging nations are to achieve and maintain a competitive position in the contemporary world, they must develop their own cadre of technicians and scientists, trained to cope with an increasingly complex society.

But teaching is not just in the classroom. It's in the community as well. See the reports from Nepal and Ghana.

Peace Corps Teaches 32 Languages

The Peace Corps has taught its Volunteers 32 languages, many of them never taught on college campuses in the United States before.

An intensive language training program patterned after the successful laboratory methods developed during World War II, accelerates the learning of such languages as Thai, Somali, Farsi, Bengali and Amharic.

Prior knowledge of a language is not essential for most Peace Corps assignments but prior training in French or Spanish is helpful.

'Avoid Madison Ave. Stuff,' Says Former Staff Member

New Booklet Describes Jobs In Liberal Arts

Blair Butterworth, a humanities major, served a year with the Peace Corps Washington staff in Public Affairs. He "recruited" himself and is now serving as a Volunteer teacher in the Okuapemman School at Akropong-Akwapim, Ghana. He writes from Ghana:

"I feel that I have treated you all very unworthily. I should have been writing quotable quotes and the like and making your job so easy for you. But somehow, I seem to go through the 24 hours given each day before I should. If you give of yourself to the school, the students and the community, your days and hours are full of the most ideal form of what we came here for. The Peace Corps slips away, and you become and spend your time being an individual looking for, and in most cases, finding a real reward for the time and effort put in.

"But you are always aware of the umbrella of the Peace Corps and you hope that all of you will leave a mark together. This mark cannot rub off the mistakes we at home make, but it does show that we are not all the money-hungry, profit-seeking, cold-hearted people that our headlines make us out to be. Suddenly, to these kids America becomes an individual, and the weight of that responsibility makes one flap one's wings a little harder and wake up a little earlier and work a little harder.

"You ask in your letter about quality and quantity. It would be such a mistake to cajole people with fancy words and careful slogans and flashy pictures. I do not know anyone here who is impressed with that aspect of the Peace Corps. We need honest facts and no Madison Avenue stuff. No Butterworth speech made them come, no great American letter, but instead they came because they were old enough to want to know and young enough to chance a failure. So get people who can give of themselves and gain satisfaction in giving, who don't want to prove anything, who rather dislike the way they were being recruited, and you will have a fine, small and distinguished group of young people. The greatest fear I have is meeting a PCV Ghana 4 who says to me, 'I came because I heard your speech in George Washington High or South East Missouri State College.'

"As yet I have said nothing about the teaching difficulties. Mostly, they are the ones one has anywhere, I imagine. The problem is that these kids have had so few experiences in their childhood. Maybe that is cultural, but bicycles, camping, all the subjects of most textbooks, just do not fit over here. But if you keep to their limited experiences, you cannot prepare them for the Certificate or expand their vocabulary. So, the teacher becomes a guide through life. One tries and fails, but bit by bit they pick it up, and as they know it is all so important for them, they work hard."

"I've only a liberal arts degree. Can I qualify for Peace Corps service?"

"I'm a psychology major. What can I do?"

A new Peace Corps informational booklet is dedicated to answering questions like the above. The booklet indicates the broadening opportunities for liberal arts students with no defined skill.

"College Education — Plus," illustrates the two major areas in which liberal arts graduates are working: teaching and community development.

Community development consists of organizing the community to work on needed projects. One Volunteer defined it as "group education through physical projects."

Copies of the booklet are available at no cost. Use the coupon on page three to request a copy or write: Peace Corps, Office of Public Affairs, Washington 25, D. C.

PEACE CORPS NURSE Sadie Stout tends an infant in Malaya. Miss Stout is a graduate of the St. Francis Hospital School of Nursing in Wichita, Kan. The Malayan Minister of Health said the Peace Corps Volunteers had transformed the face of medical practice in that country. More nurses are needed by the developing nations in Asia, Latin America and Africa.

Sul Ross Biology Grad Describes Ghana Work

(Editor's note: Margot Schmidt, a biology graduate at Sul Ross State College in Alpine, Tex., is now teaching biology in Ghana. In the following letter she describes her attitudes about her work.)

My life here must seem like a roller-coaster, high in spirits one minute, the next minute the lowest low. Perhaps you have been able to read between the lines.

I think you realize that training at Berkeley was no holiday. It was work, but it was interesting work. The profs were the best known authorities in the field of African Studies, Ghana, and Ghanaian education. Our training was short, but I realize now that I did learn a lot.

I certainly don't advise anyone and everyone to join the Peace Corps. But there isn't a Peace Corps "type." Our Ghana group ranges from teachers who taught at home for years to non-graduates with technical training. We have sons and daughters of ambassadors, Harvard professors, farmers, druggists, businessmen, etc. What makes us alike? It's the belief that we can do something, even if that something is very small. I say that only people, young and old, who want to give of themselves for two short years and who believe that they can learn as well as teach, are the people who should volunteer. Starry-eyed idealists aren't needed.

You know how I felt the first few months away from home. I was miserable. Now I have learned to see much more. I have learned that all people have the same basic wants and desires. I have learned much more than I have been able to teach, but I have been giving Ghanaians a better picture of America, which is our main aim. Knowledge and understanding can erase fear and prejudice. Our small efforts together have made a good impression here in Ghana.

What is the reward? How can you tell of the warmth and happiness that fills you when a little boy with huge brown eyes looks up at you and says, "Miss Schmidt, Sir, you're wonderful."

How Do You Join The Peace Corps?

1. Fill out the application Questionnaire. You can get one from your liaison officer on campus, from your post office or by mailing the coupon in this paper.

2. Next, take the non-competitive placement test on campus or at a nearby Civil Service Office. Ask your liaison officer or write the Peace Corps for a full list of addresses and the date of the next exam.

3. Your application data, your test and your references help to determine the kind of assignment for which you are best qualified. If your training or experience match that of a request from abroad, you may receive an invitation to training. You may accept, decline, or state a preference for another assignment.

Work In Nepal...

Classroom training was not enough, and we soon found ourselves being flown to Denver, where we departed by bus for the Colorado Outward Bound School, located three miles from the ghost town of Marble, Colo., (population of five, according to a recent census). For a month the day began with an icy dip in a mountain stream at six in the morning, and the rest of the time was filled with hiking, climbing, camping and building bridges. Somehow, I survived. Two days after home leave we were in Delhi, but because of the monsoon storms we were stranded there for a week before we could get into Kathmandu, Nepal's capital and the only city in the country with a concrete runway.

40 Degree Classroom

After two weeks of orientation and language training, we departed for our posts. I went to Bhadgaon, only eight miles from Kathmandu (forty minutes by jeep) to teach English at the college and high school, all in the same building, depending on the time of day.

My first class begins at 6:30 a.m. in an unheated room decorated with four unfinished brick walls and several rows of roughly-hewn wooden benches. The temperature is about 40 degrees at that hour, and the shivering students sit there and suffer, though I have the prerogative of pacing up and down to keep warm. Nevertheless, a brave handful continues to show up (total enrollment of the college is 45). The air is comfortably warm by the time the high school opens at 10:30. The younger ones seldom wear shoes, but the older students, more often out of deference to fashion than to fear of hookworm, usually wear them.

The educational system is a third-hand version (inherited from India) of the English system. A syllabus is rigidly adhered to, and emphasis lies in the rote memory of everything. Students are unusually polite, always arising when the teacher walks into the room. Nepal is a Hindu state (though many are Buddhist), and reverence for learning and the learned man is traditional.

How We Live

Four of us, all teaching, live in a Nepali house in the middle of town. Western gadgets such as cameras, short-wave radios, and even, pressurized cans of shaving cream attract the studied fascination of our landlord as if he were a little boy. I have a room to myself and a straw mat to cover the mud floor. Diet consists largely of rice, some vegetables, fruit, and meat (goat, water-buffalo, and chicken) about twice a week. The landlord's son, one of my college students, lives upstairs and facilitates translation when we get stuck. He speaks English fairly well since all classes above the high-school level are conducted in English. He is principal of an elementary school on the side which consists primarily of a long open porch which serves as a classroom. During school hours a strip of cloth closes the open side towards the street.

TRACK COACH Tex Lee Boggs, 23, trains a candidate for the girls Olympics at the National Stadium in Bangkok, Thailand. A physical education graduate of Davis and Elkins College in West Virginia, Boggs is one of 250 Volunteers serving in Thailand. Other Volunteers are teaching English and science in teachers' colleges and technical schools. Still others are working in rural malaria control projects.

Philippine Volunteers Raising Rural Standards

The Peace Corps' biggest single project is in the Philippines—some 625 Volunteers strong, and still growing. It is an impact project which calls for enough Volunteers to make a basic difference in an important national goal—in this case raising the quality of the Philippine educational system, especially among poorer people in the rural areas.

Volunteers are working at 533 rural elementary schools. Others are at high schools, normal schools and colleges. Most help with English instruction, but large numbers are also teaching science, mathematics and other subjects. One special group of 22 Volunteers is working in community development on the vast southern island of Mindanao.

But teaching at the school is only part of the average Volunteer's life. Perhaps more than in any other country, the Volunteers in the Philippines live closest to the standard American impression of Peace Corps life—a thatch-roof house on poles, often with primitive facilities, right in among the people of a small village.

They have an active role in town or barrio life. Often a Volunteer has his individual outside effort, such as starting vegetable gardens or joining together for educational campaigns to promote such things as new kinds of rice cultivation. Others teach at night. During their summer vacation one group of Volunteers on Negros island established "Camp Brotherhood" which was attended by more than 600 Filipino youngsters.

There have been problems. The actual job of an "educational aide" was ill-defined. Ingenuity was required of the Volunteers in finding their place in the school and community. This took time. Slowly they gained confidence and more duties.

Basic Requirements

The basic requirements for the Peace Corps are simple.

1. The minimum age is 18; there is no upper age limit.
2. Volunteers must be American citizens.
3. Volunteers must be in sound physical and mental health.
4. Married couples are accepted if both husband and wife qualify for Peace Corps service and they have no dependents under 18.
5. A college degree is not required for all projects.

HOME ECONOMICS teacher Carolyn Dukes, 23, of Atlanta, Ga., majored in French at Clark College. She is one of 52 Volunteers teaching English, home economics and physical education in the Ivory Coast.

1963-64 Lane Series Attraction Announced

Frank and Fred Assunto and their The Dukes of Dixieland.

by Betty Fuchs

For 1963-64 the Lane Series, now in its ninth season, will again offer two series of concerts -- the Red and the Blue -- featuring such outstanding artists as Theodore Bikel, Mahalia Jackson, and the Dukes of Dixieland. The division of the concerts will be announced in late August.

Each series will contain six artists and group attractions. Scheduled to appear on October 1, is The Royal Philharmonic Orchestra of London, conducted by Sir Malcolm Sargent. This is a return visit of one of the world's best orchestras; the 1963 tour will include fifty-four concerts in fifty prime cities throughout the U.S. and Canada.

On October 15, The American Ballet Theatre will present its fourth Lane Series performance. Mahalia Jackson, who has appeared on all the leading television shows and has sung in concert halls in Europe and America, will appear on October 22. Miss Jackson has sold out every time she has performed at Carnegie Hall.

November 4 will find the New York City Opera once more at Memorial Auditorium; this company has appeared on every Lane

Series but the first. Their presentation this season will be, in English, Mozart's "Don Giovanni." On November 20, jazz will fill the hall as the Dukes of Dixieland make their first Lane appearance. This group will present an evening of New Orleans jazz in the style of Louis Armstrong, Count Basie, and Jelly Roll Morton.

Early in December, Lane Series will proudly present Theodore Bikel, internationally-renowned folk singer. Mr. Bikel has a repertoire in twenty languages, of which he speaks seven with fluency. Besides being a folk singer, he is also a guitarist and an actor of note. He has appeared on numerous television shows, in many movies and Broadway plays. His latest role was in "Sound of Music."

The Vienna Symphony, conducted by Wolfgang Swallisch, will appear March 6 in its first visit to the United States. Swallisch, also conductor of the Bayreuth Festival, became permanent conductor of the 126 piece orchestra in 1960 at the age of 37.

Arthur Rubinstein, pianist hailed as "supreme among the virtuosi of our time," will perform on March 16. About twelve years ago Mr. Rubinstein played in Burlington under the auspices of UVM's Music Department.

The Bayaninan Dance Company from the Philippines, comprised of thirty young dancers and fifteen musicians, will appear on April 30. This folk dance group will be featured at the New York World's Fair in 1964.

Planned for spring is Robert Bolt's London and Broadway success, A Man for All Seasons. Based on the life of Sir Thomas More, this winner of five Tony Awards has been acclaimed as "the greatest dramatic triumph of our time."

Two other attractions, probably a Broadway musical and a chorus, are presently being booked, and will be announced. It is hoped, before the close of college. In addition to these concerts, a youth performance of the American Ballet Theatre has been set for the afternoon of October 15.

Brochures containing ticket applications will be mailed to all students at their home addresses in late August. UVM students' orders, whether mailed, or brought to the Lane Office, will be given priority. Ticket prices remain unchanged.

Student Art Exhibit To Be Held In Billings

by Jim Levett

The University of Vermont's annual Student Art Exhibit will be held this year in the Billings Student Center beginning May thirteenth. This show is sponsored each year by the Art Department, under the auspices of the Messrs. Janson, Aschenbach, Hampel and Mr. Mills.

Examples of each of the three types of art work, produced by the students, will be displayed in the show. There will be pieces representing Mr. Paul Aschenbach's sculpturing classes, Mr. Harrison Hampel's painting classes and Mrs. Isabel Mills' craft classes.

It will certainly be interesting to take note of the paintings done by the art classes, for I understand that with the addition of Mr. Hampel to the department's staff, a marked change in the painting techniques of the students has occurred. Mr. Hampel has emphasized the "still life" approach and the works to be exhibited will show the creative and interpretive abilities of the students.

There are also some very interesting pieces that have been done in the sculpturing lab. I am thinking especially of several wood carvings and a grotesque clay model of a man in the discus throwing position. I am told that the name of this last piece is "PoPo."

As usual, Mrs. Mills' classes are doing a fine job on their products. Their silver work and jewelry is quite professional looking.

The show will open on Monday, May thirteenth. On Thursday, the sixteenth, Mr. Paul Aschenbach will speak in the North Lounge of Billings at 4:15 P.M. His topic will be: "Freudian Imagery in student work."

This year, for the first time, cash awards will be given to three students, in each of the three different art divisions, whose work is found most deserving. The art works will be judged by a distinguished jury of faculty members from outside the Art Department.

BRONZE STATUE TO ENHANCE BAILEY

by Betty Fuchs

Bailey Library is soon to be enhanced with a large bronze statue. The untitled statue, designed and sculpted by UVM instructor Paul Aschenbach, is expected to be completed by commencement.

Mr. Aschenbach, raised in Massachusetts, studied art at the Rhode Island School of Design. He and his family moved to Vermont about twelve years ago, and presently live in Hinesburg. Mr. Aschenbach became affiliated with the University four years ago when he began teaching sculpture.

The statue, which may most accurately described as impressionistic, depicts a university. Its base is a tree trunk from which chairs of knowledge and parts of human bodies are growing. Its flowing lines and upreaching forms are symbolic of the quest for knowledge and the constant growth of a university. It is best described, as Mr. Aschenbach says, as being "itself"; i.e., it will mean something different to everyone who sees it.

When set on its base, the statue will stand about twelve feet high. An exhibition at Fleming Museum is planned to coincide with its erection. This exhibition will include the first sketches of the statue and the several smaller models made by Mr. Aschenbach as work on the statue progressed, showing how the artist's original concept has changed and grown.

This commission is Mr. Aschenbach's first work in bronze and his largest piece of sculpture to date. Samples of his earlier work may be seen at the Loft and in Hamilton Hall.

SALLY ANN TAUCHERT CHOSEN NEW ENGLAND REGIMENTAL QUEEN

Sally Ann Tauchert, New England Regimental Queen of Pershing Rifles. (Credit: Carr Studios)

Miss Sally Ann Tauchert of Fair Haven, New Jersey was recently chosen as the Regimental Queen of the Twelfth Regiment of the National Military Honor Society of Pershing Rifles. The Twelfth Regiment consists of eleven companies based at the larger colleges and universities in New England. Miss Tauchert was sponsored in this contest by Company L-12 of the University of Vermont.

By being chosen Regimental Queen, Miss Tauchert is eligible for the national contest, the winner having the honor of reigning over the more than 8,500 members of the National Society of Pershing Rifles.

Miss Tauchert will be 20 in June and is in the Class of 1963 at the University of Vermont's School of Dental Hygiene. She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Walter Tauchert of Fair Haven, N.J. and was graduated from Asbury Park High School in 1961. She is presently a member of the University Guides and was elected Homecoming Queen in 1962. She is at present Military Ball Queen and honorary cadet colonel of the University Cadet Brigade.

Players Present "The Crucible"

by Merry Schron

Presented by the Department of Speech and Drama, with the University Players, "The Crucible", a play by Arthur Miller, will take place on May 16th, 17th and 18th, 1963 in the UVM Arena Theatre. The play takes place in 1692 in Salem, Massachusetts, during the famous hunt for the witches of the town. Basically, the play deals with the children of Salem and their religious unrest. Because of their own guilt, the children begin to point out witchcraft and begin to frighten adults. The fear they instill in the people of the town becomes so great that the children simply point out undesirable people and people who have hurt them personally. For revenge they point out John Proctor's wife and accuse her of practicing witchcraft.

John Proctor goes to court to plead for his wife. The fear of witchcraft increases among the people of the town. They accuse John Proctor of witchcraft and sentence him to hang if he doesn't confess his guilt. Will he confess? Will he be executed? Purchase a ticket for $1.50 and come at 8:30 to the presentation for a satisfying answer.

The play is directed and designed by B.G. Ackley and the lights are designed by E.J. Freidner. Also, costumes are designed by Mrs. Arleen Lohman and the Stage Manager is Bob Coleman. Included in the cast are:

Pershing Rifles Takes Third In Regimental Meet

On Saturday, April 27, the 12th Regimental Drill Meet of the National Military Honor Society of Pershing Rifles was held at the Commonwealth Armory in Boston, Massachusetts. The 12th Regiment consists of 11 companies at New England campuses participating in the Army Reserve Officers Training Program. UVM's Company L-12 competed in all events of the weekend and fared quite successfully.

The events UVM competed in included team and individual competition. Team events included International Drill Regulations as well as trick drill competition. UVM took fourth place honors in the latter event. The individual competition consisted of two members from each Company forming one drill platoon and drilling as a unit in an elimination contest. Cadet Corporal Wheeler and Cadet S/Sgt. Warmington took third and fourth place honors, respectively. After all the events were tallied up, the UVM team won the third place trophy in overall competition.

At the Regimental Retreat at the close of the afternoon, Cadet Wheeler was presented with the Best Pledge Award and Cadet 1/Lt. Cpt.-elect Robert A. Carley received the Regimental Commander's Silver Award. Saturday evening closed with the Grand Ball held at the Boston Army Base and reigned over by Miss Sally Ann Tauchert, a senior in the University of Vermont's School of Dental Hygiene, who was chosen Regimental Queen. Miss Tauchert, a 20-year-old beauty from Fair Haven, N.J., now becomes eligible for the national contest. The winner of the national contest will be queen for 8500 members of the society. Sally Ann was Homecoming Queen in 1962 and is now Military Ball Queen and honorary cadet colonel of the cadet brigade.

Class Elections

There will be a required meeting, Monday, May 13, 1963 at 4:15 P.M. in the Main Lounge at Billings Center. All those interested in running for office, please be present.

Those who were present at last week's meeting are required to come also.

Campaign regulations and nominating material will be distributed.

The View From Here

The Long Path Down

One of these days some bright historian is going to examine the phenomenon of the war song. Without it being that way intentionally, the war song is one of the best long-term gauges of the rise and decline of a nation. For example, look at the United States.

In the wars prior to the Revolution, no war songs of any lasting value were written, and no old songs were reborn. The Revolution gave us "Yankee Doodle." From there we went upward, and "The Star Spangled Banner" was written during the War of 1812. Next was the Civil War, from which came two of the greatest war songs ever sung, "The Battle Hymn of the Republic," and, of course, "Dixie." Coming into the twentieth century, from World War I we got "Grand Old Flag" and "Over There." These two contributed enough to American morale that Congress saw fit to vote the composer, George M. Cohan, the Congressional Medal of Honor for them. Next comes World War II, and we see a change. From this we got nothing but such feeble-minded things as "There'll Be Bluebirds Over The White Cliffs of Dover" or the pseudo-martial "Off We Go Into The Wild Blue Yonder." And during the Korean tussle nobody even bothered to write anything, even bad songs.

Now look at how the country rose and fell with the songs. The Revolution was the war that got America started as a free nation, and now every child knows at least a little of "Yankee Doodle." The War of 1812 was not one of the best of our wars from a military aspect, but the country was then on the rise, and we got our National Anthem from that one. The Civil War, if the propagandists are to be believed, was a great step forward for democracy and freedom, and out of that bloodbath came two songs with which everyone is familiar, and the words to which are almost as well known. In our own century we have the two Congressional Medal winners. But whatever these two did for morale during the first World War, it is a measure of our decline that they are all but forgotten today. After these two there is practically nothing.

A similar study of a slow rotting away of a nation can be made of the advertisements for the military. For example, there are the ads on television for the Marines. Several of the ads end with the words, "And remember: the Marine Corps builds men!" At one time the general tone of Marine ads and posters was that of a hardened First Sergeant growling "We FIGHT!" In those times one had to be a man just to get into the Marines; now they have had to stoop to building men. But still, the Marines advertise by showing how hard the Marine life is: rigorous training, tough-looking officers, etc. And they do make men out of what they get, or so they say.

Next down the scale is the Air Force, which offers to make qualified people part of the space age. It's based on the glamour of being a real rocket-man. Then comes the Army, which offers all sorts of lures to the high-school graduate: travel, a choice of assignments, and room for advancement. Farthest down the line is the Navy, which offers pretty much the same things as the Army (glamour, adventure, et al.), but uses nothing but cute cartoons.

Look at these ads. The Marines are still trying to maintain the tough fighting image they once had, but the Air Force only hints at being a military organization, while the Army and Navy don't even do that much, but merely offer to make their recruits somehow glamorous.

George M. Cohan was one of the most artistic flag-wavers in American History. Today a Cohan would be laughed right off the stage. During W.W. I he could get away with writing "Over There," but one doubts whether he could today.

This is not a plea for everyone to go out and wave a flag and join some patriotic organization, and please don't mistake it as such. Most flag-waving and zealous patriotism soon degenerates into ultra-nationalism, and even, in many cases, into fascism. It soon becomes, all too often rabble-rousing and cheap politics. This we can do without.

Letters To The Editor

Congratulations

To The Editor:

The Burlington Park Department wishes to extend sincere thanks to the men of Phi Delta Theta Fraternity for the excellent clean-up job done at the Municipal Beach last Saturday.

Even though this was the eighth year the fraternity has done this, the City of Burlington is not taking this task for granted. It is well appreciated. Certainly our eight-man Park Department crew would need a much longer time to complete the job you did.

Now that you have a stake in the cleanliness of the beach, we feel assured that your fellow UVM students will help maintain that cleanliness when they use the beach this spring.

Again, many thanks for this community effort.

IFC Backs Activities

To The Editor:

Recently it has come to our attention that few people, both students and faculty, realize to what extent the Interfraternity Council supports many activities on and off campus. The IFC receives and grants many requests for funds from multitudinous organizations. The IFC granted approximately $3,000 for the therapy room in Patrick Gymnasium within the past two years. The Student Association has received approximately $1,500 for the Billings Student Center, and WRUV has received $1,000 to improve their operating facilities. This year over $17,000 alone has been requested from the Interfraternity Council's Kake Walk Funds. Organizations such as University Players, Boulder Society, Student Association, Pershing Rifles, and Ethan Allen Rifles have requested allocations.

Off campus the IFC regularly aids the various orphan homes in Burlington. Community projects are performed by various fraternities in many different areas. A foreign student has often been sponsored by the IFC to live in fraternity houses.

While the majority of this money comes from the Kake Walk Dispositions Committee, sizable sums come from other Greek activities such as Interfraternity Sing and fraternities' dues. Over $3,000 a year is spent by the IFC itself which, when added to the individual budgets of chapters on campus, amounts to an impressive amount.

Sincerely,
Interfraternity Council

Blackface

To the Editor:

It seems that ninety per cent of the letters to the Editor of late have been concerned with the questioning of whether or not the use of blackface should be eliminated from Kake Walk. I am glad that at least a few members of the generally apathetic student body at UVM have managed to become excited by anything. I had been used to thinking of the

However, this is a question: when we have gotten to the point where we can no longer write a war song, much less a "Dixie," and when our Armed Forces have to sell themselves with cute cartoons and glamour, rather than fighting and guts, then are we really the great nation we believe we are? When nobody has the spirit or desire to fight, but has only enough to lie around and be pretty, to see the world at the expense of the military, to join the Army because of a cartoon he saw on TV, then just how long do we have before the roof falls in?

With the apparent decline of the quiet and private patriotism which has always been an American trademark and with the rise of bellicose super-patriotism, which does nothing but make noise, the question of just what we have become is one we should all be asking ourselves if we do not want to see the slow decay of a relatively free United States continue to its inevitable end.

On page 7 of the April 25 issue of the CYNIC there appeared a "review" of a concert given by the UVM orchestra. Unfortunately, the byline was left out; it was written by one N.C. Baker, which, as it turns out, appears to be a pen-name for someone who had a bone to pick, and wished to remain anonymous.

The "review" was, in some ways, libelous, and therefore should not even have been written, much less printed. We realize that saying it will not happen again is inadequate at best, but we promise that such articles will be thrown away immediately as they are received from now on.

We would also like to offer our sincerest apologies to Dr. Lidal and the Music Department. It is the very least we can do.

STUDENTES

by The Phantom

Dear H. Dumpty,

Once upon a time there existed a personage who bears the same name as you do now. The original Mr. Dumpty was a fairy tale creation, which causes us to question the true nature of yourself. Are you for real? Being one who doesn't believe in reincarnation, I must assume that you are real. It is this very assumption that causes a great deal of consternation on my part. How can anyone in this enlightened era be as naive as you? (Phantom note: Refer to the Vermont CYNIC, April 4, 1963, page 5, "Studentes").

Well, Hump, you quite naturally start with the word "take". You firmly believe that the world is filled with greedy little UVM students who all grab at opportunity as if it were going out of style, and in turn give little or nothing in return. This is what they call a sweeping generalization which is substantiated only by hot air. As evidence to the contrary, I point to S.A., Boulder, Mortar Board, Key and Serpent, Staff and Sandal, Gold Key, Sophomore Aids, I.F.C., Pan Hellenic Council, library workers, student guides, Ariel, Cynic, Centaur, Kake Walk, class officers, and Phantom only knows what else. These are only a few of the people who give of their time and effort to make the university a better place for you and me. When you stated that everyone takes and never gives, you have committed a grave injustice to those people mentioned above. It's a shame that you appear to be so ungrateful. So much for the serious stuff, as your thoughts turn to a subject very close to the hearts of UVM men: women.

You accuse men of picking girls on the basis of "how much he can get from her." May I remind you, though, that as the male takes, the female gives in return. This seems to be a fine relationship that shouldn't cause any heartburn if one is normal. In essence, what's wrong with taking as long as something is given in return. Phantom blesses the fairer sex.

Well, H.D., you then proceed to wonder how girls pick boyfriends. First of all, I wonder how that ever came to your mind. Most people don't think about things like that. They usually revert to a course of firm and positive action. Well, anyway, I analyze your problem as being one of deep frustration in that you are unable to distinguish between the two sexes. For most of us, instinct and our eagle eyes tell us. For you, however, I suggest that you write Ann Landers, c/o The Burlington Free Press. In the interim, most girls have longer hair than boys (it varies with the individual, so proceed with caution) and girls wear skirts or dresses (once again, this is not a hard and fast rule. Assuming that you are a boy and that you don't wear skirts or dresses, this will be a helpful shove in the right direction. Good luck. Girls Beware! ! ! !

Mr. Dumpty then speaks about "it" with particular reference to clothes and fraternities. He staunchly believes that each person must do certain things alike to be socially acceptable. Looking around the campus from my lowly vantage point, I don't see everyone wearing the same clothes or belonging to the same fraternity. There must be some people who know what they are doing. After all, a person doesn't have to belong to a fraternity, or wear clothes according to social stigma. Most people think for themselves and do what is best for them, so who are you to condemn them? Once again, an analysis might show that you are bitter because you don't belong to a fraternity. Well, there is still some hope. You could start your very own fraternity, which could be appropriately called FAG (Fairies And Gremlins). You might have as your officers the terrible triumvirate of the Three Blind Mice. Your housemother could be Mother Goose. And you, Hump, could tell fairy tales at bedtime and guard the outerbreastworks of your house to keep out all unauthorized FAGs.

We now arrive at the last and most masterful word of all, "easy." You say that it is easy for Tom to get his date drunk at his fraternity. Now I say, that is wrong with that? Tom's date probably wanted to get drunk anyway. Isn't this better than exposing Tom's date to massive trauma by her being unable to drink at the fraternity. Massive trauma leads to grave indecisions in Tom's date's personality complex, and these indecisions lead to frustrated people. Isn't it a whole lot better that Tom's date get drunk in the fraternity rather than doing it somewhere else. I believe that the "campus authorities" deserve a pat on the back for reserving specific areas, such as fraternities, to indulge in the finer arts.

We now arrive at the most profound statement of the whole article (I say this with some reservations). "Women, unfortunately, do have it rougher than men." This is a true work of art. I don't know if you broke your shovel, but you sure broke my heart. About the only thing I can say is that I will be happy to sign your petition to run for president of WSGA. Amen! New shovel.

The normal UVM student stabilizes pent-up emotions by doing "it" in various fashions such as getting Tom's date drunk or just occupying one's self with different activities. They thus control their emotions and remain reasonably functional. What do you do? Yes, Hump, you had better "take it easy" or you'll fall off your little perch and shatter into a thousand little pieces exposing you to the cruel, harsh facts of life. And do you know what? I don't think that anyone will try to put you together again.

Thus, I bring my happy little fairy tale to an end and The Phantom will live happily ever after. How about you?

students here in the same way that M. Antonioni has been regarding modern Italians in his recent series of films.

First of all, why the big fuss over Kake Walk anyway? I fear that the holiday is becoming such a sacred cow that we will have to speak of it only in the most religious terms from now on. And quite frankly, I don't see what the deuce people see in it anyway. The whole weekend is a strictly juvenile device to idle the hours away. The walking itself gets a bit dull after the fifth team. The dance band at the ball is usually of the type one can't dance along with. The jazz concert has always been effective in that it produces an incredible urge to start drinking in relief once the "entertainers" are through. The whole rignarole of campaigning reminds me of high school. And worse of all, those unbelievable skits (both the ones during Pops Night and the ones prefacing the walking) are the grossest insult to the intellect of the college student. All in all, the whole affair is a pretty monstrous thing.

Concerning the blackface, I am in agreement with the Clarks. What aggravates me about all the letters defending the blackface is that the authors can't see how anyone could be offended by it. And how the hell do they know? Are they Negroes? Do they know what it is to be spit at, to be called filthy names, to be refused to be served food, to be treated as a second class citizen?

I've lived amongst Negroes all my life. I've lived in supposedly "civilized" northern communities where the Negro is accepted as an equal. I've been witness to some of the most disgusting exhibitions of cruelty to people whose only crime has been that they were not white. I've walked down a street with a Negro and had several passing cars yell out "Nigger" and "black bastard" and other, similarly charming phrases. I've gone out for coffee with a Negro girl and had people eye us suspiciously and whisper snide comments loud enough for us to hear. I've sat at an empty soda fountain with a Negro and waited a half hour to be served and when we finally were waited on, the waitress literally threw our order at us. I've seen a Negro teacher's home on which "neighbors" had splashed several cans of black paint. And all this in a cosmopolitan northern town.

So, just where do white people get the nerve to say that there's nothing offensive in the blackface? Gil Tornabene made a statement concerning the fact that he is not offended by "The Untouchables" television program. My father is Italian and I am half Italian and we are not offended by the show (although I myself am offended by the poor quality of the show's productions). Why should Italians be offended by it? Since when have the Italians been prejudiced against in the past few decades? And yet, many Italians are offended by the show.

My mother is a Jew. I am familiar with some of the forms of prejudice the Jews have had to bear in the United States. But the Jews have had very few problems (in this country) when compared to the Negro. I am almost positive that if Shakespeare's "Merchant of Venice" were to be presented annually on this campus as part of a drama festival, the majority of Jews on the campus would complain and they would succeed in having the play removed because there are enough of them around to get some positive action.

The Clarks' problem is that there are too few Negroes on this campus to effectively fight against blackface. And most of the whites are too blind to see that the blackface could be anathema to the Negro. It unnerves me to think that something as magnificent as Shakespeare's play (which, under close reading will prove not to be anti-Semitic) would be reacted against violently (as it was in New York this past summer). While, on the other hand, something as insignificant as preserving the blackface and fancy costumes of Kake Walk would be retained.

How would all the Jews on the campus feel if they were caricatured as a money loving, cheating, conniving old bastard? How would those of Italian descent like to be caricatured each year as a greasy, slimy cruel gangster? What would those of Irish descent think if they were portrayed at a big extravaganza each year as a pea-brained, superstitious, irresponsible dolt? I doubt if it would be tolerated.

The whole problem could be solved by eliminating the traditional Kake Walk outfit. I'm sure this is not going to cause too many emotional breakdowns. Just because it's a tradition doesn't mean it has to be retained. Sacrificing virgins during the used to be a tradition also. And I am sure that the reason they eliminated it wasn't due to the fact that there just aren't any virgins around any more.

If there were some really creative and imaginative people on the campus, perhaps they could think of some way to incorporate a new theme into the attire of the walkers. The stupidity of retaining the blackface has gone on long enough. Although innovation and breaking with the past are two things unheard of at UVM. They must occur if the Negro students here wish to maintain their dignity.

"Carnival" Ends Successful Lane Series

by Janet Hadda

Possibly one of the most beautiful and professional performances ever presented by Lane Series was the "Carnival."

The setting of the show is a second rate European carnival, where Lili (played by Elaine Malbin), a young and naive girl, works with a puppet show. "Carnival" is chiefly the story of the strong love of Paul, the puppeteer (played by Ed Ames), for Lili, even though she is infatuated with a skillful flirt, Elaine Malbin and Ed Ames played these roles well, but, at times they were not quite able to cope with the disadvantages of Memorial Auditorium's acoustics.

The two leading characters were immensely aided by Jack Hollander as Schlegel, the ringmaster of the carnival, Michael Davis as Marco, the flirtatious magician, Marge Cameron as Rosalie, Marco's faithful lover, and Don Potter in the role of Jacquot, Paul's loyal friend.

Aside from the main conflict, there are other sub-plots which add greatly to the color and enjoyment of the production as a whole. There is the story of the peculiar, yet very human, love between Marco and Rosalie. Miss Cameron literally "stole the scene" whenever she appeared on stage because of her excellent portrayal of the hard-talking, yet weak-willed Rosalie. Her facial expressions (as well as those of the entire cast) left no doubt as to what was going on in her mind. Jacquot, the warm-hearted little Parisian, was touching in his loyalty and affection for Paul. He, too, had tremendous audience appeal and was able to draw laughter and tears almost simultaneously. Without these characters, the performance would probably not have been as effective as it was because, although Miss Malbin and Mr. Davis were good, they were not exceptional.

Typical carnival acts, from jugglers and a stilt walker to "Harem Girls" and a female snake charmer, were gay and fast moving interludes between scenes. The costuming and scenery were colorful, and gave an air of calculated cheapness.

Paul's puppets, Carrot Top, Horrible Henry (a green walrus), Renardo (a fox), and Marguente, were a constant source of enjoyment for Lili. David Daniels skillfully spoke all the parts and made the puppets very endearing and lifelike. They were responsible for Lili's success in the carnival, and it is with them that Lili sings "The Theme from Carnival," popularly known as "Love Makes the World Go Round." Most of the other songs in the production are not well known, but many of them are extremely entertaining; Paul's beautiful "Her Face," the colorful Spanish song and dance, "Sword, Rose & Cape," Rosalie's sarcastic "Humming" song, and Jacquot's fast-moving "Grand Imperial Cirque de Paris," are but a few.

The emotional impact of "Carnival" is hard to describe, but the simple beauty of the story brought tears to many eyes. Carnival was, in short, a highly suitable and successful ending to the Lane Series season for 1962-1963.

AAUP Censures U. Of Illinois

SAN FRANCISCO (CPS) - The American Association of University Professors (AAUP) voted last weekend in its annual convention here to censure the University of Illinois for the manner in which it fired biology Prof. Leo F. Koch after he had written a letter to the student newspaper condoning pre-marital sexual relations for students on biological and psychological grounds.

The AAUP also considered, but rejected, censure proceedings against Northwestern U.

A vote of censure by the AAUP has no legal weight, but it carries considerable moral pressure. A censured institution often finds it difficult to hire top-notch faculty members, and the school loses considerable respect in the academic world.

The action against Illinois was approved overwhelmingly by the convention. Just previously, the association had voted down a motion by Prof. Wm. Wert of Indiana State College that the action be postponed for a year.

No one took the floor in San Francisco to defend Prof. Koch's position in the controversy at Illinois. The issues were only whether Koch's letter constituted grounds for dismissal and whether Koch had been granted due academic process in the dismissal.

The Koch case erupted into controversy on March 18, 1960, upon the publication of a letter to the Daily Illini written by the professor.

Koch's letter included this paragraph: "With modern contraceptives and medical advice readily available at the nearest drugstore, or at least a family physician, there is no valid reason why sexual intercourse should not be condoned among those sufficiently mature to engage in it without social consequences and without violating their own codes of morality and ethics."

The AAUP held that Illinois President David D. Henry was in error in firing Koch without a formal hearing on the charges against him. The Illinois administration was also criticized for failing to support the unanimous resolution of the university's Senate Committee that Koch should be reprimanded, but not dismissed.

In a statement issued over the weekend, the University of Illinois chapter of the AAUP issued a statement supporting the censure of the school.

"It represents a judgement by the national academic community that the administration of the U of I has not observed the normally recognized principles of academic freedom and tenure as endorsed by the AAUP and 14 other professional educational societies," the statement said.

HOW TO SEE EUROPE FOR ONLY $300 A DAY: NO. 3

When all of you go to Europe during your summer vacation, you will certainly want to visit Spain, where the tall corn grows.

The first thing you will notice upon entering Spain is the absence of sibilants. In Spain "s" is pronounced "th" and thereby hangs a tale. Until the reign of Philip IV—or Guy Fawkes, as he was sometimes called—Spaniards said "s" just like everybody else. Philip IV, however, lisped, and Spaniards, having an ingrained sense of propriety and not wishing to embarrass their monarch, decided that everybody should lisp. This did indeed put Philip IV very much at his ease, but in the end it turned out to be a very bad thing for Spain. It wrecked the sassafras industry—Spain's principal source of revenue—and reduced the nation to a second-class power.

...to keep body and soul together

As a result, Spaniards were all forced to turn to bull fighting in order to keep body and soul together. Today, wherever you go in Spain—in Madrid, in Barcelona, in Toledo, in Cleveland—you will see bulls being fought. For many years the bulls have sought to arbitrate this long-standing dispute, but the Spaniards, a proud people who use nothing but Castile soap, have rejected all overtures.

It is therefore necessary for me to explain bull fighting to anyone who is going to Spain. It is also necessary for me to say a few words about Marlboro Cigarettes because they pay me for writing this column, and they are inclined to pout if I ignore their product. In truth, it is no chore for me to sing the praises of Marlboro Cigarettes, for I am one who fairly swoons with delight when I come upon a cigarette which gives you the full, rich taste of good tobaccos plus the pure white Selectrate filter, and Marlboro is the only smoke I have found that fulfills both requirements. Oh, what a piece of work is Marlboro! The flavor reaches you without stint or diminution. You, even as I, will find these statements to be happily true when once you light a Marlboro. Marlboros come to you in soft pack or Flip-Top box, and are made only by the makers of Marlboro.

But I digress. Let us return to bull fighting. Bulls are by nature bellicose creatures who will keep fighting till the cows come home. Then they like to put on pipe and slippers and listen to the "Farm and Home Hour." However, the Spaniards will not allow the bulls any surcease. They keep attacking the bull and making veronicas—a corn meal pancake filled with ground meat. Bulls, being vegetarians, reject the veronicas and then, believe you me, the fur starts to fly!

To be perfectly honest, many Spaniards have grown weary of this incessant struggle and have left their homeland. Columbus, for example, took off in three little ships—the Patti, the Maxene, and the Laverne—and discovered Ohio. Magellan later discovered Columbus. Balboa also sailed to the New World, but he was silent on a peak in Darien, so it is difficult to know what he discovered.

Well sir, I guess that's all you need to know about Spain. So now, as the setting sun casts its rosy fingers over El Greco, let us take our reluctant leave of Spain—or Perfidious Albion, as it is jocularly called. Aloha, Spain or Perfidious Albion, aloha!

© 1963 Max Shulman

Let us not, however, take our leave of smoking pleasure. Let us keep enjoying those fine Marlboro Cigarettes—rich, golden tobacco—pure white Selectrate filter—soft pack or Flip-Top box—available in all fifty States of the Union.

WUS Funds To Worthy Cause

World University Service wishes to make note of the funds received during W.U.S. week. In the contest of the deans, Phi Mu donated $16.00, A.D.P. $19.00 and Gam. Phi $15.00. As for counting the beans contest we drew approximately $22.00 and $60.00 for the button contest. The sum total is $132.00 which will be sent on to national W.U.S. the funds to go to medical dispensaries in Hong Kong.

We appreciate the help given and hope that next year more support will be given to this very worthy cause.

the fourth dimension: TIME

... still a mysterious concept to science. Time is only an idea, an abstraction... an area of shadow, speculation and surprise.

919 A.D. TREE TIME! Growth rings of trees cannot only be counted, but "read." From them, weather patterns can be traced. Back-checking on weather data permits scientists to learn the actual birth date of beams and posts found in archeological ruins. One charred pine log has been found in New Mexico that was "born" in the year 919.

NYET!

COMMUNIST CALENDAR... was a big bust in 1930. Russian leaders initiated a five-day week: four days work, one day rest. To keep factories operating daily, rest days were staggered. A boy and his girl friend might have different days off and get to spend a day together only a few times a year. The system was dropped after six months of grumbling.

HAMILTON SPACE CLOCK... is world's first Interplanetary timepiece. Located in Philadelphia's Franklin Institute, it makes possible integration of Earth and Mars time. This can be tricky, since Mars months have 55-56 days. This amazing clock records the hour, day, month and year on Mars.

You get more than accurate time-keeping when you wear a Hamilton watch. A Hamilton reflects your good taste as no lesser watch can—shows you know quality and value. Outstanding styles for both men and women start as low as $35. An excellent graduation gift suggestion!

Novice Debate Team Takes Third Place

The University of Vermont's novice debate team won third place at the Dartmouth Novice Debate Tournament in Hanover Friday and Saturday.

Norman J. Snow of Burlington took second place in speaker points at the tournament, marking him the second best debater in the competition.

The affirmative team of Norman Snow and Craig Nelson won four and lost one debate, losing to Dartmouth College. They defeated the University of New Hampshire; Bates College, Lewiston, Maine; United States Military Academy, West Point, New York; and Union College, Schenectady, New York.

The negative team of Steve Adler and David Waite won two and lost three debates. They defeated Rhode Island College, Providence, Rhode Island; and LaSalle College, Philadelphia, Pennsylvania. They lost to Massachusetts Institute of Technology, Brandeis University, and Mount Holyoke College.

UVM had an overall record of six wins and four losses at the tournament. Brandeis University, Waltham, Massachusetts, won the tournament with seven wins and three losses.

Betsy Lisman, a senior at the University and a varsity debater accompanied the novice team to Dartmouth as coach.

USIA REP OBSERVES VERMONT

An exhibits specialist with the United States Information Agency in London spent five days in the Burlington area observing life in Vermont.

Charles W. Carson, who is on a two-month tour of the United States, arrived in Burlington, Thursday evening, April 4, and departed on Tuesday morning, April 9. His visit to Vermont was arranged by the Vermont Council on World Affairs at UVM.

Carson, a native of England, is employed by the London office of USIA. He is responsible for producing all visual presentations of the U.S. Information Service in London and elsewhere in England. Carson has been touring the United States to study all facets of American life -- political, cultural, economic, social, and family. He is visiting urban and rural communities, large and small.

While in Vermont, he stayed with Mr. and Mrs. Ray Allen, Jr., in South Hero and with Mr. and Mrs. Philip Rogers of Williston. Allen was a delegate to India in 1959 under the sponsorship of "Farmers in World Affairs." He operates a large apple-growing farm in South Hero.

Following his stay in this area, Carson spent a week in New York City and in Washington, D.C. before returning to England.

Fey: Chance-Superstition-Science

Here is the complete text of the Honors Day address delivered by President John T. Fey at the Honors Day Convocation held Wednesday, May 1, in the Ira Allen Chapel.

Chance - Superstition - Science

A fiery bolt falls from the sky; a rent appears in the earth, fire and brimstone erupt from a mountain and the people make obeisances to the gods. They bow, genuflect, pray, and make sacrifices to appease the angry gods who have unleashed their fury upon them. This sounds strange in an age of science when such phenomena are easily explained in terms of meteors, earthquakes, and volcanoes. Within our scientific culture we pay no tribute to the gods. We do pay our tribute in taxes and contributions to Government, science, education, international organizations, doctors, sociologists, missionaries, engineers -- to ameliorate suffering, to delve further into causes and effects, to explain, instruct, and rebuild. And yet despite our knowledge, science and enlightenment, we cannot control the meteor, the volcano, the earthquake and the many natural phenomena which afflict man. Nor have we succeeded in spreading our enlightenment to many areas of the world to reduce illiteracy, poverty and suffering.

All on the same day in March, 1963, the Associated Press carried stories of an eruption of the Agung Volcano in Bali, the Irazu Volcano in Costa Rica, and the Santiaguito Volcano in Guatemala. We are told that in Bali the people were making sacrifices to the gods and that hundreds were roasted alive as they knelt to pray to the gods of the volcano. The natives refused to leave Agung -- the name means "Giant" -- where they believe their gods dwell. Even our dignified and reserved "Burlington Free Press" headlined the release as "Bali's Angry Volcano." In the Associated Press dispatch we were informed that the fury of the volcano killed more than 1,200 persons. It described the angry mountain shrouding its face behind the clouds; the silence as an eerie one. Yes, this happened in 1963 -- the Age of Science and Technology as it has often been termed. The same dispatch noted the presence of a "volcano expert" on duty near the mountain predicting in scientific terms the duration of the eruption.

In another item on the same page of the same paper we were informed that Russia is ahead of the United States "in the total knowledge obtained from manned space flight", and that the U.S. will attempt to land men on the moon before 1970. It is difficult to reconcile or associate the "Giant" unleashing its fury and man orbiting in space. Where do Chance, Superstition and Science relate? A volcano which has been silent for 10 years and two others on almost the opposite side of the earth erupt within the same week, chance; natives explain the eruption in terms of angry gods -- superstition; and man launches space satellites that orbit the earth -- science.

This is the age in which we live and this is the world which we must accept -- change -- conquer -- reconcile ourselves to or contend with. What is our position and what is our goal?

Throughout history man has been preoccupied with his efforts to explain, deal with and to know the unknown. In his early efforts he turned to the supernatural to explain the unknown in personal terms. He personalized his gods and attributed to them all the powers which he could not explain.

As knowledge increased, man's belief in the supernatural declined -- the superstitions which had been grounded on fear gave way in the light of knowledge. Advances in mathematics, physics, chemistry and all the sciences began to lead him to believe that if only he studied long enough, he could explain the whole phenomenon of life. Science and religion became a battleground. The theory of evolution was advanced to explain man's existence. Volcanoes, earthquakes, meteors were explained in natural terms and the scientist often forsook the priest.

This largely described man's effort to define his existence until this century. We came more and more to identify ourselves and our world in natural terms. True there was still much that was unknown and unexplained but the feeling was that it was unknown only because it had not yet been discovered.

During this century, particularly within the last ten to twenty years, there has been a great change in our thinking. We know that science has made great strides but with each finding we are faced with new unknowns. With all our advances, and our scientific achievements, one fact has emerged strongly and predominantly -- that is, the more we know, the more we realize what we have yet to know. Henry Margenau, distinguished professor of physics and natural philosophy at Yale, in a recent address at Rhode Island College, characterized this situation in mathematical terms, saying that the ratio of what we know scientifically to what we do not understand in scientific terms has been, is, and will forever be zero.

It is a frightening truth -- most of us have lost our old gods of superstition, we do not understand our new god Science, and the element of chance has again gained ascendancy. Where do we turn now?

Quantum mechanics has replaced the classical theories and physicists have accepted the existence of chance in atomic uncertainties. The concept of free will draws scientific reinforcement in its philosophical battle with fatalism. The answer to the future must lie within the individual and it places a heavy burden upon him. If man has a choice -- if his future and the future of the world rests upon the exercise of his will, he has a responsibility to the future which will require all of the powers with which he is endowed. It will require all of the knowledge which is available to him, and a commitment which too has often been avoided in terms of existentialism, absurdity or nihilism. As educated men and women we have a particular responsibility to lead rather than to follow -- to influence society rather than merely reflect it. We cannot accept the role of Camus's "Outsider," for too much of the future rests in our hands.

Consider our present society and the problems which must be solved if we are to control rather than become the slaves of our advancing technology. The vast increase in knowledge and the rate of change present difficult problems. We must find ways of transmitting and advancing the development of knowledge. We cannot afford to create a nation or a world exclusively of scientists when we have a compelling need for statesmen trained in the way of politics; for philosophers, poets, artists, and architects. We need men of vision, men of courage and men with firm convictions in every field of human endeavor.

Part of our problem is the increasing rate with which activities become more specialized and organizations become more massive. The danger for the individual is that he tends to be lost on the team which he has created.

Ironically, man himself is literally part of the problem. Our economists and ecologists predict a population increase of 3 million a year within the United States alone and they forecast that 92% will live in 212 cities. Consider what this means in terms of transportation into and out of cities. Consider it in terms of housing and education. Shall these 212 cities grow as have our cities in the past -- with sprawling suburbs going further and further out until the suburbs of one city meet the suburbs of the next; with schools unable to meet the increasing demands? Shall these cities be characterized by inadequate low income dwellings and unimaginative high rent housing, totally ineffective public transportation and by highways and parking areas incapable of absorbing the tide of private transportation?

Throughout the world, the tide of growing population brings new and different problems -- each nation and area reacting within its own culture to the benefits or evils of the changes. Medical advances have lengthened the life span and increased the chances of survival. Writing under the title of "The Politics of Ecology" Aldous Huxley predicts that "by the year 2000, unless something appallingly bad or miraculously good should happen in the interval, six thousand millions of us will be sitting down to breakfast every morning." In brief, twelve times as many people are destined to double their numbers in one-fortieth of the time which it took for the population to double during the 1600 years from the beginning of the Christian era to the landing of the Pilgrims in America. With this increase in population, there are indications that in some of the less developed areas the standards are regressing instead of progressing. For many there has not been the technological improvement which has made the western world so much more productive. The increased control of epidemic disease, the emphasis on child care and preventive medical clinics are combining to increase the population without a corresponding increase in production and level of subsistence. Our nutritionists report that even now in many countries up to half of the children disappear from the face of the earth before they reach the age of five -- victims of malnutrition and diseases against which they have no defense. Certainly we must continue to work to save these lives but we must also work to give them some hope of individual fulfillment if they survive.

Another aspect of world and of national life which we must consider is the increase in government which has been engendered by the complexity of our development. There was a time not too long ago when our Federal Government played a very limited and remote part in our individual lives. Today we seek Federal support for our highways, housing, hospitals, airports, public health programs, education, agriculture, employment, industrial displacement, recreation, ad infinitum. There has been a tremendous upsurge in governmental activity. While much of it is necessary and good, control is required if it is to continue to be a government of the people and not a government of privilege. If the individual citizen does not have the inclination and intelligence to exercise this control, who will control it? Aldous Huxley had a word to say on this also and I think it bears repeating. He marks that "in the past, one of the most effective guarantees of liberty was government inefficiency. The spirit of tyranny was always willing; but its technical and organizational flesh was weak." Today with all the resources of electronic data processing available to it, we cannot trust to inefficiency -- although we have good evidence that it is still with us. Under the control of experts however, tyranny now has the tools to be remarkably and frighteningly efficient. Consider, in the hands of a tyrant, the portents of electro stimulus of the mind, a process now being studied for use with the mentally ill. Yes, Government now, more than ever, requires responsible control.

If superstition has been replaced by knowledge, if science no longer holds forth promise of final truths, if, as Margenau states, "Science recognizes eternal questions but spurns eternal answers" where do we find our answers -- what is our God? Shall we, as educated individuals, accept chance as the stimulus of life and let our world run an erratic and unpredictable course without guidance and without meaning? If life has no meaning, then our technological advances will profit us little. True, we may live longer, and perhaps live better in terms of comfort and convenience, but shall we live better as men? Unless we can find within ourselves a meaning to life, a moral code which is based on the dignity of every man and the integrity of every individual, we shall be the pawn of our own creativeness. I think we may not hope to find the answer to our quest for order from without -- we shall first have to find ourselves -- within our time and place. We must determine who we are and where we are before we can intelligently determine where we want to go. But once we have found ourselves, we are in a position to exert our individuality upon our environment -- to superimpose a new pattern upon the existing mold -- to see our world with all the heritage of the past and with all the vision of the future. We need not accept every new technological innovation -- we need not believe every new pronouncement on the nature of man and his world. Newness is not synonymous with improvement -- nor is change identical to progress. We need not be bound by tradition but we need the historical culture that permits us to face the future with a knowledge of the past.

Increased knowledge of itself is meaningless unless it permits intelligent application. Think of the possibilities for advance when computers and information retrieval may free countless hours of man's time for developing a deeper understanding of his being.

Population increase, automation and urbanity need hold no terror if we approach these problems with purpose and planning. We need to be bold and inventive, not only in our technology where we already have demonstrated our capacity, but in our approach to life and in the development of our whole pattern of living. We need new patterns and new designs -- molds that will grow and develop with us -- that will not keep us uncomfortably encased in a frame of reference which no longer fits. As Harold Taylor, former President of Sarah Lawrence College, phrased it -- "The independent man must not be alarmed at where his independence will take him. If it takes him to conservatism, he should accept himself as a conservative and not as an anxious liberal. If he should then become a radical, then that is what he should be, and not a cynical conservative."

In other words, we must seek the answers to our existence from within ourselves, and set our goals to accomplish a meaningful life. This requires a commitment to life that we must be prepared to make -- an involvement in the whole life and a realization that the individual is supreme; that the ultimate good is not the advance of society, technology or culture of itself but the advance of the individual within this society, technology and culture.

In making a bold commitment on an individual basis we shall be able to apply science to the understanding of man's being -- and simultaneously we shall establish individual awareness and identity where confusion now threatens to prevail.

Such a commitment by educated men and women will assure the participation, leadership and planning that is necessary to provide unity and purpose to a society which has become disorganized, sprawling and meaningless to most individuals.

An individual commitment by educated men and women will reduce the element of chance in the future of a troubled world. Through knowledge and intelligence we have in our possession the means of extending man's control over the world around him. We have the capacity to reorient the age of science to serve mankind -- and through education and individual commitment, we can reduce the unreliable impact of chance or probability on the future of man. This is the opportunity and the responsibility of all men and women who have had the privilege of higher education.

Bright Future For Scope

by Jim Adams

Scope is a comparatively new organization on campus. Its constitution was drafted in October of 1961. It is primarily concerned with bringing to the University extra-curricular events which would appeal more to the intellectual.

Recently elected president of Scope, Larry Koff, stated that "there isn't enough going on for the intellectual. Scope tries to help this." So far this year Scope has initiated five programs which included the two fine films The World of Apu and Hiroshima, Mon Amour, and a very successful lecture on Angola. Later in the spring Scope hopes to invite folk singer Sandy Payton for the Fine Arts Festival.

Next year Scope plans to work along the same lines. There will be two or three lectures on contemporary political problems or world affairs, folk or jazz concerts and foreign films.

If there is anyone who would be interested in working on the Scope staff or who would have a particular program to suggest, contact Larry Koff. Any help or suggestions would be appreciated.

Does a man really take unfair advantage of women when he uses Mennen Skin Bracer?

All depends on why he uses it.

Most men simply think Menthol-Iced Skin Bracer is the best after-shave lotion around. Because it cools rather than burns. Because it helps heal shaving nicks and scrapes. Because it helps prevent blemishes.

So who can blame them if Bracer's crisp, long-lasting aroma just happens to affect women so remarkably?

Of course, some men may use Mennen Skin Bracer because of this effect.

How intelligent!

SPORTS CORNER

by Bernie Zaccaro

On April 24, 1963, a special event in the professional sports world took place. The Boston Celtics, in maintaining their "dynasty", won the NBA playoffs by taking 4 of the first 6 games in a seven game series, from the Los Angeles Lakers. To most people this might seem to be the special event mentioned. However, to many other people and myself, the "special" event which took place on that date was the appearance of Mr. Robert Cousy in the last professional game of his outstanding career.

His appearance was indeed, a dramatic one. It began in the first quarter. Cousy, in his traditionally great form, led the Celtics in keeping up with the hot hand of Jerry West and the superior rebounding of Elgin Baylor. Throughout the first quarter, Cousy took many difficult shots, and set up many baskets with his tricky, bewildering passes.

In the second quarter of the game, Cousy sat out until there were four minutes left. During this time, the Lakers pulled ahead by a comfortable margin. At this point, Boston Coach, Red Auerbach decided that it was time for the "Cooz." Into the game for the Celtics came number 14. Although there were only four minutes left, the playmaker brought his team to within three points when the half-time buzzer went off.

Nothing outstanding took place in the third quarter. That is, nothing except the acknowledged great playing of Cousy. Because of his terrific ball-handling, Boston went into the fourth quarter with a 14 point lead.

The height of the excitement came in the fourth quarter. Bob Cousy was injured. He lay sprawled upon the court in pain. They carried him off, and when they did, each and every fan in the Los Angeles Sports Arena came to his feet, in a tumultuous applause which rung throughout the west coast city.

At that point in the game, the Celtics began to slide quickly. The Lakers came within 1 point of tying them. With only three minutes left in the game, Cousy returned to the scene. In the locker room, he had received a shot of Novocain in his right ankle, bound it tightly, and was set for action.

Within 30 seconds, Cousy had sprung the Celtics loose once again. It was his game once again. He had lived up to his name, "Mr. Basketball." Besides scoring 16 points in the game, and making an abundance of startling assists, Bob Cousy was the stream of inspiration which led the Celtics to their fifth World Championship in a row.

Spring Football Review

Green Beats White, 14-13

Football was officially tucked away until September first as the 15 day spring practice session came to a close with the annual Green and White intersquad game. The game was filmed and will be diligently viewed reviewed by coach Clifford and his staff during the summer.

Coach Clifford broke his 44 man squad into two teams, the White, which was composed of next year's tentative starting team, and the Green, which was composed of the second team. Clifford expected to see more scoring this year than there was in the stingy 6-0 White victory last year. This spring he was not disappointed.

The Green team won the game, 14-13, by capitalizing on two breaks early in the first period. The first was on blocked punt by Deane Kent, which was scooped up by alert end, Mike Ingham, only a freshman, who carried the ball for 18 yards for the score. Ken Andrade converted to raise the tally to 7-0.

Minutes later, Dave Wayne, another freshman, intercepted a white pass and set the Green up in an easy scoring position. Freshman quarterback, Jack O'Dea plunged over right guard from a yard out, to score. Andrade again booted the PAT, bringing the score to 14 to 0.

The fired-up Green team held up under the 78° Vermont weather until the last period, when the Whites waged a last-ditch offensive. Converted half-back, Tom Perras, playing out of the split end position, caught a Scot Fitz pass in the end-zone. Paul Toussaint kicked a point at the touch-down.

The teams were quarterbacked by all three Catamount signal-callers, Greer, O'Dea, and Fitz alternated running both squads, while getting accustomed to the new "flip-flop" offense.

John (Lefty) Harrington capped a White drive with a two yard power-dive into the paydirt. That brought the score to 14-13, where it stayed, as Toussaint's attempt for the extra point was blocked by the charging Greentrenchmen.

Green team personnel, who played well and who gave the Whites something to sweat about over the summer, were tackles Tom (Abe) Mongeon and Fred Boese. These two boys put the heat on Dennis Blanck, converted guard John Sullivan, and big Ed Fugit. The tackle spot is still wide open. One factor to be considered about this post is the possible return of last year's starter Merrill Thoresen, and 1961 starter, John Fyfe, who chose his books instead of practice this spring.

Guard and center were in the capable hands of Captain George Oelze and Ron Hertel. Perhaps the biggest Freshman standout is Art (Rusty) Brink, who will probably occupy a starting berth. Bill Davidson, Ray Bello, and Joe Albanese kept pressure on these starters throughout the game.

Ends Toussaint and speedster Al Brown held down the split end spot with authority, while tight ends Doug Barrett, and Larry Rice handled their positions with skill.

Backs that ran well for the Green were Mike Bruke, Dave Wayne, and Ken Andrade. Dean Kent showed signs of the form that made him the Sophomore sensation last season. Big Dick Reynolds worked well out of the Shortback and fullback spots, displaying fine running power. Frank Foerster played a solid defensive game in the secondary and carried the ball for consistent gains.

All things taken into consideration, this year's varsity football team seems way ahead of last year's gridsters. Coach Clifford was pleased with the 1963 spring practice and hopes to bring a winning football team to UVM in the Fall.

Victory Marks Start Of '63 Tennis Season

On May 2, coach Fred Marston's Tennis players opened the 1963 season with a strong 9-0 victory over the University of New Hampshire. Dick Holden and Jim Freedman, playing one and two, showed signs of repeating last year's fine freshman performances. Captain Pete Jellinek, Steve Ratner, Steve Krantzman, and Harry Dickerson played consistent tennis and easily won their matches. The doubles combinations of Holden and Freedman, Ratner and Jellinek, and Marty Hackel and Bill Newman all registered victories for UVM.

May 4 saw the Catamounts travel to the University of Rhode Island and receive their first setback of the year, 6-3. The Cats just couldn't seem to get started. Sophomore Dick Holden played outstanding tennis, soundly defeating his URI opponent. The only UVM double winner of the day was Steve Ratner, who, after losing the first set, changed his tactics, then won the next two sets and the match. Ratner and Jellinek then proceeded to take the number two doubles.

The Larries of St. Lawrence University entertained the traveling Vermont team on May 6, the latter being the victor by a score of 5-4. This was the first UVM victory over the Larries in many years. Dick Holden and Steve Ratner continued to play outstanding tennis. Steve Krantzman played the number four slot in the singles and won giving UVM a 3-3 tie, as Jellinek, Hackel, and Newman lost. Ratner and Jellinek playing their best to date were not able to cope with the SLU doubles combo. The remaining two doubles matches were both unusual. Dick Holden, playing with Steve Krantzman, won the close first set. Being down 0-4 in the second set, they suddenly came to life and finally won, 7-5. Marty Hackel and Bill Newman were down 0-5, and set point, when they gathered the next five games. They finally succumbed 7-5. Hackel and Newman ran off twelve straight games in the next set, winning 6-0, 6-0, and giving Coach Marston a well designed victory.

This weekend, the Vermont team will travel to the Yankee Conference Championships. Dick Holden and Steve Ratner will definitely be contenders in their singles categories. Ratner and Jellinek, and Hackel and Newman will also be contenders in the doubles events.

Catamount Nine Breaks Jinx

The UVM Varsity Baseball team broke an eight game losing streak last Tuesday by topping the boys from Middlebury College. Pitching for the Catamounts were Karl Martin, who pitched the first six innings, and Bill Christie, who turned in an excellent performance in the remaining three innings. The latter did not permit any Middlebury batters to reach first base.

The big gun at the plate for UVM was versatile Dick Boutillier, who pounded out three hits for four times at bat. The final score of the game was 5-3.

The next day the Catamounts hosted arch rival St. Michael's, from nearby Winooski. Here too, the boys from UVM were victorious. The major aspect of this game was the fantastic pitching of veteran Dick Cassani. The All-Yankee Conference choice finally regained his form that led last year's team to top honors. Cassani struck out 11 batters, and gave up only three hits. Two of these hits came from the first two men to face Cassani, and the third was a scratch hit occurring in the seventh inning.

Tallying base hits for the Cats in this contest were Bob Johnson, Dick Boutillier, Joe Pare, and John Tartera. The final score of the game was 2-0.

Correction

Last week the CYNIC printed an article to the effect that a swim school for faculty children was being formed. The Athletic Department wishes us to inform you that plans for this school have been dropped. There will be no swim school for faculty children.

Graduation Draws Near SENIOR EVENTS BEGIN TOMORROW

Senior Day will be on Friday, May 17. That's when the ball starts rolling. Each senior will be able to pick up a carnation (which will distinguish him from the underclassmen on his day of recognition) and all materials pertinent to Senior Week - tickets, programs, graduation announcements - at Billings. Providing there is some delightful Vermont spring, weather, there will be twisting on the green to Rick Nalin's Band. If the weather doesn't permit it to be held outside, the band will relocate to the Gage. Rick & Chuck Lowenstein will be co-chairmen for Senior Day.

To celebrate the conclusion of finals and the onset of graduation, there will be a Senior Picnic for Seniors and their dates on Thursday, June 6th. It will probably be bar-b-que style. The location is being worked out at present, but will probably be in the Redstone campus area. We'll be able to let you know exactly where it will be held by May 17th. The picnic will start at 4:30 and the entertainment will begin at 6 p.m. The Journeymen (folk-singers) are scheduled to appear.

On Friday, June 7th the Hotel Vermont will be the locale for a buffet-banquet (again for seniors and dates). The menu looks great and with buffet style you can always have a little bit extra of some favorite dish. The buffet starts at 6 p.m. and will be followed by dancing in the Ballroom from 9 p.m. - 1 a.m. to the music of Bert Orr.

Class Walk will open the schedule of events on Saturday, June 8th at 10 a.m. Seniors will meet at Billings and will be addressed by President Fey and representatives from the faculty.

Class Day starts at 1 p.m. on Saturday when Seniors again meet at Billings and the traditional orations (class history, class poem, pipe, tree, ivy, Boulder) are given by class members - and believe me they're not all serious speeches! This is also when the class ivy and class tree are planted and the famous pipe smoking ceremony is held. By the way, parents and guests are invited to follow the Seniors around campus to listen to the speeches at both Class Day and Class Walk.

Immediately after Class Day, there will be a graduation rehearsal conducted by Mr. Marston, University Marshall, and Duane Barber, Class Marshall. The class picture will be taken on the green at this time, too.

On Sunday, June 9th, the final day as UVM undergrads will begin with Baccalaureate services in the Ira Allen Chapel at 10 a.m. The speaker is Rt. Rev. L.A. Rudloff. Many people from Burlington come to the Baccalaureate service because of the well-known quality of Baccalaureate speakers every year. Graduation exercises will begin at 3 p.m. on Sunday. Plans to have the exercises held outside are in the processing stage, but if weather conditions won't allow for a comfortable graduation (i.e., ominous black clouds indicating rain) the exercises will be held in the Patrick Gym. The graduation speaker, President Mary Bunting of Radcliffe, is also a superior one.

If anyone has any questions, get in touch with one of the class officers or Miss Souville, Class Adviser. They would be glad to provide any further information on Senior Week that you're interested in knowing.

Military Review Held Despite Rain

Due to a severe hailstorm, the University of Vermont's ninety-fifth annual Military Day was held in Ira Allen Chapel, instead of in Centennial Field, as planned. Much of the program had to be omitted, and only the advanced cadets were present.

To begin the ceremonies, Cadet Colonel Peter H. Carr introduced Honorary Cadet Colonel Sally A. Tauchert. Miss Tauchert then presented Company E of the Second Battalion with a yellow streamer for its flag, for being the ROTC Company receiving the highest efficiency rating for the year.

Also introduced were honorary Cadet Colonels Janice Cole, Pat Middleton, and Pat Russell.

After the National Anthem, awards were presented. In order of presentation they are:

To Cadet Captain William H. Lewis - the American Legion Award: Medal & Plaque to the Cadet Commander of the ROTC Company receiving the highest efficiency rating for the year.

To Cadet Colonel Peter H. Carr - the Wadsworth Ramsey Smith Trophy: Saber to the outstanding senior cadet of the Army ROTC.

After a long wait, and a week and a half of work by the Pep Committee, the new Charlie Catamount has finally been selected. The new Charlie, who is to reign for the 1963-64 season, is Don Grossman, a sophomore.

Don has been on the Pep Committee for two years. In high school he was a cheerleader for three years, and was the captain of the varsity cheerleaders during his senior year. At UVM, he is on the swimming team, and played freshman football. You may also remember him as the fellow who walked out on the football field, beating a trash can with a hairbrush, just before the start of UVM's first home game of the 1961 football season.

Also considered strongly for the position of Charlie Catamount by the Pep Committee were Trent Anderson, Ron Bishop, John Foley, and Chuck Grutman, outgoing Catamount.

As Catamount, Don's responsibilities are to attend all home football and basketball games, and the away games at Norwich and Middlebury if at all possible, as well as all pep rallies held before games.

The Catamount is a permanent member of the Pep Committee, and must work closely with the UVM cheerleaders.

Don says that as Charlie Catamount he will not only attend basketball and football games and pep rallies, but will represent the School at any of its social and charitable functions, such as Christmas parties for orphans. "It is my intention," says Don, "to do all I possibly can to raise spirit and pride at UVM."

Aaron Schildhaus, chairman of the Committee, says that Charlie Catamount is the embodiment of school spirit, but by no means should have to carry the school on his shoulders. It is up to the students to show spirit themselves, and with Don as Catamount, Aaron hopes to see a new era of spirit on campus.

To Cadet Colonel Peter H. Carr - The Master Sergeant Joel Surrel Rifle team trophy: trophy to the member of the ROTC Rifle Team who has the highest season's average.

To Cadet Major Frank A. Bolden - The Army Reserve Officer's Association Award: Medal to the Army ROTC Cadet in the Senior Class who has shown the greatest versatility and participation in the ROTC program.

To First Platoon, Company B, received by Cadet First Lieutenant Keyle R. Mabin, Platoon leader - the Company L-12 Pershing Rifles Trophy: Trophy to the ROTC Platoon judged to be the most proficient during the year.

To Cadet Staff Sergeant Alan R. Warmington - The Retired Officers' Association (Green Mountain Chapter) Award: Medal and certificate to the ROTC Sophomore cadet who has contributed most to the ROTC program.

To Cadet Lieutenant Colonel Robert E. Walsh - the Blanchard Trophy: to the cadet most proficient throughout the year.

Dr. Steeves Writes Text On Education

Dr. Frank L. Steeves, Associate Professor Education.
(Credit: Grutman, S.P.S.)

by Roberta Levy

Dr. Frank L. Steeves, Associate Professor of Education here at UVM, has recently written a book entitled ISSUES IN STUDENT TEACHING: A Casebook With Related Problems In Teacher Education. The book, primarily written as a textbook for supervising teachers, those who work with college students during student teaching and other field experiences, is a collection of 35 actual cases in student teaching.

The casebook contains an introduction which presents Dr. Steeves' viewpoints on the need for preparing to supervise student teachers and which describes case study as a method of teaching and learning. The 35 cases and problems presented deal with basic concepts and patterns in supervised student teaching; relationships during student teaching; administrative and supervisory problems; and placement and followup. In addition, at the end of the book, there are five appendixes; a glossary of terms used in student teaching; a working bibliography of all the major sources in this field; an "alternate" table of contents which serves as an index to problems treated in the casebook; and the inquiry form used to gather data for the book.

Dr. Steeves first came to UVM in 1958 after having served as Director of Student Teaching, Placement and Follow-up at Paterson New Jersey State College. He received his B.S. in 1946 at Hyannis and Bridgewater State Teacher's College (Mass.), and his Masters in 1946 and Ph.D. in Education at Boston University, School of Education, where he also received a teaching Fellow and was instructor of Education. In 1958, Dr. Steeves pursued post doctoral work at Teachers College, Columbia University.

Dr. Steeves has written numerous professional articles and two other books "You'll Have Fun In Student Teaching" (1955) and "Fundamentals of Teaching In Secondary Schools," in addition to having served as supervisor and director of student education at St. Cloud Minnesota State Teacher's College, and the University of North Dakota, College of Education.

Dr. Steeves' Issues in Student Education: A Casebook, though primarily designed for supervising teachers in the schools, college supervisors of student teachers, and school and college administrators, can greatly benefit all students, of teacher education. The cases are actual ones taken from Dr. Steeves own experiences and those of numerous education across the country. The names have been changed and because the problems dealt with have actually occurred this book "does not over emphasize the problems of teacher education but stimulates thinking among students, teachers, and administrators so that when they make decisions and take actions, they will solve old problems rather than create new ones."

After these awards, Colonel Weston L. Blanchard awarded Master Sergeant James W. Brady with a cluster for meritorious service. Then Colonel Blanchard was also presented with a cluster. Since Colonel Blanchard is retiring, Dean Lyman S. Rowell read him a citation on behalf of President Fey, the Colonel was also given a farewell tribute.

It was a pity that the rain (which continued throughout the review) prevented more people from watching and participating in UVM Military Day.

UVM Orchestra Concert

The UVM Orchestra will present its last concert of the current season at 8:30 P.M., Sunday, May 19 in Ira Allen Chapel.

The program will feature graduate student Don Kerr as soloist in organ concerti and sonate with orchestra. Kathryn Tampas (Mrs. John) will sing a group of four songs accompanied by Elise Lidral (Mrs. Frank). Mrs. Tampas holds a Master of Music degree in voice from Indiana University. Another graduate student, Mary Terey-Smith (Mrs. Charles), will conduct the orchestra.

Mrs. Smith majored in conducting and composition at the Ferenc Liszt Academy of Music and studied Teacher's Training at the Pazmany University, both in Budapest. She became coach and later conductor at the Hungarian State Opera House in Budapest. She also conducted the Tatabanya Symphony Orchestra and taught music at the Zoltan Kodaly Gymnasium. She was forced to leave Hungary during the fall, 1956 Revolution. She is now an English citizen, married to an English electrical engineer, and lives in Montreal.

The program follows:

BLOOMINGTON, Indiana (Collegiate Press Service) - Three Indiana University students, all members of the Young Socialist Alliance, were indicted last week under the provisions of a 1951 state anti-subversive act.

The Monroe County Grand Jury, which brought the indictment, charged that the three students assembled on March 25, of this year "for the purpose of advocating or teaching the doctrine that the government of the United States or the State of Indiana should be overthrown by force, violence, or other unlawful means, voluntarily participating therein by their presence, aid or instigation, and as officers of a Trotskyite Communist organization called the Young Socialist Alliance, the youth group of the Socialist Worker's Party."

The students named in the indictment were Ralph Levitt and James Bingham of Indianapolis, and Tom Morgan of Terre Haute, Ind. The three are free on bail. The trial will probably not come for months, as the American Civil Liberties Union and other interested parties plan to enter Amicus Curiae briefs, which may take months to prepare.

The YSA's troubles at Indiana began last October, when a number of YSA members joined in demonstrations against the blockade of the island of Cuba by the Kennedy Administration. The demonstrators were jostled and threatened by a crowd of thousands. The Monroe County persecutor, Thomas Hoadley, announced that he planned to investigate the YSA to determine if they had incited a riot. The YSA charged that Hoadley dropped charges against two non-students also involved in the October disturbance. One of the two released is alleged to have hit a policeman, and the other to have slugged a YSA member.

Hoadley publicly suggested that the Indiana University administration throw the YSA chapter off campus in a letter to a local paper in February. Joseph Ewers, assistant to Indiana University President Elvis Stahr, said that the Hoadley statement on the YSA was sent to the papers before the university was notified of it.

Samuel E. Braden, a vice-president of the university, issued a statement saying that "it is very difficult to understand why the prosecuting attorney, if he believed he had discovered a violation of the law, decided not to bring it to the attention of the university, but instead issued a statement to the press."

to issue an interpretation as to whether or not the YSA is in violation of the 1951 statute. The AG has yet to do so, and the university is continuing to recognize the YSA as a legitimate group until proven otherwise.

But the story really broke when YSA national secretary LeRoy McRae spoke in Bloomington at a meeting attended by about 125 persons. It is charged that the specific violation of the state anti-subversive statute occurred at that meeting. The content of McRae's speech centered around the civil rights struggle of the American Negro.

Some months ago the Indiana campus was hit by a narcotics scandal, several students being arrested for illegal possession of narcotics. Prosecutor Hoadley declared that the YSA "might" have been using narcotics to attract new members. A YSA spokesman said that the narcotics charge went before the grand jury, but could not be checked since no list of names of YSA members existed.

The YSA has also charged that Hoadley has said that a Moscow-trained man and wife team was sent to the IU campus to organize the YSA. The YSA has pointed out that no Moscow agent could possibly be sent to organize a Trotskyite group.

Does a man really take unfair advantage of women when he uses Mennen Skin Bracer?

All depends on why he uses it.

Most men simply think Menthol-Iced Skin Bracer is the best after-shave lotion around. Because it cools rather than burns. Because it helps heal shaving nicks and scrapes. Because it helps prevent blemishes.

So who can blame them if Bracer's crisp, long-lasting aroma just happens to affect women so remarkably?

Of course, some men may use Mennen Skin Bracer because of this effect.

How intelligent!

The View From Here Last Minute Exams

Now that final exams are almost upon us, some teachers have decided that it is a good time to give hour exams. Some teachers? A good many would be more like it.

Why is it so necessary to give so many exams during the last week or ten days of classes? Some students have exams in almost every one of their courses, which would mean from four to six exams in ten days. A heavy load? Perhaps, but the teachers seem to relish this sort of thing. A few teachers (a very few) have even confessed that they are giving these exams just before finals intentionally. Their reasons are that it will get the students into the swing of taking exams at a hectic pace. Others believe that it keeps the student on his toes, and lets him know that he can't tail off on class work in anticipation of finals. There are those teachers who maintain that they have to give three exams during the semester, and that the last day of class is the only time they can give the third exam. (When asked why it can't be given a week or so earlier, they generally hedge; any lack of planning on their part must be hidden from the students at all costs.) Finally, there are those folk artists in student suffering, the sadists.

Is it really necessary to have so many exams scheduled for the week before finals start? With just a little planning, wouldn't it be easier to space the exams so that the last one didn't fall so near the end of the semester? The week before finals should be a time when we can all gird ourselves for the ordeal ahead, not a time to be worn down by "practise runs" which, however, are not rehearsals but serious business.

This being the last issue of the CYNIC this year, we thought it would be a good time to stop for a moment and try to evaluate the paper. Since the CYNIC is supposed to be the newspaper of all the students, and not just of the few who run it. That is the reason for the questionnaire that appears below.

We would like to know just what you, the "reading public," think of the paper. If you would like to see the CYNIC improve, here is your opportunity to let us know how, and how much, you think it can be improved.

All that is necessary is to fill out the questionnaire, cut it out of the paper, and leave it in the CYNIC office, Billings Center, or in the CYNIC's box at the Information Desk in Billings. Or you can put it in an envelope or clip it to a 3x5 card and drop it in any Messenger Service box, addressing it to the CYNIC.

If you want the paper to improve, please fill out the questionnaire and return it. The coming school year might see just the improvements you wanted - if you return the questionnaire.

Letters To The Editor

EDITOR'S NOTE:

Last week one "Phantom" wrote an open letter to "H. Dumpty" in the "Studentes" column. The day after it appeared we got a good letter about the column. However, the letter will not be printed, for it was not signed, except by two characters named "Chi" and "Cow."

Perhaps it is time to say once again, that the CYNIC will print every letter it gets, unless the letter is not for publication, or is libelous. However, every letter must be signed by the writer. We will withhold the name of the writer, or give him a penname if he wants one, but we must know who the writer is before we will print anything. (We know who "H. Dumpty" and "Phantom" are, but we do not know who "Chi" and "Cow" are.) If you want your name withheld, or changed to a penname, just say so on your letter. But it must be signed. It's too bad this one wasn't; it was a good letter.

A Good Word

To The Editor:

There has been a great deal of negative criticism in regard to the concepts of fraternities and fraternity living. Charges of conformism and hypocrisy and banded about with the results of a distorted image of what fraternalism actually implies.

I must agree that there are elements of conformism and "group adaptationism" in any fraternal organization. The members must be moulded to conform to the image of the group, I concede this.

I must also agree that the concepts of team spirit and brotherhood are essentially meaningless terms, being extremely vague and rarely practiced.

Further, the charges that fraternities are merely social clubs for the insecure and group-oriented also have much merit.

Then, what are the advantages of fraternities. No, they are not undying friendships - that is propaganda. Certainly not "social moulding for adult life," for the individual will get this through ordinary college experience in the interaction between students on the social levels of campus activity.

The only real valid point in defense of fraternities, and this is vital, is the inexpressible feeling of belonging, of sharing, of merging into a whole, or remaining an individual, and yet, of being somehow elevated into a realm of pure ecstasy. This sensation comes briefly to be sure, but is worth all the obviously detrimental aspects of fraternal existence. It is something intangible that extends above the ordinary, an elusive spirit that is captured but for a brief moment, lost, and at times, found again. Those who have never experienced fraternity life

EGG SHELLS

by H. Dumpty

Dear Phantom:

I am greatly relieved to hear from you. For awhile I was beginning to think that my first suspicions that I would not reach anyone would be true. But since you have taken the issue so much to heart I at least have the satisfaction of knowing that I hit home somewhere. You should have limited yourself to a literary criticism, however. (I see that you might have done all right on that score, now that I have re-read my article of April 4), for on any other level, you and your logic, as your name implies, can be seen right through, or better yet, can not be seen at all.

You have called me naive in an enlightened era (refer to May 9 issue of Vermont CYNIC, "Studentes"). My, but Johnny does look enlightened after he has just finished a bur-pack, doesn't he? How about yourself? When you look at yourself in the mirror, the morning after the night before, do you get that enlightened feeling? Perhaps our space age era would be better named the "atmospheric era." "Atmosphere" certainly is important, isn't it? "Atmosphere" rooms are always high on the list of things to show rushing freshmen at fraternity houses, anyway. Now aren't you asking yourself, "What's wrong with a little atmosphere? Is this nut against love also?" Well, this nut says that "atmosphere" isn't love. "Atmosphere" only helps to build the romantic illusion of being in love. It assures kiddies who aren't sure whether "this is the real thing", that their's is a relationship for "Making out like hell." Talk about hot air, there's a real pipe dream for you. I suggest that it is you who are naive. I suggest that you accuse me of that naivete which you detest and are ashamed and afraid to see in yourself. But don't worry. You are not alone in your mistake. This phenomena is the basis for profanity and personally directed criticism all over the world.

Getting away from the personal level to which you have dragged us, I will point to the S.A., Centaur, honorary societies, I.F.C., and "Phantom knows what," also, I don't contest your notion that there are some people in them offering their services to the campus. I know some of these people myself. But these people are such a small increment to the mass, that in considering the whole student body, they are not enough to make up for the overall loss in integrity. Also, it appears that you have not gone beyond the university catalogue in picking your time and labor sacrificing organizations. Let me inform you, since you obviously don't know, that if the Centaur ever did help out on campus, it doesn't anymore. The Centaur (a campus literary magazine, in case you haven't bothered to find out) is defunct, slightly in need of funds (can't print without them, you know). But, of course, another one of your helpful organizations, the I.F.C., which has in the same issue of the CYNIC in which your article appeared, told us how many requests for money it grants every year, will surely be willing to come to the rescue. But why haven't the Council members come to the rescue before? They didn't know? But if they are as you seem to imply they would be trying to find out about these things. Perhaps they were too busy granting requests from all the other organizations who want to get in on the take. As for your honorary societies, Phanny old girl (I assume you are a girl), perhaps you can tell me what they do, of great importance, besides exist, and put out "Today and Tomorrow on Campus."

Well, as you say, so much for the serious stuff. But here is the most priceless thing you have said. "May I remind you though, that as the male takes, the female gives in return. This seems to be a fine relationship that shouldn't cause any heartburn if one is normal. In essence, what wrong with taking as long as something is given in return. Phantom blesses the "fairer sex." What a quaint, evidently self-justifying misinterpretation of the old adage that love is give and take! You have reduced the spiritual sharing and identification of love, and what should be the main prerequisite for marriage, to the "givin' it and gettin' it" relationship of sex. I don't argue for separation of love and sex, or for the elimination of either one. I have merely pointed out an unfortunate predominance of mate picking almost entirely by qualifications suitable to the latter relationship. Of course, a prospective mate must have a good "personality" also, but good "personalities" are usually made up (they can also most always be seen through, if one wants to see through them, after a certain length of time, usually from six months to a year, depending on how close the relationship is), so they don't very often comprise any better qualifications than those of sex. You, however, in your evident ignorance of the spiritual sharing aspect, have not even considered it as more substantial method of choosing a mate and have merely tried to nullify my accusation by trying to justify the situation which I said is so predominant. It won't work. The tragedy is that under this "givin' it and gettin' it" system young boys and girls like yourself, sexually attracted to one another, in order to justify themselves (deep, deep, down they really feel rather guilty about the whole thing; parental and religious repression of any sex that isn't out of love and marriage, you know) convince themselves that this give and take relationship is love and they get married. Then, after the honeymoon is over, and sex is an ordinary every night event, reality hits them in the face, and they must convince themselves that the question which plagues them, "What the hell did I see in him (or her)?" has a justifiable answer before their dream nest falls apart. Until you can give me a better reason for the divorce rate in the United States (one out of three couples) than the fact that in at least one out of three cases the married couple can't succeed in deluding itself into believing that there is a justifiable answer to this question, I suggest that you be careful as to which members of the fairer sex you bless. They might want to get even some day.

You say that you don't see everyone wearing the same clothes or joining the same fraternity in refutation of "my" idea that we all do things alike to be accepted socially. I did not say this. I said, "Taking 'it' seems to be closely related to the getting of prestige and high status." High status, I will inform you, is not derived from conformity, but from distinguishing one's self in an accepted way. You should see how a freshman boy's status is raised when he brings a car to this place second semester. There just aren't too many freshman boys with cars, and it isn't due to financial shortages in most cases, either. As the registering average drops in the next few years, of course, many boys have cars, so to have high status or prestige one must have a Sting Ray or a Jag. This is only one of many examples that could be given. But I am at fault. Evidently I assumed more intelligence on the part of my reader than I should have.

Charlie Catamount

To The Editor:

How was Charlie Catamount chosen? I don't know. No one knows except a small informal group of three students from a committee called the Pep Committee. I, as a candidate for Charlie Catamount was ordered to appear before this Pep Committee last Friday night for an interview for the position.

I was asked various questions about my feelings toward the function of Charlie Catamount. After the interview was completed, I handed Mr. Chairman a petition containing some 700 names of supporters. As a fan, having not missed a single game in my three years at the college, I have seen very few of these students called the Pep Committee at ball games.

Now I ask you: Is it right for someone who very seldom attends these ball games to choose Charlie Catamount to be handed on as it is done at present? Couldn't an unbiased, representative group choose Charlie Catamount? Or are we going to continue letting this partisan group of three students called the Pep Committee pass it on to another friend year to year?

Phantom

Dear "Phantom,"

I sincerely hope that your article (CYNIC, May 9, 1963, page 5, "Studentes") is not indicative of the general feeling on the part of fraternities at UVM. I'm not about to pass judgement on those hallowed institutions, i.e., "specific areas" reserved for indulgence in the "finer arts." All I can say is that if I were in a fraternity, you'd be the last person I'd want to defend my position on this campus. The mere fact that you had to resort to that immature, self-defeating technique of name-calling is, in my opinion, ample proof that your convictions are not strong enough to stand on their own merits. Whether these convictions be right or wrong, such an attitude will make few people listen and fewer still believe you.

Far more important, however, is your conception of the "normal" male-female "relationship." Your article was almost funny, until that remark about females giving and males taking. You go on to say, "This seems to be a fine relationship that shouldn't cause any heartburn if one is normal. In essence, what's wrong with taking as long as something is given in return."

Phantom Phases

by The Phantom

Phantom note: This is the first in the series of a sporadic column. The nature of the column will vary due to the indecisions inherent in the Phantom's character. I would only be too happy to hear your comments and criticisms concerning this week's effort as well as those that appear in future issues. Send all "literature" to the Phantom c/o The Vermont CYNIC. I would appreciate your cooperation and I hope that you enjoy the column.

It's not often that the Phantom lifts his head and looks about the world through his bloodshot eyes, but one such phenomenon occurred this last weekend (Spring Formal) in the midst of types of revelry (my humble pardons are extended to H. Dumpty). I don't know Benny Becton, and I doubt very much that he knows me. Nevertheless, I would like some time to meet this admirable person.

At one time during last weekend, a jazz band was playing at a particular location on campus. This was just a plain old jazz band that provided music for the merrymaking students. One observer rated the band as 5,7 out of 10. We conclude that they were not exceptional, and that they blended into the atmosphere in that they were noticeable only to those that wanted to notice them. One such person was Benny. He was sitting in the corner rapturously listening to the music as only one who understands jazz could do. His eyes were shut, and his feet, body, and head kept beat with the rhythm. I did not give too much thought to this scene at the time, but it did stick out in my mind.

Then, a little later, Benny got up and walked over to the piano and had some words with the musicians. It was a short time after that the mike was in place and the audience was about to hear a rare performance by Benny Becton. Most of us only see this fierce contender on the basketball court, and to many, this seemed to be strange surroundings for this performer. We were really surprised, but what a way to be surprised!!!!!! The once mediocre band took on new dimensions with the addition of Benny, and this change was quite noticeable on the revelling crowd that now sat in an uncomfortable hush. This didn't last long either. I don't claim to be any critic on the finer arts, but I was really impressed by the virtuosity of Mr. Becton. If my memory serves me correctly, Benny sang three songs. His voice demonstrated the plaintive cry of the blues, rocked with the swells of the swinging type, and danced us with a slow, moody one. This is what I call variety. The first two renditions were straight from memory, the third one impressed us by his ability to read music, and needless to say, all three were straight from the heart. You don't need to be too versed in music to realize that this is one performer who was really communicating, and his audience made it quite clear that they were getting the message. What more is there to say, except, hats off to Benny Becton for another fine performance.

Well cadets, how did you like your military review? I have never had any real quarrels with the Military Science Department. I find that the course has much merit and that the instructors are of excellent calibre. I do feel, however, that the actions of last Friday were entirely out of order. To say the least, the weather was inclement, but nevertheless, the Army was out there on maneuvers. It was quite a sight to behold. The entire corps of cadets, over a thousand men, stood out in the rain as l'esprit de corps plummeted. Some officers made valiant attempts to restore morale, but the damage was done, and a wet, cold, and cursing corps set off to Centennial Field. Lo and behold, before the final objective (principle of war) was reached, we retreated in mass (another principle of war). For you see, we had neglected security and the end results were no surprise.

What do we have to show for this fine effort? Some fortunates were able to work off demerits by cleaning rifles that had become damp in the deluge at the rate of one merit per rifle. It seems to me that this whole fiasco could have been avoided with its accompanying hard feelings. It surely was a discordant note on which Col. Blanchard leaves the post he served so well.

A note for the future: We all have the capacity to forgive and forget, so next year, we'll be out there again for better or for worse. In the meantime, please pass me another rifle.

You speak of the normal UVM student. You say that there is nothing wrong in drinking to release and prevent "frustrations". THIS IS NORMAL??????? This is about as abnormal as you can get. When people have to drink to let themselves go they are not very natural, "normal" people. But I forgot. The students here are boys and girls. Perhaps this means they are not people? In any case, if this is what you call normal, I sure don't want to be normal. Does anyone want to be normal. Does anyone want to help me go turn Sigmund Freud right side up in his grave?

Now back to your first question. Miss Phantasy Pants, I am for real. Much more so than you, because I don't share your illusion that "everything I do or want to do is good and normal." Most of what I recognize in other people such as yourself as false and stupid and vulgar, I can see because I saw it first in myself. But I am willing to be honest about the whole thing. How about YOU?

H. Dumpty

P.S. Did you hear about the egghead who committed Phantocide? He did away with a Thalidomide brain-child.

What bothers me is precisely that you see nothing wrong with a twisted, one-sided arrangement such as this. Moreover, when I hear nameless-phantoms like you actually condoning this "cruel, harsh" fact of life, I begin to wonder just what went wrong.

Fleming Shows Drawings By Designer Of Billings.

by Lois Allison

From May 10 through Commencement, the Fleming Museum will present an exhibition of the drawings of H.H. Richardson.

architect for Billings Library, illustrating the development of the building from the opening sketches to the final product. The exhibit will also feature the correspondence among the architect, his client, Frederick Billings, and Matthew Henry Buckham, president of UVM at the time of construction; these letters show the behind-the-scenes workings of the project.

Richardson was one of the foremost architects of his day, revered in both America and Europe. Born in 1838, he was educated at Harvard and the Ecole des Beaux Arts in Paris. In 1865, he set up his own architectural practice and created many famous works, the Trinity Church in Coping Square in Boston being perhaps the best known. News of his work reached on e Frederick Billings, UVM, Class of 1880, who had decided upon a library for his alma mater. Richardson was contacted and his sketches for the prospective building were accepted. Work was begun in the fall of 1883, and completed in June of 1885. In the interim, a colorful correspondence arose between Richardson and UVM's President Buckham, as well as between Billings and Buckham; both architect and client sought to justify their differing opinions to the president. Despite the conflict, Billings was highly pleased with the final result, and as Richard Janson, director of Fleming Museum, puts it: "a hardheaded client became a patron of architecture."

The Romanesque style of architecture is the predominant theme in most of Richardson's works -- a combination of rugged masonry, bold shapes and a monumental, imposing aspect. His influence can be seen in several local buildings, designed by his pupils, such as UVM's own Redstone Hall and the old gym, as well as Abernethy's and the Burlington Savings Bank.

president of Radcliffe in 1960, will deliver the commencement address while the Rt. Rev. Leo Rudloff will be the baccalaureate speaker. Both will be recipients of honorary degrees.

Dr. Bunting is a graduate of Vassar and received her Master's and Doctorate degrees from the University of Wisconsin. A microbiologist and geneticist, she began her teaching career at Bennington College. She also taught at Goucher, Yale, and Wellesley. She was dean at Douglass College prior to becoming president of Radcliffe. Her daughter, Mary, is a senior at Vermont.

The Rev. Rudloff is a native of Germany and was educated in that country. He entered the Benedictine order in St. Joseph's Abbey in Westfalen, Germany, took his vows in 1922, and was ordained a priest in 1926. He came to the United States in 1938 and spent three years as professor of philosophy and theology at Immaculate Conception Seminary in Darlington, N.J. He took part in the foundation of St. Paul's Priory in Keyport, N.J. in 1941. He was sent to Dormition Abbey as Superior in 1950 and became Abbot in 1952. Also in that year, he founded Weston Priory in Weston, Vermont. Rev. Rudloff became a U.S. citizen in 1944.

Washington, George Washington Carver, or, more recently, Ralph Bunche, would you paint your subject white, so as not to hurt his feelings?

Let's not get lost in the boondocks talking about stereotypes, family backgrounds, or Shakespeare. Isn't the basic issue one of oversensitivity on the part of the White? He cannot imagine how anybody can be proud of being any color but white (which isn't even a color!). No one has staged sit-ins or marches to abolish minstrel shows, so why don't we just leave our unique tradition of Kake Walk the way it is and let everybody keep on thinking it's fabulous, hmmm?

TILL WE MEET AGAIN

With today's installment I complete my ninth year of writing columns in your college newspaper for the makers of Marlboro Cigarettes. In view of the occasion, I hope I may be forgiven if I get a little misty.

These nine years have passed like nine minutes. In fact, I would not believe that so much time has gone by except that I have my wife nearby as a handy reference. When I started columning for Marlboros, she was a slip of a girl—supple as a reed and fair as the sunrise. Today she is gnarled, lumpy, and given to biting the postman. Still, I count myself lucky. Most of my friends who were married at the same time have wives who chase cars all day. I myself have never had this trouble and I attribute my good fortune to the fact that I have never struck my wife with my hand. I have always used a folded newspaper—even throughout the prolonged newspaper strike in New York. During this period I had the airmail edition of the Manchester Guardian flown in daily from England. I must confess, however, that it was not entirely satisfactory. The airmail edition of the Guardian is printed on paper so light and flimsy that it makes little or no impression when one slaps one's wife. Mine, in fact, thought it was some kind of game, and tore several pairs of my trousers.

It's a rare and lucky columnist

But I digress. I was saying what a pleasure it has been to write this column for the last nine years for the makers of Marlboro Cigarettes—a fine group of men, as anyone who has sampled their wares would suspect. They are as mellow as the aged tobaccos they blend. They are as pure as the white cellulose filter they have devised. They are loyal, true, companionable, and constant, and I have never for an instant wavered in my belief that some day they will pay me for these last nine years.

But working for the makers of Marlboro has not been the greatest of my pleasures over the last nine years. The chief satisfaction has been writing for you—the college population of America. It is a rare and lucky columnist who can find an audience so full of intelligence and verve. I would like very much to show my appreciation by asking you all over to my house for tea and oatmeal cookies, but there is no telling how many of you my wife would bite.

For many of you this is the last year of college. This is especially true for seniors. To those I extend my heartfelt wishes that you will find the world outside a happy valley. To juniors I extend my heartfelt wishes that you will become seniors. To sophomores I extend my heartfelt wishes that you will become juniors. To freshmen I extend my heartfelt wishes that you will become sophomores. To those of you going on into graduate school I extend my heartfelt wishes that you will marry money.

To all of you let me say one thing: during the year I have been frivolous and funny during the past year—possibly less often than I have imagined—but the time has now come for some serious talk. Whatever your status, whatever your plans, I hope that success will attend your ventures.

Stay happy. Stay loose.

© 1963 Max Shulman

We, the makers of Marlboro Cigarettes, confess to more than a few nervous moments during the nine years we have sponsored this uninhibited and uncensored column. But in the main, we have had fun and so, we hope, have you. Let us add our good wishes to Old Max's: stay happy; stay loose.

SUN LOVERS

increase only at 15 seconds each time. When four minutes are reached the maximum exposure time has been obtained! Example: if one starts exposure to ultraviolet on the first of a month and follows the rules it will take a 31 day month increasing the exposure 15 seconds on each succeeding every other day, to reach the four minute maximum. And, if one misses the routine recommended, it would be very wise to start over.

5. Persons taking such exposures should be at least 30 inches from the light source.

6. It might be wise to consult your physician about the advisability of taking such exposures, or if he orders them and you purchase a lamp - follow his orders specifically.

The AMA frowns on home treatment of any kind and does not approve of home (dormitory) use of artificial tanning. More harm than good comes of these practices.

If it is a tan you want, consider receiving it the natural way and do it gradually. The purpose of gradual exposure is to determine individual sensitivity and prevent sun burn. Various parts of the body differ in sensitivity according to the thickness of the skin. Sun bathing has become quite popular in recent years, but must be employed with due care in all instances. Here in Burlington or near-by areas because of the altitude and "mountain air" a sun burn can sneak up on you. We are all familiar with the "ski tan" common in this area. The burning qualities of the sun's rays vary according to time of year and make a generally applicable dosing of the sun's radiation quite impossible.

Healthy persons not accustomed to the sun should never expose themselves for more than 15 minutes at first and increase this exposure 5 minutes daily during the first two weeks. The duration and extent of exposure to sunshine should be always carefully graduated and those who do not pigment efficiently or easily are warned to be especially careful.

Robust young adults, who are active outdoors, can begin with a total of 8 minutes exposure to four surfaces (including the two sides) of the body. Over-exposure to sunlight can cause severe burns and resulting discomfort, varying degrees of sunstroke and heat stroke and such symptoms as headache, lassitude, undue fatigue, irritability or possible gastrointestinal upset.

So, remember don't go to sleep under the sun's rays and tan yourself by proper time exposure.

I have seen many burned faces during the winter and a couple of burned arms, legs and torsos on some of our men students already this spring. My work does not include close contact with our lady students but I would guess the same burns are occurring with them. I submit these comments and rules for your consideration and remember that blondes, redheads and those that know they burn easily should always exercise caution.

the fourth dimension: TIME

...still a mysterious concept to science. Time is only an idea, an abstraction...an area of shadow, speculation and surprise.

919 A.D. TREE TIME! Growth rings of trees cannot only be counted, but "read." From them, weather patterns can be traced. Back-checking on weather data permits scientists to learn the actual birth date of beams and posts found in archeological ruins. One charred pine log has been found in New Mexico that was "born" in the year 919.

COMMUNIST CALENDAR... was a big bust in 1930. Russian leaders initiated a five-day week: four days work, one day rest. To keep factories operating daily, rest days were staggered. A boy and his girl friend might have different days off and get to spend a day together only a few times a year. The system was dropped after six months of grumbling.

HAMILTON SPACE CLOCK... is world's first interplanetary timepiece. Located in Philadelphia's Franklin Institute, it makes possible integration of Earth and Mars time. This can be tricky, since Mars months have 55-56 days. This amazing clock records the hour, day, month and year on Mars.

You get more than accurate time-keeping when you wear a Hamilton watch. A Hamilton reflects your good taste as no lesser watch can - shows you know quality and value. Outstanding styles for both men and women start as low as $35. An excellent graduation gift suggestion!

Summer's coming, get going!

If this isn't a great time to get yourself a new Chevrolet—well, we just don't know when is. Why, you'd almost have to be anti-summer not to let one of these four convertibles get to you. Or any of Chevrolet's sedans, wagons, sport coupes and sport sedans, for that matter.

And there are a lot of other buy-now reasons besides the season. Like the care-free feeling you get on a long vacation trip in a brand-new car. And it's a smart time to trade, what with your Chevrolet dealer all stocked up for a busy summer. Chances are, he

So maybe now you're all wound up? Then spring into summer at your Chevrolet dealer's.

Advice To Sun Lovers

How to soak up the rays --- chart shows correct exposure to sun ray's (After Rollier). Same for back of body.

To The Editor:

From time to time during the winter and spring, I have seen some male students in the new gym with the results of poor attempts at tanning by artificial light. Now that we are into spring and approaching summer, many of you will be seeking a tan by exposure to the sun.

When using artificial sources of Ultraviolet radiation, certain caution is essential. Obviously, the purchase of a quality lamp should be the first consideration. Secondly, certain rules must be tollowed so as to prevent burns or uncomfortable results of improper exposure.

1. Never take an exposure to an artificial source of ultraviolet while alone. (People have been known to fall asleep under a lamp and become severely burned).
2. The eyes of all persons near the light source must be properly protected by wearing goggles designed for this purpose.
3. The first exposure should be of 15 seconds duration only.
4. Subsequent exposures taken on an every other day basis should

The Mets And UVM Everybody Loves A Loser

The New York Mets may have lost a lot of games during their short tenure in the Majors but they have certainly won a large following of fans with their losing ways. Why is this so? A typical man-on-the-street New Yorker offered the following reason for the Mets' appeal.

"Those poor Mets; they go out there every day and get battered around, just like us people who work in New York, and the funny thing is they have to come out the next day to get some more bumps, just like us slobs who brave the traffic and ride the subways."

Here in Vermont we have no pro team to cheer for but we do have the UVM Catamounts. Unfortunately, the Cats have gotten off to a bad start with nine losses in a row early this season, four of them by one run. The Mets only dropped eight straight to start their '63 season. By these losing ways, a comparison of UVM to the Mets is inevitable and here it is.

The forces of Coach Lapointe came fighting back with a five-game win streak, including two YC wins, to free UVM from the doldrums of cellar-dwelling in the Yankee Conference. While Casey Stengel's (old) men also came roaring back from their poor start and managed to put together some good hitting with some fine pitching to win a few games, including a five game string of victories (just like the Cats), and raised themselves to sixth place from last place.

Many similarities in the methods of losing are evident between UVM and the Mets. Good pitching coupled with weak batting and poor fielding is the most frequent cause. Of course, bad pitching is a factor in many games. The coaches can not be blamed, for they are two of the best and most respected coaches in their fields, college and pro.

A constant winner can become a constant bore as is the case with the Yankees. The New York fan is growing tired of picking up the paper (probably the NEWS or the MIRROR) and seeing that the Yanks won again. They yawn and search for the Mets' score.

The Vermont baseball fan (there are a few), having tasted the sweet fruit of success last season with a

UVM Nine Wins 5 Straight After Losing 9 In A Row

by Ken Spalter

For twelve years Ralph Lapointe has been at the helm of the University of Vermont varsity baseball team. In the dozen years that he has been a coach here, Mr. Lapointe has never had a losing season. Now as two thirds of his 13th season has been completed, Lapointe (maybe unlucky thirteen) seems to be headed for his first won and lost record below .500.

At present the baseball team's record is 8-11. Mr. Lapointe attributes lack of clutch hitting and inexperience to this poor record. In the course of their nine game losing string, the UVM Cats lost four consecutive one run ballgames. This attests to the fact that the men at the plate aren't driving in those men on base at crucial times in the game. They just can't seem to get across the plate the one or two runs which would turn the tide of the ballgame in their favor.

Inexperience, which doesn't show up in the boxscore, has also been costly to the UVM nine in the one run ballgames. There are four sophomores in the starting lineup and nine on the twenty man squad. Mistakes which are made, can best be corrected by actual ballgame experience where these young men learn the proper reaction to certain situations which will only occur under game conditions.

There is another factor like inexperience which does not show up in the statistics at the end of the game, but causes extended losing streaks. This, in baseball jargon, is what the coaches call "not getting the breaks." A ground ball which takes a bad hop over the shortstop's head, an outfielder losing a fly ball in the sun or two players colliding under a foul pop and letting the ball drop. These flukes cause the morale of the team to reach its low point, and results in the players unconsciously losing their confidence. In this manner, the team builds up momentum in a reverse direction and will only pull out of this decline if they manage to win some ballgames, and thus, regain their confidence.

Netmen Have Bad Week

The Vermont showing, as a team, at the Yankee Conference Tourney this year, held at the University of Rhode Island, was not as high as expected. Number 1 man, Dick Holden, won his first round match easily. In the second round he met Roger Twitchell of the University of Massachusetts. Last year Twitchell, also a Yankee Conference all star basketball player, was the leading player in the Tennis conference.

Holden played extremely well but was over-powered by the fine play of Twitchell, who continued undefeated throughout the tourney.

Jim Freedman, Pete Jellinek, Steve Ratner, Steve Krintzman, and Harry Dickerson, UVM boys, were defeated in their first rounds, in the singles category. In the doubles matches, the UVM team was completely shut out. Freedman and Holden, Ratner and Jellinek, and Dickerson and Newman were all defeated.

In the annual rivalry match between Middlebury and Vermont, the former was victorious by a score of 7-2. Coach Mars-ton's boys are on the road this week with matches at Clarkson, Union, and the New England Collegiate Championships, which are being held at Hanover, N.H.

The players have to think they are able to win games before they can actually go out and beat their opponents.

Go out and beat their opponents is just what the Catamounts did. As a matter of fact, they went out and won five straight ballgames combining good pitching, good hitting and good fielding with their regained confidence to defeat the opposing teams. Lapointe's men ended their lengthy losing streak when they defeated Middlebury 5-3. This game was marked by the excellent relief pitching of Christie, a sophomore, who retired the last nine Middlebury batters in a row. The Cats scored one run in the second and then pushed three more runs across the plate in the third as Boutlier singled, Pare walked and Tartera was hit by a pitch to load the bases. Behan then singled two runs home and a third scored as the centerfielder made an error. UVM's final tally came in the seventh as Boutlier tripled and scored on a sacrifice fly.

The following day UVM played St. Michael's and Dick Cassani and Fred Dupras repeated their great pitchers duel that they had staged in their first encounter. This time Cassani proved to be the master as he pitched a two hit shutout and UVM won 2-0. Cassani gave up the two singles in the first inning and then did not allow another St. Michael's hit for the remainder of the game. Cassani squelched all St. Michael's threats caused by UVM errors by blazzing his fastball past the batters. Cassani struck out eleven men and did not walk anybody. All Vermont's scoring occurred in the first two innings. In the first Pare singled, stole second and then scored on Boutlier's single. MacDonald opened Vermont's half of the second with a single, went to second on an infield out and scored on Johnson's single.

The team then won its third consecutive game as they defeated Norwich 4-3. A single by Johnson in the ninth inning, driving in pinch runner Rundle, was the winning blow. Johnson also collected two other hits, one a homer in the third, and drove in two runs. Foster was the starting and winning pitcher. He was relieved by Christie in the ninth who ended a last minute rally Norwich by retiring the final three batters.

The Lapointemen have a record of 3-1 in Vermont State competition. They seem well on their way for another state championship. Their record in Yankee Conference games is 2-4. On Saturday, the UVM nine upset favored University of Massachusetts in a double header by identical scores of 1-0. In the first game Dick Cassani once again hurled nine tremendous innings. He gave up only three hits while striking out eight opposing batters. He did not surrender a single safety after the fourth inning and he retired the last fourteen hitters in succession. The Cats got their run in the seventh when Foster singled and was driven home by Pete MacDonald's single. This fully proved to be enough of a margin for the strong rightlander, Cassani. In the second encounter, it took the Vermonters eleven innings before they could score a single run. However, in this span of time the University of Mass. could manage only two hits off Carl Martin. Martin also fanned thirteen batsmen while picking up his third victory of the season. UVM scored its only run, when, with two out in the eleventh, Martin and Van Ham hit back-to-back singles. Foster drew a walk to load the bases and Boutlier then walked to force in the winning run. This was the fifth straight victory for the baseball team, who have recovered from their lengthy losing streak and have begun an extended streak of their own, this time in the win column.

Attendance at these varsity ballgames has not been good. More people should take time out and go to Centennial Field to see these boys play ball. However, there are numerous staunch Vermonters who do turn out game after game to cheer the players on to victory.

Donnelly Leads Golfers

The UVM golfers matched irons with Middlebury College Monday afternoon at the Burlington Country Club, defeating their opponents, 5-2. Leading the victors was John Donnelly who defeated Dates Frieburger, 3 and 2. Other winners for the Cats were Jerry McGee, 5 and 3; Ted Jzyk, 3 and 2; Joe Zicherman, 2 up; and Vin Higuera, 1 up on the 20th hole. Bob Opaleski and Mike Yendreski lost their matches by the identical score, 2 and 1.

John Donnelly, UVM golf captain and last year's Vermont State Amateur Champion, narrowly missed a crack at the New England Intercollegiate title, when defeated by Bob Morgestern of Tufts, two up, in the semifinals Sunday, at Williams-town, Massachusetts. Morgestern then went on to capture the crown by defeating Dick Weigold of the University of Connecticut in the finals.

Connolly reached the semifinals with a stunning upset victory over the defending champion, Barry Bruce of Tufts, defeating him 4 and 3. In the crucial match with Morgestern, Donnelly, after losing the first five holes, made a strong comeback only to see his opponent's birdie on the par five 18th hole, put the match out of reach.

Intramural Roundup

by Martin Wolf

As the clarion call of final exams is heard o'er the land, intramural athletics is drawing to a climatic finish. Sigma Alpha Epsilon has all but won the IFC All Sports Trophy, a non-circulating trophy presented to that fraternity or group that proves the most proficient in intramural athletics. Events included in the competition are: football, bowling, basketball, handball doubles, squash, indoor relays, track and field, ski, swim, volleyball and softball.

SAE, having at present 326 points, clinched the trophy by running away with the intramural swim meet. Their team of Foley, Nixon, Chenley, Prouty and Greitrich scored 51 points, their nearest rival was Delta Psi, having 24 points. Other teams entered, include: Alpha Epsilon Pi, Sigma Phi Epsilon, Sigma Nu, and an independent group, who scored 23 points to place third.

Softball competition is the last event on the 1962-63 docket. League A has been taken by Phi Sigma Delta, and League D by Alpha Gamma Rho, after a closely contested playoff with Alpha Epsilon Pi. The B and C Leagues are still undecided. Results and trophy standings are listed on page nine.

We Still Love You Melissa

(Credit: Syd Stoen)

Dear Melissa,

You may not have won the coveted Miss America title, but you certainly captured the hearts of many Vermonters and UVMers. With your charm and beauty, you represented the state of Vermont and the University in a dignified fashion, and we love you for doing so. You did win a $1,000 scholarship award for being the most talented popular song singer, being one of six non-finalists to be honored with an award.

You represented your adopted state (Melissa is originally from Glen Rock, N.J.) very well. You brought honor to the University for the third straight year by being selected Miss Vermont (the other two co-ed Miss Vermonts were Janice Cole and Elaine Wright) and made your sorority sisters of Kappa Alpha Theta very proud of you.

Good luck to you with your new assignment of teaching music on ETV to elementary school children Monday mornings at 9:30.

Good luck in the future,

UVM Welcomes 1100 Freshmen

WELCOME FRESHMEN, this was the greeting during all of Wednesday, September 11, 1963. The Class of Nineteen hundred and sixty seven had arrived,

For those who were not here for the Preliminary Days, the following is a review of some of the activities. The organized activities for Wednesday, September 11, were Coffee Hours and Open Houses for students and parents. Especially significant was the Foreign Students' Reception initiating the brother-sister program. All the enthusiastic Freshmen including many parents were present for the Opening Convocation in the evening. Dr. Fey spoke on 'Freedom and Education', after the impressive academic procession. The program closed with the singing of Champlain. Hopefully by the end of the day all the Freshmen had found their way to the Book Store for The Freshmen Review and the indispensable beanie.

Thursday, September 12, dawned with the word 'test', (German, French, and Spanish) in the minds of most Freshmen. In the afternoon Freshmen met their respective deans and academic advisers. Discussion sessions were held for the men and women in the evening.

Finally Friday yawned, some Freshmen did too. Registration is such an ominous word to all the initiated, and now the Class of 1967 knows too. Besides Registration, men had to go wait on more lines for their ROTC uniforms and the women had to run a 600 yard dash for Physical Education tests. For more stimulation of the tired (?) Freshmen, evening recreational activities were held at the Gym and Redstone Campus.

Three days and Saturday, September 14 had arrived. After a morning of Profile Test, a few Freshmen got on line again for their ROTC uniforms. A successful Pep Rally, Club Carnival and Mixer were held in the evening.

Sunday the various church groups had their greetings for the Freshmen. President Fey was in the Fleming Museum to greet all the Freshmen personally on Sunday afternoon.

But, now that the orientation is over the Freshmen are left to their own method of how they make themselves feel a part of UVM. So! . . . Freshmen, a happy successful four years of study here at the University of Vermont is wished to you.

Ex-Editor Arrested For Picketing In N.Y.

A twenty-three year old alumni of the University of Vermont has been convicted of disorderly conduct arising from his picketing activities protesting racial discrimination. Jules Older, '62, former Editor-in-Chief of the CYNIC, has been sentenced to thirty days imprisonment but has been released on $500 bail pending appeal.

Older is Employment Chairman of Downtown New York CORE. In this capacity he was in charge of the picketing carried out by CORE this August at Manhattan's Rutgers housing project. The demonstrations were in protest against alleged discrimination in craft unions supplying labor for the project and against the fulfillment of city contracts with segregated labor.

According to Older, "As a picket captain, I've been threatened with arrest several times. Since there were no legal charges against me they made one up. I was supposed to have assaulted a police sergeant in the leg with a cardboard sign --- I didn't do it. Picketing was over and I was leaving and I was arrested. My assault on the officer was supposed to have occurred while I was dispersing the pickets. It's a frame-up and I was sand-bagged."

To the charge of third degree assault was added that of disorderly conduct and Older was also accused of endangering the lives of several children (strongly denied by Older). He was released on $1000 bail pending his August 10 hearing. The assault charge was dropped but he was found guilty of disorderly conduct. The penalty for this offense is up to six months imprisonment, but Older was only sentenced to thirty days. This is still one of the severest penalties imposed for such an offense under such conditions. Older expects his appeal to be heard "some time around November."

Older served as Editor-in-Chief of the CYNIC from February 1961 to February 1962. He was a brother of Phi Sigma Delta. A psychology major, he is continuing his studies at the New York University graduate school of psychology. If his appeal is lost his conviction will necessitate a temporary stoppage of his studies.

Older is hopeful about his appeal and declares that he got his start in "the days of protest against the old dean of men's paternalism."

The Royal Philharmonic Of London Premieres 1963-1964 Lane Series

Theodore Bikel Featured Artist In Red Series

Opening UVM's George Bishop Lane Artists Series for 1963-64 will be the Royal Philharmonic of London, conducted by Sir Malcolm Sargent. This performance by the world-famous orchestra marks its return to the United States for the first time since 1950.

The opening concert is one of the Red Series, a group of six programs designed especially for the UVM student body. Included in this series are performances by Theodore Bikel, well-known, multi-lingual folk singer; by the Dukes of Dixieland, a New Orleans jazz band; by the New York City Opera, who will present Mozart's "Don Giovanni" in English; and by the Bayanhan Philippine Dance Company, currently in their fourth world Red Series "Man for all Seasons", the successful Broadway and London drama which won four Tony awards and the New York Critics' Circle award. Robert Company of London plays Sir Thomas More.

Although the Blue Series has been completely sold out tickets in every price range are still available for the Red. Orders should be taken to the Lane Series office at once, however, since the October 1 premier is fast approaching.

Theodore Bikel - The internationally renowned folk singer, with a repertoire in 20 languages, will be featured in the Red Lane Series. Mr. Bikel is also noted for his TV and Broadway roles, including "Sound of Music."

Vermont Conference Scheduled For November

The topics and now prevailing issues of discrimination, prejudice, and segregation will form the core of the tenth "Vermont Conference." According to conference chairman Ilene Hofbinder, Scheduled for November 12, 13, 14 this year's conference should certainly prove informative to both students and faculty besides clearing up possible misunderstandings connected with the issue.

Assisting Miss Hofbinder as faculty advisors are Dr. Samuel

B. Hand, Dr. Robert W. Caswell, Mr. Hans H. Penner, and Mr. Earl J. Weaver. The student conference committee consists of Robert Silverstein, Joan Klonsky, Samuel Flaster, Danforth Newcomb, Rosalind Weiner, and Diane Curtis.

The selecting of speakers for the three day series of talks has almost been completed. Unfortunately, the committee cannot disclose any information until definite commitments have been made.

On Campus

with Max Shulman

(By the Author of "Rally Round the Flag, Boys!" and "Barefoot Boy With Check.")

ONCE MORE UNTO THE BREACH, DEAR FRIENDS

Today I begin my tenth year of writing this column in your campus newspaper. Ten years is a long time; it is, in fact, what some scholarly people like to call a decade—from the Latin word deccum, meaning the floor of a ship. It is, to my mind, remarkable that the Romans had such a word as deccum when you consider that ships did not exist until 1620 when John Alden invented the Mayflower. Alden, a prodigiously ingenious man, also invented the ear lobe and Pocahontas.

Ships were a very popular mode of travel—especially over water—until 1912 when the Swede, Ivar Krueger, invented the iceberg. Krueger also invented the match, which is a good thing, because without the match, how would you light your Marlboro Cigarettes? I cannot overstate the importance of lighting your Marlboro Cigarettes, for Marlboro Cigarettes, unlighted, provide, at best, only limited smoking pleasure.

You might even call it the limp or spongy sell

I mention Marlboros because this column is an advertisement, brought to you through the school year by the makers of Marlboros. Marlboros come in soft pack or Flip-Top box. The makers of Marlboros come in dark suits with thin lapels—except on weekends when they come in yoke-neck jerseys and white duck trousers. White ducks come in flocks. They are primarily fresh water dwellers, although they have been successfully raised in salt water too. Another salt water denizen I'm sure you will find enjoyable is plankton—a mess of tiny organisms like diatoms and algae and like that which float sluggishly near the surface of the sea. It is ironic that these creatures, microscopic in size, should supply the principal source of food for the earth's largest animal, the whale. Whales, I must say, are not at all pleased with this arrangement, because it takes the average whale, eating steadily, 48 hours to gather a day's meal. This leaves them almost no time for water sports or reading Melville. It is a lucky thing for all of us that whales are unaware they are mammals, not fish, and could, if they tried, live just as well on land as in water. I mean, you add ten or twelve million whales to our Sunday traffic and you would have congestion that makes the mind boggle.

But I digress. Today, I was saying, I begin my tenth year of writing this column for Marlboro Cigarettes in your campus newspaper. I will, in each column, say a few kind words about Marlboros—just as you will, once you try that fine tobacco flavor, that pristine white filter, that supple soft pack, that infrangible Flip-Top box. These references to Marlboro will be brief and unobtrusive, for I do not believe in the hard sell. What I favor is the soft sell—you might even call it the limp or spongy sell. I hasten to state that the makers of Marlboro in ten full years have not once complained about my desultory sales approach. Neither have they paid me.

But that is of small consequence. Aside from fleeting mentions of Marlboro, this column has another, and more urgent, mission: to cast the hot white light of free inquiry upon the vexing questions that trouble college America—questions like "Should the Student Council have the power to levy tariffs?" and "Are roommates sanitary?" and "Should housemothers be compelled to retire upon reaching the age of 26?"

Perhaps, reasoning together, we can find the answers. Perhaps not. But if we fail, let it never be said that it was for want of trying.

I thank you.

The makers of Marlboro are happy to bring you another year of Max Shulman's unpredictable and uncensored column—and also happy to bring you fine filtered Marlboros, available in pack or box, wherever cigarettes are sold in all 50 states.

Mixes And Matches

Hi, again. Welcome to all the Freshmen (atten: frosh girls—we do so take your phone messages.) and welcome back to the upperclassmen.

The biggest news on campus this week is the change in IFC rushing rules. The biggest change, and please note, all fraternity bound men, is that you need an average of 70 to pledge. Formerly there was no required pledging average. The brothering up average of 72 remains constant. Another note, and not a bene: if you are found, shall we say, inebriated (that's soused) the blame is yours!

AEPhi's car wash is this Saturday at the house, 158 S. Willard St. So bring those cars on down for a thorough cleaning. "... AEPhi gets rid of dirt and grime and grease in just a minute."

Congratulations to AEPhi's Ellen Witte on her engagement.

Congratulations to Gamma Phi's Barb Lourie on her marriage to AEPhi's Steve Lutzker.

AEPhi's having it's annual jungle party this Saturday. All Freshmen with dates are welcome.

Best wishes to Phi Sig's Mark Rosen and his new bride, Lucy Blough. Also to Phi Sig's Al Rosel on his lavaliering.

Congratulations to Alpha Gamma Rho's new officers: Noble Ruler, Dale Wyman; Vice Noble Ruler, Frank Fiske; Alumni Secretary, Al Stevens; Secretary, Bob Taylor; Treasurer, Charlie McCosco; Reporter, Alden Hilliker; Steward, Frank Lamb; Social Chairman, Howard Wilcox; Rushing Chairman, Steve Abbott; Athletic Chairman, Ed Petit.

Engaged: Wally Rooney, AGR '65, to Darla Foote.

You are cordially invited to visit Alpha Gamma Rho, and inspect their new kitchen, and other household improvements. Drop in any time.

Two distinguished gentlemen who recently became Brothers of Alpha Gamma Rho: Dr. Gerald A. Donovan, Chairman of the Department of Poultry Science, and Dr. Hubert W. Vogelmann of the Botany Department.

Graduate School Exam Dates Set

GRADUATE RECORD EXAMINATIONS NATIONAL PROGRAM

The Graduate Record Examinations, required of applicants for admission to many American graduate schools, will be conducted at examination centers throughout the United States on November 16, Educational Testing Service which annually administers the test, also set these four administration dates for 1964: January 18, March 7, April 25, and July 11.

In the past year more than 57,000 candidates took Graduate Record Examinations in the National Program for Graduate School Selection.

Educational Testing Service advises each applicant to inquire of the graduate school of his choice which of the examinations he should take and on which dates. Applicants for graduate school fellowships are often asked to take the designated examinations

In the fall test administration.

The GRE tests offered in these nationwide programs include a test of general scholastic ability as well as advance level tests of achievement in seventeen different major fields of study. According to ETS, candidates are permitted to take both the Aptitude Test and one Advanced Test on any of the nationwide testing dates.

A Bulletin of Information for candidates, containing a test registration form and providing details of registration and administration as well as sample questions, may be obtained from the Graduate College Office or directly from Educational Testing Service, Princeton, New Jersey, or 1947 Center Street, Berkeley 4, California. A completed test registration form must reach the ETS office at least fifteen days before the date of the administration for which the candidate is applying.

Cynic-al Observations

HI THERE, MUMBLE, mumble

Rah, rah! A new semester is beginning and it is being welcomed with mixed emotions by the various classes.

To the returning veterans, the Class of 1964 especially, getting back to the old routine is nothing new. To the fresh new faces of the Class of 1967, a new adventure in education is unfolding. Everything is new to them. Each class brings new faces to greet and the anticipation of getting to know their new professors. Whereas to the upperclassmen, the only thing that is new are the freshmen. It seems as though the summer vacation was just a long weekend, and now that it is over, it is back to studies and other honest pursuits (Studiis et Rebus Honestis).

For all the newcomers, friends will be readily made during the coming semester, both male and female we trust, for heterosexual relations are encouraged on this campus as evidenced by the Freshman Record, the hand date guide. But to the returning vets, friends have been already made and new ones are at a premium. So, as the vets walk around the campus they see many familiar faces and old friends. And isn't it amazing how many names that are forgotten. Old friends pass on the various walks around the university and greet each other with a warm, "Hi there" followed by an inaudible mumbling that sounds like the old friend's name. Isn't it the truth, vets?

After a while, everything seems to settle down and old and new become one big happy university. Each student gets accustomed to his routine and schedules his time for the maximum enjoyment of college life. Four parts study and one part play seems normal to the newcomers, while three to two is average with upperclassmen. Some even try to make it fifty-fifty, which is good, if it can be done. Oh, by play, other honest pursuits are intended, like writing for the CYNIC.

PEPPY RALLY?

The pep rally held Saturday night was a good one. It was organized for a change and its new location made it easily accessible to the whole campus. The rally however wasn't too peppy. Just as in the past, the crowd didn't let itself go and hoot it up. This should be corrected. This year's team is something to shout about. So let's shout at the next one.

A COW OF A DIFFERENT COLOR

The Class of 1967 has painted 7 cows green in the pasture behind the frosh dorm. Although the administration frowns on such activities, it is a good sign to see a spirited freshman class. Too bad they can't direct their exuberance in a more worthwhile path.

IBM EFFICIENCY

A big round of applause goes to those responsible for this year's handling of registration. It went smoothly and efficiently. Unnecessary delays were avoided this year by the improved method of enrolling. IBM cards were used for the first time in scheduling of classes. This is truly an improvement but it is a fact that impersonalizes the student and the University. Just think, UVM is getting so large and the times so advanced that you are just an IBM card to the Registrar.

FOR ART'S SAKE

There has been a lot said on the statue in front of the Bailey Library and more will undoubtedly be said. In a column on this page, one viewer stresses the fact that it appeals to the intellect and not the senses. This may be true but most UVMers have enough academic work to appeal to their senses without having to ponder a work of art. It is unfortunate that a more aesthetically pleasing work of art could not have been placed in front of the library to enhance the beauty of the building.

Michelangelo's "Creation of Adam" is a work of art that appeals to the senses. For art's sake, who couldn't we have a statue in front of the library that is artistic and thought-provoking?

Letters To The Editor

EDITORS NOTE: The CYNIC welcomes all correspondence from its readers and will gladly publish any letters which the editors believe will be of interest to the University body. However, all correspondence must be signed by author. If desired, the name will be withheld or a pseudonym printed in its place.

Labor And Laughs!

Dear Freshmen:

As newcomers to UVM, raring to plunge into exciting college life... Welcome! Thoughtfully, your university offers an exceptional variety of intellectual facilities, all designed to stimulate and edify.

Starting at the Waterman building, there is the opportunity to spend worthwhile hours exploring the intricate spherical oscillating devices, or perfect mechanical skills at the felt lined ricochet tables and the linear timber spilling lanes.

Moving on to the Billings Center, one can feel at ease while absorbing classic musical greats at the Catamount Center. To add stimulus to your musical endeavours, succulent delicacies are provided by the management.

However, all work and no play makes for poor psychological adaptation. For this reason, your college, ever striving, ever planning for your welfare has built the new Patrick Gymnasium. Equipped with facilities to help fill your empty hours, (swimming, hockey, basketball, track, golf, handball, etc.) the new building will provide a release from the tensions of the day. Why, some have said, proudly, that our new gymnastic operation would be more appropriate for a student body of 10,000. No idle boast, this!

But one must never neglect the mind. Cognizant of this fact, the Interfraternity Council has decreed open rushing for freshmen. This means that you fortunate people will be exposed to creative and industrious upperclassmen who will shed a guiding light on your numerous problems. These fraternity liaisons are extremely valuable, and if you are offered an invitation to attend one of these "seminars," don't hesitate to attend. The refined and sophisticated atmosphere of the sixteen fraternities on campus will help mold you into the well integrated citizen society demands.

As to social life, the university offers a wide range of activities, from Homecoming weekend to the Military Ball and Kake Walk. Also, weekly football and basketball games, dorm dances, SA Film of the Week, etc., all combine to relieve pressure from the previously mentioned intellectual activities.

So Frosh, I commend you to hard work. Following the program outlined herein, you will derive the full benefit from your $12,000 college education.

Truly yours,
Charlie Egghead

The Other Side Of The Sculpture

"For I am nothing if not critical" -- Iago

Mr. Aschenbach's sculpture in front of Bailey Library, erected early in the summer, was greeted with ignorant and ill-natured objections by those who saw it. Undoubtedly many students and faculty members are now attempting to gain reputations for wit by slandering it. We must always be sceptical of judgements made by the majority; if most people don't like the sculpture, then it is probably good. Let's consider it.

Its basic form is meant to be suggestive, not representational. As Mr. Aschenbach's sketches for the work make clear, the forms most clearly alluded to are those of hands, chairs, and a tree. In order to understand what he means by these allegorical objects, we must recognize that the work is directed primarily at our intellect, not our senses. It is a witty work; it demands that we think.

When we think of hands, especially in art, we are likely to think of Michelangelo's fresco of Adam receiving life from God, in which the act is represented by the powerful hand of God about to touch Adam's limp, passive hand. If we look carefully at the sculpture, we see that both kinds of hand are represented. The most obvious hands are those which reach up appealingly, suggesting in context the student's appeal for knowledge. When we look more closely, however, we see other, smaller hands. On one side a male student points negatively down while he holds an empty beer mug. On the other, a girl's hand hangs, empty, while her book remains closed on her lap. (And notice her typical immodest post.) Mr. Aschenbach knows that education is an active matter; he knows that students cannot remain passive in the presence of learning (here Bailey Library); they must educate themselves. Since he shows that students here don't actively pursue education, he forces us to see in the upraised, appealing hands a new significance. One can almost hear them saying "Gimme, gimme!"

Mr. Aschenbach was faced with the problem of representing in this sculpture the whole university, not just the students. He met the problem by suggesting in the form of his work a faculty meeting, a gathering of the heads of departments. But here, too, Mr. Aschenbach makes an ironic comment. The chairmen are quite literally chair-men; they are mere pieces of furniture. Education is pursued actively by neither the students nor the faculty.

The most obvious image suggested by the sculpture is apparently that of a tree, since critics of the work refer repeatedly to the elm bight, trees struck by lightning, etc. In this aspect, too, the sculpture forces us to think of the meaning behind the form. Obviously Mr. Aschenbach wants us to think of the Biblical Tree of Knowledge. But the full title of that tree is less widely known; it is the Tree of the Knowledge of Good and Evil. When we have come this far in thinking about the sculpture-as-tree, Mr. Aschenbach asks of us a special effort of the imagination. We must connect this allusion with the university motto. In this motto, the university expresses its dedication to "studiis et rebus honestis"; "to studies and to honest things." As an example of honest things we may choose fraternities, since President Fey has announced that "fraternities are an integral part of education at UVM." Opposed to such honest things are the studies represented by Bailey Library. Knowledge at UVM is therefore a mixture of good and evil; since the sculpture stands outside the library, it must represent primarily the evil of knowledge. Beyond this meaning, of course, is another one, derived from the criticism of students and faculty; this tree of knowledge is obviously dead.

Having plunged into the more esoteric meanings of Mr. Aschenbach's sculpture, and having recognized its methods of communication, we are now in a position to explain the apparent aesthetic deficiencies of the work. Its unpleasant surfaces suggest the rough, unpolished qualities of the university. Its lack of an effective three-dimensional effect suggests the university's shallowness, its lack of depth. And when we touch the work, we find that Mr. Aschenbach has made another comment. Like the students, the sculpture, though stunted and ugly, seems at least to be sturdy; but when we touch it, it turns out to be hollow. It is not iron; it is only iron-y -- a column of irony, from bottom to top.

(Incidentally, Mr. Aschenbach's sketches indicate that the work is meant to be viewed primarily from the south. Though the sculpture, like the university, may appear radical, it is reassuringly right of center.)

Changing Attitudes On Sex

“... a somewhat optimistic report”
By MORTON M. HUNT

According to numerous critics of the modern scene, we Americans have largely lost that wholesome, modest attitude towards love and sex that our great-grandparents had, and are continuing to shuck off what few decent inhibitions we still retain. Our children, they claim, pet at 15, and by 18 consider virginity outmoded. Illegitimate births have risen sharply. Adultery and divorce have become commonplace. Sex-drenched novels are so ordinary that it takes an outrageous variation, such as “Lolita,” to really stir the pulses. We are, in short, said to be heading for a future of mass vulgarity, licentiousness and degeneracy.

I think this view of things is one part sense and nine parts nonsense. I think it exaggerates the bad changes, and excludes the good ones. It ignores the lessons of history and shuns the findings of psychology and anthropology. In place of a healthful optimism about mankind, it embodies a sickly pessimism. Here is a brief look at our sex morals in terms of the past and present and a somewhat optimistic forecast of the future.

THE PAST -- The truth about the Good Old Days is, as some wit said, “Things aren’t as good as they used to be -- and they never were.” Our great-grandparents, in what we tend to see as an era of purity, clean-mindedness, sentimentality and conjugal bliss, did a great cover-up job. Under that bland surface there was a huge amount of misery and sickness due to sexual malfunctioning.

Prostitution, for example, flourished then as it never has since. And no wonder. So many married women were frigid that some 19th-century doctors considered one who enjoyed sex to be either sick or depraved.

Many men and women -- far more, proportionately, than today -- postponed or avoided marriage altogether, out of fear of love-making.

Thus the noble love-life and pure morals of the era of “Life with Father” were largely a deception, concealing an untold amount of frustration, illness, and degradation.

THE PRESENT -- Are the changes occurring today all bad, or is the net result heavily on the good side? What follows may shock some readers, but I am merely trying to evaluate the changes in terms of emotional and social health.

First off, we must admit that there is much that is ugly and hurtful in the present pattern. We over-stimulate our children with a too-early emphasis on dating, an incessant stress on popularity with the opposite sex, with erotic books, magazines and movies. We deny our teen-agers the right to sexual intimacy, but give them great privacy and freedom -- and then are furious with them for getting into trouble. We argue vehemently against early marriage, but offer young people no alternative except monkish self-denial -- or secrecy and lies.

As for ourselves, we adults talk, read, and think more about adultery than ever -- and, in some circles, we live the way we think. But we pay dearly: what starts out as a lark often ends in guilt, alcohol, sleeping pills, divorce, or psychiatry.

But chaos and excess are nearly always the price of evolution and renewal. We have been, and still are, developing a new set of customs and morals to replace those which have crumbled away and lost their power for us. To find ourselves, we have had to lose ourselves -- and we are indeed now finding ourselves.

A new view of women

Despite an endless series of tirades against women by writers ranging from Philip Wylie to Tennessee Williams, the fact is that the ancient split in men’s feelings about women has been closing. Young men who once would chasteely wooed a good girl, and gone from her front porch to the brothel, now shun the brothel -- and seek physical intimacy with the good girl. Because they are not motivated by sex-hunger alone, they actually assume some responsibility and self-restraint.

Dr. Winston Ehrmann, in an intensive study of student sex habits at a Southern university, made the surprising discovery that many young men experience a decrease in sex activity when they begin to go steady and give up casual dating.

The “double standard,” naturally, has been disintegrating under all this, and the modern girl has been finding it natural and reasonable to feel both desire and love for the same person -- and to meet him halfway. Most unmarried girls in their late teens still avoid doing things Mother warned them against -- until love enters. Then they feel that physical intimacy is justifiable since the relationship is patterned after marriage.

Various surveys of a decade or so ago found that 25 per cent of unmarried girls have sex relations by age 21, and nearly 40 per cent do so by age 25. In the past several years, according to qualified observers, these proportions have been rising. But more important, the majority of those who have relations do so only with men they love -- and usually only with men they finally marry.

Is this a dangerous trend? Anthropologists say that many societies in Polynesia, Africa, and even Europe have permitted unmarried people who love each other full pre-marital freedom -- without any evident harm to themselves or the social order. Scandinavian peoples of today do just that -- yet their emotional and family life seems remarkably healthy.

This doesn’t mean sin is good. It means that when young men and women truly combine love and sex, their relationship is likely to be essentially wholesome, even though outside the bounds of traditional morals.

Married life is also undergoing change. American husbands no longer go to prostitutes for real release. All the major studies of American marriage today agree that men expect sex with their wives to be expressive, uninhibited -- and mutual.

For almost the first time in 2,000 years, wives have the right to refuse. But the right to refuse implies the right and the obligation to participate and enjoy love-making at other times. The majority of today’s American women respond to their husbands actively and with pleasure. Without this, modern men find the act hollow and unsatisfying.

As for adultery, the fiction of recent years would lead one to believe, with a friend of mine, that “the only people who stay faithful are too broke, too tired, or have no guts.” Careful studies, however, indicate that while half of American husbands and a quarter of American wives commit adultery at one time or another, the great majority stray on only a few occasions in a whole lifetime. These could be classified as “unfaithful spouses,” but actually they are faithful most of their married lives.

Modern Americans, having gone far in fusing sex, love and marriage, find it hard to separate them. An affair, if it remains only sexual, soon looks tawdry and is broken off in shame. But if it becomes emotionally meaningful, it seriously threatens the marriage. Then it either is broken off, or turns into a new marriage.

This is why most modern psychologists and marriage counselors regard adultery as a symptom that the marriage itself is not fully satisfying. They do not feel adultery to be a good enough reason for divorce, but consider it, like fever, a sign that healing treatment is required.

All this is surely not as simple or clear-cut a morality as we used to possess -- but there are experts who feel it may well be a more human, mature, and psychologically constructive way to live.

THE FUTURE -- All predictions -- especially concerning anything as complex as sexual behavior -- are risky. Only a generation ago the learned Harvard sociologist Pitirim Sorokin looked at our changing sex habits and dourly opined:

Divorces and separations will increase until any profound difference between socially sanctioned marriages and illicit sex-relationships disappears. . . . The family (will become) a mere incidental cohabitation of male and female, while the home will be an overnight parking place, mainly for sex-relationship.

Life, he apparently thought, would resemble that in the dissolute Roman Empire, where sexual liberty was coupled with a low opinion of home life, a fantastic divorce rate, and a disinterest in children.

How embarrassingly wrong! Our divorce rate has held steady for nearly 15 years, at a level well below the 1946 peak. Sexual freedom has increased, but we have come to value marriage more and more -- for reasons other than sexual gratification. We prize it so highly that we marry several years earlier than our great-grandparents did, bachelors and spinsters have become oddities, married couples have been having more children than at any time in the past 30 years, and two thirds of divorced people, far from being glad to be out of marriage, are back in it within five years from the onset of their “freedom.”

When one predicts the path of a thrown ball, he must take into account not only its direction and speed, but the wind resistance and gravity which set limits to its flight. Perhaps Professor Sorokin forgot wind or gravity; perhaps I can include them, in trying to forecast American sex habits in 1984.

First, the direction and speed of change seem fairly clear. The equality of the sexes, the freedom granted to teen-agers, the contemporary feeling that sex is natural and not dirty or depraved, all will make for a continuing increase in the proportion of girls who indulge in physical intimacies before marriage. By 1984 we may be close to the Scandinavian pattern, in which pre-marital sex relations are the general rule.

The two images

But how about wind resistance and gravity? I believe that the fusing of love with sex, the combining of the two images of women, and the loneliness of modern life outside of marriage, will confine this greater sex freedom largely to genuine love-relationships. Most pre-marital relations will be limited to partners who hope to marry each other.

And adultery? In the modern climate of greater sexual permissiveness, it may well increase -- at least in terms of the total percentage of husbands and wives who stray at some point during their married lives. But paradoxically, in another sense it will be far more strictly controlled. Marriage is immensely important to us today -- and yet more easily broken up than ever, because of easier divorce laws. Adultery will, therefore, be more dangerous to a married man’s or woman’s happiness than it used to be. For that reason most people will fear it, despite vagrant longings. More men and more women may lose self-control on rare occasions, even as they sometimes overeat or drink too much; but they will try to restrain their impulses out of their love for, and concern about, their mates and children.

If I have rightly interpreted the meaning of past and present, I can make a few other quick guesses as to the future:

- Prostitution will diminish.

- An increasing percentage of wives will obtain full satisfaction in marital relationships.

- Men and women who find marital relations unsatisfactory will increasingly seek professional help, rather than turn to divorce or promiscuity.

PRE-LAW STUDENTS

LAW SCHOOL ADMISSION TEST TO BE GIVEN ON FOUR DATES

The Law School Admission Test, required of candidates for admission to most American Law Schools, will be given at more than 100 centers throughout the nation on November 9, 1963, February 8, 1964, April 18, 1964, and August 1, 1964. The test, which is administered by the Educational Testing Service, was taken last year by more than 30,000 candidates whose scores were sent to over 100 law schools.

ETS advises candidates to make separate application to each law school of their choice, and to ascertain from each whether it requires the Law School Admission Test. Since many law schools select their freshmen classes in the spring preceding entrance, candidates for admission to next year’s classes are advised to take either the November or the February test.

The morning session of the Law School Admission Test measures the ability to use language and to think logically. The afternoon session includes measures of writing ability and general background. Sample questions, registration information, and registration forms are included in a Bulletin of Information. It should be obtained six weeks in advance of a testing date from Law School Admission Test, Educational Testing Service, Princeton, N.J. Registration forms must reach ETS two weeks before the desired test administration date.

Cats Trample Colby Mules

The Catamounts of coach Bob Clifford climaxed two weeks of intensive preseason conditioning with an overpowering 37-6 victory over Colby College last Saturday in a scrimmage game at Centennial Field.

The Cats made a fine showing of both offensive and defensive power and they are far ahead of last year's squad at this time. Colby, Clifford's former school where he was head coach from 1956 until last year when he came to UVM, was not as strong an opponent as it was last year. Colby lost most of its stars, former Clifford coached players, through graduation. Colby faces a tough schedule this year and has a long way to go. But let this fact take nothing away from the Cliffordmen, for they showed an overwhelming amount of spirit and aggressiveness.

Last year's latent offense only became dominant in one game, the farcical RPI encounter, the final score being 82-6, a school record, but for most of their games, the Cats were fairly tame. This year, however, there has been a vast improvement in this aspect. The new flip-flop offense, with the wide end and flanker back, worked well against Colby. Jim Brennan did most of the signal calling with sophomore Jack O'Dea doing a fine job of running and passing in relief of Brennan. Chris Greer, senior veteran, did not appear in the practice game due to a leg injury. The other QB, sophomore Scot Fitz, played well defensively. Clifford, who expresses an appeal for a balanced offense, was pleased with last Saturday's performance. UVM worked equally well through the air and land routes. It completed 13 of 27 passes attempted, for 193 yards and ran for 211 on the ground.

Defensively the Cats looked strong with their forward wall which is a mixture of experience. Paul Toussaint, Capt. George Oelze, Ron Hertel, and the only letterman at tackle Tom Mongeon and youth, rugged Rusty Brink, Fred Boese and Mike Ingham. The first team was hard to run through and although Coach Clifford was concerned over defensive depth, the second team held the Mules in check. Their only score came on a 45-yard pass play with less than a minute to go in the first half. This fact really upset Clifford, for this was the Cat's Achilles heel last year and they have spent a lot of time improving pass defense this year.

The Vermont scores came on a 17 yard sweep on the first play from scrimmage by Ken Burton, two 5-yard power dives by Carl Ertlinger, who did a fine job filling in for injured Richie Reynolds, an 8-yard keeper by O'Dea, and a 10-yard jaunt by Terry Lynn. Toussaint hit for 4 PAT's and Ken Andrade for one in a very professional manner. Two more points were added to the tally when the Colby center threw the ball out of the end-zone from his own 3-yard line for an automatic safety.

Although the game was a success, it was not a true test for the Catamounts. The only conclusion one can come to after viewing the game is that this year's team has more potential for greatness than any team in many years. The back field of Brennan, Burton, Kent, and Reynolds is one of the strongest in the Yankee Conference. And the line, although it lacks the size of some of UVM's opponents, has an aggressive attitude and the hustle to compensate. Another factor, and a great one, is the fine coaching staff. The head man is an experienced football mentor, who organizes things with military proficiency. His practice sessions are run with the timing of the Army's landings on D-Day. He takes pride in appearance and sportsmanship. Winning is important, of course, but how the team looks and acts is of equal importance. The Assistant coach, John Coons, who is affectionately known as "coach animal" because of his raspy voice and love of physical violence on the gridiron, is an inspiring coach. His animated method of coaching is an incentive to the whole line. Dr. Les Leggett, the end coach, is a fine builder of men. His ends receive rigid schooling in pass patterns and pass defense. The only newcomer is young Tom Austin, who was Maine's quarterback last year. He will coach the backfield.

Tomorrow's game with American International College in Springfield, Mass., will tell a lot. The Cats are better than they were last year and with a little luck, they could be one of UVM's greatest teams ever.

UVM Opens 1963 Season With AIC

In its first battle of the 1963 season, the Vermont Catamounts will journey to Springfield, Mass., to take on American International College. Coach Clifford's team of thirteen lettermen and some promising newcomers hopes to start the season off on a winning note, and in so doing better their 3-5 record of last year.

Of major concern however is the Catamount line. Four starters are gone from the line, All-ECAC tackle Dave Sequist, guard Jeff Harvey and ends Bill Burke and Frank Bolden are all gone the way of graduation.

To take their place, two juniors Tom Mongeon and Fred Boese are slated to start at tackle positions. Both are over 6'2" and weigh in at an average of 220 lbs. Backing up the pair will be two juniors, Ed Fugit and John Sullivan.

Replacing the two ends of last year's season was a difficult operation, but the job finally went to two seniors, Paul Toussaint and Al Brown. Brown is in his first season at end, having appeared as halfback for the past two years.

At the guard position will be Captain George Oelze and Ron Hertel, both juniors from Union City N.J. Oelze is one of the most active members of the UVM squad, as shown by his 26 tackles (and assists) in last year's game against Middlebury.

At center will be Sophomore Rusty Brink. Brink has the capacity to be one of the top men in the Yankee Conference. On the defense, Brink holds down the center linebacker position.

On the offense, three of four of last year's backfield returns. Senior halfback Ken Burton, holding a UVM record of 8.1 yards per carry should again give on-lookers a glimpse of imaginative and tough running. Also returning will be Deane Kent, leading scorer and pass receiver last season. The fullback slot will be held down by Carl Ertlinger with Jim Brennan slated to open as quarterback for the Catamounts.

Coach Clifford's reputation for high scoring teams should not be impaired with the material he has at hand.

JFK Praises Football

Football has given me some of the most pleasant and exciting moments of my life, from a Harvard-Yale game I saw 40 years ago to last year's Army-Navy game. I remember my 21st birthday not as the day I became eligible to vote, but as the day Michigan's Great Tom Harmon scored 21 points in the first half of a game against California. Many of my boyhood heroes were football stars, and I still thrill to a long run, a solid block, or a good tackle. In short, I am like a lot of other Americans who never quite made the team but love the game.

I sometimes wonder whether those of us who love football fully appreciate its great lesson; that dedication, discipline, and teamwork are necessary to success. We take it for granted that the players will spare no sacrifice to become alert, strong, and skilled, that they will give their best on the field. This is as it should be, and we must never expect less, but I am extremely anxious that its implications not be lost upon us.

In a large sense, all of us are engaged in a struggle more fiercely-contested, and far more important to our future, than you are witnessing here today. It is the struggle for the hearts, the minds, and the souls of men, and there are no spectators -- only players. It is a struggle which will test our courage, our strength, and our stamina, and only if we are physically, mentally, and spiritually fit can we win.

In the past, on many occasions, I have expressed the belief that physical fitness is necessary to all other forms of excellence, that only the active, vigorous person can fully realize his potential. I have constantly urged parents, schools, and communities to provide their youngsters the vigorous activity necessary to healthy development. I repeat this plea now.

The young men on the field today did five or ten minutes of callisthenics just to prepare for 60 minutes of hard football. The exercises loosen their muscles, key their senses, and put them in the proper frame of mind to play. Yet, many American boys and girls cannot do one pullup, or even raise themselves to a sitting position without using their hands. Perhaps some of them are in the stands today.

A recent survey of the schools revealed that one-fourth of our children are physically underdeveloped, and that half are substandard -- in some phase of strength, stamina, agility, or flexibility. At the time, I described these statistics as "shocking." I will go even further: they indicate a threat to the continued vigor, growth, and freedom of America.

Fortunately, there is a way to solve our fitness problem. Working with 19 leading educational and medical organizations, my Council on Youth Fitness has outlined a program which, if adopted in every school, will enable our children to build the strength and energy which are their rightful heritage. The program suggests (1) a health appraisal for every child; (2) a physical screening process to identify underdeveloped children; (3) at least 15 minutes of vigorous activity as part of a daily physical education program, and (4) periodic achievement tests to measure progress and provide incentive.

I strongly urge you to see that your child has the opportunity to participate in such a program. Not just so that they might become a football player someday -- although that would be fine, too -- but so that he will be able to live imaginatively, confidently, and usefully.

Remember, all of our children are on your team. We can do no less than to see that they are fit -- fit to learn, fit to understand, fit to grow up in grace and stature, and fit to serve our nation in its hour of need.

Red Lane Series Presents Royal Philharmonic Orchestra

Sir Malcolm Sargent, conductor of the Royal Philharmonic of London.

by Betty Fuchs

One of England's great orchestras and one of the foremost symphonic ensembles in the world today, the Royal Philharmonic Orchestra, has been engaged to perform here on the evening of October 1, at Memorial Auditorium as the first of the Red Lane Series concerts. The local concert, the first in the United States, is part of a coast-to-coast tour which will open in Montreal, Canada on September 29. The orchestra is presented under the Patronage of Her Majesty Queen Elizabeth The Queen Mother, and this will mark the ensemble's first appearance here since its triumphant tour in 1950, under the direction of its founder, Sir Thomas Beecham.

Sir Malcolm Sargent, the distinguished British conductor who will direct the concert, has played a significant part in the musical history of his country for over forty-five years. It has won him a knighthood from the British crown and the Gold Medal of the Royal Philharmonic Society, the 150-year-old organization which sponsors the orchestra with which he will tour America.

Born in Stamford, Lincolnshire, in 1895, Sir Malcolm Sargent received his education at the Stamford School and became an articulated pupil in organ to the noted Dr. Keaton of Peterborough Cathedral. World War I interrupted the studies of the young musician. After several years of active duty with the Durham Light Infantry he returned to his music. In 1919 he took his degree at Durham, becoming the youngest Doctor of Music in Britain. In 1925 he made his debut as a conductor of the concerts of the Royal Philharmonic Society, thus beginning an association that has lasted till the present day.

The orchestra was formed with the cooperation of the Royal Philharmonic Society. Sir Thomas Beecham, who had long been affiliated with the Society, founded the orchestra in 1946 and was its musical director until his death, at the age of 81, in 1961. The death of Sir Thomas has in no way diminished the activities of the orchestra; outstanding conductors of international stature have maintained the high standards set by its founder.

As of press time, tickets for the Red Series are still available in all price ranges, although the Blue Series is completely sold out.

53 Members Named To Vermont Faculty

Chemistry, Education, & Military Departments Elect New Chairmen

by Roberta Levy

This year there are fifty three new members of the faculty of UVM (including the Medical School) Dean of Faculty, Clinton D. Cook said, the nature of faculty appointments is such that all members of the faculty are unusually able people. It therefore becomes impossible to predict in advance which of these people will most fully realize their potential and become leaders in their field, and at the University.

Three new faculty members hold particularly important positions which will have a considerable influence on the development of the University. These men are: Colonel Robinson, Chairman of the Department of Military Science, Dr. William N. White, Chairman of the Department of Chemistry, and Dr. John Baker, Chairman of the Department of Education.

Colonel Robinson assumes the Chairmanship of Military Science at a time when college programs in military science are undergoing nationwide change; Dr. White has assumed the Chairmanship of one of the University's major departments which affects the academic program of a large number of students; and Doctor Baker's appointment to the new position as Chairman of the Department of Education reflects an increased commitment of the University towards training of teachers.

Colonel Leonard G. Robinson, a native of New York, graduated from Harvard in 1932, where he majored in history, government, and economics. In 1933, he was commissioned a second lieutenant in the artillery reserve. During WWI, Colonel Robinson served as a battery commander, a battalion executive officer, and as a division artillery operations and training officer (S-3) with the First Infantry Division. For the next six years Robinson was involved in research with the Army Field Forces, studied for a year and instructed at the U.S. Army Command and General Staff College for three years. During the Korean War he commanded the 49th Field Artillery Battalion in the Seventh Infantry Division.

Colonel Robinson then spent three years on the Army General Staff in Washington. In 1957 he graduated from the Army War College and after that, spent three years in Germany. Upon returning Colonel Robinson was chief of the Historic Division Department of the Army and supervised a staff of 19 senior historians in compiling the 80-volume official History of the U.S. Army in WWII and the Korean War. In 1961 Colonel Robinson was selected as chief of the first battle staff team at the Alternate Command Center in coordination with the National Military Command System. Colonel Robinson and his wife have 2 children, the oldest girl Patricia is a senior at UVM.

Dr. William N. White, the new Chairman of the Department of Chemistry, plans to maintain the high standards of his department while serving as head of its operations. Dr. White did his undergraduate work at Cornell University and graduated in 1950. He received his Masters in Chemistry from Harvard University in 1953 and received his Ph.D. in Chemistry from the same university. Then, Dr. White did his post doctoral work at the California Institute of Technology serving as a National Research Council Fellow until 1954 when he became an assistant professor at Ohio State University. In 1958 Dr. White served as an Associate Professor, also on the faculty of Ohio State University.

Dr. White's specialty is Organic Chemistry. He is presently doing research that involves determining the basis of chemical reactivity. In addition, he is studying mechanisms of reactions and is also attacking problems of the bio-chemical nature. Dr. White is the author of some twenty-five research publications.

In the near future, Dr. White hopes to make changes in the overall program of the department in the excellent program for undergraduates, the graduate program for Masters Degrees, and the newly started program for Doctoral work. Dr. White is very enthusiastic about keeping up the fine reputation of UVM's Chemistry Department. In addition, Dr. White is very impressed with the University of Vermont and the student body. Dr. White, his wife and their two children immensely enjoy Vermont.

Before coming to UVM, Dr. John Baker, new Chairman of the Department of Education, was Dean of the Liberal Arts School of Greensboro College in Greensboro, North Carolina. Dr. Baker received his B.A. at DePauw University in Greencastle Ind. In 1937, he received his Masters Degree at the University of Minnesota. He received his PhD in Education at the University of Chicago in 1952. While attaining his doctorate Dr. Baker served as Ass't Director of the Midwest Administration Center. Dr. Baker was also an Ass't Professor at the University of Chicago. He has also served as a program director for a privately operated foundation from 1955-1960.

Engineering Building Nears Completion

The new engineering building, designed by architects Barr, Linde, and Hubbard of Burlington, is scheduled for completion in December, but it will not be used for classes until second semester.

Designed for a student enrollment of six hundred, the building contains facilities for the departments of civil, electrical, and mechanical engineering and will also be used by the mathematics department. Offices are provided for the present faculty, and additional offices have been built for an anticipated increase in the faculty in the future.

Student facilities include 11 regular classrooms, 5 drafting rooms, approximately 15 basic engineering labs, 9 smaller research labs, and a 252-seat lecture room, which is equipped with projection equipment. This lecture room is situated on the first floor so that this section of the building may be opened separately, making the room available to other departments for lectures and for movies. Outdoor lab space has been provided on the roof for antenna work and surveying.

The long, narrow windows on the new building are designed to cope with the problems of overheating in warm weather and keeping the heat in during the wintry months. Classrooms, offices, and small laboratories are located on the outside of the building facing the windows. The larger labs are on the interior of the building and have no windows, since the wall space is valuable for storage of equipment. The machinery for these labs will be moved from the old engineering building to the new during the next two months. A freight elevator in the new building with a capacity load of 5 tons will be helpful in this endeavor.

The $1,750,000 building is made of reinforced concrete. The brick is Drury brick from Essex Junction, and the pre-cast concrete panels on the exterior of the building are by S.T. Griswold of Williston. These panels contain exposed aggregate, a local stone, which makes the concrete more attractive.

ACLU Takes Stand On Cuban Travel Ban

NEW YORK (CPS) -- The American Civil Liberties Union (ACLU) has registered strong objections to governmental efforts to penalize U.S. students who visited Cuba contrary to government policy.

The group criticized the House Un-American Activities Committee (HUAC) for subpoenaing 10 of the 58 students for a hearing in Washington on September 12 and the State Department for seeking to withdraw the passports of the students.

John de J. Pemberton, Jr., executive director of ACLU, said, "The HUAC's hearing is but another attack on the First Amendment's right of freedom of speech and association which has marked the Committee's long career of assault on civil liberties. It offers a clear warning to other Americans who may wish to examine conditions in Cuba that they do so under the peril of being exposed before a congressional committee as part of the 'Communist conspiracy.' Such an inflammatory charge can only intimidate American citizens from exercising their right of association and from traveling to foreign countries and using their independent judgement in determining what conditions prevail.

Turning to the government's passport stand in the student's case, the ACLU said the giving of a letter to the returning students declaring that their passports had been tentatively withdrawn was in keeping with the government's policy of clamping down on relations between Americans and Cubans -- except for approved reporters and businessmen.

"In our view," the ACLU said, "the right to travel, to move freely from one place to another, is imbedded deep in the constitutional guarantees of liberty. The only times when the right of movement may legitimately be curbed, is when our country is actually engaged in war or where a criminal indictment is pending against the individual desiring to leave the country. Despite official U.S. - Cuban antagonism, we are not engaged in a military conflict and, to our knowledge, none of the students left the country to escape criminal indictment. The withdrawal of the passport is nothing less than a penalty for disagreeing with an official government policy, and thus attacks the right to dissent in our country."

The ACLU concluded its objections with the strong urging that the fundamental parts of the Bill of Rights that are involved here, should not be sacrificed because of the pressures of the Cold War.

Informal Education

BOSTON, Mass. (I.P.) -- It will probably never replace the "coffee break," but at Boston University a unique "discussion break" has captured the interest of a small but enthusiastic group of students, faculty and staff personnel. The Informal Education Program, as the "break" is known officially, is a plan designed primarily to create a broad intellectual environment and bring down some of the barriers to communication between students, faculty and administrative personnel in areas not usually considered academic.

For six consecutive weeks, professors and students meet in informal discussion groups on a first-name basis. Each weekly meeting is for 90 minutes. Subjects of discussion are chosen by members spontaneously. Each group has 12 members, two of whom serve as co-leaders. Co-leaders are chosen upon the basis of their previous experience in the program. The role of the participating leaders is to probe, summarize and help the group evaluate its progress.

The leadership function, however, is shared by everyone in the group. Consequently, the participating leaders perform the role of participant observers. They acquire the various functions of leadership which are required as the group proceeds in its discussion.

An integral aspect of the overall program is the participating leaders' workshops. These workshops are conducted weekly for a period of six weeks and are attended by group leaders. They are designed to explore some of the problems encountered by participating leaders during group experiences.

Pickets Solicited In Classroom

SYRACUSE, N.Y. (CPS) -- The Daily Orange, student newspaper at Syracuse University reported that pickets were being solicited in the classrooms by recruiters who interrupted classes to call for help in a demonstration against alleged housing discrimination.

Kenneth G. Bartlett, vice-president of the university, said that if the actions continue, they will be stopped.

To date, 82 persons have been arrested at the demonstrations. Many have identified themselves as faculty or students at Syracuse.

Auditing System Introduced

CARLISLE, Pa. (I.P.) - Dickinson College has introduced a new system of classroom auditing which encourages students to broaden and enrich their course of studies and to earn extra credits.

Under the system, any student in good standing who carries at least 16 hours of regular work may register at the start of a semester to audit up to six hours. If after six weeks he finds he is capable of the added work and if the instructor approves, he may convert his audit registration to regular registration for credit. He may choose to continue auditing or to drop out.

An advantage of the plan, according to Dean Roger E. Nelson, is the opportunity it provides the student to test his ability to take work beyond the normal load and to make the test without incurring the risk of a failure. Gifted students may be able to accumulate up to 36 additional credits over the four years, the equivalent of a whole year of regular work.

ADMISSION TEST FOR GRAD SCHOOL ANNOUNCED

PRINCETON, New Jersey, July 15, 1963. The Admission Test for Graduate Study in Business, required for entrance by a large number of graduate business schools or divisions throughout the country, will be offered on November 2, 1963, February 1, April 4, and July 11 in 1964. Educational Testing Service, which prepares and administers the test, has announced that during 1962-63, approximately 18,000 students took this test.

A candidate must make separate application for admission to each business school of his choice and should inquire of each whether it wishes him to take the Admission Test for Graduate Study in Business and when. Since many business schools select their first-year classes during the spring preceding entry, candidates for admission to the 1964 classes are advised to take the test as early as possible.

The Admission Test for Graduate Study in Business is not designed to test specific knowledge in specialized academic subjects. Normal undergraduate training provides sufficient general knowledge to answer the test questions. Sample questions as well as information regarding registration for and administration of the test are given in a Bulletin of Information.

The Bulletin (which includes a registration form for the test) should be obtained six weeks in advance of the desired testing date from Admission Test for Graduate Study in Business, Educational Testing Service, Princeton, New Jersey. Registration forms and fees must reach ETS at least two weeks before the desired test administration date to allow time for completion of necessary testing arrangements for each candidate.

The Bulletins of information with the registration included are available in the Testing Service, 234 Waterman UVM, as are the Law, G.R.E., etc.

Aschenbach Defends Statue

by Ken Klonsky

The sculpture in front of Bailey Library has been the subject of much controversy. This reporter interviewed the artist and gained some very interesting facts.

Mr. Aschenbach stated that the sculpture took him four years to complete. Three years were used in the development of the idea and fifteen months were needed to fabricate it. The cost of the entire piece is great financially but "greater in time and effort".

To answer the CYNIC editorial "The Other Side of the Sculpture" Mr. Aschenbach says, "I did not spend such a great length of time on a pun at UVM". Furthermore, the idea of a beer mug in the piece is both novel and amusing to the artist. He said that this is the habit human beings have of reading into things. A senior who is cynical of his college would tend to do this. "I can only control the piece, not the observer." The drab color is due to the material used; weathered bronze, which is more flexible than most artists' sculpture material. Moreover the work is not hollow but "filled with a maze of tiny fibers". This is because a solid structure would be both too costly, and non-flexible. However, the idea of "chair-men" does rate merit.

To answer the first editorial the artist conveyed the fact that the statue is not at all radical. He feels it to be "more closely related to Michaelangelo than a good deal of contemporary art". He was told to create an honest statement of life at UVM. He and others find this statue to be "aesthetically satisfying" and the editor's mockery of it to be narrow mindedness to the school of modern art. The sculpture is, overall, a "compressing of many specific feelings into one large generality." "Would (the editor) rather I make a marble sculpture of a boy and girl together holding a book".

Before I left Mr. Aschenbach, he told me that he "welcomes all criticism pro and con and all discussion". Keep in mind that most "artists will not discuss their work publicly or with anyone".

The Future Of The Peace Corps

WASHINGTON, D.C. (CPS) -- The fundamental question facing the Peace Corps at the start of its third year, according to Director R. Sargent Shriver, can be stated simply:

"As young Americans realize how unglamorous and unromantic the work of developing nations can be, will they be tricked into believing it is also unimportant?"

This was the problem as Shriver outlined it at two major student meetings in August; the National Student Congress of the United States National Student Association, and the convention of the National Federation of Catholic College Students.

It is also a problem which gains increasing attention in the Peace Corps Washington offices as returning Volunteers report that their greatest adversaries in the field were boredom, loneliness, and a sense of futility.

"Americans are loath to take things slowly, and Peace Corps Volunteers are no exception," Shriver said in a September interview with CPS.

"We're all used to quick results, and we forget that most societies around the world are moving at a walk. It takes longer to achieve results, and make them stick. This is one of the things you can't really demonstrate during the Peace Corps training periods. It has to be learned in the field."

Shriver said any progress, regardless of how little, is often more than some project areas have seen previously. "Volunteers may be disappointed, so to speak, because in two years they had succeeded only in moving the ball from the 50-yard line to the 49-yard line," Shriver said. "Too often they forget that it may be the first time the ball has moved at all in a particular society."

"The test of the Peace Corps," he said, "will be whether we are mature and sophisticated enough to realize this."

The Peace Corps director pointed out, however, that young, creative Volunteers often have an edge on the experts in underdeveloped societies. When the Corps was being launched, he recalled, one of the most frequent questions was: How can Volunteers accomplish anything in areas where experts have tried and failed?

"We are now finding," Shriver said, "that in many of these areas our young, adaptable Volunteers are gaining better results than the experts -- an for an almost obvious reason. The experts require backing, support, assistance, and equipment, and then -- more often than not -- they discover that the society simply does not respond to expert procedures. Our Volunteers, on the other hand, go into an area and work with the tools at hand. They adapt to a situation. And most importantly, they work and live with the people, gaining their confidence and cooperation."

Shriver and other top Peace Corps officers are confident that the initial enthusiastic response to the Peace Corps idea will not lessen as the Corps loses its first glow of romanticism.

"The bloom is off the rose," Shriver said, "and there's no longer the thrill of being the first Volunteer in many areas. But the second -- or the tenth -- wave of Volunteers will find their work cut out for them, and will often find themselves in a position to achieve more meaningful results because of the groundwork of the pioneer Volunteers."

"The job of a Volunteer today is, in a way, more difficult than it was two years ago," he said. "The first Volunteers could afford to make mistakes; now the situation is different. Yet there is a greater potential for success, and I have confidence that the achievements of the Peace Corps in the coming years will justify the sacrifices and hopes of the first two."

A REALISTIC LOOK AT THE VOLUNTEER

WASHINGTON, D.C. (CPS) -- "In most of the world, it's six o'clock in the morning -- and it's dead," Dave Pearson said.

"When the Peace Corps Volunteer moves from a highly mobile society into a sleepy, dawning world where progress is slow and sometimes feared, he must adapt rapidly if he is to be successful."

Pearson, a Peace Corps information officer, said it has been this challenge -- and not the stereotyped dangers of mud huts, savage natives, and wild animals -- that has created the most problems for Volunteers in the field.

During the first two years of Peace Corps operation, Volunteers had few complaints about living and working conditions. Indeed, many governments went out of their way to see that Corpsmen had adequate living conditions.

But over and over, field representatives heard stories of loneliness, boredom and solitude. In many areas, Volunteers were the only people with an advanced education, or even with the ability to read and write.

"Yet these Volunteers were bright, inquisitive young people accustomed to a fast-moving society," Pearson said. "To them, the apathy and the quiet were actual enemies, particularly for Volunteers living by themselves."

Almost all Volunteers managed to succeed in spite of these problems, however, and in many cases they reported that for the first times in their lives they were learning to "really live."

"I had been exposed to an education," Volunteer Ralph Gilman, working on a Ghana project, said. "But I began to feel I'd had enough of second-hand knowledge which had been picked over for my consumption. Now was the time to learn directly from people struggling in life."

Gilman found the slow, underdeveloped society of Ghana a challenge. But in it he found a need to be fulfilled in himself as well as in the society.

"Americans of my generation have inherited a healthy and abundant country," he wrote. "But this good fortune implies the responsibility of some constructive use -- responsibilities to the people yearning for an education."

"We tend to become so involved with our fraternities, our jobs, our competition for an education, and our courtship system, that we forget to ask: to what end? After asking myself these questions, I concluded that I hadn't found all the answers in school."

"And so I came to Ghana -- not because I feel sorry that others are not like me, and not out of sloppy, superior pity -- but because they asked and I am able to help."

Volunteers such as Gilman, with the ability to see long-range purposes behind short-term Peace Corps projects, are needed if the Peace Corps is to become a significant, permanent aid for world improvement, Pearson said.

"Peace Corps service is not glamorous," he said in a CPS interview. "We've never said it was. It's hard, and tiring, and sometimes discouraging.

"And so the question before us is: now that the newspapers, in interviewing returning Volunteers, have made it clear that boredom and apathy go hand-in-hand with excitement and progress in the Corps, will young Americans still be willing to take up the burden?"

The answer, Peace Corps officials believe, can be found in the American student community. "The Corps has no corner on the idea market," Pearson emphasized.

And Sargent Shriver, Peace Corps Director, told 1200 students at the National Student Congress, held in August at Indiana University:

"I am here to solicit your advice in the months ahead ... with that continuing support, you and other Americans will continue to build a program that represents the highest traditions of this nation."

IMPROVED SECTION AND TRAINING

by Roger Ebert

(Editor's Note: This is the last of a three part series on the Peace Corps.)

WASHINGTON, D.C. (CPS) -- The Peace Corps is attempting to learn more about its effective Volunteers -- and how to find them.

"It's frustrating to know that a given project has been a smashing success -- and yet not know why, or how, it can be duplicated elsewhere," Dr. Joseph G. Colmen, head of Peace Corps Research, said in an interview with CPS.

"Yet how can we tell -- in advance -- who will be an inspired Volunteer and how a project can be made successful?"

Colmen and his staff have launched a four-part research program to provide answers to these questions, and are building it around extensive interviews and "de-briefings" with returning Volunteers.

The first area of research, according to Colmen, is an attempt to identify and measure the success of overseas Volunteers.

"To a very great extent, we are not sure what makes success in an overseas program," Dr. Gilman said. "For example, a specific building project may be destroyed by floods -- yet the Volunteers involved may have left behind an example of determination more valuable than the would-be project."

Colmen's staff is using psychological techniques to identify, where possible, changes in the mental attitudes of people involved in Peace Corps projects.

A second area of research deals with changes and adjustments in the personalities of the Peace Corps Volunteers themselves as they serve overseas.

"In this connection, we've asked returning Volunteers if they experienced 'low points' during their tours of duty," he said. About 95 percent admitted to having one or more serious problems which they had to cope with as part of their project. And, we find, almost all of them succeeded.

"We found that perhaps the most valuable part of the Peace Corps experience for most of these Volunteers was the ability to be on their own, responsible for discharging a high level of responsibility on their own initiative."

A third area of research, he said, centers around the effect of a Peace Corps project in a given country.

"We want to study how the school system in a given country, for example, changes when a third to a half of its teachers are Peace Corps Volunteers," he said. "Do the other teachers show a change in attitudes? Are the students more eager to learn? Do side effects travel up and down the educational scale from the levels where Volunteers are teaching?"

This project has required a good deal of factual data on grades and student testing, Dr. Colmen said, and will probably prove to be very interesting when completed.

The last area of current Peace Corps research involved the Corps own operations -- its staff structure, methods of training and supporting Volunteers, teaching languages, and so forth. Volunteers' marching into the setting sun are not accurate. "But the Corps has grown so rapidly, and with such enthusiasm, that often we have not been sure why certain methods are successful. If we can discover the reasons, we should be able to increase the level of success."

"Long range research of this sort," Dr. Colmen said, "is aimed at providing studies which the Corps can use in improving its future operations."

"We know, now, that Peace Corps service involves a good measure of loneliness, heat, routine, solitude, and boredom. We know the stereotypes of

Cynic-al Observations

GREEK WEEK AND THE GREEKS

Once again Greek Week is descending upon the UVM campus. With the new IFC rushing policy (a huge free-for-all which everyone will realize is in no way free once the figures come in from the Dean of Men's office concerning the number of freshmen who will flunk out this semester) now in effect, more and more students will find themselves involved in the great debate concerning fraternities and their role at a university. If we were putting together a new collegiate dictionary and needed a definition for fraternalism (the basic philosophy of the fraternity system) perhaps we might insert something like this:

fra-ter-nal-ism, n. The doctrine that pleasure is the sole or chief good in life and that moral duty is fulfilled in the gratification of pleasure-seeking instincts and dispositions.

Unfortunately, another dictionary has already beat us to this definition; Webster's New Collegiate Dictionary is the author of this definition (however, it is their definition for hedonism rather than for fraternalism).

If man ever finds the means to transverse the ages, the National Inter-Fraternity Council may find itself the defendant in a defamation of character suit for their use of the term "Greek" in describing the fraternity system as it exists in America today. The Greeks are revered for their glorification of the rational and their advances in the discipline of logic; their contributions to Western Civilization in both theoretical and practical fields are innumerable. Anyone who can find anything rational or logical in UVM's fraternities has certainly been through the Mill.

Perhaps the one saving grace of the UVM fraternity system is their social function. We fear greatly the void that would be created in this sphere if all sixteen houses on campus were to suddenly vaporize. Let no one underestimate the value of a social life in a college education. It is only unfortunate that responsibility for social growth and responsibility for intellectual growth have been vested in two separate bodies (the fraternity system and the University).

Fraternities are a vanishing phenomenon on the American campus scene. The very fact that they continue to exist at UVM is a credit (?) to the continued paternalism of the administration and faculty. One would think that UVM's fraternities, observing the deterioration of the national fraternity system, would make some attempt to build a case for themselves just in case that someday their lobbyists in Waterman find another pet. This has not been the case at all. Fraternities have now show the smallest inclination towards attempting to develop the student as a whole rather than as a big-bopzing, fast-frugging, coffee-shopper.

Fortunately (for our fraternities), their opportunity for self-preservation has not been lost. The paternalism continues and hence, fraternities continue. Perhaps, if they wake up in time, UVM will still be a fraternity school when the Class of 1975 arrives. Much will have to be done before the accusations of fraternities being anti-intellectual, anti-democratic, etc., will have been silenced. No start has been made in this direction. If fraternity men really want to perpetuate their system they are probably better off by-passing the IFC and other formal bodies of this type and getting down to fundamentals with their fellows and initiating change from the bottom up, as is supposed to be procedure in societies of equals.

A word to the wise (wise fraternity men, that is): If you wish to protect your favored position and get on the right track towards rationality and logical action you had better put considerable thought into how the fraternities of this campus are going to face the imminent fight over blackface and Kake Walk. The CYNIC is not yet taking its editorial stand on this issue (it is too important to be treated as a rider on this piece) but will give it considerable editorial treatment in the near future. Whatever the outcome of the fight, the actions of the IFC and each individual fraternity will be paramount in deciding the future of fraternities on campus.

Letters To The Editor

To the editor:

The critical article found in last week's CYNIC concerning Mr. Aschenbach's sculpture was of a highly positive, if somewhat defensive, nature. It is specific and well-written. Nevertheless, I would take issue with it, for I believe its author has missed the crucial point of the controversy.

While Mr. Aschenbach's sculpture may be all that this critic claims it is, the issue in this case is not one of quality, but of quantity. Is that work of art, and I do believe it is that, worth $15000? At a time when the University is scrimping to build and is raising tuition's past all belief, can we afford such a luxury? When I walk by East Hall, the chronic complainers' old standby, or enter the freshmen men's dorms, I seriously doubt that UVM is in a position to enhance its campus with unneeded frills. How many students will find value in a work of art which requires deep contemplation for appreciation, but which requires little wit to ridicule? Few indeed, too few to justify such an expenditure.

The Sceptic

"FOR I AM NOTHING IF NOT CRITICAL"

If you get as irritated as I do when a stranger interrupts you to talk about his own ideas, then I owe you an apology. I was so anxious to defend The Creation in front of Bailey that I didn't even introduce myself. Let me do it now.

The facts are few. Born in Boston, raised in New England, went to public school, like girls, reading, drinking, New York City. Upperclassman, fraternity member (disgruntled, like most of them), liberal arts major, and amateur critic of students, faculty, administration, art, and people in general. Why a critic? Well, as you know if you've been reading the CYNIC for a few years, students have been getting it in the neck from the faculty and administration. The Deans pass laws designed to show that they think we're runny-nosed dim-wits in diapers, and the teachers treat us like congenital idiots with wealthy and indulgent parents. Why, just last week I heard three different instructors compare well-dressed students to the ivy league apes who wrecked that high society house on Long Island this summer. Last year, practically every issue of the CYNIC carried a Professores column in which some pompous Ph.D. told us off. So I figured that if anyone was going to call us little red riding hoods, it ought to be one of us. Furthermore, someone ought to comment on them now and then.

Now you know me. Whether I know you or not you can decide after reading several of these columns.

What shall we talk about? You must have noticed that the last issue of the CYNIC wasn't what you expected. There wasn't, for instance, a passionate editorial about people standing on the front steps of Waterman. No one evoked the poor pale ghost of Dean Clifford (remember?). In short, there was no Boriskin. The difference around the CYNIC office is remarkable. The floor is covered with cleat marks; the air reeks of wintergreen, and the eyes of the female staff members have a light in them that never shone on Kim B.

Let's not knock the CYNIC for a while, therefore. What instead? I've said my say about the Creation already, and by now you've probably heard what Mr. Aschenbach had to say at the Loft (assuming that anything was left for him to say). Anything else to say about art? Not about student art, certainly. The last appearance of that, when it was on display in Billings last spring, was tactfully ignored by the CYNIC; but let's be honest -- it was awful, wasn't it? With one or two exceptions, all the paintings were as washed out and nervous and academic as anyone might have expected from the instructor's work. They looked as if their creators suffered from constipation and psychopathic neatness. (Speaking of psychopathic neatness, I once had a roommate who folded his socks every night. Enough to make your flesh crawl.) As for the statues... Let's lay off Mr. Aschenbach for a while.

The only art that shows any signs of life around here is the drama, of course. (The Centaur has shown only its hind end for so long that I'm beginning to suspect it's really just a horse's....) Being un-theatrical myself, I don't know much about the theater group's intentions this year, except that they're going to put on that tired old stand-by Macbeth. We can expect, I'll bet, the usual academic constipation there, too. In the first act, for instance, there's a place where Macbeth says something about vaulting ambition, which o'erleaps itself and falls on the other side. But some careless printer dropped out the word side, and ever since then, Macbeths have been letting ambition fall on the other (one syllable pause). Watch for it.

Did you go to Breathless last Monday night? It was a fearfully over-rated movie (which should have been called Longwinded; it went on & on & on); what was remarkable was the crowd. As usual, the movie was shown in the Arena Theater, which can hold (for movies) twelve strangers or eighteen intimate friends. But it was packed. Intelligentsia was dripping from the rafters like the snakes at the end of Huck Finn. You should have been there. Watching everyone pose with his/her cigarette before the show was worth the price of admission in itself. (The movie was free).

Mention of the cigarettes reminds me that the theme of this week's issue is, I believe, mens sana vs. corpore sano: the choice offered at UVM between a sound mind and a football scholarship... or do we have it wrong? Anyhow, the question that floated into my mind was this: cigarettes have been definitely established to be a source of cancer and other diseases. Candy, is the Dental department will agree, is a cause of tooth decay. Neither candy nor cigarettes have any noticeable virtues to offset these defects. Why, then, are both sold throughout the university? (Even the Phys Ed department promotes them; the gym is cluttered with candy machines.) The last time I noticed, most of them were gone from Waterman; but at the north end there was a brand-new ten-cent affair, so I assume that by now candy's back and you've got it. Why are they sold? The proper answer, I'm sure, requires that I ask a different question: who's making money on them?

When you write to the CYNIC office (Billings Student Center) to tell me, how about suggesting some topics for future comments? Someone has suggested that I give an honest evaluation of departments and teachers, naming names. That's a good idea but too much for me; try the editor. Some one else -- a very nervous, homesick wisp of a pale freshman girl -- wondered nervously why English teachers talk about sex so much. A rather sophisticated New Yorker raised an eyebrow at the sight of all the tight-trousered, prancing boys around the campus. Any comments on these topics? Any suggestions? Fire at will.

Student Editor Of The Year Silenced For Racial Protests

UNIVERSITY, Ala. (CPS) -- The 1962-63 "student editor of the year" has been silenced by the University of Alabama.

Mel Meyer, whose editorials in the Alabama Crimson and White gained him national attention and drew repeated threats on his life has been told by university officials that he may not "write upon or comment upon" any racial matters.

Failure to comply with the university's demands, Meyer said, will result in, "severe disciplinary action" and possible expulsion.

The Alabama administration required Meyer and all other students to sign statements agreeing not to write or comment on any racial matters for publication, Meyer said. The administration would not permit Meyer to keep a copy of the statement he signed. When he appealed the policy he was told there could be no change.

Meyer said he felt the new policy was aimed, at least in part, at him. He said the policy will prevent him from acting as southern correspondent for the Collegiate Press Service.

According to a spokesman for the university the new policy only applies to student correspondents on the campus. Edward Brown, director of the news bureau, said that the school "prefers professionals" to do the racial news writing and said that a claim that the policy would prohibit all comment by students was "silly."

The student correspondent ban, Brown said, was the result of long experience with student reporters and that there would be "no exception" to the rule.

Asked if the campus newspaper, the Crimson and White, would be allowed to carry news stories and comment on racial matter, Brown said, "They certainly will. They always have." He said that the paper had always done "pretty much what it wanted."

Brown said the policy was set by the president of the university who acted as the representative of the school's board.

The ruling was first affected last June and is being continued "until the trouble is over."

UVM ORCHESTRA SETS REHEARSALS

The department of music at the University of Vermont is looking for musicians for the University Orchestra.

James Keene, director of the UVM Orchestra, said rehearsals will be held each Tuesday evening in Ira-Allen Chapel, 7:30-10, and any qualified musicians in the area are invited to participate. The University Orchestra has students, faculty - staff members, and community musicians.

Brown said he didn't know when to expect an end to the trouble, but guessed it would be "years."

Last February, the United States Student Press Association (USSPA) named writer Meyer the "student editor of the year" after he wrote editorials calling for obedience to federal law in Alabama. The editorials appeared during and after the crisis at the University of Mississippi.

Meyer's life was threatened, crosses were burned on the lawn of his fraternity house, and the university administration hired two full-time body guards for him.

"The thing that really bothers me," Meyer said, "is that this ban isn't just against writing about events at the university -- it is a ban on all writing about all racial matters."

Such a ban is an infringement on the right of freedom of expression, Meyer said, and invites censure of the university.

Meyer said he signed the statement "under duress" and plans to continue his appeals against it. At the same time, he said, he will ask the newly formed Committee on Freedom and Responsibility of the Student Press to look into the matter.

Den Gottehrer, General Secretary of the USSPA and Director of the Collegiate Press Service said, "This ban indicates that the University of Alabama administration is not as respectful of the rights of its students as we had earlier been lead to believe. Meyer was going to provide the nation's student press with full coverage of the events in Birmingham and elsewhere around the South. Now under the terms of the pledge, a copy of which still has not been given to Meyer, he cannot do this."

The case goes beyond Meyer and the press, Gottehrer continued, but questions the rights of all of the students at Alabama to speak freely about the situation there.

The Committee on Freedom and Responsibility of the Student Press is presently being consulted and will probably investigate the situation, according to Gottehrer.

Keene, a new member of the music department, plans to feature works by Beethoven, Mozart and Handel this season. He was formerly conductor of the Olean (N.Y.) Symphony, was a member of the Rochester (N.Y.) and Erie (Pa.) Philharmonic Orchestras under the direction of Erich Leinsdorf and Fritz Mahler respectively, and was concertmaster of the Billings (Mont.) Symphony.

Students Picket Kennedy At UN

NEW YORK (CPA) -- More than two hundred students and adults attempted to picket President Kennedy in front of the United Nations last Friday when he addressed that group.

The situation moved smoothly until 40 students attempted to cross 1st Avenue to stage an act of civil disobedience at the U.N. At this point, the rest of the pickets decided to follow. Police on horseback contained the crowd, although one CORE member was arrested.

The pickets were assigned to Dag Hammarskjold plaza where they remained for one hour.

Carrying signs such as "Fascists Run The U.S.," "Kennedy Koddles The KKK," "Down With Nazi Terror in Birmingham," "Each of us was born in the cesspool of racist Bombingham," the pickets marched first to the 17th precinct police station and there were convinced that the arrested student was at the 15th precinct where they confronted police.

The pickets presented the police with three statements: (1) A demand that the student be released, (2) A request that an apology be made by someone of authority from the Police Department or the City of New York, (3) A protest of police brutality in general.

After two hours of peaceful demonstration, the police broke up the pickets on mounted horses where two more pickets were arrested.

USNSA Calls For Nationwide Vigil

PHILADELPHIA (CPS) -- The United States National Student Association (USNSA) called for a national vigil to occur on all college and university campuses through September 27.

The vigil, originated by a group of students at the University of Illinois, is currently being conducted at more than fifty schools across the country and is designed to "demonstrate the profound feelings of compassion felt by the American student community for the oppressive conditions that exist within the Negro community in Birmingham as demonstrated by the recent killing of four innocent children attending Sunday School on September 15."

At most campuses, the vigil is taking the form of five minutes of silence at noon, followed by ten minutes of speeches by the leaders of various religious and civil rights groups as well as campus officials.

The USNSA also requested that all student governments "make their feelings on the Birmingham crisis known to the President, their Senators, and their local Congressmen."

The students at Illinois have also called for a boycott of the ten national corporations which employ over 35% of the Birmingham labor force. These ten include: United States Steel, Republic Steel, Union Carbide and the Martin-Marietta Corporation.

At Illinois, the vigil has turned out the most support in recent years according to The Daily Illini, the campus newspaper.

Improved Cats Win Opener Over A.I.C. 14-6

Toussaint Scores All 14 UVM Points

Paul Toussaint did just about everything but hand the numbers on the scoreboard in UVM's 14-6 victory over American International College. Besides scoring all 14 points, he kicked off like a professional, attempted a field goal and missed like a professional, and played a solid game on both offense and defense.

This is Toussaint's third varsity campaign at UVM. As a Sophomore he started at end. And at that time, an end was an end, both ends were pass receivers. But this year under Coach Clifford's new offensive alignment, Toussaint, the tight end, is primarily a blocker. Ironically for AIC, there are only two pass plays that Paul is on the receiving end and both of them were completed for touchdowns last Saturday.

"Tous", a quiet, unassuming, likable fellow, is a Senior majoring in civil engineering. He is a native Vermonter, whose home is St. Johnsbury, where he was an outstanding high school griddier at St. Johnsbury Academy. Being a native of the Green Mountain State, he enjoys all natural blessings of this rural kingdom. During the hunting season, Paul is likely to head for the woods with his rifle.

Besides hunting, "Tous" is an avid car lover, who likes to watch the drag races at the various speed bowls around the state. His extracurricular activities on campus are centered around the ROTC. He is a distinguished military student in the advanced course, serving as a company commander this semester. He is also president of the Ethan Allen Rifles.

On the grid iron look for "Tous" to kick off, kick field goals, kick PATs. Look for him to make sharp blocks to free the ball carrier and to anchor his end position on defense. But don't be surprised if you don't see him catching many passes this season because there are only two that he can receive. But don't be surprised if the Catamount quarterbacks call those two plays to their sure fingered end.

New Gym Schedule Is Announced

The use of athletic facilities by service program classes (men and women) and varsity and freshman athletic teams is rather extensive between the hours of 9:00 A.M. and 6:00 P.M. Members of the faculty and administration are invited to use the swimming pool, handball courts, and squash courts during the noon hour Monday through Friday. Special arrangements may be made for use of the main gym floor for volleyball, basketball, and badminton.

The main gym floor is normally open for free play each Saturday from 1:00 P.M. to 4:30 P.M.

Intramural Sports Program Enlarged

SAE Wins All Sports Trophy

by Mel Bloomenthal

Quoting the Director of Intramural Athletics, Mr. Norman Strassburg, "The aim of the Department of Physical Education is to provide an opportunity, through the Intramural Athletics Program, for every male student to participate in organized physical and recreational activities." This aim should certainly be carried through this year, as the Intramural Sports program has been greatly enlarged, and hopes are that it may continue to grow in the next few years.

This year's program was initiated Wednesday, September 25, with the flag football season. In previous years known as touch football, flag football should add more excitement to play in its rookie year at UVM.

This semester's activities will be followed by the tennis singles tournament. Other sports offered during the fall term include bowling, basketball, handball (doubles), squash, free throw contest -- basketball, and handball (singles).

The program will continue through the spring term with paddleball (doubles), badminton (singles), hockey, indoor relays, volleyball, indoor track and field meet, hexathlon, ski meet, swimming meet, tennis (doubles), and softball.

The Intramural Sports Program is divided into two divisions for the team sports. They are the Fraternity Division and the Non-Fraternity Division. The latter division includes residence halls, independents, and graduate students.

The "open tournaments" are open to "all men interested regardless of unit affiliations, provided they are otherwise eligible" according to the Intramural standards.

AWARDS

Various awards are presented to team and individual winners in the Intramural Sports Program. The most outstanding award is the All-Sports Trophy. This trophy is awarded to that organization compiling the largest total of points (determined by a previously arranged system) in intramural competition. The win-graved on the trophy, which remains on display in the trophy case in the Patrick Gymnasium.

Last year the All-Sports Trophy was won by Sigma Alpha Epsilon Fraternity with 335 points. Runner-up was Delta Psi Fraternity with 305 points.

All-Campus trophies are awarded to all-campus winners in flag football, basketball, bowling, softball, volleyball, and ice-hockey. This trophy is awarded on a rotating basis for one year's possession.

Other awards are Divisional Trophies for the team, sports, Open Competition trophies and medals, and James E. Donahue Trophy to the winner of the Hexathlon (a competition patterned after the Olympic decathlon, and designed to determine the best all-around athlete of the year), and the Sportsmanship Trophy.

Sigma Alpha Epsilon collected 302 points this year to win the University of Vermont All Sports Trophy.

This trophy is awarded to the organization compiling the largest total of points in intramural competition during the year.

Sigma Alpha Epsilon accumulated its 302 points to win over the nearest contender by 33 points.

The fraternity scored high in swimming, skiing, basketball, softball, football, and track.

The engraved trophy is on display in the trophy case at Roy L. Patrick gymnasium.

With the new facilities providing the students with an opportunity for complete physical development, it is hoped that everyone will make full utilization of the intramural sports program that has been set up. The success of this program lies in the student's cooperation in utilizing these facilities.

The vastly improved Catamounts traveled to Springfield, Mass., last Saturday and proved what they are capable of doing, play winning football. Although the score was only 14-6, the Cliffordmen completely dominated the statistics and displayed an aggressive defense that held the Aces of American International College to 20-yards on the ground.

Paul Toussaint scored all 14 Vermont points by catching two touchdown passes and kicking the two points after. Toussaint also attempted a field goal but his kick was wide of the mark. Jack O'Dea, Sophomore quarterback, threw the two scoring tosses to Toussaint. O'Dea, who relieved starting QB Jim Brennan, completed 3 of his 4 passes. Brennan was 4 for 7, and called an excellent game.

The Catamounts gained a total of 317 yards while AIC piled up 173 yards, 153 of it coming on passing. And most of that came on the Aces 72-yard TD pass. Pass defense has been the Cats' biggest weakness in the past two seasons. Last year's opener with AIC was lost because of a long scoring play late in the game. Coach Clifford has been working especially hard on this important phase of defense and hopes the Cats will improve this season.

Despite the overwhelming figures in UVM's favor the game was in doubt until late in the last period. It shouldn't have been that way for a 55-yard TD pass from Brennan to split end Al Brown was nullified by a penalty. In the same period a Brennan aerial flew through Ken Burton's waiting hands in the end zone. And the Catamounts fumbled on the 2-yard in the closing seconds of the game.

UVM's first score of its 62nd football campaign came in the second quarter when O'Dea hit Toussaint in the end zone with 18-yard scoring peg. This tally was set up by Deane Kents' timely interception deep in AIC territory. O'Dea's second pass to Toussaint came after 6-1, 210-pound fullback Richie Reynolds galloped like a runaway stallion for 45-yards through the AIC defense. Reynolds topped all rushers with 99 yards and a 7.6 yard average. Burton was a close second with 76 yards gained.

Defensively Vermont's line contained the Aces and rushed their passer consistently. Capt. George Oelze, Sophomore center Rusty Brink, and big Ron Hertel made it impossible for the men from Mass. to run up the middle. Hertel dropped the AIC QB many times for big losses. Tackles Fred Boese and Tom Mongeon played a solid game both ways.

Clifford was happy to see that his team was a better conditioned squad than the Aces, for many opening day games are won on conditioning alone. But on this day it was a mixture conditioning, hustle, and a guy named Toussaint. This Saturday's game with Army B will be a toughly fought contest and if the Cats show the same spirit and aggressiveness that they did last Saturday, they will surely beat the Bees.

CATAMOUNT CLIPPINGS . . .

The Cats worked out at Deerfield Academy the day before the AIC contest and they were honored with the complements of Mr. Boyden, headmaster at Deerfield and the foremost headmaster in the United States. His complements came in the form of ice cream pops that he handed out personally in the locker room. At 88, Mr. Boyden is a firm believer in physical fitness. Athletics are required for all students at Deerfield.

HELEN OF TROY

Queen To Rule Over Festivities

Due to circumstances beyond their control the IFC has announced with regret that the real Helen of Troy will not be able to attend the October 5 dance in her honor. It seems that "the face that launched a thousand ships" died suddenly — about 1975 years ago. Greek Week's Helen of Troy, more reliable than the original, has consented to reign over both the dance and the Olympic Games on Saturday.

Just who is this girl? She will be one of sixteen candidates sponsored by the fraternities on campus, and will be elected by popular vote of the student body on Thursday, October 3. Voting will take place in Billings Student Center.

The winning candidate will be crowned Saturday afternoon. She will reign over the Olympic Games in the afternoon and hold court at Patrick Gymnasium from 8:00 to 12:00 that night, where her loyal subjects will dance to the music of the court orchestra, otherwise known as the "Northern Lights." Her majesty requests that those attending wear informal clothes and soft-soled shoes. Admission is free and refreshments will be sold by the royal chefs, Saga. At 9:30 the winners of the afternoon's games will be awarded prizes by the Queen.

According to rumor in court circles, the Queen owes the success of the week to the Greek Week committee, comprised of Betsy Stern, Alpha Epsilon Phi; Martin Hackel, Phi Sigma Delta; Harold Gilbar, Theta Chi; John Norton, Sigma Nu; Dick Darling, Alpha Epsilon Pi; Den Bailey, Theta Chi; Mike Broutsas, Sigma Alpha Epsilon; Bruce Dunning, Alpha Gamma Rho; and Dick Dutton, Lambda Iota. To them she accords royal thanks.

Royal Philharmonic Lauded As "Great"

by Michael A. Baker

An orchestra is as good as its conductor—the expression and emotion of the music can only be brought out through his individual guidance, and if perchance his leadership is effective, we can consider the orchestra great! Those people holding Red Lane Series tickets saw and heard a "great" orchestra.

Under the direction of Sir Malcolm Sargent, the Royal Philharmonic Orchestra, making its first appearance in the United States since 1950, performed at Memorial Auditorium on Tuesday evening, October first. The Orchestra performed four works: "The Perfect Fool," "Ballet Suite" by Gustav Holst; "The Walk to the Paradise Garden" by Frederick Delius; "A London Symphony" by Ralph Vaughan Williams; and "Variations on an Original Theme" ("Enigma"), Opus 36 by Edward Elgar. It appeared very obvious that Sir Malcolm Sargent had a theme in mind when he selected these works; they were all modern; they all told a story; and they were all romantically oriented. It was ended a pleasure to hear compositions that are not performed very often. It gave the listener a chance to appreciate the music, without being distracted and of having the opportunity to compare Sargent's interpretations with others.

"The Perfect Fool" had the "spirit of burlesque . . . distinguished by a style that (was) unmistakably English in its affinity with folk-song, its tunefulness and individuality." Sargent's interpretation gave this work the clarity and vibrance it deserved. At its diminuendos one could easily detect the delicate, sensitive emotion of love, and at its booming crescendos, one could picture the rapid shifting of the scene to one of fire and fleeing.

"The Walk to the Paradise Garden" was the shortest of the four works presented, but here again the element of love could be felt so easily.

A London Symphony not only depicted the plight of a Londoner, but also envisaged the power, the glamour, the striving and achievement of a great city. This work was masterfully executed.

The last piece was Variations on an Original Theme ("Enigma"). The "Enigma" refers to the theme which the composer tries to hide by doing variations upon it. This was indeed the most dynamic of the works offered. It was a challenge to pick out the theme during the course of the work, and on the other hand, it was obviously not a challenge to listen to.

The Orchestra received a five minute ovation from the aroused audience and the evening thus terminated after the talented Brits went through their bowing and hand-shaking routine. I suppose Sir Malcolm was trying to avenge the labors of his musicians by making the customers work for their entertainment. But even sore hands could not compensate such a masterful job. The Royal Philharmonic Orchestra spoiled us.

Homecoming Looks To "New Horizon"

By Lois Allison

The alumni will flock, the football fans will cheer, and the parties will flourish when Homecoming, the biggest campus weekend of the fall, comes to UVM on Friday, October 18 and Saturday, October 19. Planned around the theme of "new horizons", the weekend will spotlight the expansion of the University.

Festivities will officially begin with the Homecoming Ball, to be held on Friday night at Patrick Gymnasium. The feature of the evening will be the balloting for and coronation of the Homecoming King and Queen from the freshman candidates. Saturday morning will focus on Billings Student Center and Patrick Gymnasium—both "new horizons" on campus—with alumni registration and open house at the former and guided tours at the latter. The highlight of the weekend will occur in the afternoon when UVM and New Hampshire clash on the football field. Pre-game and half-time entertainment will be featured. Next stop—open house at the fraternities and several of the living units for dancing and refreshments. Vermont Varieties, an all-campus talent show sponsored by the Vermont Players, will round off the weekend activities.

Working behind the scenes of all these exciting plans as sponsors, planners, and general coordinators are the Junior Honoraries—Key and Serpent and Staff and Sandal. Serving as head advisors for the whole weekend are Jim Foley and Sandy Murray. Steve Slack and Pat Russell head the Ball plans, while Ralph D'Adilla and Guran Hanson lead the King and Queen Committee. Homecoming publicity is being handled by Ira Fierstein and Liz Bringden. Two separate poster committees—one for general student body and one for fraternity and sorority—were formed this year, since posters are replacing the floats in the "Greeks" competition. Carl Frattini and Gail Harding head fraternity and sorority posters, and Ron Parks and Alice Burton lead the all-school contest.

"We are expecting a great and exciting weekend," says Jim Foley, head advisor. "A full slate of activities combined with alumni and student spirit and support will make Homecoming '63 undoubtedly tops."

Greek Week Returns; Frat System Discussed

On Monday, September 30th, the Fourth Annual Greek Week began. In the past, Greek Week has been in the spring, but this year's Greek Week has been arranged with the new Open Rushing System in mind.

Greek Week was originated by Dr. John C. Mosley of the University of Nevada. Its main purpose was, and still is, that of striving to strengthen and improve relations between fraternities themselves, between their chapters, and the administration, the townspeople, and the public in general, and to stimulate chapter effectiveness.

The overall purpose of Vermont's Greek Week will be to stress the three major aspects of Greek life: Rushing, Pledging, and Fraternal Responsibility, so that the individual fraternity member may gain more from Greek experience. Another important aspect of this year's Greek Week is togetherness, not only between the Interfraternity Council and their members, but also between the sororities. Both the Panhellenic Council and the Interfraternity Council can work as more effective organizations if the separate fraternities and sororities can enter into a closer state of togetherness.

Greek Week will be highlighted this year by guest speakers, workshops, and the Olympic Games.

On Tuesday, October 1, at 6:30 p.m. in Patrick Gymnasium,

Dr. Elden Smith, President of Ohio Wesleyan University will deliver the keynote address of Greek Week. His topic will be "Greeks or Barbarians."

Wednesday evening will be devoted to fraternity and sorority panel discussions. The three topics of the fraternity workshops will be Rushing, Pledge Training, and Fraternal Responsibility. Each panel will be composed of National Representatives of Vermont's chapters and Interfraternity Council Advisors. Some of the things to be discussed are as follows:

Rushing

What are the advantages and disadvantages of a restricted rushing program vs. a non-restricted and open rushing policy?

What are the effective means of introducing a chapter to prospective pledges?

Should a fraternity rush Freshmen or should the Freshmen rush fraternities?

Pledge Training

Should the fraternities pursue a hazing policy in conjunction with other pledge training?

Should there be a required average of seventy before formal pledging?

What are the responsibilities the brotherhood has toward the pledge, and vice-versa, with respect to pledge training?

Fraternal Responsibility

What responsibilities do the fraternities have toward the University in the area of academics?

What relationships should occur between faculty and fraternities? Should social functions always take second place to academics or vice-versa?

What responsibilities do the fraternities have to the community?

Two Panhellenic workshops will also be held Wednesday evening. One will deal with Scholarship and the sorority and another will be concerned with Rushing. These panels will be headed by Professor Jane Wamboldt and Dean Elizabeth Kelly of Middlebury College.

Saturday afternoon will be devoted to the crowning of Helen of Troy and the Olympic Games at Centennial Field. Fraternities will compete in a tug of war. The fraternities and sororities will enter contestants for three-legged races. The sororities will also enter girls for a bike race. The highlight of the afternoon will be the Annual Chariot Race. Each fraternity will enter a team of runners and one chariot driver. The course has been modified slightly and some exciting races are expected.

In the evening, a dance, "Romp on Olympus," will be held at Patrick Gymnasium. The dress will be informal and it is hoped that this will be a successful conclusion to Greek Week, 1963.

Dr. Haynes Speaks Out On The American Negro Revolution

by Roberta Levy

Dr. Alfred M. Haynes, Assistant Professor of Epidemiology and Community Medicine and also President of Vermont's NAACP, feels that the 1963 Revolution of the American Negro is a "revolution against moderation." He feels that "something" must be done now or the non-violence will transform itself into something more dangerous.

The "something" about which Dr. Haynes speaks, refers to the much politically debated civil rights legislation -- to desegregation in housing, employment and schools. Dr. Haynes states that the passage of this legislation represents the very minimum that the Negro wants. The contents of this legislation refers to desegregation. There is a wide difference between desegregation and integration. Desegregation concerns laws and acts resulting from legislation whereas integration has to do with what people think, if they can overcome inborn prejudices, and begin to understand and fully accept the Negro as a person.

Dr. Haynes pessimistically feels that real integration is an ideal that is not now feasible in reality. White people do not understand how a Negro feels and unless there is a basis for understanding to bridge the gulf between the two groups, integration may not be achieved for a long time. It might take a long time to dissolve all the prejudices that blind the intelligence of man, that makes man unwilling to change. Although Haynes is pessimistic about a real understanding and communication between Negroes and whites, he feels that much progress is and will be made in the line of desegregation. Americans are becoming aware of the Negro problem.

The non-violent March on Washington of Aug. 28, made Americans contemplate the imminent problem of the Negro. It was successful mainly because when public thinks and takes a stand, Congress will act and bring about desegregation. The 210,000 marchers assembled peacefully within the democratic tradition of our country. As a result of the March, the Vermont NAACP received contributions and support. One-third of this money is going to be used for a civil rights project in Vermont. There is no one cause for the Negro problem. The problems of housing, education and employment are interrelated. The Vermont NAACP is focusing its attention upon the problem of housing. Negroes, including students here at UVM, find it difficult to secure residence in Vermont only because landlords fear what the neighbors or tenants will think or do. This fear is going to be eliminated when, in coordination with the project people will possess little stickers if they are willing to accept neighbors regardless of race or religion. This will solve the problem of what the neighbors will think, or whether the tenants will move out. These stickers will, in addition, make Vermonters sensitive to the Negro problem.

The Negro problem does exist in Vermont. As stated before, housing is a major concern. In 1957 a Public Accommodations Bill was passed as a result of an incident that occurred during Kake Walk. A Negro girl was refused residence in a motel despite the fact that reservations had been previously made.

The problem of the "black face" tradition of Kake Walk will soon be brought to everyone's attention. Dr. Haynes and others feel that certain features of Kake Walk are objectionable. The actual beauty and skill of the walking will be no less beautiful, if the stereotyped black face, kinky hair and dialect are removed. Dr. Haynes stated, "You don't have to possess blue eyes and blond hair to waltz expertly."

Alabama Seat Of Rebellion

by James L. Sealy

In 1776 a revolution began in a continent which had recently been discovered and settled. There have been many theories written as to why this revolution occurred. Some emphasize that the revolution was mainly economic in nature with social undertones while others maintained that the revolution was social in nature and that the American Revolution was truly the first great social revolution of the modern era.

In 1963 another great American revolution was in process of reaching some sort of climactic decision. This revolution can truly be called the second American Revolution. As its predecessor it is an economic and social revolt of an oppressed people. This revolution, titled the "Negro Revolt," was the subject of a lecture given by Dr. Cleveland Williams, professor of government at St. Michael's College.

The final and most dramatic stages of the revolution began with the Montgomery, Alabama school bus boycott, which was under the leadership of Dr. Martin Luther King. From that small spark of flame was lit throughout the entire country so that today we have the sit-ins in the South and mass demonstrations in the North. The Negro as a true American (for he can claim to

Cynic-al Observations BLACKFACE

BLACKFACE AND THE GREEKS

Last week in this column we conveyed the warning to the fraternities of UVM that the ultimate fate of their beloved fraternity system on this campus would be strongly effected by the manner in which they reacted to the challenge posed by the blackface controversy. We also stated that, owing to the importance of the issue, we would reserve editorial comment on it for treatment in a separate piece at a later date. We shall now take up our self-granted option.

When Sandra Clark, '63, wrote a letter to the Editor of the Cynic last March that "Kake Walk is a subtle form of discrimination against the Negro," she was not starting a controversy; she was simply reopening it at a time the conscience of America's whites had been awakened and the anger and frustration of America's Negroes had grown beyond the point of restraint. What pursued in the Letters-to-the-Editor column (until the very last issue of the Cynic in May) was a continued back-and-forth between those who wished to see blackface abolished as part of Kake Walk and those who urged its continuation. Some letter writers called Miss Clark's evaluation "immature" and even went as far to say that blackface and Kake Walk were a "tribute to the American Negro." Others came to the defense of her arguments (hardly necessary considering the way in which she herself backed up her original letter with a couple of subsequent ones). And so the year ended; the campus divided in thought (except for a few Dionysuses-of-the-Den) but not in action--there was no action taken.

In the opinion of the Cynic, the blackface, kinky hair, and speech used in Kake Walk act to perpetuate an incorrect image of the American Negro which is insulting and materially and psychologically detrimental to him. Accepting this to be fact rather than opinion, we see no other alternative than the abolition of the use of these objectionable items as part of Kake Walk.

How anybody can see the portrayal of the Negro as a happy-go-lucky, ignorant individual, incapable of properly speaking the English language as a "tribute" to the Negro is beyond our understanding. The argument that since other minority groups have had to put up with similar misportrayals of their national or racial character, the Negro has no special gripe is incorrect on two grounds: (1) injustice done to other minority groups are equally reprehensible and no reason for the Negro to continue to turn his other cheek, and (2) many other so-called minorities are not materially effected by the alleged misportrayals (few Italians are denied jobs because employers who have watched the "Untouchables" believe all Italians to be inherently dishonest, and few Jews suffer materially due to Shakespeare's portrayal of them as eternally miserly in the Merchant of Venice, while millions of Negroes are discriminated against in housing, employment, and education, because they are thought of as ignorant, lazy, careless, etc., ---impression fostered by Kake Walk.). We hope nobody will take our second point as a denial of everybody's and every group's right to normal sensitivity. On the other hand, let nobody accuse the Negro of over-sensitivity in this blackface dispute; he has a gripe.

Undeniably, the worse argument in favor of keeping the discriminatory elements of Kake Walk is the "importance of preserving tradition". First, while tradition serves a very basic and important role in our civilization, to consider it sacred totally negates its value--no tradition is sacred. Second, rather than continue on this point of blackface and Kake Walk tradition we prefer to quote from a letter written in support of maintaining blackface:

Not once while I was watching those sixteen pairs of walkers did I think of their black faces. The actions and comments of the audience did not center around the painted faces nor the exaggerated eyes and mouth, but all eyes were on the skill of the walkers themselves, and the comments were about the skill.

To go on and say that blackface is integral to the Kake Walk tradition is a complete denial of logic. Unfortunately, this is exactly what many people have been saying to themselves or others. When the Burlington

Letters To The Editor

Lack Of Spirit

To the Editor:

In the first issue of the CYNIC, under "Cynic-al Observations" there were two paragraphs which interested me very much -- especially after attending our first home football game. The first paragraph of interest was concerned with the lack of spirit at the initial pep rally of the 1963 season. It was expressed by the writer that "just as in the past, the crowd didn't let itself go and hoot it up." Believe me, there is nothing more disheartening to a football team than to be present at a "non-pep" pep rally given especially for them. The great potential of this year's football team as one of UVM's finest not only shone through in both the A.I.C. and Army B games by the fact that we came out ahead in the scoring, but also in the fact that our boys were able to get up for the games by themselves.

The second paragraph that caught my attention was the one about the cows being painted. Some amusement behind this little article, but more truth in it than could be seen by the writer of it. This "good sign" of a "spirited freshman class" is something that I think the upperclassmen should stand up and take notice of. After the Army B game last Saturday, I almost felt ashamed to be a member of this university. If it hadn't been for a handful of spirited freshmen settled in the center section and eight enthusiastic cheerleaders, the stadium might as well have been empty.

Why should a freshman have to tell an upperclassman to stand up for the kick-off, to urge the offense on for a touchdown, to inspire the defense to hold fast, or to do anything and everything to help the team achieve victory. No wonder the majority of freshmen looked so lost: with them seeking guidance from the upperclassmen, and the guides themselves afraid to "make a scene" in front of all their classmates, an old fashion stalemate of silence occurred throughout most of the stadium.

We have a great football team here at UVM, and they deserve more support from the student body than they've had in the last couple of weeks. If it has to come down to the point where the freshmen have to take charge in handling ALL of the spirit in this school, then I'm quite sure they will do an adequate job. But, I honestly feel that the upperclassmen can pick themselves -- and their voices -- up and show us underclassmen to whom the tradition of spirit toward our hallowed school belongs to. So, what do you say upperclassmen? Show us all at the next home game!

Standards Of Dress

To the Editor:

As freshmen we are all told by the administration that one of the basic goals of a college education is to make decisions for oneself. Paradoxically, this goal is constantly being thwarted by the same administration which set the goal. Recently certain dress standards were proposed for all women students using Saga food service. At present these are proposals; but they

Free Press, in its editorial columns, calls the demand for the abolition of Kake Walk one of many "unjustifiable demands for changes in the American way of life, we can understand why many white and Negroes alike are beginning to question the sanctity of the "American way of life." (Please see the Free Press of October 1, 1963 for the other side of the controversy.)

Where do the Greeks fit into this controversy? Kake Walk is a fraternity function and there is no other group (faculty, administration or pressure group) in a better position to insure that the sixty-seventh Kake Walk will have no blackface, etc. Something is in the air: the Kake Walk Committee is working on it, IFC is working on it, the faculty and administration are working on it. Yet nothing has been accomplished. What about the regular Monday night meetings of the individual fraternities?

What is there to stop one member of each fraternity from introducing a motion at the next meeting of his respective fraternity declaring that fraternity's opposition to the use of blackface, etc., in Kake Walk and stating that the fraternity shall not use such items and/or participate in a Kake Walk in which they are used? This is exactly the course of action we propose. Such unilateral action would not be a snub to the IFC or any other group working on the problem at the present but would rather assist them by providing a rapid, just, and uncomplicated solution to the entire problem. Moreover, it would indicate clearly the sentiment of the UVM fraternal body on this issue of moral significance.

I.F.

can become rules if there is not improvement in dress in the eyes of Saga and the administration. Simpson Dining Hall serves about nine hundred girls, who come from nine hundred different families, with nine hundred different standards of dress.

If we are ever going to learn and practice making decisions and thinking for ourselves, we should begin with less cosmic matters -- such as dress. It is up to the individual to decide what is appropriate for the dining halls. Saga is a commercial food service; they are a business paid by us. They are not a privately owned restaurant which can set standards of dress for their clientele. As residents of Redstone Campus, we must use Saga food service. The proposed standards of dress is not the point of this article. The point is, can the administration and Saga make and enforce regulations on matters such as dress, or should they be the results of personal and private decisions?

Cynic Not Cynical?

Editor: The CYNIC

During the several years that I have been professing at this august institution, I have been of the opinion that the CYNIC has failed to live up to its name. I detect nothing of the snarlier, the misanthrope, in its bland pages. Worse, it even lacks plain humor. Why not liven up this ancient journal with bits of barbed wit which will also serve the traditional editorial purpose of stirring up thinking on controversial issues?

May I proffer a few suggestions in the form of contests or opinion polls which might be conducted under The CYNIC's sponsorship?

Should the Burlington Zoning Board be requested to rule on Mr. Aschenbach's alleged sculpture to determine whether it is a junk yard and therefore subject to fencing?

Is it better to live under educational television or Communism?

What did President Fey mean when he reportedly said that fraternities contribute to higher education?

Will there be a drop out problem on the PhD level by 1984?

Should college football teams sponsor academic scholarships and/or conduct tutoring sessions for bright students who are poor athletes?

If these suggestions are adopted and result in increased advertising, I propose the revenues be sent to aid Mr. Older in his fight for freedom.

The Sceptic

"A plague on both your houses" — Mercutio

Greek Week is coming, and the fact has roused by the usual crowd of carpers and cynics, snickering not only at the emphasis on chariot races and togas but at the fraternities themselves. We must always be sceptical of any majority opinion. Since the majority of students and others on campus agree in condemning fraternities, they are probably good things. Let's consider the matter.

Any sensible fraternity member would agree that the worst enemies of fraternities are the people who defend them. Representatives from the national level, especially — after hearing some pot-bellied, flabby-faced, middle-aged child in collegiate clothes assure you that fraternities are a bulwark against communism, socialism, and a graduated income tax, almost anyone would be willing to close the houses down. Equally pestilent are those bright-eyed, tight-suited house presidents who imply that fraternities are hotbeds of brotherly love and that non-fraternity men are creeps, queers, or eggheads. In last year's Greek Week CYNIC, some such type implied that you couldn't be charitable without joining a fraternity, and a later letter babbled heartfully about the fraternal joys of friendship. Such defenses sound almost as silly as the now outmoded one about intellectual achievement. (If the fraternity member's average is higher than the non-fraternity man's, this is obviously because you can't join if your marks are really bad.)

Let's all admit some basic facts, okay? Fraternities, first of all, have no moral purpose. I don't think there are ten people on campus (presidents excluded) who could tell you what moral goals their house stands for, even though they probably took some kind of an oath to uphold them. Like business firms and governments, fraternities exist for the sake of existing — not for the sake of their members. If you doubt this, try not sending in your national dues. Secondly, fraternities don't generate brotherly love, any more than dormitories do. There's probably more childish gossiping and politicking in a fraternity than in any other organization. Thirdly, they are not interested in education or charity. Whatever they do in those fields is purely advertising. And finally, they are exclusive. If students were assigned to fraternities or if all students had to be accepted by a fraternity, half the fun of belonging would disappear.

Now let's look at the critics. Some charge fraternities with being a waste of time, money, and energy. Okay — they are. But let's remember that the fraternity member who wastes his money on dues and clothes would not otherwise spend it on books and the Lane Series; that he would not otherwise spend that time in study; and that he would not use that energy in picketing Woolworth's. Of course not. That kind of person wouldn't have joined a fraternity in the first place.

How about the morality of fraternity life? The faculty complains that fraternities keep files of old essays, and that many fraternity members have passed freshman & sophomore English on the strength of someone else's essay ("Isn't it strange, Mr. Jones, how much better I think out of class?"). Well, after all, the kid showed that he had a good understanding of literature by choosing such a successful essay to copy — and, in fact, it's still a pretty risky business. Apparently Mr. Fosso and Mr. Long don't see eye to eye on the subject of essay-writing.

But fraternities encourage drinking! Sure they do — but so does the university, by forbidding it. It's true that every house that I know of has drinking parties, and that many of them even brew their own beer. It's true that there are laws against student drinking. But it's also true, though less widely known, that Dean Patzer told all the houses last year that moderate drinking was okay by him — only the orgies would be raided. Needless to say, he didn't tell the dormitories this, so in effect he said, if you want to drink, join a fraternity. It was one of the big selling points last year.

But fraternities encourage sex! Not much — at least if it's heterosexual sex you're talking about. Most fraternities do have a sex pit, it's true, but it encourages ulcers more than sex. It's always very dark, because only novices use it, and they don't want anyone to laugh at their technique. As a result, you're always likely to get involved in someone else's affair; newly arrived couples sit on you; people trip over you on the way out; the smell is pretty strong; and there's always the chance that a chaperone will turn on the light.

Fraternities are collections of conventional sheep! So what? You don't object to workers who join labor unions or intellectuals who join Phi Beta Kappa or war-mongers who join the ROTC or psychos who join the Birch Society or businessmen who join the Diners Club, so why criticize the sheep? Who ever heard of an independent sheep? No one. Okay, then, let them — let us — flock together. We like each other (not much, with reservations, suspiciously, for the time being) more than we like you.

Robinson Hall Becomes Foreign Language Dorm

by Carolyn Seigel

UVM has its first foreign language dorm. It is Robinson Hall, a French House, located on Redstone Campus. The rules of the House, made and enforced by each of the twenty-four girls living there, include speaking as much French as possible during the day, and speaking French exclusively at dinner. House meetings are conducted in French, as are Fire Drill meetings.

The only requirement for admission to the French House was at least one college-level French course. However, the girls still refer to mimeographed sheets of an every-day, active vocabulary compiled by Sue Cohen, who first thought of the idea of a foreign language residence hall. Mrs. Tollerton, House Mother of Robinson Hall, does not know any French, but she always carries a pocket dictionary with her.

The dorm is decorated in French style, with travel posters displaying French scenes hung on almost every wall. The girls are entertained by French music which comes from phonographs, radios, or the dorm's piano. At present, they are waiting for bookcases and soon, they hope to display their French flag. The girls wish to have faculty members of the French Department come to the house on a regular basis to speak to them in French, on some aspect of French life, history, culture, or the like.

Owls Elect Officers

The Owls have started off the school year on the right foot by electing an energetic and adept group of young men as their leading officers. Scott Hallock was elected president; Paul Hazard, vice president; Rod Gibeault secretary; and Dewey Caron, treasurer.

The talk on the campus among the Frosh this past week was the first conspicuous Greek event to be held this semester. The Owls "hooted" the evening of September 20th with their opening social, the 18th Annual Garbage Collectors' Cotillion. A fine array of junk, including a kitchen sink, was spread about the lawn at 440 Pearl. Lively, popular music was furnished by the locally-known group who called themselves, THE INVADERS. Dressed in "come as you are and otherwise" would never be" outfits, everyone "swung out" and had a ball.

Dave Whitney and Bill Rowe have been accepted to Grad school.

Negro Revolt

be nothing else) has made use of the traditional American methods of protest for the redress of grievances. The March "in" Washington was the epitome of these methods, and it also served to dramatize the plight of the Negro.

As Dr. Williams stated, "this is not a new Negro, but it is a new side of the Negro." The Negro is finally expressing to the white community what he has always felt. The white man is finally being forced to see the Negro as he actually is, and not as the "black-faced", happy-go-lucky watermelon-eater. The stereotype Negro is gone forever, and so is America's peace of mind, for she can no longer apathetically approach this violent subject. She will have to meet it forcefully and come to some conclusion.

Dr. Williams also made an important distinction between desegregation and integration. Desegregation is a legal issue and any dispute must be settled by law. Integration is a moral issue and it cannot be subjected to any law, but must be settled by the white Judeo-Christian conscience of each and every individual in this country.

Generations of depravation in housing, jobs, and most important, education, have left the Negro crippled in this modern age. It is the responsibility of the White and Negro community to overcome this tragedy and to help the Negro help himself. But as Dr. Williams stated, this revolution contains more than an economic or social problem. It contains an overwhelming moral problem. This problem will have to be settled now by negroes and whites who respect moral law and by the white Christian Church which has finally taken a stand on this situation, for the Negro will not wait another hundred years for the promised land. As Dr. Williams said, "White people have to be morally reconstituted to accept the Negro."

The plight of the Negro is an American problem that can be solved, and we as Americans should meet and solve the problem because of moral and practical reasons, and so that every citizen can enjoy the spirit and meaning of America.

Students' Forum

To the Editor:

The House Un-American Activities Committee, pride of the conservatives and symbol of fascism to the liberals, is again a subject for controversy. Fifty-eight American students went to Cuba on an all-expense paid trip provided by the Castro government. The HUAC subpoenaed ten students for the hearing which lead to riots, name-calling, and a wonder by people everywhere whether the United States is as democratic as it claims to be. Both the American Civil Liberties Union and the New York Times have attacked this abuse of congressional power.

The HUAC is an anti-democratic unit of a democratic country. In the 1950's, many professional people, including prominent teachers, were harassed by the HUAC for long-severed liaisons with the Communist party. For instance, a teacher in New York City was questioned before the HUAC on his past affiliations. He answered affirmatively to having been, at one time, a member of the Communist party, affirmatively to having left the party many years earlier, and negatively to whether he would name his fellow members at that time. He had the choice of naming other members and being ostracized by society or of refusing to answer and being dismissed from his teaching position. Either path was damaging. The HUAC made this man lose his livelihood, ruined his reputation, and labelled him before the country as a subversive because of something he did twenty years before.

This is typical of the HUAC, an arm of the United States government which digs up long forgotten facts from different times and conditions to slander people — all this without fear of any legal reprisal. Congressmen are guaranteed by the Constitution to be ... privileged from arrest during (their) attendance at the session of their respective Houses . . . and for any speech or debate they shall not be questioned . . .

Another victim of HUAC injustice is folksinger Pete Seeger. He was indicted for contempt of Congress for invoking his constitutional right protecting the individual from self-incrimination. The indictment cost him a great deal of time, money (legal fees,) and the freedom to travel abroad, until the decision was reversed. He is still subjected to an "unofficial" blacklisting from television appearances.

Playwright Arthur Miller underwent similar HUAC persecution. His play, "The Crucible," describes the evil of such groups using the Salem witch trials as the setting. One of the memorable lines from the play is "... it does not follow that everyone accused is part of it (witching or being red.)" This play introduced the term witch-hunting to speak of such investigating methods.

The HUAC is an outgrowth of the notorious, witch-hunting McCarthy Era. It employs McCarthy tactics against innocent victims. The Committee's paranoid character believes that everyone who breathes is a "Comsymp," (Communist Sympathizer,) because Communists breathe. Our conclusion is, the HUAC violates its constitutional trust by engaging in un-constitutional activities. THE HOUSE UN-AMERICAN ACTIVITIES COMMITTEE IS UN-AMERICAN!

Phantom Phases

A Gross Injustice

Last year, shortly after Kake Walk, a mild storm raged over our normally complacent campus. The inhabitants thereof took pens in hand and wrote fervent letters of protest that stirred one's heart. What resulted from this heated and lively exchange? Much to the joy of those most concerned with the KW production, it passed over, forgotten for another year. Rather than waiting for Kake Walk and its flagrant violation of personal rights, I would like to bring this subject to light again for further analysis and consideration. Perhaps this year something definite and constructive can be accomplished.

The whole issue was the result of a letter to the editor that said Kake Walk was a subtle form of discrimination against the Negroes. The mail that resulted from an otherwise imperturbable campus was voluminous. Sandra Clark, '63, the original letter writer, was accused of everything imaginable ranging from a promoter of sensationalism to a person with "psychopathological lesions". An examination of these arguments shows that they are fallacious, thereby substantiating the original accusation of discrimination.

The most prevalent argument was that Miss Clark was oversensitive, and that there is really no discrimination at all. I would further the proposal that we, ourselves, lack this very sensitivity that would enable us to comprehend this grave inequity. No, I don't think that the Negro is being oversensitive, at least not any more so than we would be if it were stereotyped in such a ridiculing manner. Wouldn't you be disturbed if you were publicly stereotyped as a cheap Jew or a greasy Italian? It takes a strong constitution to bypass such an attack on one's integrity and pride. Our very problem stems from the fact that we are unable to place ourselves in the Negro's place. We cannot visualize Kake Walk as they do, so, rather than try to understand the incomprehensible, we pass it off merely by saying there is no discrimination.

The next school of thought contends that Kake Walk is a part of this nation's entertainment and humor. Kake Walk is filled with beauty and symbolism, but the southern dialogue, kinky hair, and blackface are a part of an archaic tradition that is entirely out of place today. Don't get me wrong. I'm all for Kake Walk. I am only trying to further a cause that will alleviate the objectionable parts of KW. Kake Walk doesn't intentionally try to degrade the Negroes, but nevertheless, blackface does little to further the cause of American entertainment and humor. Are we so feeble that we need blackface to remind us of the origin of Kake Walk? The thrill of Kake Walk will not be lost if the blackface is omitted. There are no rules that prohibit breaking the tradition of blackface. Tradition has been broken before, and it will undoubtedly be broken many more times. Times have changed, and yet we still persist to cling to the old Negro stereotype. In this sense, we have not progressed since the initiation of KW, and with our present attitudes, it appears very unlikely that we ever will change. My friends, it would be a gross injustice if we were not to change. We must keep pace with the times in order that we respect the personal rights of others.

Lastly, let us consider the abnormal psychological tendencies that supposedly led to that first letter. One person said that Miss Clark was obviously the victim of deep-seated "psychopathological lesions". Here is the classic example of the bombastic, "dripping intelligentsia" who inhabit our campus. These masters stand ready, willing, and able to voice their "knowledge" opinion on anything and everything from their newly acquired treasure troves. Let's be realistic and leave such accusations to the qualified authorities and not to the pseudo-psychologists.

So here we are today, finally faced once again with our chronic question. There remains little question in my mind as to the course of action that we must take. We gasp in horror at the bombing of a church in Birmingham where four girls, who never reached the ripe, old age of fifteen, were killed while they were studying about love. This is racial discrimination, and it doesn't have to jump up and kiss us to tell us that it is. And yet, we can turn around and shrug off the subtle, odious discrimination of Kake Walk with a callousness that is alarming. Where is the differentiation, if any, between the two types of discrimination? The answer of course is that we do not view Kake Walk as being a form of discrimination. We lunge into wild and desperate rationalizations if someone threatens our time-honored tradition. We give little thought to the way Negroes feel. We are only selfishly interested in saving face for Kake Walk so that it will appear more colorful and attractive. For this, we are a group of spineless hypocrites.

I challenge every fraternity on this campus to live up to its so-called democratic principles and ban the subtleties of KW. It will be a brave fraternity indeed that will take that initial step towards equality. How long will you and can you continue to hold out against the rights of your fellow man?

A TROPHY will be presented to the winning entrant during the Homecoming Weekend!

by Sandi Elstein & Bobbi Bigman
Well, a wonderful weekend over. Many fraternity parties, all reported to be "great." Then all the open houses on Sunday -- reportedly, very impressive. This weekend, more of the same coming up -- Freshmen boys, when do you find time to study?

Congratulations to AEPi's Helen Chafetz and Linda Scharfstein on being chosen to represent AEPi and Phi Sig, respectively, as candidates for Greek Week Queen.

Alpha Chi has some Cupid-type news this week. Best wishes to Trudi Coggan, '65, on her engagement to Bob Blair, Theta Delta Chi, MIT; Jill Murray, '64, on her pinning by Ed Gallagher, '64, Delta Psi, and to Karen Ellingson, '66, on being pinned to Harry Truehart, '66 at Harvard.

The Alpha Chi's extend a warm welcome to their new house mother, Mrs. Moulton.

Congratulations to Gamma Phi's Lynn Keppman, '66, on her pinning to Dick Berliner, '64, AEPI.

Delta Psi's party was, by hearsay, (or was it hearsay?) WILD!

The ADPi's congratulate Pi Taylor, and Phi Mahoney, (UVM Med School) on their engagement. What's with no slacks for lunch, girls?

Confucious (who we understand is rather hard-headed) say: If egg no roll, egg is hard-boiled.)

Congratulations to AEPi's Alan Smiley on his pinning to Marcia Sacks of Hawlett, L.I. and to all the AEPis for a wonderful party last Saturday night.

Jane Adams, Alpha Delta Pi, '66, pinned to Jim Kenney, '65.

Sincere congratulations are extended to the following Tri-Delts on their recent pinning: Doty Hand to Boyd Tomasetti, Sigma Alpha-Epsilon; Maureen Qua to Gary Tencza, Sigma Phi Epsilon at U. of Mass, and Pat Keller to Dave Baker, Kappa Sigma.

Zoology Faculty Busy During Summer Vacation

Members of the University of Vermont zoology department, busy in the classroom and laboratory with the start of a new academic year, were a busy and active group during the summer months.

All were engaged in either teaching or conducting research on or off the Vermont campus during the summer.

Drs. John Lochhead and Reuben Torch were both engaged in research at the Marine Biological Laboratory in Woods Hole, Mass., Dr. Lochhead carrying out research on reproduction in the brine shrimp while Dr. Torch was studying autoradiography of nucleic acid turnover in a marine ciliated protozoan.

Dr. Paul Moody taught two graduate courses at the University of Colorado, one in human genetics and the other in modern theories of evolution, and attended a two-week course in medical genetics at Bar Harbor, Maine.

Dr. Ross Bell continued his program of collecting and cataloging beetles of the Family

Carabidae in Vermont, with emphasis on those found in higher elevations.

On campus, Dr. Charles Bond developed procedures making it possible to use the University's computing center to analyze various dimensions of the skeletons of vertebrate animals. Dr. Milton Potash taught a biology course in the Summer Session and studied factors affecting the rate of dilution of material in running water with the purpose of perfecting a biological test to measure dilution rate.

The growth of the lens of the eye in wild field mice and lab animals occupied Dr. Robert Chipman. Dr. Richard Glade, chairman of the zoology department, continued his study of factors affecting limb regeneration in amphibians, and Dr. Howard Rothstein studied relationships between cell division and DNA (deoxyribose nucleic acid) synthesis in frogs during healing following eye injury.

ROTC CADETS CHOSEN FOR FLIGHT TRAINING

by Richard Kohn

Eight Senior ROTC Cadets have been selected for Flight Training, which will enable them to graduate as licensed pilots after successful completion of the course. The potential airmen will learn to fly at the controls of a Piper Pazz, utilizing facilities at both Municipal Field in Burlington and Champlain Airport in Winooski. Their instructor will be Mr. Frank O'Connell, a much heralded pilot for Vermont Aviation Inc.

The Flight Program will consist of 35 hours of ground school, 22 1/4 hours of dual flight instruction and finally 14 1/2 hours of solo flying, during which time the cadets will qualify for their FAA pilot's license.

Their training will culminate in a cross country flight from Burlington to Albany, N.Y. and back, for which they must plot their own route, thereby testing their navigatory skills.

The cadets are given one half of their silver flight wings to designate their membership in The Flight Program. Upon graduation they will receive the remaining half of their distinctive device.

Major Albert Wenz is The Flight Coordination Officer for the program. He will be assisted by 1/Sgt. James Brady in handling the administrative part of the course.

When the trainees enter the army they will receive additional instruction which will authorize them to fly army light aircraft.

The program has gained steadily in popularity over the past few years, but the rigid physical requirements for the course have kept the class at a minimal number. Two years ago there were five participants, last year six cadets took part in the program and this year the number has increased to eight.

The Flight Training Program is undoubtedly one of the most attractive facets of the ROTC department and will assuredly continue to grow in popularity and scope.

The eight cadets enrolled in the 1963-64 Flight Training Program are as follows:

The date of the Military Ball has been changed from Nov. 22 to March 20.

Former Dean Clifford At Rutgers

Former Dean of Men Earl Clifford is now Director of Student Affairs at Rutgers University.

The death of Dr. John C. Huden, professor of education at the University and an authority on American Indians of the East, occurred July 11 at his desk in Waterman Building. He was director of the Testing Service.

Recently published was his 403-page compilation of "Indian Place Names of New England."

President Fey had a triple role at the inauguration last May 25 of John W. McConnell as president of the University of New Hampshire. He was a delegate from the University of Vermont and from the National Association of State Universities. He was a delegate, also, from the Association of State Universities and Land-Grant Colleges, and as a member of the executive committee, brought greetings from the Association.

MAKING ALUMINUM SLIPPERY-ER

Industrial designers are excited about a great advance in lubricants from G-E research. Aluminum, though popular with metal fabricators, has always been tough to lubricate. A new family of lubricants now developed has friction coefficients about 1/5 those of conventional lubricants. This produces an affinity for aluminum which assures a wear-resistant film that adheres to the surface.

P.S. During 1962, 6,871 G-E employees gave $330,544 to the colleges they had attended in appreciation for what their education had done for them. This was matched dollar for dollar by the General Electric Foundation.

ENGLISH AUTHOR LECTURES AT UVM

"The Status of God in the Space Age" was the topic in the lecture series held at the University of Vermont.

Dr. Roger Pilkington, a distinguished English author and lecturer, spoke on the above subject on Wednesday evening (Oct. 2) at 8 in the lower lounge of the Waterman Building. All talks in the lecture series are free and open to the public.

Dr. Pilkington's lecture began with Boyle's position that science, as a particular category of truth, must inevitably be an increasing revelation of the divine, and that science is giving insights obtainable in no other way into e.g. the nature of the universe as life and awareness in the making, the place of pain within a system of which the keynote is nevertheless one of order and love.

Formerly a research worker in genetics at Cambridge, Dr. Pilkington has been a full-time writer since 1954. He is editor of Quantum books in the Macmillan scientific series, is a regular contributor to a wide variety of journals, and is the author of 32 books. His books reflect his interest in science-religion, and in his hobby, boating. Some of his titles include "Robert Boyle, Father of Chemistry"; "The Ways of the Sea"; "The Ways of the Air"; "Biology, Man and God"; "World Without End"; and "Infinite Majesty". He has written seven volumes about traveling via small boat in Europe and has a number of children's books to his credit.

During 1962-63, he was chairman of the London Missionary Society. He is a consultant to the London Marriage Guidance Council, is a member of the technical committees of British Council of Churches, and is governor of three London schools. He holds his master's and doctorate degrees from Cambridge.

WORDS: THEIR CAUSE AND CURE

Today let us take up the subject of etymology (or entomology, as it is sometimes called) which is the study of word origins (or insects, as they are sometimes called).

Where are word origins (insects) to be found? Well sir, sometimes words are proper names which have passed into the language. Take, for instance, the words used in electricity: ampere was named after its discoverer, the Frenchman Andre Marie Ampere (1775-1836); similarly, ohm was named after the German G.S. Ohm (1781-1854), watt after the Scot James Watt (1736-1819), and bulb after the American Fred C. Bulb (1843-1912).

There is, incidentally, quite a poignant little story about Mr. Bulb. Until Bulb's invention, all illumination was provided by gas, which was named after its inventor Milton T. Gas

Many fine citizens were severely injured who, strange to tell, had been Bulb's roommate at Cal Tech! In fact, strange to tell, the third man sharing the room with Bulb and Gas was also one whose name burns bright in the annals of illumination—Walter Candle!

The three roommates were inseparable companions in college. After graduation all three did research in the problems of artificial light, which at this time did not exist. All America used to go to bed with the chickens, and many fine citizens were, alas, severely injured falling off the roost.

Well sir, the three comrades—Bulb, Gas, and Candle—promised to be friends forever when they left school, but success, alas, spoiled all that. First Candle invented the candle, got rich, and forgot his old friends. Then Gas invented gas, got rich, bankrupted Candle, and forgot his old friends. Then Bulb invented the bulb, got rich, bankrupted Gas, and forgot his old friends.

Candle and Gas, bitter and impoverished at the ages respectively of 75 and 71, went to sea as respectively the world's oldest and second oldest cabin boy. Bulb, rich and grand, also went to sea, but he went in style—as a first-class passenger on luxury liners.

Well sir, strange to tell, all three were aboard the ill-fated Lusitania when she was sunk in the North Atlantic. And strange to tell, when they were swimming for their lives after the shipwreck, all three clambered aboard the same dinghy!

Well sir, chastened and made wiser by their brush with peril, they fell into each other's arms and wept and exchanged forgiveness and became fast friends all over again.

For three years they drifted in the dinghy, shaking hands and singing the Cal Tech rouser all the while. Then, at long last, they spied a passing liner and were taken aboard.

They remained fast friends for the rest of their days, which, I regret to report, were not many, because the liner which picked them up was the Titanic.

What a pity that Marlboros were not invented during the lifetimes of Bulb, Gas, and Candle. Had there been Marlboros, these three friends never would have grown apart because they would have realized how much, despite their differences, they still had in common. I mean to say that Marlboros can be lit by candle, by gas, and by electricity, and no matter how you light them, you always get a lot to like—a filter, a flavor, a pack or box that makes anyone—including Bulb, Gas, and Candle—settle back and forswear pettiness and smile the sweet smile of friendship on all who pass!

ROTC DEPARTMENT ANNOUNCES DMS'S

Cadets Houghton, Rowland, Montague, and Young learn how to stack M-I's. (Credit: U.S. Army photograph)

by Richard Kohn

Last summer the 69 men who compose the senior class of the Advanced ROTC Corps underwent their basic training at Fort Devens, Mass. The summer encampment was six weeks long and was designed to expose the future officers to both administrative and combat situations which they might encounter while on active duty. This year's UVM senior cadets sustained the admirable record established by their predecessors at Fort Devens by their competitive spirit and willingness to cooperate. During the summer it became increasingly evident that the cadets from UVM were equal (and in many cases far superior) to advanced units from many universities east of the Mississippi.

The program at Fort Devens was such that it tested the cadets in every conceivable way in an attempt to instill in each man the serious and responsible business of command. Many men found themselves cast in unfamiliar roles: as leader of a combat patrol directed to capture and incarcerate an enemy soldier for interrogation; as a company commander responsible for the equipping, instruction and well being of his men; or as a sentry occupying an isolated post in anticipation of an aggressor attack.

A cadet learns rapidly that while the army is quick to present a man with a task, the individual must decide for himself how it can best be achieved. The decision that must be made in such a circumstance is invaluable in building self-confidence, and of course it follows that by creating a situation which requires immediate and decisive thought, a leader will emerge who combines intelligence and resourcefulness to get the job done.

During the summer instruction, continual stress is placed upon the difference between "leading" your subordinates and "driving" them. An officer must concern himself with the welfare of his men if he expects them to produce good results for him.

The summer encampment then, combines theory and practice in the fundamentals of leadership, a valuable and satisfying experience which can be applied to many walks of life.

Twenty-two of the UVM advanced corps were nominated by their instructors last summer as distinguished military students, an honor which is highly competed for at summer camp. Twelve of these nominees received their DMS upon their return to UVM this Fall, and there is promise that more of the nominees will be so honored in the near future. The names of those members of the corps who have been designated Distinguished Military Students are as follows:

Jzyk, Richardson, Toussaint, Weisberg, Schonwalder, Bedford, Keller, Quesnel, Kline, Fraser, Davidson W., and Russo, R.

The command positions in the Cadet Brigade for the Fall Semester have also been assigned with the individual's performance at Fort Devens in mind. The Brigade and Battalion command assignments are as follows:

Nota Bene

Mr. Van Benthuyzen, Public Relations Director, has stressed the significance of the use of Identification Cards when purchasing food on campus.

Possession of an I.D. card will excuse University students and staff members from the recently expanded Vermont ruling which requires a tax on all meals in excess of fourteen cents. Personnel of Saga Foods or the Dairy Bar may request presentation of cards when uncertainty as to eligibility for exemption occurs.

Honor Students Elected

Three seniors in the College of Agriculture and Home Economics have been elected Honors Students by the Honors Committee of that College. They are:

Ashley Jewell, who is interested in international agriculture and is planning to engage in development work in Bolivia after graduation; Lucian Zelazny, an agronomy major; and Albert Stevens, whose principal interest lies in dairy science.

All these men are now engaged in special honors research projects with members of the staff.

The program in the College of Agriculture and Home Economics is designed to provide an environment for superior students which will insure that they are challenged by the most advanced work their talents will allow. Their curricula are developed by the Honors Committee in conjunction with an adviser and are relatively free of the usual restrictions. In general the student is encouraged to work independently and as an individual.

Budget Approved For Agriculture Research

The Board of Trustees of the University of Vermont today approved an operating budget for the University's agricultural service and research divisions, and were told by University President John T. Fey that it marked the last time the budget would be brought to the Board separately from the general University budget approved traditionally at the June meeting.

In June, the Board gave tentative approval to a general University budget of $8,333,000, and the Board stuck by that figure here today, although it means a potential deficit of $100,000, the amount cut from the University's state appropriation in the closing days of the Legislature.

President Fey told the Trustees that "several factors" appear to be working in the University's favor in terms of offsetting the deficit. First, he said, was the fact that it now appeared the University's enrollment would be up over expectations, providing an increase in expected income from tuition.

Also of importance, he said, was a "more favorable" attitude on the part of the federal government toward increasing overhead allowed in connection with research contracts.

Hood Foundation Scholarships Awarded

The Hood Dairy Foundation has awarded scholarships to four University of Vermont students for the 1963-64 academic year.

Recipients are Earl Stanley, Enosburg Falls; Nathan Drown, St. Johnsbury; Judith Smith, S. Newbury, and Edward Payne, Bridport. Stanley and Drown are both seniors and received Hood scholarships last year. Miss Smith is a junior and Payne a sophomore.

The Hood Foundation awards 15 scholarships each year to the six colleges of agriculture in New England. Students must have shown scholastic achievement, leadership qualities, good personal character, and be enrolled in a major with a direct interest in dairying. The scholarship provides payment of the tuition and general fees.

Stanley is a general agriculture major and is a member of Alpha Zeta (agricultural honorary) and Alpha Gamma Rho fraternities.

Drown is majoring in agricultural economics and had an 87.38 average in his major field last year. He is also a member of Alpha Zeta.

Miss Smith is an animal and dairy production major. Payne is majoring in agricultural education.

Move For Maintenance

The Board of Trustees of the University of Vermont has authorized the University to undertake the consolidation of maintenance departments at Ethan Allen Air Force Base.

UVM President Fey noted that the maintenance units are now scattered on campus and would in any case eventually have to be given new centralized quarters.

He said if the "Ethan Allen Air Base opportunity had not come along, we'd have had to build a major facility at substantial cost."

He said the move would involve carpentry, electrical, motor, paint, plumbing shops and storage.

Finally, the UVM President said the University would "hold back" on some planned faculty appointments, although he added "we cannot continue to do so indefinitely."

The Board approved operating budgets of $611,732 for the Vermont Agricultural Experiment Station; $847,288 for the Vermont Agricultural Extension Service; and $107,620 for Related Agricultural Services.

Dr. Fey said the budgets for the special research and service divisions of the University's College of Agriculture and Home Economics, had traditionally come before the Board at the August meeting, because the amounts available in federal funds have generally not been known in June, when the general university budget has been considered.

He noted the amounts to be available from federal funds are not known at this date, and said it seemed reasonable to bring an estimated budget for the divisions before the Board in June, when the Board considers a general university budget also based on estimates of income to be available.

He noted that the Experiment Station would operate on a state

Honors For Deceased Colleagues

Members of the University of Vermont Board of Trustees paid tribute in resolutions here today honoring Frank M. Stanton and Harry M. Spicer.

The resolutions noted that "Harry Spicer's devoted service to the University was always true to and typical of the high standards of representation the Vermont Legislature has given to the University in founded in 1791."

Mr. Spicer was elected to the UVM Board in 1959. He died Aug. 12, 1963.

The Board praised Mr. Stanton for serving the University of Vermont "with distinguished vigor," noting that "he brought with him to our Green Mountain State the enthusiasm for constructive activity which characterized his distinguished career."

Mr. Stanton served on the UVM Board from the time of his appointment by then Governor Stafford, until his death on July 4, 1963. He had been its vice chairman, and today the Board unanimously elected Lawrence H. Averill to succeed him in that office. Mr. Averill has been a member of the Board since 1960.

The UVM Board also approved using funds contributed by friends of Mr. Stanton for the purchase of books for the Bailey Library.

Science Facilities

The University of Vermont will apply for a planning loan for new facilities for life and physical sciences under a federal program which permits such a planning loan to be deducted from any future federal grant or loan for construction.

The action today is based on recent passage by the U.S. House of Representatives of a $1,195,000,000 bill to provide federal building loans and grants for college classrooms, laboratories and libraries.

President Fey indicated the University would apply for a federal grant for the new science facilities, and that UVM would seek to match the federal grant from private sources.

He said the science facilities have been considered a need in the University's long-range building plans, and are among projects recommended by the Board of State Buildings.

appropriation of $282,940 and an estimated federal appropriation of $328,792. The Extension Service will receive state support of $397,300, county support of $104,247, and estimated federal support totalling $303,110. Related Agricultural Services - mainly testing services provided for Vermont agriculture, and including the testing of winners at the race track at Pownall -- will receive $107,620 in state funds. Most of this will be returned through fees.

In response to a question from the Board, Dr. Fey said he did not believe the $100,000 deficit in state funds expected this year would adversely affect the University's efforts to keep abreast of faculty salary progress nationally.

He said, however, that it appeared the University would need to increase out-of-state tuition and possibly in-state tuition as well in 1964-65 to offset a deficit in funds the University sought from the State.

He told the Board that he would prefer to take up that question at the October meeting when, he said, the numbers of in-state and out-of-state students enrolling would be known.

Enrollment Up Again

In a report to the Trustees on enrollment, President Fey said it now looked as though the University's total enrollment would be up again this fall, from last fall's all-time high of about 3800 to 3900 or 4000.

He cited fewer cancellations than ordinarily would be expected "based on past experience," and said that an increase in the number of Vermont women students enrolling also appeared to be a factor.

He said that "our admissions officer, Harold Collins, advises that the increasing enrollment pressures nationally may be beginning to be felt by Vermont residents," more particularly by women, since competition is increasingly keen for college places open to women students.

Student Arrested

OXFORD, Miss. (CPS) -- Cleve McDowell, the only Negro student at the University of Mississippi was arrested and put in jail last Monday on a charge of carrying a concealed weapon.

McDowell was also suspended by the school after his arrest, pending a hearing by the school where McDowell will have a chance to appeal on his own behalf.

A school official reported that there is a regulation against carrying a concealed weapon, but it does not carry an automatic penalty of expulsion.

The suspension of McDowell leaves Ole Miss with no Negro students attending classes.

McDowell is a law student at Ole Miss and an honors graduate of Jackson State College. He was ordered enrolled at Ole Miss by United States District Judge Sidney Mize of Biloxi, Miss.

Personnel Changes

The University of Vermont Board of Trustees today approved appointment of 20 to the University's faculty accepted the resignation of seven faculty members and approved leaves of absence for Norman J. Slamecka, of the department of psychology, to serve as a visiting professor at Dartmouth; for UVM baseball mentor, Ralph Lapointe, who will accept a State Department invitation to teach basketball in the Mali Republic.

LITTLE MAN ON CAMPUS

Yale Says No Penn Says Ok

PHILADELPHIA (CPA) -- Five days after Yale University's Political Union withdrew an invitation to speak, it was announced by Dr. Jefferson B. Fordham, dean of the Penn Law School that Governor George C. Wallace was scheduled to speak on State's Rights to the Law School Forum.

Last Thursday, the Yale Political Union withdrew its invitation to Governor Wallace at the request of acting president and provost, Kingman Brewster, Jr. Brewster said Wallace would hurt "the confidence of the New Haven community and the feelings of the New Haven Negro population."

Wallace was originally scheduled to speak Nov. 4 at Yale. Students are now circulating petitions that protest the withdrawal of the invitation. These will be presented to Brewster along with requests to reinstate the Governor.

Wallace's press secretary said that he had heard the Governor might again be invited and said that Wallace would probably accept.

The Penn speech is scheduled for Nov. 6. "That invitation is still with standing," Dr. Fordham said.

"He has been invited and it has not been withdrawn. This is a student responsibility; they have invited the gentleman here. As things stand now the gentleman has the invitation and it hasn't been revoked," Dr. Fordham concluded.

An invitation to speak at Fordham University in New York City was also withdrawn when university officials learned of it.

Wallace is scheduled to speak at the University of Minnesota on the invitation of the Minnesota Student Association, the university department of Concerts and Lectures, and a local radio and television station of Feb. 17.

Students Sign Oath

UNIVERSITY, Ala. (CPS) -- The oath signed by all students at the University of Alabama before they could register for the 1963-64 school year was obtained recently from the administration. It reads:

"As a student at the University of Alabama during the 1963-64 Regular Session, I recognize the necessity for the continuation of stringent regulations governing student conduct during this period of potential crises, and I hereby agree to abide by all such regulations as the University of Alabama authorities may deem necessary for the maintenance of the institution's academic integrity and to insure maximum personal safety and security of all concerned.

"In keeping with the finest traditions of the University and with the full knowledge and understanding of the necessity for this action, I pledge to refrain from any conduct which would in any fashion contribute to disorder. I shall at all times conduct myself in such manner as to avoid all activities which would be in conflict with the high standards expected of University students.

"I certify that I do not now have in my possession firearms or other types of weapons, and further certify that I shall avoid having such in my possession for the duration of these special security measures.

"I will refrain from gratuitous or non-gratuitous service with the news media in matters expressly touching on race relations and the reporting of or photography of Negro students or Negro applicants at the University. I understand, however, that this in no way prohibits me from serving in the capacity of reporter or photographer in fields other than those mentioned above.

"Furthermore, I understand that a breach of this pledge on my part which is found to be in violation of the high standards set for University students may subject me to severe disciplinary measures."

Among the signers of the oath was Mel Meyer, "student editor of the year" last year, who signed under protest. Signing of the oath was a condition for readmission to the University for the year. Meyer has interpreted the oath to mean that he is unable to write about any racial matters in the State of Alabama for the Collegiate Press Service.

Gifts and Grants

The University of Vermont acknowledged gifts and grants totalling $840,000 at the meeting of the Board of Trustees here on Saturday, (Aug. 24).

Most of the total represents gifts and/or grants for research projects or for purposes specified by the donors.

Cats Go Bear Hunting In Maine

UVM Halts Army B 12-0

Out-flanking the Army - Dean Kent sweeps back on an up-the-middle reverse as Tom Mongeon and unidentified Catamount make the block that frees Kent. (Credit: S.P.S.)

Last Saturday, at Centennial Field, the UVM Catamounts topped the West Point B Team, 12-0, in the first home game of the season. The defensive strength of Vermont again out-classed its opponent's as the green and gold "brick wall" repelled every attempt and threat the Cadets made. A mere 25 yards rushing has been gained by Catamount opposition so far this season.

The Cats struck twice within the first 17 minutes of play. The first tally consisted of Deane Kent's recovery of an Army fumble in the latter's end zone. The situation was set up after Army's Mike O'Grady intercepted a Jim Brennan pass on the West Point two yard line. On the first play, speedy tailback, Ed Noble, fumbled, and Kent salvaged the pigskin for six points. The point after the touchdown, attempted by Paul Toussaint, was blocked.

The Catamount defense then stopped every Army effort. Leading the crushing wave of tacklers were Ron Hertel, Rusty Brink, George Oelze, Ken Andrade and Paul Toussaint. The West Point aerial attack was stymied by the exceptional pass defense of Scot Fitz. The Sophomore safety engulfed two Army bombs, thusly ending two possible threats. Altogether, the Cats allowed the Militia-men only five yards rushing.

In the second quarter, Richie Reynolds capped a 53 yard Vermont drive with a 26 yard jaunt off tackle for the final scoring of the game, as Toussaint's second try for an extra point was also blocked.

The second half amounted to nothing more than a defensive tie as both teams held their opponents scoreless.

Moving the Cliffordmen offensively were Ken Burton, Jim Brennan, Richie Reynolds and Jack O'Dea. O'Dea, a smooth, reliable sophomore quarterback, has shown great potential and is nearing a starting berth. Since Chris Greer has seen little action, due to an injury, O'Dea appears to be the most capable passer on the squad. Starting quarterback Jim Brennan, a tough runner and rugged defensive back besides, has had some trouble with his passing eye.

This, as shown in Saturday's conquest, is his greatest drawback of the Catamount attack. Much of this week's practice will be devoted to the improvement of the Cats' passing game.

As the season stands, UVM is undefeated with a 2-0 record. This weekend, they travel to the University of Maine for an encounter with the Black Bears. Much importance rides on this game, as it is their first Yankee Conference tilt for the '63 season.

At present, the Bears are resting in last place, having been beaten by both Massachusetts and Rhode Island in Yankon competition. Here's hoping that the Cats can keep them there.

Reynolds Honored

Places On ECAC Team Of The Week

University of Vermont fullback Richie Reynolds has been named to the ECAC All-East College Division "Team of the Week".

Reynolds was the outstanding ground gainer on the field in Vermont's 14-6 opening season triumph against American International College at Springfield, Mass., on Saturday. The 6-1, 200-pound back from West New York, N.J., bulled his way for 99 yards in 13 carries, including a 45-yard dash that set up the Catamounts' second touchdown.

Reynolds was the second leading runner for Coach Bob Clifford last fall, gaining 193 yards in 47 rushes for a 4.1 average. He scored three TDs.

An added attraction to being named to this year's team is that each selectee will be awarded a scroll by the ECAC.

Also named to the first team was Norwich halfback Tony Campano.

Donnelly Shoots 65 Linkmen Beat MIT

Coach Donnelly's golfers posed a problem indeed for the M.I.T. engineers who, despite their mathematical genius, just could not come up with the right formula for victory. But John (Moose) Donnelly, himself no engineer, certainly found the correct formula with his masterful six under par, sixty-five (65).

The six man squad, composed of Donnelly, Jim Nixon, Mike Fay, Joe Zicherman, Bob Opaleski, and Dave (Mouse) Cioffi moved over the Oakley Country Club's narrow fairways and cement-hard greens with poise and precision.

The par 71 course was especially to the liking of Donnelly, whose booming drives and accurate putting proved to be too much for M.I.T.'s number one man Jim Lakin, who carded a respectable 75. The Moose's spectacular 65 was just one shot off the course record of 64. He holed 8 birdies, 8 pars, and 2 bogeys in his pro-like performance, and narrowly missed a hole-in-one on the par 3 fifth hole.

Rookie Nixon scored a fine 77 for the Catamount squad and easily defeated his opponent Tom Lukitz (80). Opaleski (80) and Cioffi (83) also subdued their competitors Joe Barnes (83) and Rick Shoemaker (85), while Faye (84) and Zicherman (88) were beaten by engineers Camer (83) and Sardi (86).

The team travels to Watch Hill, Rhode Island, this week-end to vie in the Eastern College Athletic Conference.

Monday, October 7, has been set as the date of the frosh fall golf tournament. Participants must sign up at the Athletic Office to avoid green fees.

This year's performances: Put up a good fight against powerful UMass at home but lost 14-7 in last quarter. Same thing happened with URI. The Black Bears lost 20-16 in the last quarter when their last ditch effort ended with an intercepted pass. The Bears are big and hard to run through. Their backs are not exceptionally fast. Forecast: This will be the Catamount's first real test and also their first Conference game. If they show the aggressiveness and hustle they have so far this season, and if they put up the fine defense they have thus far, the Cats will come home from Orono with a victory.

Blackface Eliminated By Fraternities

Vt. Conference Committee Announces Speakers

The Vermont Conference Committee would like to announce their speakers for the tenth "Vermont Conference." James Farmer, Stephen Spingarn, John Lewis, and Louis E. Lomax will speak on the topics and now-prevailing issues of discrimination, prejudice, and segregation which will form the core of the Conference.

James Farmer has been one of the pioneers in developing non-violent, direct action methods for race relations problems. He was one of the founders of the Congress of Racial Equality (CORE) in 1942 and served as the first National Chairman. Mr. Farmer, a former program director of the NAACP, has lectured extensively and written for numerous publications including the Crisis, Fellowship, World Frontiers, Hadassah News and others. He is now the National Director of CORE.

Stephen J. Spingarn was active in the Roosevelt and Truman Administrations and is, at this time, involved in personal affairs. From 1934-1942 Mr. Spingarn was Attorney to the U.S. Treasury Department and Special Assistant to the Attorney General. When the war years interrupted his work with the government, Mr. Spingarn channeled his efforts toward the U.S. Army Intelligence Staff, attained the rank of Lieutenant Colonel, and received several decorations for merit and valor. In 1948 he helped draft the Truman Civil Rights Program and from 1949-1950 was, in effect, Legislative Council to the White House. More recently he served as National Director of Special Activities for the Kefauver Vice-Presidential Campaign in 1956 and as a member of Senator Kefauver's Executive and Advisory Committee.

John Lewis, at 25, is the youngest of civil rights leaders. He is presently the Chairman of the Student Nonviolent Coordinating Committee, succeeding Charles McDew and becoming the third chairman of the Student Committee known popularly as SNICK. Mr. Lewis is a former philosopher at Fisk University, Nashville, Tennessee and a graduate of the American Baptist Seminary. A member of the militant Nashville Group, Mr. Lewis is one of the leaders produced by this group to further the struggles for civil rights.

Louis E. Lomax is the fourth "delegate" to the "Vermont Conference." In 1960 his book, The Reluctant African, was acclaimed as "one of the decade's more impressive and shocking closeups of crisis: an American Negro journalist's first-hand report on the story of racism and revolution raging through Africa from Cairo to Capetown." Mr. Lomax's career as a professional writer began with the Afro-American. After graduating from Paine College in Augusta, Georgia, he did further study at Yale University, subsequently becoming a staff writer for the Chicago American. Mr. Lomax's

After extended deliberation and discussion, the Inter-Fraternity Council and its constituent fraternities have decided that there are certain aspects of Kake Walk which could be construed as being offensive to some members of our community. Although these aspects were never intended to be, in any sense, derogatory, the Inter-Fraternity Council, in its meeting of October 8, 1963, has voted to eliminate the use of blackface make-up and kinky-haired wigs from the costume of the walkers, who represent the sixteen UVM fraternities. It is not felt that these modifications, which are effective immediately, should detract either from the traditional spirit of Kake Walk or from the highly skilled performance of the walkers.

articles have appeared in Harpur's, Life, The Nation, and The New Leader. In 1959 he joined Mike Wallace's news staff in New York and became the first member of his race to appear on television as a newsmen.

"Vermont Conference" is scheduled for Tuesday, Wednesday, and Thursday; November 12, 13, and 14, at 7:30 P.M. in the Ira Allen Chapel. Each night one man (or two) will present his material to the audience, after which the audience will be invited to participate in an informal discussion and question and answer period. The Conference Committee feels that this year's series of lectures should prove informative to all who attend. It would like to see the kind of attendance that warrants being present at a controversial conference as this.

Bye, Bye Blackface

At this time last week the prevailing concern on campus was whether or not this year's Kake Walk would have the blackface, etc., which many people on the campus (the CYNIC included) and in the community felt to be an injustice. This past Tuesday, through the efforts of many individuals and groups, it was decided once and for all that the sixty-seventh Kake Walk would not have blackface.

To the credit of the UVM fraternity system the entire controversy was settled rapidly, democratically, and justly by their representative organ, the Inter-Fraternity Council. On Thursday, October 3, the representatives of each fraternity and representatives of the administration met with Dr. Alfred Haynes, professor in the Medical College and President of the Vermont N.A.A.C.P., and discussed the blackface question in an open and admirable manner. Each fraternity president then returned to his respective house and at the Monday night meeting introduced a motion abolishing the use of

Greek Week Workshops Reviewed

By Janet Hadda

On October 2, as part of the Greek Week activities, workshops were held to discuss various aspects of sorority and fraternity life. Representatives of each sorority and fraternity were present at all the meetings.

At Kappa Alpha Theta sorority, Dean Kelly of Middlebury College, led a discussion about "Scholarship and the Sorority." It was stated that it is the duty of the sorority to arouse the intellectual curiosity of their pledges; this can be accomplished by such activities as forming wider interest groups on campus and by talking of more worldly matters at dinner than "I" and "me".

Above all, stress was placed on the fact that a student's numerical grades are not everything; intellectual pursuits are as important, if not more so.

The topic at Alpha Delta Pi sorority was "Rushing" and was led by Mrs. Wamboldt. The discussion was concerned with "the ideals of the sorority as a whole and of the individual girls within." In order to solve some rushing problems, a dormitory-representative system has been set up. Two girls from different sororities will be living in each dormitory and will work together on behalf of sororities as a whole. Also discussed was the possibility of having open houses in the fall, thus bringing sorority life as a whole before the freshman women.

At Alpha Gamma Rho fraternity, Dr. Perrine was chairman of a talk about "Pledge Training". One of the main points brought up is that the brothers have a responsibility to their pledges in scholarship and all personal conduct. Also discussed was the opinion that the entire pledge program should be constructive.

The houses must be interested in the pledges' grades. This can be done by: 1. Requiring pledges to study twenty hours each week; 2. Posting scholarship review boards in the fraternity houses, and numerous other devices of this nature. It was emphasized, however, that "all pledges have to shape up at times and should be expected to."

At Alpha Epsilon Pi fraternity, the topic "Fraternal Responsibility" was led by Robert Krovitz, Director of Public Relations, Alpha Epsilon Pi fraternity. The responsibility of the fraternity to the pledges involves encouraging them to study - this can be done by forming regular study hours, study halls, and by "tutoring your brother." (The last suggestion, however, was rejected by some fraternities who believe that studying is the individual's own responsibility.)

bility of fraternities to the community, keeping the houses attractive was mentioned as one necessity and helping in fund drives was suggested (the president of the IFC alumni disagreed with the second proposal...)

The chairman of the workshop at Tau Epsilon Phi fraternity was Sidney Sontag, Executive Secretary of Tau Epsilon Phi fraternity; the topic was "Rushing". The four main points discussed were: 1. The advantages and disadvantages of restrictive vs. non-restrictive rushing; 2. Means of introducing freshmen to the fraternity; 3. The best method for getting the fraternity ready for rushing, and 4. Should the fraternities rush the freshmen or vice versa?

It was Mr. Sontag's opinion that restrictive rushing is poor and that deferred rushing (preventing students from pledging until second semester) serves no purpose.

Freshmen may be introduced to the fraternity by rushing booklets, parties, banquets, smokers, and other displays.

In order to prepare the fraternity for rushing, apathy toward the freshmen must be done away with. Also it was decided that the fraternities should rush the freshmen, since no fraternity is good enough to sit back and await all the eager freshmen.

Parents' Weekend

Parents' Weekend, a new UVM creation, is designed as a time in which students can spend with their parents without having dates or homecoming activities interfering. This weekend was brought about by the efforts of the Student Association and the Family Associates, who also helped with the finances.

The weekend of October the 11 was chosen mainly because it is midway between Freshman Orientation and Thanksgiving Vacation, and also, so the authorities say, it is to be the peak of the foliage season.

The weekend activities will begin with a Coffee Hour at Billings Center, Friday evening from 7:30-10:00 P.M. Saturday, from 8:00-12 noon, there will be Departmental Open Houses, and also a Parents' Registration at Billings Center. Lunch will be served in the various university dining rooms from 11:00-1:00, and after lunch, at 1:30, the UVM-Rhode Island game will begin. During this time there will be a presentation of blankets to parents coming the greatest distance and parents with the most children enrolled at UVM. After the game there will be open houses at the residence halls, and the fraternity and sorority houses. After dinner, which will be served from 5:00-6:30 P.M., there will be a Parents' Meeting at Billings Center. The highlight of the weekend will follow, Dr. John T. Fey, President of the University of Vermont, will speak, after which there will be a panel-discussion. The topic will be "Adjustment of the Student to UVM." The panel consists of Dr. Schoonmaker of the engineering department; Dr. Gaylord of the Dept. of Agriculture; Dr. Boller of the Dept. of Education, who will serve as moderator; a fourth member from the College of Arts and Sciences; and two students - Carolyn McCarthy and Bill Haugen, who are the co-chairmen of Parents' Weekend. Saturday evening, there will also be an open house at 8:00 P.M. at the Hillel Foundation.

The weekend will end on Sunday with religious services and an open house at the various religious organizations.

A lot of work has been put into the planning of this weekend, and now the rest is up to the students. It is up to the student body of UVM to make this first separate Parents' weekend a success and one which the following classes will proudly continue.

The Greeks In Olympic Competition

Shades of old Athens came alive Saturday afternoon as representatives from fifteen fraternities competed in feats of skills and strength. First in a dramatic series of events was the rope pull. Miss Judy Greene, Greek Week Queen representing Theta Chi, started the events. In the preliminaries Delta Psi ousted AEPI, AGR skunked TEP, Acacia bamboozled Sig Phi, Sig Nu smashed Phi Sigma Delta, SAE whalloped Phi Mu Delta, Theta Chi pickled Phi Delta Theta, and Sigma Phi Epsilon pruned Lambda Iota. Going into the second round Sig Phi defeated SAE, AGR mashed Gig Nu, and Acacia razzied Delta Psi. Climaxing the event was AGR's magnificent victory when they not only pulled over Theta Chi and Sig Phi Ep, but also Queen Judy and her dozen red roses.

The next event was the three-legged race which turned out to be three too many legs for many couples. Victorious in this display of coordination and speed were Jeff Graham of Sig Ep and his partner Sue Wesoly of Pi Phi.

The next olympic game was the bicycle race. Two members from each sorority, starting from chairs and leaping to their bicycles like Roy Rogers mounting Trigger, raced around the track. Pi Phi again captured the honors making it two wins in a row. Doing the riding for Pi Phi were Marcy Bullock and Karen Preiss.

The final event of the day was the chariot race. In the first heat Phi Sigma Delta defeated Phi Mu Delta, Sigma Phi, and Sig Nu. Winning the second heat over Theta Chi, ATO, and TEP was Phi Delta Theta. In the third heat were Phi Delta Theta, AEPI, AGR, and Sigma Phi Epsilon with Sig Phi Ep bringing home the honors. In the last heat SAE beat Acacia, and Lambda Iota. In the finals Delta Psi really went all out to win. Their charioteer fell over but never once did they hesitate. At the finish the cart was upright and Ben Hur managed to regain his position in the cart so Delta Psi won fair and square. This concluded the olympic games of Greek Week. Awards were given to the victors at the dance in the evening.

"Oats" And Other Paintings By Colburn

Francis Colburn's "Oats" (1962).

(Credit: SPS)

A new group of paintings by Professor Francis Colburn, chairman of the UVM art department, is currently on exhibit at the Fleming Museum. Completed during Professor Colburn's year sabbatical of painting, study and travel, the works reflect the influences of both native and foreign scenes.

"Nature's paintbrush," so to speak, is the dominant theme of those paintings in the collection which feature Vermont and California scenery. Strong, vibrant colors highlight such works as "Goldenrod" and "California Canyon," while "November" and "Waterfalls" illustrate an interesting integration of a cubist pattern in the fields and the mountains.

"Cats of Rome" is unique in the collection of "native nature scenes," in that it portrays a man made monument on foreign soil. The scene of cats roaming the ruins of the Theatre of Marcellus in Rome is a striking study in contrast.

Free exhibit will continue at Fleming thru Oct. '5.

PQT's Offered December 7

Applications are now available for National Security Agency's Professional Qualification Test, which is to be administered on the campus of University of Vermont on December 7, 1963.

Unusual and challenging careers to college graduates at all levels from the baccalaureate to the doctorate are offered by the National Security Agency. The wide variety of NSA duties and the changing needs for projects require specialists who are not only well trained but who also possess a high degree of flexibility and ingenuity. The Professional Qualification Test has been especially constructed to provide date to supplement other available information, such as college records, recommendations, and interviews.

College graduates with majors from many liberal arts fields can be utilized by NSA. Any U.S. citizen and holder of or candidate for at least a bachelor's degree by June, 1964 is eligible to take the Professional Qualification Test. Engineering, mathematics, and physics applicants need not take the PQT, but should contact the Placement Director for an appointment with a visiting NSA representative. Because of the classified nature of NSA operations, all applicants for employment are subject to a thorough background investigation.

Interested students should complete the application contained in the Professional Qualification Test Bulletin of Information, which is available from the following:

BOOM!

Today, foregoing levity, let us turn our keen young minds to the principal problem facing American colleges today: the population explosion. Only last week four people exploded in Cleveland, Ohio—one of them while carrying a plate of soup. In case you're thinking such a thing couldn't happen anywhere but in Cleveland, let me tell you about two other cases last week—a 45-year-old man in Provo, Utah, and a 19-year-old girl in Northfield, Minnesota. And, in addition, there was a near miss in High Point, North Carolina—an eight-year-old boy who was saved only by the quick thinking of his cat, Fred, who pushed the phone off the hook with his muzzle and dialed the department of weights and measures. (It would, perhaps, have been more logical for Fred to dial the fire department, but one can hardly expect a cat to summon a fire engine which is followed by a Dalmatian, can one?)

But I digress. The population explosion, I say, is upon us. It is, of course, cause for concern but not for alarm, because I feel sure that science will ultimately find an answer. After all,

Four people exploded in Cleveland has not science in recent years brought us such marvels as the maser, the bevatron, and the Marlboro filter? Oh, what a saga of science was the discovery of the Marlboro filter! Oh, what a heart-rending epic of trial and error, of dedication and perseverance! And, in the end, what a triumph it was when the Marlboro research team, after years of testing and discarding one filter material after another—iron, nickel, tin, antimony, obsidian, poundcake—finally emerged, tired but happy, from their laboratory, carrying in their hands the perfect filter cigarette! Indeed, what rejoicing there still is whenever we light up a Marlboro which comes to us in soft pack and Flip-Top Box in all fifty states and Cleveland!

Yes, science will ultimately solve the problems arising from the population explosion, but meanwhile America's colleges are in dire straits. Where can we find classrooms and teachers for today's gigantic influx of students?

Well sir, some say the solution is to adopt the trimester system. This system, already in use at many colleges, eliminates summer vacations, has three semesters per annum instead of two, and compresses a four-year-course into three years.

This is, of course, good, but is it good enough? Even under the trimester system the student has occasional days off. Moreover, his nights are utterly wasted in sleeping. Is this the kind of all-out attack that is indicated?

I say no. I say desperate situations call for desperate remedies. I say that partial measures will not solve this crisis. I say we must do no less than go to school every single day of the year. But that is not all. I say we must go to school 24 hours of every day!

The benefits of such a program are, as you can see, obvious. First of all, the classroom shortage will disappear because all the dormitories can be converted into classrooms. Second, the teacher shortage will disappear because all the night watchmen can be put to work teaching solid state physics and Restoration drama. And finally, overcrowding will disappear because everybody will quit school.

Any further questions?

Yes, one further question: the makers of Marlboro, who sponsor this column, would like to know whether you have tried a Marlboro lately. It's the filter cigarette with a man's world of flavor. Settle back and enjoy one soon blackface, kinky hair and illiterate language used in Kake Walk. The votes cast at the Tuesday meeting of the IFC were a clear representation of what was the opinion of the thousand or more fraternity men of UVM.

Cynic-al Observations Blackface... ...C'est Fini

Although the final outcome of the balloting was as hoped, the narrow margin by which the abolition measures were passed left much to be desired. The vote on blackface was so close that, had every fraternity sent its two delegates (which three houses chose not to do), the the voting might have ended as a tie, and the effect of the type of settlement which was achieved might have been lost. One might be tempted to decry the shortsightedness, etc., of those who voted against the abolition measures, but we will avoid such temptation. The important thing is that the measures were passed.

Another aspect of the IFC ruling on the offensive aspects of Kake Walk which might be seen by some as leaving something to be desired is that the motion to abolish the use of "illiterate language" in Kake Walk was defeated. The thought behind this action is that now that the identification of the Negro and Kake Walk has been destroyed, the use of dialect speech (which is really that of a section of the country -- the South -- rather than that of a racial group) should not be found offensive by any group or individual. This line of thought is open to considerable criticism, but again we shall avoid the temptation.

The IFC has hopefully expressed the opinion that the alterations made in Kake Walk will not "detract either from the traditional spirit of Kake Walk or from the highly skilled performance of the walkers." The fact is that whether or not their faith is vindicated will depend upon the UVM student body. We cannot but hope that, rather than take something away from what is really the greatest college weekend in America, there will be a noticeable increase in the traditionally deafening applause when the first Kake Walkers step into the spotlight this February without blackface.

It has not been infrequent in the past for the CYNIC to be highly critical of the fraternity system and the Inter-Fraternity Council of UVM. Today we can do no less than Congratulate them both on the action taken and the manner in which it was taken. We hope, in conclusion, that we have seen the beginning of some of the responsible action on the part of fraternities which we called for in these columns two weeks ago.

Letters To The Editor Malicious Cynicism

To the Editor:

Regarding the article in last week's CYNIC headed "The Sceptic", I, as one of the fraternity presidents referred to as "bright-eyed" and "tight-suited", would like to offer a few remarks in protest.

First, cynicism is fine, especially cynicism of the type offered by Dr. Chaplin of the Psychology department, but, Mr. Sceptic, your brand of cynicism is malicious, and this type of cynicism doesn't sit too well with the majority of the student body, which, you argue, is anti-Greek (I wonder how many of them were anti-Greek when they rushed a house in their first year here).

I suggest that you, Mr. Sceptic, should take a look at the UVM campus and at Burlington, with its three antiquated movie theaters, bowling alley, and "Supper Club". You might then realize that due to the fact that the university sponsors no social events whatsoever, the responsibility to provide for the social aspects of college fall on the fraternities. Further, I would venture to say that a majority of the students (especially after a big fraternity weekend such as winter formals, spring formals, or Kake Walk) are not anti-Greek, because the students realize that without fraternities, this campus would be even duller than it is now. So much for your first paragraph, Mr. Sceptic.

You proceed to say that national fraternity representatives are "pot-bellied", "flabby faced", middle-aged children "in collegiate clothes". It seems to me that the majority of the national men who were here for Greek Week were neither flabby-faced nor pot-bellied. Of course, they are not as young as you are, Mr. Sceptic, but maybe you should realize that for a person to rise so high in the ranks of a national fraternity, that person must have something to contribute which is of value -- can you say this about yourself? Let us remember that these men are not paid for their services, and therefore take time off from their work (in which, by the way, most of them are very successful) to help their fraternity -- could you see yourself being so generous with your time?

Your next point insults me personally. Yes, I am a fraternity president, but I don't think that I'm particularly bright-eyed or tight-suited. Nor have I ever said that my fraternity is a "hot-bed of brotherly love", or that "non-fraternity men are creeps, queers, or eggheads". As a matter of fact, I feel that if one goes to college and graduates with one or two real friends (let's not get into a semantic argument), one really has gotten something. I personally feel that I'm pretty lucky in this respect, Mr. Sceptic. I have my close friends -- do you?

I'm trying to say that even though one needn't necessarily join a fraternity to find these friends, the atmosphere of a fraternity provides the opportunity for closer relationships with men whom one would never even have met otherwise. It is true that not everyone in my fraternity is my best or closest friend. (It is an impossibility to be equally friendly with each of sixty-five men.) It is also true, however, that there is a bond between fraternity brothers, even if they aren't best friends, which is strong enough to let one know that he always has someone with him, to encourage and help him.

EDITOR'S NOTE: Please keep in mind as you read this "sceptical" column that it is only the opinion of one cynic on the UVM campus (who prefers to remain anonymous for professional reasons) and not the opinion of The VERMONT CYNIC. The views presented are, to say the least, cynical and controversy provoking in nature and therefore meet the requirements for being printed as a weekly column. Most of the ideas expressed are interesting, although not all is fact.

"O, I fear me, he is Grecker than the Greeks. His pale Galilean eyes were upon her mesial groove." -- Buck Mulligan

I had hoped to bring you a complete account of the exciting and cultural Olympic games, since I was a chariot puller for old Sigma Epsilon Chi (long may she wave); but I flunked the saliva test and never left the stable.

Actually, Greek Week isn't a complete failure. It does bring the real creeps out of the woodwork, I admit; but it also gives them something to do. So while the bright-eyed young fanatics were making asses out of themselves and the bright-eyed Burns men were seeing to it that they didn't fall out of their togas, a few kindred spirits and myself had a delightful little afternoon (didn't we, Sally Mae!) of fraternal living.

It's precisely this aspect of fraternities that I'd like to emphasize today. If I can't sell them to you as social security, then you just won't be sold. (Unless you were moved to join up by the chariot races or the thrill of voting for some simple-minded, simple-faced, teen-aged Helen of Troy -- and if you're that type, I don't want you; there are enough sick adolescents in the house already.)

Incidentally, while I'm in a parenthetical mood, let me ask you to read this column with an eye to omissions. The editor has begun to censor my work. (He's sore at me because I thought Dean Kent was head of the College of Technology.) Last week, after warning prospective fraternity men that chaperons sometimes turn on the light in the sex pit, I tried to soften the blow by adding that in fact this seldom happens, since most chaperons stay away from the sex pit as carefully as if their own daughters were inside. Offensive, says the editor. Reassuring, seems to me.

I mentioned above that fraternities provide social security (or was that censored, too?). Well, they do. Almost any fraternity man can get a date. Best of all, he can get a sorority girl; but most of them wouldn't be caught dead with an independent. (Nasty word, independent; ought to be censored -- especially in talking about fraternities.)

Why date a sorority girl? Stop and think a minute. Do girls join sororities in order to drink? Seldom. Do they join because they feel cozier in a sheepfold? Seldom; most girls don't get along with other girls. Well, if they don't join for the reasons men have, then why do they? Mainly, to be acceptable in the highest UVM society. Some, of course, join because they like to be "in charge of things," but most want to belong socially.

That's why you should date sorority girls. All you have to do is persuade them that all the right people do it, and they'll do anything you want. They really will. You don't have to be sweet to them, or say pretty things to them, or even spend much money on them. Just persuade them that whatever you have in mind (I can feel the editor's hot breath at my back) is fashionable, and you're all set.

That's the best reason -- and, aside from the comfort of a sheepfold, the only reason -- for joining a fraternity. Granted, sorority girls are incredibly dull and narrowminded; their conversation consists of moral platitudes, jokes (badly told) against Christians, Jews, and Negroes, and gossip about clothes, dates, and fraternities. Granted, going out with one is like reading Mixes & Matches for three hours a day (bicarbonate of soda helps), but you soon learn to pay no attention, use them for what they're worth (hi there, Sally Mae!), and find an undemanding independent girl to be serious about.

Well, fellows, I hope I've persuaded you to brother up. Sincerely, now, men, you don't want to be taken for a beatnik or a commsymp, do you?

Malicious Cynicism

Going further into the national fraternity, I know that I could travel through the U.S. and Canada and not have to pay a cent or worry about social life because I have men in all these places whom I don't even know, who will go out of their way to help me because of the pin I wear, and the oaths I've taken. Similarly, I know that I would go out of my way to be of any help I could to a man I don't know, if he is my brother in the national fraternity.

Mr. Sceptic, you imply that if one's grades are poor, one won't get into a fraternity, and that fraternities don't consider scholarship as one of their goals. Wake up, Mr. Sceptic!

The men in my fraternity want to go to Dent, school, Grad, school, etc. How can you, "the angry young man", sit behind your desk in the English Department and say that we don't care about scholarship?

Now, let's talk about those "basic facts" you think we should admit. You say that fraternities "have no moral purpose", and that there aren't ten people on campus (excluding fraternity presidents - for some strange reason you seem to have referenced presidents) who could state the moral goals of the fraternity which they have sworn to uphold. Well, Mr. Sceptic, I defy you to find two of my fraternity brothers who can't tell you our moral goals!!! Further, you say that fraternities exist just for the sake of existing, and not for the members. To prove your point, you suggest that we shouldn't send in our national dues. O.K., Mr. Sceptic; first, what about our local fraternities? Do they exist just for the sake of existing? Of course not! Just as the chapters of national fraternities have values, ideals, and goals, so do the locals. The members of the fraternity are the fraternity, so how can the fraternity not exist for its members?

Nothing, Mr. Sceptic, can GENERATE brotherly love! You, an instructor, with so many years on the undergraduates, must have realized this a long time ago. However, fraternities do provide an environment in which potential close relationships can develop. This is not to say that one can't have friends in a dorm; one certainly can; only how can it be easy to be friendly with the guys next door in a dorm if you don't know each other and have nothing in common? If you think for one minute that our education is a form of advertising, you had better re-check your understanding of fraternities. Finally, you disapprove of the exclusiveness of fraternities. I'd prefer to confine the controversial blackball system to an area of its own, but when one does not fit into a group, that group may wish the privilege of requesting that person to leave, be it a business firm, a governmental organization, or a university faculty.

The next thing you imply is that fraternity men don't go to Lane Series, read books, or picket Woolworth's (did I just hear someone mention Jules Older's name?). Where could you have gotten this warped view? As far as the file system for fraternities is concerned, the moral responsibility lies within the individual; and if you personally suspect a student of using the paper written by another it would be relatively easy to question him on the content of his paper, and see if his responses reflect the knowledge he has shown in writing the paper. At any rate, please don't burden us with your departmental problems or intrigues.

If Dean Patzer doesn't respond to your next statement, he will lose the respect of the campus, which he has won by his past actions. To my knowledge, and a fraternity president should have some knowledge in this area, the dean has never made any remarks which would let one imply that he approves of even moderate drinking. Any drinking violation which is reported to the dean will be acted upon, no matter how serious.

The next slam you made suggested that there are homosexual tendencies, or, at least, a lack of heterosexual activity, among fraternity men. One's sex life, be he a fraternity man or independent, is no one else's business. Unless you have had a disturbing or otherwise traumatic experience involving sex and fraternity, Mr. Sceptic, I don't see the foundation for your warped remarks in this area.

Finally, you call us sheep who flock together. Well, Mr. Sceptic, it is a wise sheep who screams his head off at the approach of a wolf who froths at the mouth. No - we aren't really sheep. As a matter of fact, we are all individuals, and you may be surprised to find, some of us are pretty decent guys. Don't you think that rather than throwing maliciously cynical comments at us (which, as you have seen, result in maliciously cynical answers) you should get to know us?

Brave New Whirl

To the Editor:

Congratulations to the SAGA Food Service on its new policy concerning wearing apparel for Wednesday evening meals at Marsh Dining Hall. Last week the first step was taken in a "brave new whirl" designed to elevate many of the UVM yahoos to a position of social acceptability.

The SAGA Food Service has often asked male students to wear jackets and ties for special dinners but always a few showing a complete disregard for etiquette have managed to sneak into the dining hall with neither. It was assumed that these few were in ignorance of the occasion and SAGA didn't feel that it was necessary to take action against them. Ignorance of the law, to state a cliché, will no longer be a valid excuse. Those few students who don't have the integrity to appear at Marsh Dining Hall properly attired with jacket and tie on Wednesday evenings will be barred from entrance.

This step was long overdue. Jackets and ties are a part of the college tradition and those few who don't feel that they are necessary obviously have no business on a college campus. It is hoped that SAGA's new policy will force the student to realize the desirability of social conformity and that the college tradition and Emily Post shall not perish from the campus.

University Players

To the Editor:

This week the University Players in conjunction with the Music Department was forced to announce the cancellation of the November production "Little Mary Sunshine." Due to an unusually brilliant display of lethargy on the part of the student body, comprising over 4,000 persons, it was impossible to assemble a cast of twenty.

Unlike the activities of certain other campus organizations, University Player productions are open to everyone and are advertised -- well advertised -- as such. It seems ridiculous that the same core (or corps?) must be called upon time and time again to "go on with the show". Granted, theatre for these people is something a little more meaningful than just another extra-curricular activity to be put down on a graduate school application; not to be forgotten, however, are the hours of outside work put in by the faculty advisers -- auditioning, directing, set designing, and orchestrating. All preliminary preparations for this musical, and rest assured it was no small amount, now seem futile.

Perhaps if a few members of our elite café society -- henceforth and forever more to be known as The Brit Society of Nickelodians -- could get up enough courage to lead a rear guard attack down the stairs of the Arena Theatre, the social stigma apparently attached to being seen in The Lower Depths of the Fleming would, once and for all, be lifted and never again will Little Mary have to trade in her bouquet of posies for a surfboard.

The Sceptic

To the Editor:

Appearing in the October fourth issue of the CYNIC is the column inappropriately named The Sceptic. The author of this article was extremely malicious. In his cynicism of the fraternity system, and at one point accused the fraternity man of being without morals. At this point I would like to question the author of this article as to his moral code. If you honestly believe that the malicious cynical trash which you wrote is the truth, then why not sign your name to it? Can it be that you would rather not acknowledge an article which might appropriately be called The Septic?

Judy Greene Voted Greek Week Queen

Queen Judy Green, a freshman from Merrick, Long Island, reigned over the Greek Week activities held last weekend. Judy, who is also a candidate for Homecoming Queen, was Theta Chi's sweetheart. She presided at the competitions at Centennial Field Saturday, which included a tug-of-war, a three-legged race, a bicycle race, and a chariot race, as well as at the dance at Patrick Gymnasium. Judy is interested in teaching. Right now, she thinks that she will major in English. She is also interested in dramatics. As an active member of the drama club in high school, she hopes to become involved with the University Players here at UVM.

The queen of Greek Week is a sweet, sincere girl. She loves UVM and said that college life has lived up to all her expectations. Judy has found everyone very friendly and helpful. She knew nothing of the fraternity system before she came to school, and was surprised and honored when Theta Chi asked her to represent them. She thinks that they are "a wonderful group of guys - very nice to know." I got to know many of them, and realized that they really wanted to win. They serenaded me and presented me with roses. I still can't believe that this has happened to me.

Placement Barometer

It is with some degree of trepidation that I undertake the rather formidable assignment of writing a column that will appeal in essence to your many and varied interests. However, in obtaining the warm support of your editor in such a venture, I felt that the opportunity to come before you each week, either with articles relating to careers, career planning, and employment trends, or announcements of particular interest to you, was a chance not to be passed up.

In attempting to set the stage for what will appear in this column in the weeks to come, some of the topics will include a series on employment interviewing; an approach to summer job hunting; the changing world of employment; and contributory articles by guest columnists. At the expense of appearing maudlin, this column is being written in an effort to reach you. There isn't one of you who doesn't have at least one question regarding this broad and rather nebulous topic of career planning. Any suggestions for topics, together with any questions that can be answered as part of an article will be gratefully appreciated and should be addressed to the Director of Placement.

In June of this past summer, an editorial appeared in Life Magazine entitled, "'63-Best College Class in History". In essence the article stated that this class reflects the increasingly higher standards of U.S. education since World War II, including the boost given by Sputnik; and its successors will be even better. But '63 is probably the best prepared, stablest and promising college class in U.S. history.

Talking solely from an employment standpoint, I would have to agree that our recently graduated Class of 1963 stands equally with other colleges and universities across the country. Starting salaries, usually a barometer for reflecting quality, are up in all areas across the board. Electrical Engineers, at the bachelors level, led the parade with an average starting salary of $7,681 per year, closely followed by Mechanical Engineers at $7,083 per year; Civil Engineers, $6,366 per year; Accounting $5,934 per year. The highest salary for a Liberal Arts man majoring in English and entering sales was $7,200. Women, Mathematics concentrates, averaged $5,725 per year and out shown their men counterparts, who averaged $5,200 per year. On the other hand, men in the College of Arts and Sciences reporting offers of employment through August, in all academic concentrations averaged $5,792 per year, while women averaged $4,598 per year. In the College of Agriculture and Home Economics, General Agriculture men averaged $5,500 per year; Dairy Science was $4,982 per year with Agriculture Economics right behind at $4,895 per year. Home Economics concentrates averaged $4,030 per year while those women in our foods program averaged $3,626 per year.

Our Teacher Placement Division reports that the highest starting salary shown through the month of August was earned by a woman Elementary Education Teacher in Westchester County, N.Y. - $5,600 per year. The highest man at this same period of time was $5,360 per year. The average starting salaries for our men Teachers in Vermont was $4,305 per year, while our beginning women Teachers are earning $4,157.

In the Graduate College, at the Masters level, of those reporting offers of employment, the highest salary was obtained by a Mechanical Engineer at $9,864 per year and the lowest was a concentrate in Dairy Plant Management who started in at $7,000 per year.

Finally, members of the Class of 1963 accepted jobs in 14 States and 2 foreign countries. Vermont led all geographical areas of employment. In conclusion, while the results of our 1963 Senior and Graduate Students reflected the national trend of jobs being plentiful for graduates who could meet the standards, I hasten to quickly point out that while there were many opportunities, selection standards have become and continue to grow increasingly tougher as set by employers.

Changes Seen In ROTC

WASHINGTON (CPS) -- Defense Department officials are asking Congress this week to approve the most radical change ever in the history of reserve officer training corps (ROTC) programs at U.S. colleges and universities.

Pentagon officials have presented a new, two-year voluntary ROTC program aimed at getting more and better officers for the Army and Air Force at less cost.

Assistant Defense Secretary Norman S. Paul told a House Armed Services subcommittee that the need for young officers in the services was great and the change would make it easier to provide them.

The plan would permit educational institutions to continue their present four-year programs, if desired.

Colleges and universities involved could select only one of the programs.

College men wishing to enroll in the two-year program would be screened carefully before accepted. Once accepted, the services would pay their college costs.

Paul said present plans call for limited scholarships to be made available at the beginning of the new program, including 1000 each for the army and Air Force.

The scholarships would cover actual educational expenses of tuition, school fees and similar items totaling not more than $800 a year, plus pay a retainer pay of not more than $50 a month for ten months each of the two years.

Scholarship students would be required to serve at least four years on active duty. Non-scholarship students would serve a period prescribed by the service secretaries.

Subcommittee Chairman F. Edward Hebert, D-La., said the program "appears to have considerable merit." It was one more indication that the plan would get congressional approval.

Pressure from both universities and colleges and the armed forces is giving the new program a needed push.

The military services, especially the air force, has been on the losing end of mandatory ROTC programs. At any large land grant university, where law requires a military program, thousands of freshmen are spoon-fed their first taste of military life.

Four years later, the service ends up with only 30 or 40 first lieutenants from a single large university. Falling by the wayside are thousands of students physically and psychologically unfit for an officer's job.

Cruise Held By Outing Club

A great deal of careful planning by the Outing Club went into the composition of an all weekend camping-sailing-cruise to Stave Island in Lake Champlain on October fifth-sixth. The Outing Club organized every detail to such great perfection that even the offerings to the Weather Gods were successful. For example; Saturday broke clear, cool and calm and at noon numerous members headed towards their destination accompanied by chaperone-skippers Mr. Saunders, Dr. Simms, Mr. and Mrs. Mead, and Mr. Davis.

The fleet of thirteen boats ranged in size from a fourteen foot "Jet" (sailed with magnificent competence by a fourteen year old boy incidently) to various sloops and ketches of a much larger length. All landings completed by 3:00, the girls proceeded to prepare a SAGA stew cooked by a non-member of this sex, while one true-blue (and I mean blue) blood braved the swimming waters.

After an evening of food, song and all-around jollity, everyone bagged down under the stars and branches to sleep happily to the sound of Champlain waves and one tether ball. Morning brought frost and ultimately breakfast. Around mid-morning the remaining boats again loaded themselves with crews and sleeping bags, and the Outing Club returned to Mallets Bay a saturated but happy group. Their thanks to SAGA, heads Bill Haugen and Claude Phipps; chaperone George Saunders; and Stave Island caretaker Bill Hazlett.

Mums For Homecoming Sold Again

A long-time tradition at UVM has been the inevitable appearance of the familiar green and yellow "Mums" sold by Mortar Board for Homecoming. Once again, the members of the senior women's honorary will be providing "Mums" for the student body, faculty, etc.

Commencing on Monday, Oct. 7 and on Monday, Oct. 14, members of Sophomore Aids, Alpha Lambda Delta and Mortar Board will be taking orders for "Mums" at Mason, Simpson, Hamilton, Marsh and Waterman, between the hours of 5 and 6 P.M. Between 6 and 7 P.M. on October 7 and 14, representatives will visit each fraternity to take orders. Orders will be taken as well on Wednesday, Thursday and Friday from 9:00 A.M. to 4:00 P.M. at Waterman and Billings.

The "Mums" will be delivered to fraternities, sororities, men's and women's dorms on Saturday, October 19 before noon.

The cost for "Mums" is a mere $1, so support Homecoming and its traditions by buying "Mums" for the misses and Mrs.

Correction Noted

There is an error in the UVM Date Book which shows Kake Walk as being a two-day holiday.

The fact is that Kake Walk will begin this year as it has always begun in the past, that is, with the Kake Walk Ball and crowning if the king and queen on Thursday evening.

Secondly, the IFC just last week approved the directors for 1964. They are: Carl Eells, Finance; Dave Malchuck, Publicity; and Fred Weisberg, Production.

Tom Thomsen wanted challenging work

He found it at Western Electric

T. R. Thomsen, B.S.M.E., University of Nebraska, '58, came to Western Electric for several reasons. Important to him was the fact that our young engineers play vital roles right from the start, working on exciting engineering projects in communications including: electronic switching, thin-film circuitry, microwave systems and optical masers.

Western Electric's wide variety of challenging assignments appealed to Tom, as did the idea of advanced study through full-time graduate engineering training, numerous management courses and a company-paid Tuition Refund Plan.

Tom knows, too, that we'll need thousands of experienced engineers for supervisory positions within the next few years. And he's getting the solid experience necessary to qualify. Right now, Tom is developing new and improved inspection and process control techniques to reduce manufacturing costs of telephone switching equipment. Tom is sure that Western Electric is the right place for him. What about you?

If you set the highest standards for yourself, enjoy a challenge, and have the qualifications we're looking for—we want to talk to you! Opportunities for fast-moving careers exist now for electrical, mechanical and industrial engineers, and also for physical science, liberal arts and business majors. For more detailed information, get your copy of the Western Electric Career Opportunities booklet from your Placement Officer. Or write: Western Electric Company, Room 6405, 222 Broadway, New York 38, N. Y. And be sure to arrange for a personal interview when the Bell System recruiting team visits your campus.

Life Sciences Building Needed At UVM

One of the first steps toward a Life Sciences building at the University of Vermont will be taken this month as prospective architects for the building are interviewed.

Administration Dean Lyman S. Rowell said the architects for a proposed building to house botany and zoology departments would meet with university officials Oct. 22.

Included in the planning will be an addition to Williams Science Hall to increase space for chemistry and physics instruction and research.

A site near Hills Hall has been mentioned as a possible site, Dean Rowell said, adding "of course, we're just in the preliminary stages."

He said the need for new space is "very acute."

The botany department has no more space than it did 20 years ago, Rowell said, which means having to make the space do a lot more.

Zoology has had only a little space added in the last 20 years.

Both are entering Ph.D. programs, which will require more space, he said.

"Last spring we said we needed the space by 1965. Of course we can't make that, but we need it right away."

Rowell said the hopes finances will come from private foundations and federal aid to education loans and matching funds.

Students Indicted For Trip To Cuba

BROOKLYN, N.Y. (CPA) — Four students were indicted by the Brooklyn Federal grand jury last Friday for a trip made to Cuba last summer. The students, Steve Martinot, Levi Laub, Philip Luce, and Anatole Schlusser are in the custody of their attorneys and forbidden to leave New York City.

Two students, Salvator Cucchiari and Ellen Shallit were named co-conspirators while Vicki Ortiz was placed under subpoena.

The four students, part of a group of 59 Americans who visited Cuba left Idlewild Airport June 29 for Prague, Czechoslovakia, making their trip to Cuba from there.

According to chief prosecuting U.S. Attorney Joseph P. Hoey, the students violated Title 18, Sec. 371 of the Criminal Code which states: "If two or more persons conspire either to commit any offense against the U.S. or to defraud the U.S. or any agency thereof in any manner for any purpose . . . each shall be fined not more than $10,000 or imprisoned not more than five years or both;" and Title 8, Sec. 1185 of the code which states: "When the U.S. is at war or during the existence of any national emergency proclaimed by the President it shall . . . be unlawful for any citizen of the U.S. to depart from or enter the U.S. unless he bears a valid passport. Any person who shall violate any of the provisions of this section . . . shall upon conviction, be fined not more than $5,000 or if a natural person, be imprisoned for not more than five years, or both."

President Kennedy had declared a state of emergency between the U.S. and Cuba, and all travel between the two countries was declared unlawful.

Hoey claimed that the students violated the former law by conspiring to go to Cuba, and the latter law by actually making the trip, both to and from the country, without proper authorization.

Homestand Opens With Rhody

Bears Skin Cats 14-13

The Catamounts overcame a first quarter threat by the Black Bears to bust the game wide open with an inspired comeback that unfortunately fell short by one point. Maine is always tough at home and rarely does a Maine team lose three games in a row. These were the facts that prevented the Green and Gold from staying undefeated as the Bears just nipped the Cats 14-13.

This Saturday, the Cats open a three game homestand with the Rams of Rhode Island, followed by the Homecoming encounter against last year's Yankee Conference champions, New Hampshire, and then a State Series game with Norwich.

The Bears scored the first touchdown the second time they held possession of the ball. Their superior ground attack proved to be too much for the previously unpenetrable Vermont defense. Except for the last five minutes of the first half, Maine was in complete control of the pigskin.

After an interception by Jim Brennan, the Cats began to move. Vermont began its longest drive of the game on its own 40, which was climaxed by a 30 yard burst by Ken Burton through the Maine line. The kick for extra points was successfully executed by Ken Andrade.

Things were looking roseey for UVM after they recovered a fumble on Maine's 20-yard line. However, on the first play from scrimmage, the Cats refumbled, killing all possibilities for a second threat in the first half.

In the third quarter, Vermont quarterback Scot Fitz moved the team to the Bears' 10-yard line, completing passes to Ken Burton, Richie Reynolds, and Deane Kent. To cap the drive, Burton once again bull-dogged his way through the Maine defense for Vermont's second and final score. The kick for extra point was once again made by Ken Andrade. However, Vermont was penalized for delay of game. Andrade's second attempt failed. This later proved to be the deciding factor in the game.

Maine retaliated on a long sustained drive which was characterized by their powerful ground game. The Bears slowly moved down to the Vermont 1-yard line and scored on a plunge over tackle. Their extra point was made, making the score 14-13.

Scot Fitz once again tried to spring the Cats loose for a score. However, the crucial play needed to re-inspire the offensive attack could not be found.

In the games against AIC and Army B team, the Cats' defense was unbreakable. Their first test against Yankee Conference competition ended in failure. This Saturday, at Centennial Field, the Cats take on the Rams from the University of Rhode Island. Up to date the Rams show a 1-1 record in Yankee Conference competition. If the Cats retaliate from last week's drubbing, their prospects for a decent standing in the league will be brighter.

This year's performances: Were ahead at half against Northeastern, but fell apart and lost 13-28. Like to throw long bomb, with which they beat Maine. Line outweighs Vermont, but are weak at quarterback, with 6 intercepted passes thus far. Bullback Tetro is work horse. Forecast: This is only Yankon team Vermont beat last year, and if the Cats can get their offense going, may repeat last year's victory. Cats' improved pass defense should intercept many of Rhody's bombs.

Kittens Nip Norwich, 7-6

Vermont's gridiron shaded the Cadet recruits at Centennial Field Friday, 7-6. The win, Vermont's eighth straight against Norwich on the frosh football level, came on the wings of a 79-yard aerial bomb in the second period.

Vermont took over on its own 34 after stopping an 11-play, 31-yard Norwich drive. Kitten quarterback Bill Leete tried a second down pass to the flats after incompleting a first down aerial.

The second pass connected. Halfback Dave Busick gloved it on the Norwich 42 and out-shifted the Cadet secondary while cutting safely to the sideline. He showed them nothing but cleats the rest of the way, sprinting into the end zone on a straight run.

Tackle Dave Scriber converted the extra point kick, an all-important score the way things turned out.

Norwich's Paul Glemser returned the ensuing kickoff 24 yards, down to the Cadet 37. From there, quarterback Joe Roy put together pass-catch combinations with ends Philius Bardon and Stu Shattuck.

Getting some help from 15 yards assessed against Vermont in penalties along with gainers from halfback Francis Burke, the Cadets were quickly knocking on the door. But down on the Vermont 14, Roy's pass to Bardon was broken up in the end zone by Jim Klode. That killed the threat UVM took over on downs.

Vermont's biggest running gun, Larry (Butch) McCrea, got the Kittens out of the hole with three pickups. Roy completed a nine-yard pass to Busick and UVM was on the move. But an offensive holding penalty changed the direction and Vermont punted. Neither club threatened the rest of the half.

Vermont opened the second half receiving. The Kittens moved from their own 20 upfield to the 50 on McCrea carries and a Leete - to - Busick pass. Frank Prevost intercepted for Norwich, stopping the drive.

The Cadets tried a running game for several plays, but lost interest in it along with three yards. Then Roy hit Bardos with a pass which covered 40 yards, complete to the UVM 14.

Five plays later, Roy carried on a QB keeper and scored from a yard out. The extra-point attempt, representing the tie, was quashed by Bill Dorozenski's swan dive onto Roy and the ball. Vermont threatened two more scores, dominating play over the final period and a half. McCrea accounted for 38 yards of a 56-yard Vermont drive which ended in a missed field goal attempt from the NU 30.

When he got openings, the ex-Rice Memorial star ran swift, strong and shifty from the fullback slot. Lat in the fourth quarter, he had a 23-yard gainer nullified on a penalty.

That came after back-to-back interceptions which left Vermont in possession deep in Norwich territory. The Kittens ran out of steam there, punting into the end zone and the game ended with the Cadets in control on their own 20.

Burton Selected For ECAC Team Of The Week

Ken Burton, who scored both Catamounts TD against the Black Bears last Saturday, was chosen for the ECAC College division team of the week. In that game Burton gained 75 yards in 13 carries, two passes for 41 yards, returned a kickoff for 23 yards and sprinted 11, and 34 yards for the scores. (Credit: SPS)

Mahalia Jackson To Premiere Blue Series

Mahalia Jackson, the world's greatest gospel singer.

by Betty Fuchs

Mahalia Jackson, the world's greatest gospel singer, will appear at Memorial Auditorium on Tuesday, October 22, in the first concert of the Blue Lane Series. Miss Jackson was born in New Orleans, the home of blues and Dixieland music. Her father worked on the docks as a stevedore on week days and as a barber after hours. On Sundays, he put aside his work clothes in favor of the clergyman's gown.

At home, the family heard only sacred music. The neighbors, however, had a phonograph and on it would play the records of the great blues singers. Mahalia would listen and admire, but though she listened to blues and opera, her interest lay chiefly in sacred music. Aside from such hints and ideas on phrasing and production as those records gave her, Miss Jackson had no musical training.

Mahalia Jackson sang in the choir of her father's church from the time she was five years old. She went as far as the eighth grade in school, and then had to go to work. She nursed babies, worked as a maid and laundress and dreamed of becoming a nurse.

At sixteen, Mahalia left New Orleans and went to Chicago. Faithfully following her parents' religious training, she joined the Greater Salem Baptist Church upon her arrival there. Shortly after joining the church choir her mighty voice inspired the choir director to form a quintet of singers featuring Miss Jackson. It was then that she forgot her ambition to be a nurse.

The group travelled to various churches throughout the Baptist Convention, receiving their pay from the silver offerings taken at the end of each program. However, this income was not enough to sustain Miss Jackson. Accordingly, she worked during the week at the same things she had learned to do in New Orleans and then landed a job as a packer in a date factory.

She saved her money, studied beauty culture and eventually opened a beauty salon and later a floral shop. She bought real estate and began to develop a tidy income, all the time continuing to sing at the various churches on Sunday.

Gradually, she began to rise in importance in the Baptist Convention. Today, she holds the office of Treasurer of the Music Auxiliary of that organization. She is also their official vocalist.

Miss Jackson takes her religion seriously. She refuses to sing in nightclubs, even though fabulous sums are offered for her services.

Mahalia Jackson has appeared on all the leading television shows. She has sung in concert halls in Europe as well as in America, and it does not seem to matter what language her audience speaks. In France, she was mobbed by the Parisian equivalent of "bobby-soxers". In Denmark, she sang "Silent Night" on a radio broadcast and twenty thousand requests for records poured in. In New York, she has sold out every time she has appeared at Carnegie Hall. The Lane Series Committee takes great pride in presenting as its first gospel singer the woman who has single-handedly revolutionized the field of gospel singing today, and who is truly, as the Saturday Review declared, "one of those claimed by the world as its own."

James Farmer Director Of CORE To Speak At Vt. Conference

James Farmer, National Director of CORE.

by Joan Klonsky

James Farmer, National Director of the Congress of Racial Equality (CORE), will be a featured speaker in next month's Vermont Conference, the theme of which is "Pride and Prejudice: The Negro Struggle For Equality."

A pioneer in developing non-violent, direct action methods for race relations problems, Mr. Farmer was one of the founders of CORE in 1942 and served as the first National Chairman. Mr. Farmer also served as Race Relations Secretary of the Fellowship of Reconciliation from 1941 to 1945.

In the labor movement, he served in the southern organizing drive of the Upholsterer's International Union from 1946-1948. More recently he was International Representative of the State, County and Municipal Employees. In 1958 he was designated as one of a five-man delegation from the ICFTU (International Confederation of Free Trade Unions) to 15 African countries. In 1956, he served as a commentator on radio and television programs sponsored by the United Auto Workers in Detroit.

Mr. Farmer, a former program director of the NAACP, has lectured extensively and written for numerous publications including the Crisis, Fel- lowship, World Frontiers, Hadassah News and others.

Born in Texas in 1920, he was graduated from Wiley College in 1938 and from Howard University in 1941. In his student days he was active in the Christian Youth Movement, serving as vice-chairman of the National Council of Methodist Youth and the Christian Youth Council of North America.

It was Mr. Farmer who led the original CORE Freedom Ride, beginning on May 4, 1961, in Washington, D.C., and was arrested on May 24, in Jackson, Mississippi. He spent 40 days in various Mississippi jails and penitentiaries.

Those of us who followed the day to day progression of the Civil Rights issue this past summer which climaxed with the August 28th "March on Washington for Jobs and Freedom" no doubt recall the prominent role which Mr. Farmer pursued toward the planning and execution of this historic occasion.

The University is honored to serve as host to Mr. Farmer, as well as to Stephen J. Springarn, John Lewis and Louis E. Lomax, each of whom will address the student body at scheduled times from Tuesday through Thursday, November 12 to 14 in Ira Allen Chapel.

Prof. Babcock May Be "Right" Man For Governor Of Vermont

Robert S. Babcock,
Professor of Political Science

Professor Robert S. Babcock, former Republican Lt. Governor of Vermont, said in an interview Friday that if he thought the Republican party was moving too far to the right and he could stop it by running for Governor in 1964, he would. Babcock also said, "A lot depends on both personal and political circumstances." The personal circumstances seem to refer to his own (that politics is a costly business) and to other peoples' (that politics is also a friendly business. He added that he hopes to be at the state convention; however, in an interview over radio station WJOY, he said he would not consider accepting the GOP state chairmanship.

The forty-eight year old professor of Political Science served as a member of the Vermont State Senate in 1951, 1953, and 1957, and was president pro tem from 1957 until 1959. He was Secretary to the Governor in 1955, and Lt. Governor from 1957 to 1959.

Professor Babcock received his A.B. from the University of Rochester in 1937, his B.A. in 1939 and his M.A. in 1943 from Oxford University, his Ph.D. from Northwestern University in 1949, and the LL.D. from Marlboro College in 1957.

His first post-war teaching job started in 1946 at UVM. Before that, Professor Babcock had been an instructor at Black Mountain College in North Carolina from 1940 until 1942, an economic analyst from the Treasury Department in 1942, and a member of the Economic Warfare Board from 1942 to 1943. From 1943 until 1946, he served as Lt. J.G. in the U.S.N.R.

Professor Babcock is a member of Phi Beta Kappa and the American Political Scientist Association, and is the author of the text book State and Local Government and Politics.

PARENTS' WEEKEND SMASHING SUCCESS

Parents' Weekend, the newest big event in the UVM annals, was deemed a smashing success by students and parents alike. Blessed with fair weather and find attendance, the weekend was brimming with excitement and activity.

Parents and siblings began flocking to the campus on Friday, but it was not until Saturday morning that the activities really got underway. Class enrollment took an unanticipated rise as parents hit the lecture halls, notebook in hand. Concurrently, registration took place at Billings where parents were equipped with identification tags and other pertinent data.

Highlight of the afternoon was the game at Centennial with UVM squashing Rhode Island. at (continued on page four)

Spear Street Site Wins Backing

By Ed Myers

When it came to drawing power, a Morgan horse will outpull a dairy cow better than 10 to 1, the Vermont Agricultural Education Commission learned Tuesday afternoon, when the six-member body held its second hearing.

Tuesday's session was to hear discussion on University of Vermont plans to build a dairy farm on Spear Street property now owned by UVM.

The hearing -- and crowd-drawing "test" -- came in the wake of a spirited session Sept. 27 at Weybridge when some 100 persons from far and near tried to persuade the commission the Morgans should remain at their old home there.

The hearing at 1:30 p.m. in UVM's Waterman Building was somewhat slower and less spirited -- only seven were in the audience when the hearing started and Chairman Sen. George C. Morse, R-Caledonia, had trouble getting any initial comment at all.

Although five more persons came in during the session -- boosting total attendance to 12 -- the hearing was drab in any comparison to the first.

All who spoke were in favor of the plan, which would move dairy farm facilities from their present Main Street location to new quarters on Spear Street.

The plan, submitted to the 1963 Vermont Legislature, seeks $301,900 for completion of an Animal and Dairy Science Center for teaching, research and service on the South Burlington site.

The center would include an animal science laboratory, a classroom and office wing, dairy barn for 80 head of cattle, a calving barn and another barn with areas where horses and other animals reared and cared for at Weybridge may be held for instruction and showing.

Calling the hearing to order, Morse apologized for the sparse attendance, especially Burlington's Planning Commission, mayor or representatives from the Board of Aldermen.

Associate Prof. Albert M. Smith, chairman of the UVM department of animal and dairy science, stressed that he thought the Spear Street location is ideal because of its proximity to dormitories.

"The location is well within walking distance of dormitories," Smith said, declaring it no farther from Redstone Campus and Marsh Hall than East Hall is.

"If we get more than a couple of miles out, it involves transportation. Some of the students are at the barn twice a day, seven days a week," he added.

He went on to say he does not think future expansion of Burlington will crowd the farm, as city residents continue moving to the Williston and Charlotte fringe areas.

June Collins, a dairy student from Malone, N.Y., told the commission the location is good, not only because of its convenience, but also because the farm would be in view of students and other passers-by.

Reginald Mr. Cleveland of Randolph Center said he was appearing as an individual and for the Vermont Purebred Dairy Cattle Association, and supported the proposed move.

Leonard Wales of Middlebury, dairy farmer and treasurer of the Addison County Farm Bureau, read a resolution passed Monday night, endorsing the move to Spear Street and calling for the Morgan Horse Farm to remain in Weybridge.

(Another part of UVM's proposed plan would provide $119,000 for improving the Weybridge farm.)

Morse said the commission probably will hold another hearing in Burlington, with other sessions planned for Randolph Technical College and maybe Montpelier.

If another hearing is held here, officials will be invited personally, as they were not this time. "We hoped they'd see it in the paper," Morse said.

Vice-President Johnson To Visit Vermont

Vice-President Lyndon B. Johnson and his wife will visit Vermont on Friday, October 25th. They are scheduled to arrive at the Burlington Airport from Montpelier at 3:30 p.m., and at that time a reception will be held for them. It is expected that students will be carrying homemade welcome posters in honor of the Vice-President, who is the first elected official to visit Vermont since 1901. The Vice-President will present a replica of the medallion given to him at his inauguration to the poster which is the most entertaining.

Probate Judge J. William O'Brien of Winooski, chairman of the reception committee for Johnson's visit to Burlington, said that Johnson and his wife will travel through Essex Junction, Winooski, and parts of Burlington in a motorcade, on the 25th, and then will address the Democratic "Jefferson, Jackson Dinner" later that evening.

Parents' Weekend

21-6. Half-time entertainment, under the leadership of GERALYN Schaff, added to the festivities of the afternoon. The band, twirlers, and cheerleaders put on a colorful display for the crowd. After the show, President Fey presented prizes to the parents coming the farthest -- Mr. & Mrs. Snider of Chicago, Illinois -- those having the most children enrolled at the University -- Mr. & Mrs. Cronin of Richmond, Vt., with a grand total of three students at UVM. After the game, victory celebrations were held for parents and students at the fraternities, sororities, and residences.

The high point of the weekend was the Saturday evening panel discussion on the question of "Student Adjustment to UVM." The panel -- composed of Dean Patzer, Dr. Boller of the Dept. of Education, Dr. Gaylord of the Dept. of Agriculture, Dr. Schoonmaker of the Engineering Dept., and the two student chairmen of the weekend, Carolyn McCarthy of Spencer, Mass., and Bill Haugen of Burlington, Vt., discussed the social, academic and moral aspects of adjustment of the student. Open questioning by parents followed the discussion. Open houses at the various religious organizations on campus completed the weekend.

In its initial appearance, Parents' Weekend went off exceptionally well in that it truly turned out to be a "Weekend for Parents", exclusive of other events.

THE DEAN YOU SAVE MAY BE YOUR OWN

Colleges are complicated and bewildering places, filled with complicated and bewildering people. Today let us examine one of the most complicated and bewildering—yet fetching and lovable—of all campus figures. I refer, of course, to the dean of students.

Policeman and confessor, shepherd and seer, warden and oracle, proconsul and pal—the dean of students is all of these. How, then, can we understand him? Well sir, perhaps the best way is to take an average day in the life of an average dean. Here, for example, is what happened last Thursday to Dean Killjoy N. Damper of the Duluth College of Belles Lettres and Pemmican.

At 6 a.m. he woke, dressed, lit a Marlboro, and went up on the roof of his house to remove the statue of the Founder which had been placed there during the night by high-spirited undergraduates.

Dean, Policeman, Confessor, Shepherd, Seer...etc.

At 7 a.m. he lit a Marlboro and walked briskly to the campus. (The Dean had not been driving his car since it had been placed on the roof of the girls dormitory by high-spirited undergraduates.)

At 7:45 a.m. he arrived on campus, lit a Marlboro and climbed the bell tower to remove his secretary who had been placed there during the night by high-spirited undergraduates.

At 8 a.m. he reached his office, lit a Marlboro, and met with E. Pluribus Ewbank, editor of the student newspaper. Young Ewbank had been writing a series of editorials urging the United States to annex Canada. When the editorials had evoked no response, he had taken matters into his own hands. Accompanied by his society editor and two proofreaders, he had gone over the border and conquered Manitoba. With great patience and several Marlboro Cigarettes, the Dean persuaded young Ewbank to give Manitoba back. Young Ewbank, however, insisted on keeping Winnipeg.

At 9 a.m. the Dean lit a Marlboro and met with Robert Penn Sigafoos, president of the local Sigma Chi chapter, who came to report that the Deke house had been put on top of the Sigma Chi house during the night by high-spirited undergraduates.

At 10 a.m. the Dean lit a Marlboro and went to umpire an intramural softball game on the roof of the law school where the campus baseball diamond had been placed during the night by high-spirited undergraduates.

At 12 noon the Dean had a luncheon meeting with the prexy, the bursar, and the registrar, at the bottom of the campus swimming pool where the faculty dining room had been placed during the night by high-spirited undergraduates. Marlbors were passed after luncheon, but not lighted, owing to dampness.

At 2 p.m., back in his office, the Dean lit a Marlboro and received the Canadian Minister of War who said unless young Ewbank gave back Winnipeg, the Canadian army would march against the U.S. immediately. Young Ewbank was summoned and agreed to give back Winnipeg if he could have Moose Jaw. The Canadian Minister of War at first refused, but finally consented after young Ewbank placed him on the roof of the metallurgy building.

At 3 p.m. the Dean lit a Marlboro and met with a delegation from the student council who came to present him with a set of matched luggage in honor of his fifty years' service as dean of students. The Dean promptly packed the luggage with all his clothing and fled to Utica, New York, where he is now in the aluminum siding game.

Isley Bros Shout At Ball

The Isley Brothers - Ronald, Rudolph, and O'Kelly - will be the star attraction at the Homecoming Ball on Friday, October 18, 9:00 P.M. to 1:00 A.M. at Patrick Gymnasium. (Rivald only, of course, by the King and Queen who preside over the Ball.)

The group specializes in singing to college audiences and has been performing in public since pre-school age. Even now, one is in his late teens and the other two are only in their early twenties.

In 1958, they gained a foothold in the singing world by starting a career in New York. 1959 was their really big year - they were accepted by one of the most important management agencies, General Artists Corporation.

Later, they submitted a song of their own, "Shout", to RCA Victor which created success for them almost overnight.

Besides being entertained by this amazing group, we have for your dancing pleasure, Bert Orr and his orchestra, brought back from last year by popular request. So, just head for Patrick Gym on Friday night and you'll be on your way towards a really great Homecoming Weekend.

Cynic-al Observations

SCEPTICISM IN THE CYNIC

Blackface is gone. A radical example of abstract sculpture graces the Bailey Library. The old Billings Library has been transformed into a social center, coffee shop and all. Many new structures have sprung up in the past few years that have made the University more efficient and beautiful. Our football team is even winning games. All of these changes have taken place at UVM in very short time, although some of the things changed have been traditional at the University for over a hundred years.

In the midst of all these changes, one thing remains almost unchanged. The CYNIC. Although this year a radically new feature has appeared. It is The Sceptic. This column has provoked more controversy than anything that has hit this campus since Dean Clifford. The subject matter discussed by its anonymous author digs deep into the roots of college life in the raw. It hits home in such an embarrassingly truthful way that it has been subject to much scorn by those who it affects.

Many people have wondered who has been writing this provocative column. But the real author, who prefers to remain unnamed, is unimportant. The material he writes about pertains not only to the University of Vermont but to almost every university in the country with fraternities. He may be a little too sceptical, and at times appear to be malicious, but he is only voicing what usually goes unsaid.

Every campus has its sceptic. We have ours and he has started a chain reaction of self evaluation and personal introspection. His ideas may seem harsh, radical and very cynical but their interpretations are left to the reader.

As with hour tests, when the unprepared student claims that the test he has just flunked was ambiguous, it is not the test that is ambiguous but the student.

THERE HAVE BEEN SOME CHANGES MADE

Blackface was eliminated by fraternities in the storm of controversy. The banning of blackface was not a new issue at UVM but rather an old one that was brought up at a time when racial prejudice was in the back of every American's mind. The CYNIC backed the banishment of this subtle form of discrimination for two reasons. First and most prominent was the fact that no matter how unoffensive the predominately all-white student body thought blackface was, many Negroes in our community have spoken against it. This fact alone, plus the moral aspect were paramount in our decision. The second and least important was the fact that banning blackface was not a popular idea with most unthinking UVMers. So by presenting some of the facts, and our opinion, we feel we have done our part in making students more aware of this form of subtle racial discrimination.

Concerning the sculpture in front of the library - it has been the object of many derogatory comments made by unappreciative students. We tend to side with them but also realize that it is a work of art and should be appreciated.

As for the dynamic building boom on campus, we can say only that a university's prowess can be measured by the growth of its facilities. Here at Vermont we have grown in a considerably short time, to a point where we have the finest facilities possible for academic and athletic and athletic endeavors.

Regarding our football team -- All those alumni who are used to seeing their old Alma Mater lose on Homecoming are in for a surprise. Right now (before today's UNH game) the Catamounts are the "winningest" football team the University has had since 1949. Today's game should prove to be the most exciting Homecoming encounter in many years because Coach Clifford's men know what it is to win and like it.

Letters To The Editor Will The Real Sceptic Please Stand Up!

To the Editor:

I understand from several students that I am the person charged by Mr. Frumpel with being the author of that nasty, low-minded, unprincipled attack on frat clubs in The CYNIC. This is a base canard (French for duck).

Perhaps the best means of defeating such an accusation is to make some gesture that symbolizes one's purity. Oscar Wilde, upon his release from prison, indicated to a cheering French crowd that he had been cured of his aberration by patronizing a house of ill repute. Last Saturday I went (by invitation) to a cocktail party at my fraternity house (in case Mr. Frinkel wants to check, the frat club is Zeta Psi at Dartmouth).

Needless to say, I had a wonderful time. The sincere pressure of the never-to-be-forgotten secret handshake identified me as being a brother, and an immediate response of camaraderie was evoked. Laughing and singing the old songs, I passed the merry hours away, though I admit that on several occasions a tear slid down my cheek as I recalled those brothers who had not returned. When the time came to go, I turned away with a sincere smile my brothers' earnest efforts to sell me an alumni membership, and drove happily back to the hills of Vermont.

My wife has been strangely silent on the subject -- but then, she never belonged to a sorority. I hope this letter serves to make my position clear.

Sceptic Or Septic?

To the Editor:

In the last issue of the CYNIC, the student body of this university was treated to a collection of loose thoughts in a column called the Sceptic. There are many students on this campus who wish to know why the author (who prefers not to give his name) isn't presently at Waterbury. The apparent reason is that he is a member of the illustrious English Dept. Obviously the author has an excellent command of the English language but his thoughts or ideas are more of the type you would expect from a grammar school student.

I don't wish to dispute the "Sceptic" on all of his points of attack, however there are a few in particular that I feel are wrong. First of all, I am an independent yet I do not feel that fraternities are low centers of hetero- or homosexual living - as the Sceptic does.

Just recently while visiting another campus (Syracuse) I lodged at a frat house. I simply told the boys that I was from UVM (they had heard of the place) and that I was friendly with the boys in the chapter house there. Yes, "angry young man"; they gave me a room for two nights and also provided meals, (no charge).

As for your remarks about sorority girls - it would seem that you are divulging your past. Did the girls treat you harshly when you were in school? Do you dislike "Mixes and Matches" because of your inability to mix and the obvious impossibility of finding a match?

Mel Ravitz, '65

NOTE: The TEPs have been thinking. They think that the column, Sceptic should be renamed the "SEPTIC".

THE SCEPTIC

"Timeo Danaos." -- Laocoon

No columnist likes to praise someone else's writing. (I haven't said a word about Max Shulman, you'll notice; he is sullenly ignoring me.) However, I'm moved to praise two examples of remarkably successful irony in last week's CYNIC. Both of them are in form of letters to the editor. One deals with proper eating garb; it is competent but limited. The other, a real tour de force, purports to be a "defense" of fraternities by a house president. I can't praise it too highly. Briefly, then, its best effects are created by revealing faults in fraternities while pretending to deny them. Take its parody answer to the charge of fraternity-abetted plagiarism: "As far as the file system for fraternities is concerned, the moral responsibility lies within the individual". I.e., we just keep the burglar tools cleaned and the pistol oiled; it's not our fault that they're used. "Steve Frankel" also puts -- on the spot while pretending to defend him (I'm not allowed to mention names; the Editor says I've misrepresented the administration too much already.) Let me (please, Ed.) mention just one entertaining touch: the sentence announcing that "some of us are pretty decent guys" is followed by "Steve Frankel's" description of his letter as a "maliciously cynical answer."

Apparently a lot of people wish that I would sign my name and want to know why I don't. The answer should be obvious: I'm scared. Everywhere I go, dependents (a dependent is the opposite of an independent) are saying to each other, "Hey, this guy Sceptic says us frat men aren't moral. Let's get a gang and beat him up!"

Some former CYNIC member has been passing around the news that I'm really a certain teacher in the English department, and this teacher (he tells me) has been bombarded with anonymous and remarkably nasty letters. Apparently everyone he flunked has written him, and apparently he's flunked everyone. (Judging by the letters, at least those I've seen, he should have.)

The Editor has begged me to say something nice about fraternities, apparently not thinking that I had. He's not subtle. Well, here goes:

Fraternities at UVM are bulwarks against communism, guardians of social health, encouragers of heterosexuality, centers of wholesome intellectual ferment, and leaders in moral uplift. (Honest they are, Ed.; stop giving me that fishy look.) Their latest admirable action was to remove from Kake Walk the degrading wig and blackface of the walkers. Like all leaders in moral revolution, they have been subjected lately to a great deal of criticism for this action, the Free Press, for instance, has been soaked with the tears of teenagers and senior citizens alike, all moaning that Kake Walk ought to be spared. Apparently what bothers everyone is the problem of replacing blackface with something else. (No one, it seems, can stand the thought of looking at the walkers' faces.) Let us heed Babbitt's request to boost, not knock, and attempt to solve this problem. What about having the walkers wear Catamount heads? No good; they'd look silly; catamounts are too sensible to prance around like that. Well, what about having the walkers be real Negroes? No good; real Negroes don't act that way.

As you can see, the problem is perplexing, and I wish you'd favor the CYNIC with your thoughts on the matter. I can only think of one solution. In the past, the walkers were disguised as parody Negroes -- but everyone agrees that the parody was all in good fun (like "Steve Frankel's" letter). Well, how about dressing them this year as parody white? Surely, whites would be broadminded about it! The walkers could wear caricatured ivy league clothes and a crew-cut wig. Their faces, of course, would be painted fish-belly white, with randomly red spots.

Please communicate your opinion of this to the Editor (politely; he's been getting a lot of unprintable ones lately.). It's a serious matter, at least to us dependents, because the alternative to some such costume is for the conservatives in the fraternities to put blackface to another vote and reinstate it -- and if they do that, I'll bet the Administration will take Kake Walk away from the fraternities.

Anyone want a slightly used position as CYNIC columnist?

In the course of events in Latin America, the continent which is in a state of chaos and commotion, one could recall the history of this country and go back to the days of the war for independence.

Why do we have so much political and social unrest?

It definitely seems as if the whole continent will, for a long time to come, be under military dictatorships like the ones existing in Argentina, Guatemala, Peru, Dominican Republic and most recently Honduras.

On March 13, 1961, President Kennedy initiated the "Alliance for Progress"; a year later Mr. Kennedy defined the Alliance as more than a "blueprint for economic advance" -- it says that national progress is meaningless without individual freedom and political right.

Since then some half-a-dozen Latin American constitutional governments have been overthrown by military junta and still more are to come.

The military that took over in Honduras is more vigorous and violent. It was planned and executed just a week or so before the general election, which was scheduled to take place on Oct. 13. Only two days before the coup, President Ramon Valleda Morales declared that the rumor of a military threat to his government has no ground. I think he was, very likely, compelled to deny such things to save his skin.

The military junta justified their unconstitutional action by charging the government of being soft with the local communists. But most Latin American sources believe that the immediate reason for the coup was the pledge made by Modesto Rodas Alvarado as the presidential candidate, to reduce the military budget.

Basically, the real trouble lies on the fact that Honduras, like other Latin American countries, initiated the Spanish-Portuguese political and social outlook and to a certain extent the Catholic Church way of thinking. These two elements are considered the major factors that contribute to the ills of Latin continents and consequently stop the growth of democratic principle.

Nevertheless, there is emerging a third factor which was basically the product of the first two, namely: the Alliance between the military men and the landlords. This unqualified and ill-formed alliance is the real motive behind the military take-over in all Latin countries.

It is understood that any government popularly elected will start immediate and genuine social reform, and more particularly, land reform to wipe out the social injustice that is responsible for the unrest.

To go back to the "Alliance for Progress", I don't think it could solve the problem, nor any similar or more aggressive Alliance.

What will happen in Latin America in the next two or three decades is this: the population is tremendously increasing at a ratio that is higher than that of Red China. More cultural and political influences from the northern neighbor will continue. These two new elements will add to the intensity and the instability of the continent. I think the outcome is clear. We will see an explosive situation and a bloody violence which will lead to so much killing and bloodshed. Meanwhile it will indoctrinate the Latin people of the principle of individual liberty and political right. This means that the emergence of a real and strong leadership is certain. This leadership will mark the victory of the popular force. And eventually, the "Alliance for Progress" will successfully serve its liberal purpose.

Letters

To the Editor:

I shall admit at the outset of this discourse that my literary ability is not what your's is. I shall admit also that my age does not permit me to assume that I possess your experience -- but this is all that I shall admit.

I cannot admit that the students on this campus are as despicable as you intend to portray them. A fraternity does not make the man -- the man makes the fraternity. It is a man's choice to rush or not to rush, and it is further his choice, if offered an invitation to membership, to join or not to join the house(s) which invite him to membership.

Somewhere, your logic falls down. You say that a fraternity exists for the sake of existing. Well, Mr. Sceptic, you fail to say what is wrong with existence for its own sake. You say that fraternities are sex-pits. I dare to propose that sexual deviants statistically are not college educated, ipso facto they could not belong to fraternities. I further dare to take the position that I and you Mr. Sceptic, have no right to moralize for other people. The manner in which two people express their mutual affection is the concern of the two people involved and no one else. This is not to say that I am in favor of an amoral society; it is just to say that morals must come from within and not from without.

I would go one step further, Mr. Sceptic, and say that while you, a member of the faculty at this university, say that you invite people to argue with you, your classroom antics prove that in reality, you cannot stand being wrong.

To the Editor:

Basically, old boy, your column is rather poor. Nothing against what you are writing (its mostly dribble anyway) its the way you are writing it that is appalling.

Frankly, if your essays have and organization or cohesion, its beyond me. You skip from subject to subject, sans transition, and tend to confuse the reader as to what type of ridiculous nonsense you are really trying to write.

Stylistic techniques are lacking, and your use of quotations to fake culture is so absurd as to make one reel over in fits of hysterics.

Frankly sceptic, as an English teacher, who I had the "fortunate" experience of having, you ought to practice what you preach.

Martin Wolf, '65

To the Editor:

Having dutifully read the well-written Sceptic in the recent issues of the CYNIC, we have speculated a great deal as to the identity of the author. It appears to be as well guarded a secret as the identity of the man who is reporting to the Senate on the "Cosa Nostra." Having listened to the comments of a certain English instructor for an entire semester, we can not help but wonder at the similarity between the column and his lectures.

This anonymity brings to mind the story about Robert Frost when he was teaching English. After collecting the papers which his students had written, he asked them if there was anyone who wanted his or her paper back after it was corrected. On receiving no reply he threw all of the papers into the waste basket. He said that if they didn't think the papers were good enough to want them back, he didn't think they were good enough to correct. In much the same manner we feel that if the column is not good enough to be claimed by its author, it is not good enough to be published in the CYNIC.

Professors' Forum

To the Editor:

A few days ago a letter appeared in the CYNIC in which Mr. James Chaplin had a bit of fun at the expense of Paul Aschenbach's sculpture. At the risk of becoming the butt of some of Mr. Chaplin's more vivid jokes, I would like to discuss his witticism in some detail.

It is by now rather obvious that Mr. Chaplin does not care much for the sculpture. This, of course, is fine and really no more than normal. For when an abstract work makes its appearance in a community which is little used to abstraction, many of its viewers will fight it, lambast it and actively campaign against it. The reason for this is immaterial. Perhaps they have been jolted; perhaps they are trying to fight against an unwelcome intrusion into their comfortable, preconceived and conventional ideas. Be that as it may, the artist expects this form of criticism, he often welcomes it. For he knows that all the anger and hostility cannot change the work: it stands, alone, a stranger within society.

Scorn, however, is a bird of different feathers. If it cannot hurt the sculpture itself, it can, indeed it does create a climate of derision and ridicule in which creative thought is thwarted, twisted and finally destroyed.

Mr. Chaplin calls on the Board of Aldermen to declare the sculpture a junkyard in order to put a fence around it. He is, of course, trying to destroy the work. Yet, knowing quite well that the sculpture is there to stay, that no matter how hard he tries, nothing, short of violence, will really remove this affront to his eye, he uses his "wit" to laugh it out of existence. I wonder whether this is not going too far on the part of a teacher whose primary purpose, after all, is to make students aware of just those areas of life which, until now, have eluded them. I do not write here in defense of "Art". Rather, in this world of collective idiocy, it is the creative act which I would like to put on a pedestal. There is too little creativity today to dismiss it as a joke. Moreover, the act of creation and its tangible result are too little understood to further ignorance through this fairly lethal weapon. It makes no difference at all whether or not one dislikes a work of art, whether or not one finds it esthetically repulsive: the act of creation has beauty; it is born of sweat and tears and joy; it is the expression of an enormous struggle to attain freedom. One would hope that at least this human endeavor might retain the respect of those who have neither the ability nor the desire to create.

I would ask Mr. Chaplin whether he scorns an equation which he does not understand, whether he dismisses as junk a thought with which he is not familiar. I am quite certain that, on the contrary, before he scorns he tries to understand. Why not, then, try to "understand" this abstract sculpture? Why not make as much effort over it as over any other form of human thought?

Scorn is used here in order not to have to understand. It is used to further the ignorance of the members of the community and to ridicule the spirit which gave birth to the work. This I cannot accept. For the student is already too quick to dismiss and reject. To spend this rejection through the use of cynicism and mockery is also to further the process of dehumanization which is so rampant in our society. Scorn allows the student to be pleased at his own ignorance; he may laugh with the CYNIC. This is so much fun. It is also tragic. For this hollow laughter is the end of innocence, the end of search and the desecration of beauty. Is this Mr. Chaplin's desire? If so, it is a strange one indeed for one whose purpose it is to develop those qualities which he destroys.

The Independent View

by Miles Wortman

Within the past few weeks, the recurring controversy over fraternities has flared anew. This is due to the argument over the removal of blackface and due to an individual's satirical views that have been appearing weekly in the CYNIC. Last week, the controversy came to a head with a letter from a fraternity president, a new attack by "The Sceptic," and the fraternity's somewhat reluctant step to the removal of blackface. A few sane views are needed to clear up this fight over fraternities; not cynically, not emotionally, but with plain truths.

Primarily, I present a few facts.

First, should one wander into a fraternity party, various activities could be found. The drinking of intoxicating beverages would be, if not in the open, prevalent. A drunkometer test would break down from exhaustion. Second, there would be a fine variety of healthy sexual activity in the air, everywhere. In short, many of the activities that comprise a successful party would be seen. Any person who fails to see this is either blind or a fool.

Secondly, the Interfraternity Council laws prohibits drinking (I am not familiar with their views on sex). A few years ago a fraternity was placed on probation for holding a beer party. This hypocritical rule is made a farce of everytime a party is held.

Thirdly, the University maintains, on the surface, a puritanical policy of no drinking or sex on campus. In the men's dormitories liquor is taboo. Females, with the exception of the maids, are prohibited in the dorms (except during a few open houses). The punishment for the former is social probation and for the latter, expulsion. The administration either fails to see any of this occurring in fraternities or it refuses to see it.

Thus, here you have two hypocritical organs: the IFC and the administration. What the administration must do is either maintain its policy, strictly, both in the dormitories and the fraternities or show some intelligence and sense and review the University regulations. If it does not, the Dean of Men will continue to "lose the respect of the campus."

A second aspect of the fraternal debate is the apparent lack of social functions on campus. This argument has great merit and the fault (once again), lies with the administration. The only social event of any significance sponsored by the University (that I can think of) is Homecoming. The fraternities have filled a necessary void. The administration with its larger facilities could easily sponsor events in Billings Center that could provide the congenial atmosphere that is necessary for a party.

Finally, the intellectual atmosphere on this campus is somewhat close to nil. Last week, the University Players was forced to cancel a play due to lack of support. The Centaur, each year, has to fight harder to gain needed funds (Though, last year, the IFC commendably sponsored Centaur). Last year, due to some "technical oversight," Vermont Conference was not held. A few days ago, a foreign student remarked to me on his distaste for the atmosphere on the campus. The fault must lie with the controlling influence on this campus - the fraternities. Supporting Centaur with money is not the same as attending a debate on South Africa. The argument is frequently advanced that fraternities have a higher scholastic average than independents (i.e. they have a higher intellect). SCHOLASTIC AVERAGE IS NOT EQUATED WITH INTELLECT. Cramming for an exam the night before may bring a high mark, but the knowledge is quick in dissolving.

The fraternities who control this campus are antiquated organizations that need much revision. The administration of the University of Vermont, with its tacit support of fraternities and "fraternal life," in turn, is supporting a policy that, in the long run, will be detrimental to this institution of learning.

College Grads Not Assured Of Jobs

WASHINGTON (CPS) — President Kennedy's chief economic advisor has shattered the notion that a college degree assures all graduates of a job.

Chairman Walter W. Heller of the Council of Economic Advisors told a Washington meeting of the American Council on Education (CE) last week that the unemployment rate for college graduates more than doubled between 1957 and 1962.

During the same period, Heller said, the unemployment rate for the much larger group of male workers with an 8th grade education or less rose only about one-half — roughly the same as overall unemployment during the five-year period.

Heller said while the unemployment rate during the same period fell for the poorly educated group by 47 percent, the rate of unemployed with some education rose instead of dropping.

Heller also attacked the assumption that automation was creating a demand for more college-trained worker.

"The evidence is to the contrary," he commented.

Heller said unemployment among college graduates was nothing new. He compared the years of 1954 and 1962 — both with an unemployment rate of 5.6 per cent of the labor force. During both years, a group averaging over 16 years of schooling remained jobless at the identical rate of 1.7 per cent.

"This again suggests," Heller remarked, "that the highly educated group, vital as it is to longer-term growth, is no more of a bottleneck on the road to full employment than it was in the expansion between 1954-57."

Heller said a magic wand making every worker a college graduate would not solve the nation's 4 million unemployment problem, because "there simply aren't enough jobs to absorb both the unemployed, the technologically displaced and the new entrants all at once."

He again asserts that "the college-trained, no matter what the U.S. economy is doing, still stand a better chance in the labor market than the poorly-educated."

What's needed, is President Kennedy's pending income tax cut program — "the centerpiece of policy to generate that demand and create the needed jobs," commented Heller.

In another address, U.S. Education Commissioner Francis Keppel told the ACE that Congress was doing an "excellent" bi-partisan job in supporting administration education programs.

Keppel discussed the various higher education programs now pending on Capitol Hill, and told more than 1,000 educators attending the conference that both House and Senate education committees "have labored long and well to produce viable and constructive programs."

Keppel said, "I have no fear that so-called compromise legislation will be bad legislation."

Keppel also attacked inequality of education opportunity being paid "only lip service" by many in higher education.

He said 11 per cent of U.S. population is Negro while only 4 per cent are professional workers.

"Almost 12 per cent of young white adults between 25 and 29 complete college while only 5.4 per cent of this age group in the non-white population finish," he said.

"We cannot be proud of this record."

Welding Award Goes To Grad

A 1963 University of Vermont graduate has received a cash award from a national welding foundation for research done as an undergraduate.

Albert H. LeBlanc of Williamstown, who received his B.S. degree in mechanical engineering in June, was one of 40 engineering students in 26 universities and colleges throughout the United States to receive awards totalling $10,000 in the 16th annual Engineering Undergraduate Award Program for Arc Welded Designs of Machines or Structures. The contest is conducted by the James F. Lincoln Arc Welding Foundation of Cleveland, Ohio.

Competition is sponsored to stimulate scientific study and research, to advance the design of arc welded machines and structures.

LeBlanc was one of 20 students to be honored in the machinery division. His research paper was entitled "Design of a Vibration Testing Machine." LeBlanc is now employed by IBM at its Poughkeepsie, New York plant.

Roundup

appears to me that Vermont, improving from week to week, even though they will probably be again outweighed by a considerable margin, should defeat New Hampshire in a close game, if they are able to improve their porous pass defense. It was quite fortunate that the Rhody quarterback was an extremely inadequate passer, otherwise he could have easily passed for many touchdowns to his would-be receivers who were frequently in the open, having little difficulty evading the Vermont defenders. This problem has plagued the Cats both last season and in the initial four games this year although the pass defense is a little bit better than last year's tragic showing in this department when passes by the opposition resulted in the loss of three close games. There is no excuse for a weak pass defense, and it is hoped that this important defensive aspect will be improved by the time we encounter the strong passing games of New Hampshire and Massachusetts. It is this writer's opinion that the Cats will emerge victorious by a touchdown before the traditional capacity Homecoming day crowd.

THE BELL TELEPHONE COMPANIES SALUTE: STANTON PEEL

With Southern New England Telephone in New Haven, Stanton Peel (B.S., 1962) handles important engineering assignments for the Current Plans Office.

His projects have been as short as a matter of minutes, as long as several weeks. They have ranged from studies such as he made on the telephone facilities layout around Saybrook and Middlesex Junction, Connecticut, to the very comprehensive package he put together on Weather Announcement Service. Even though he's been with Southern New England Telephone less than a year, Stanton Peel has already established an enviable reputation for his thoroughness and keen analytical ability.

Stanton Peel, like many young engineers, is impatient to make things happen for his company and himself. There are few places where such restlessness is more welcomed or rewarded than in the fast-growing telephone business.

Luse Speaks

The University of Vermont campus was the scene for a rather exclusive gathering Saturday, (Oct. 12), when laryngectomees from Vermont and neighboring states were invited to meet at 2 p.m. in the Terrill Home Economics Building.

A "laryngectomee" is one who has undergone surgery for the removal of the larynx or voice box, according to Dr. Eleanor Luse of the University of Vermont department of speech. Dr. Luse has worked with numerous laryngectomees in teaching them to regain speech communication.

Injury or disease may necessitate such surgery, and the subsequent loss of normal speech. Laryngectomees may regain the ability to communicate through esophageal speech. According to Dr. Luse, the resultant speech is characterized by a low husky sound, but provides the laryngectomee with the continued opportunity to communicate, even if at something of a disadvantage in terms of ease or harmony.

Saturday's meeting provided an opportunity for laryngectomees and their families to meet informally to exchange ideas and compare experiences.

Dr. and Mrs. Rufus Morrow showed films taken during their visit on the S.S. Hope to Peru last Christmas. Refreshments were served.

Lanou Hudson and Dr. George Baxter, both of Burlington, have served on the program committee for the meeting.

Mixes And Matches

Congratulations are in order this week for Tri Delta's two new pledges, Barbara Trencher and Sue O'Haagan. Three cheers also for Judy Miller, the newly chosen Kake Walk Secretary.

Acacia's Burt Bryan, '65, pinned Ann Lindsey, Alpha Delta Pi, '65.

Lambda Iota is proud to announce the engagement of its president, Scott Hallock, to Carolyn Knight; and also wish to congratulate Al McQueen in his recent marriage to Sandy Sikor. Sandy is a graduate of MPH School of Nursing.

Congratulations to Linda Herzenberg, '64, on her pinning to Peter Sparks, '64 of Sigma Nu.

Congratulations to proud fathers Bobby Russo, Bobby Howard, and Lenny Rosenthal. These boys stayed up all night and paced the floor in anticipation of the birth of their guppies. They were christened Phyllis, Ruthie, and Sandy.

Alpha Delta Pi held a dessert hour Wednesday, October 9th with Phi Sig, which was enjoyed by both houses.

The Thetas extend their warmest welcome wishes to their new Head Resident and "caretaker" Mrs. Evelyn Peters who has moved in to 215 after spending a year in Claggethous. Congratulations are in order to Carol Truitt on her summer engagement to John Knubel of the U.S.N. and also to Sandy Murray, who arrived back at the Theta house this fall casually wearing the Delta Psi pin of Bob Belisle. Although she's the shortest member of the Theta clan at the moment, she is by no means obscure; and last but not least the Theta sisters congratulate Helen Lott Johnstone on her marriage this August to U.S. Naval Ensign Bruce Johnstone.

P.S. For all those interested, Melissa Hetzel, Miss Vermont, will appear on the "Tonight Show" on Friday evening, Oct. 18 -- Wow Em Meliss!

THERE WILL BE AN EAGLE
ON THE MOON

Our world-recognized trademark—"the P&WA eagle"—has been identified with progress in flight propulsion for almost four decades, spanning the evolution of power from yesterday's reciprocating engines to today's rockets. Tomorrow will find that same Pratt & Whitney Aircraft eagle carrying men and equipment to the moon and to even more distant reaches of outer space.

Engineering achievement of this magnitude is directly traceable to our conviction that basic and applied research is essential to healthy progress. Today's engineers at Pratt & Whitney Aircraft accept no limiting criteria. They are moving ahead in many directions to advance our programs in energy conversion for every environment.

Our progress on current programs is exciting, for it anticipates the challenges of tomorrow. We are working, for example, in such areas as advanced gas turbines... rocket engines... fuel cells... nuclear power—all opening up new avenues of exploration in every field of aerospace, marine and industrial power application.

The breadth of Pratt & Whitney Aircraft programs requires virtually every technical talent... requires ambitious young engineers and scientists who can contribute to our advances of the state of the art. Your degree? It can be a B.S., M.S. or Ph.D. in:

MECHANICAL • AERONAUTICAL • ELECTRICAL • CHEMICAL and NUCLEAR ENGINEERING • PHYSICS • CHEMISTRY • METALLURGY • CERAMICS • MATHEMATICS • ENGINEERING SCIENCE or APPLIED MECHANICS.

Career boundaries with us can be further extended through a corporation-financed Graduate Education Program. For further information regarding opportunities at Pratt & Whitney Aircraft, consult your college placement officer—or write to Mr. William L. Catamount Mermen Under New Schedule

Once again the Frank D. Forbush Natatorium echoes with the sounds of a swimming team at practice. It is a different team than the one that represented UVM last year, for this year we have a varsity team and frosh team to represent the university. The teams will have to meet an expanded schedule which includes: Norwich U., Union, Plattsburg State, McGill, U. of Mass., U. of Conn., and a final meet with Norwich over the Kake Walk weekend. A definite date for the Vermont Championships has not been set as of yet, but the other meets are noted in the datebook. Coach Les Leggett feels that the teams should do very well this year, since there are a number of returning swimmers as well as very good frosh swimmers. The 33 men are working hard so why not come to their meets. There are bleachers in the natatorium and even room for some water ballet cheerleaders.

Catamounts Batter Rams 21-6

UNH Here For Homecoming

Burton Stars In Y C Win

LOOKING AHEAD - Dean Kent steps over a Ram tackler and sets his sights downfield. Paul Toussaint (86) is throwing a block, along with prostrate Ken Burton, who has blocked his man out of the picture.

Many upsets spiced last week-end's collegiate slate but up here in Vermont, the Catamounts' 21-6 victory over the Rams of Rhode Island was no surprise. The gridiron forces of Coach Bob Clifford have come a long way since last year when the Cats really upset the Rams. They proved to a capacity crowd of 6,200 that UVM is definitely a worthy Yankee Conference contender.

The Catamounts retaliated with a renewed vitality after losing a close one to Maine the week before. The offensive attack was comprised of a fierce ground game, highlighted by two galloping jaunts by Ken Burton, and the superb quarterbacking of Scot Fitz and Jack O'Dea. Making possible this assault were the magnificent line play of Rusty Brink, George Oelze, Fred Boese and Big Ron Hertel, and the heart-stopping blocks of Richie Reynolds, Deane Kent, and Scot Fitz. Coach Clifford, who received the victory as a birthday present, must have been in his glory as his boys put on their most impressive showing of the season.

With 2:40 gone in the second period, Burton swept around right end and, with a few key blocks, flew through the maze of white jerseys for a brilliant 60 yard touchdown run. Paul Toussaint then split the uprights to make the score 7-0.

The Rams bounced back with a fine 73-yard kick-off return by halfback Wayne Zdanowicz. On the second play from scrimmage, Ram quarterback Paul Broccoli lifted an aerial to Bob Del Vecchio in the end zone. The attempt for extra point was nullified when the hike from center flew over the punter's head. At the half the score remained 7-6.

The third quarter showed the Cats' longest drive, from their own 35. After four first downs, Scot Fitz rifled a pass to Deane Kent on the four yard line of Rhode Island. Kent then fought his way to pay dirt. Toussaint again converted for the extra point, and it was 14-6, in favor of Vermont.

Nothing yet has been said about the Catamount defense. However, let it not be said that it was idle, for throughout the game, it was the crushing tackles of Rusty Brink, George Oelze, and Jim Brennan, along with a host of other Cats that stymied the advances of the Rams. One perfect example of this occurred in the third quarter, when Rhode Island, reached Vermont's 21 yard line. With fourth down and 1 foot to go for a first, big fullback Tony Tetro was refused the distance, as the Catamount "brick wall" stood fast. This proved to be the turning point of the game as Rhody did not seriously threaten Vermont again.

This excellent display of defensive strength set the scene for Burton's second roush down. On the second play from scrimmage, he picked up a beautiful block by Deane Kent, headed for the sidelines, out-faked the secondary, and out-raced everyone to the end zone. Burton's total offense gave him 147 yards rushing in 14 carries, for an 11.3 average.

UVM showed superior teamwork in last Saturday's victory,

Frosh Drown Williams 20-6

by Joe Soldano

The UVM Freshmen team scored their second straight victory, Friday afternoon 20-6, in a rain soaked battle at Centennial field.

Coach (Fuzzy) Evens' footballers scored all their points in the first half, on runs of 7-yards and 2-yards by Butch McCrea. The other came on an 11-yard sprint by Jim Krouse.

Williams only score against the tight Vermont defense, came early in the fourth quarter. The Kittens punter, Keith Keiderling, had trouble holding on to the wet pigskin and fumbled on his own 3-yard line. Williams fullback John May carried it over on the ensuing play.

Vermont's initial score came in the first quarter when, after marching 60 yards from their own 40, on passes from Bill Leete to fullback John Capron, McCrea then carried it over from the 7-yard stripe. The 2 point conversion attempt failed.

Williams stalled after the kick-off on their own 40-yard line. Vermont then moved to the Williams 2 on runs by Dave Busick and Capron. McCrea then scored his second touchdown off the right side of the line after fine blocks by end Bob Florezak and tackle Bill Dorozenski. Dale Scribner kicked the point after.

The Frosh's fine defense led by guard Joe Soldano, fullback Leo Pfeiffer and linebacker Jim Klode forced the Williams 11 to punt.

Taking the ball on their own 5-yard line, the Kittens moved to their third touchdown on 8 plays.

McCrea got them out of a hole with a 15-yard jaunt to the 30. As the rain fell, Leete did the unexpected and took to the air, hitting Eric Mortensen twice for 23 and 33 yards respectively.

Halfback Jim Krouse then spun and fought his way the remaining 11 yards for the final touchdown.

Defensive halfbacks Jack Schweberger and Dick Lathrop kept the Williams Club for threatening by their timely interceptions.

Schweberger's interception came in the third quarter on the Williams 35, but the Kittens gave up the pigskin on downs.

On the last play of the game Lathrop, picked off a George Cannon pass and ran it back to the 23 yard line as time ran out.

and will be gunning for a repeat performance against the Wildcats of the University of New Hampshire. The annual Homecoming game will be stacked with excitement as the Cats battle to remain in second place in Yankee Conference standings.

Burton Makes ECAC Weekly Team Again

Ken Burton, UVM's flashy halfback, was selected to the ECAC team of the week in a row. Burton received this honor on the strength of his performance against URI last weekend. He scored two touchdowns on swivel-hipped runs of 60 and 59-yards, while totalling 147-yards for the day, four short of breaking his own one game record.

Rappa's Roundup

By Richard Rappaport

Two years ago Coach Robert Clifford was brought to UVM in order to help the Catamounts regain their winning ways as the initial step toward a new emphasis on football in the school's athletic program. Last year faint forces of hope for the future were seen when the Cats won their first conference game in six years by defeating Rhode Island 21-12, and logging a very close game to Maine.

However, last year was primarily one of familiarization for Clifford and his staff with their new surroundings, and formidable opponents as the Cats played New Hampshire and Massachusetts for the first time.

With last year's campaign under their belts, the Catamounts are serving notice that they are no longer the pushovers they formerly were, having won three out of their first four games, the lone loss coming by only one point to Maine.

Although the first two victories of last season were impressive, last Saturday's contest was, without a doubt, Vermont's best played game in the last four years.

This triumph over Rhode Island 21-6 was significant for two reasons, the Cats excellent play and the unexpected signs of school spirit from the usually lethargic Vermont fans.

Outstanding on offense for Vermont was of course halfback Ken Burton who broke away for touchdown runs of 60 and 59 yards. He has definitely established himself as one of the Yankee Conference outstanding backs as well as one of the East's small college best.

However, Burton was not the only backfield performer who excelled on offense Saturday. Although all looked good others who proved to be outstanding were Ken Andrade, Frank Foerster and Carl Ertlinger, all in substitution roles, and of course sophomore quarterback Scott Fitz who ably directed the attack throughout the contest.

Vermont's line did a fine job with special words of praise going to guards, captain George Oelze and Ron Hertel and aggressive sophomore center Rusty Brink, for their exceptional blocking and defensive play.

School spirit was displayed at this game for the first time in the last few years. The fine play of the Cats in the first three contests, plus Burton's first electrifying touchdown run seemed to awaken a spirit which has been absent at this school at all sporting events. It would be a great aid to our teams if this spirit could be maintained, and even hopefully increased in the next few weeks. School spirit, which most students fail to realize could give our athletic teams that added extra incentive which can mean the difference between winning and losing close ball games.

Vermont brings their 3-1 record into this week's game against the defending Yankee Conference champions, the New Hampshire Wildcats who are 1-1 in conference play, and 2-1 overall. They defeated Rhode Island 25-13, and lost last week to Maine 28-8, having been forced to play that game without their first string quarterback who was injured.

With or without their top quarterback, the Wildcats will be tough to beat, as evidenced by last year's 19-7 Catamount defeat at their hands. However, it

With 8-28 loss to Maine, 10-game winning streak over two years was snapped. Lack depth to back up injured QB Wells. Have strong ground game. Also defending Yankee champs. VOL. 81 UNIVERSITY OF VERMONT, BURLINGTON, VERMONT OCTOBER 25, 1963 NO. 15

Tuition Increased To $500 & $1500 For Next Fall

The University of Vermont will increase resident tuition from $416 to $500 and nonresident tuition from $1,200 to $1,500 effective with the fall semester of 1964.

The action was taken by the university's Board of Trustees Saturday after President Fey said that increasing cost, including the necessity for keeping pace with faculty salary levels nationally and in the New England region would otherwise mean a deficit of more than $600,000 for the 1964-65 academic year.

The $300 increase for non-residents had been anticipated when the university submitted a revised budget request to the 1963 Legislature. The prospect of the increase for Vermont residents was first suggested when the revised request was reduced during the closing days of the legislative session.

Upperclass students of the university had been advised last spring that a tuition increase might be necessary, and incoming freshmen were also advised of the possibility by letter during the summer.

Fey said the university knows the tuition increase "will have serious consequences for many students who already depend on scholarship or loan aid, or who must work part time to continue their education."

He pledged the university "will continue to seek new resources to help reduce the consequences of this latest evidence of the rising cost of education."

The university's recently announced "Return to annual alumni giving" program marks one-quarter of every unrestricted alumni gift for a scholarship fund, it was noted.

In other actions, the board acknowledged gifts, grants and scholarships totaling more than $350,000, with research grants accounting for $314,000 of the total.

The board approved the appointment of 23 staff members, and accepted the resignation of A. Moazzamul Huq, associate professor in commerce and economics, effective Jan. 31, 1964. Dr. Huq has accepted an education-research post, Fey reported.

Members of the board passed a resolution marking the loss of

Dr. John C. Huden, professor of education and director of testing, paying "homage to the memory of this man who served the profession of education with love and dignity throughout his career." He died July 11.

The board paved the way for the opening of a major fund campaign for construction of the $8,700,000 phase three unit of the university's three-phase medical building program.

The university will seek federal funds available on a two-to-one matching basis for the classroom and library facilities and on a one-for-one basis for research facilities of the phase three construction.

The trustees also authorized application for federal funds for planning of the university's projected life sciences facility. Federal funds are expected to be available on a one for one matching basis for science construction, and Fey indicated the university would seek to find the necessary matching funds from private sources, as will be the case for the medical phase three construction.

The board authorized negotiation for a sale of a tract of lease land in Cambridge, authorized the university to execute a right of way agreement with the Burlington Electric Light Department, and approved lease of university land to the Roman Catholic Diocese for construction of a chapel and Newman Center on the same terms approved for a similar project of the Episcopal Diocese.

Fey reported to the board that the university has made it possible for gifted high school students to take certain university level courses when they have taken all available courses in those areas at their high schools.

The university offers the opportunity at tuition rate relative to those charged regular students, Fey indicated.

He noted that occasionally gifted students are unable to meet such charges, and told the trustees that the university will explore the possibility of making financial assistance available for those gifted students who otherwise might have to pass up the opportunity for special enrichment study at UVM.

Lerner And Loewe's "Camelot" Comes To Burlington As Second Concert In Blue Lane Series

"Camelot," the most lavish and opulent musical comedy of many a Broadway theatre season, will be presented Saturday, October 26, as the second concert in the Blue Lane Series. The play is the latest Lerner and Loewe collaboration, the famous team having created "My Fair Lady," as well as "Brigadoon," "Paint Your Wagon," and the movie, "Gigi."

Starring in the witty retelling of the legend of King Arthur and his valiant knights of the Round Table, their jousts and their quests, their escapades and adventures with the ladies they pursued or defended, are Jeannie Carson and Biff McGuire. All the songs made popular by the Broadway cast recording will be reproduced by this husband-and-wife team and the supporting cast.

Jeannie Carson, remembered by last season's Lane Series audience for her delightful performance as Maria Von Trapp in

Vt. Peace Corps

Residents of the Green Mountain state now serving as Peace Corps volunteers have strong University of Vermont connections.

Based on the last set of statistics available from the Peace Corps office, of 10 Vermonters now either in training or serving in the Peace Corps overseas, five are former UVM students. Five more ex-UVM students but from out of state are also engaged in Peace Corps work.

The five from the state of Vermont are Daniel Doheny, Jr., of St. Albans; Dorothy Isham of Morrisville; George Talbot of Woodstock; Anne Wilson of Craftsbury, and Sheila McGinley of Burlington.

Doheny is in Niger, Isham in the Ivory Coast, Talbot in Tunisia, and McGinley and Wilson in the Philippines.

The five out-of-staters with UVM ties are John Ware, Interlaken, N.J., now in Tunisia; Ervin Lemmon, Jamesville, N.Y., in Pakistan; Mark Schroeder, Cambridge, Mass., in Nepal; Roger Madon, Jamaica, N.Y., in the Philippines, and Daniel Vignone, Longmeadow, Mass., in Ethiopia.

Vermont ranks seventh (in proportion to its population) in the number of Peace Corps applicants who actually become volunteers. A person is not classified as a volunteer until he or she actually completes training and is assigned to a project.

Melville Cooper, who plays King Pellinore in Lerner & Loewe's "Camelot". The lavish musical hit, based on the King Arthur legend, is coming to the Memorial Auditorium.

"The Sound of Music," stars as Queen Guenevere. The queen's ill-fated romance with the brave, young Lancelot, played by Sean Garrison, gives rise to some of the most melodic and tender ballads in recent musical theater. Biff McGuire co-stars as the legendary King Arthur who dreams of a peaceful world and an order of noble knights who live by the motto of might serving right. The comical King Pellinore is portrayed by Melville Cooper whose face is familiar to theater audiences both here and abroad.

"Camelot" is based on "The Once and Future King" by T.H. White. Alan Jay Lerner read a review of Mr. White's book in the book review section of the New York Times and made a mental note to purchase the book and read it. Two days later, Stone Widney, production assistant on "My Fair Lady," suggested to Lerner that White's book held possibilities for a musical by Fritz Loewe and Lerner. A few minutes later the phone rang. It was Moss Hart. He had just read a review of a book called . . . you guessed it, Four days later Fritz Loewe and Alan Jay Lerner began two years of work, the completion of which brings "Camelot" to Burlington.

Modern Sculpture Exhibition Shown At Fleming Museum

A group of new sculptures by Roy Kennedy is the current featured exhibit at the Fleming Museum through to October 27. Twenty eight separate pieces are represented in the collection.

The sculptor, a native of Buffalo, New York, studied painting at the Albright Art School, Buffalo; the Ozenfant School of Fine Arts, New York City; and the Academie Julian, Paris. His formal schooling was followed by several years of extensive travel through Belgium, Holland, Germany, Norway and Denmark. His return to the United States brought a one-man show of paintings at the Ten Yellow Steps Gallery, Buffalo, and the following year at the Fleming Museum. His exhibits have gained much favorable notice at the Denver Art Museum, Denver, Colorado; the Bernhardt Crystal Gallery, New York City; and the Vermont Information Center, Rockefeller Center, New York.

The exhibit at Fleming is characterized by the use of brazed and welded copper to represent both human and animal forms. Particularly outstanding in a generally exceptional collection are the poignant facial expressions caught in "Native Son," "Guy," and "Judy," the magnificent agony of "Fallen Angel" and the dramatically striking "Apostles Fishing."

Happy Homecoming!

ON TO VICTORY - Ken Burton heads for the goal post and six points to tie the score at 6-6 in the second quarter against UNH. Paul (Automatic) Toussaint's successful PAT put the Cats ahead to stay as they pleased the Homecoming gathering of over 7,000 with a sparkling 28-6 victory. See page 10 for details.

The annual class elections will be held Monday, October 28. Polls will be located at the four key places on campus: Waterman Building, 9 a.m. - 4 p.m.; Lower Billings, 9 a.m. - 4 p.m.; and Marsh and Simpson dining halls, 5 p.m. - 6 p.m. This election gives the freshmen their first opportunity to participate in campus government, therefore, all members of the Class of '67 are strongly urged to vote. Important contests will be for the office of president of both the Junior and Senior classes. In the Class of '64, Ronnie Guttman vs. George Fraser, and in the Junior class, Skip Laufer, Jim Sealy and Aaron Schildhaus are running for the office of president. UVM TO BE REPRESENTED AT STUDENT CONFERENCE

Ilene Hofbinder and Bill Perlow will represent the University of Vermont at the Fifteenth Student Conference on United States Affairs which will be held December 4-7 at the United States Military Academy, West Point, N.Y. Sponsored by the United States Military Academy and the George Olmsted Foundation, the Conference's purposes are to produce an informative examination and discussion of the national security policy of the United States; to provide an outstanding representation of college students with an appreciation of the complexities of government policy formulation; and to broaden students' contacts with their contemporaries in an academic endeavor. Approximately 215 student participants will meet to discuss "The National Security Policy of the United States" with focus on the "Problems of the Developing Nations."

In a Round Table discussion, Ilene, Chairman of Vermont Conference Committee and former acting Vice President of Alpha Epsilon Phi, will discuss "Africa South of the Sahara." Ilene is now doing Senior Honor Research in History and has been Rush Chairman of Alpha Epsilon Phi for the past two years. Billy Perlow, who is doing Senior Honor in Latin America in the Political Science Department, will discuss Latin America at the Conference. A member of Key and Serpent, Billy has starred in the past two productions of the University Players. He is also Treasurer of Tau Epsilon Phi and a member of the University Choir.

The conference will begin with the Keynote Address, to be delivered at the first plenary session on the afternoon of December 4th by the Honorable W. Averill Harriman. The Banquet Address will be delivered on the evening of December 6th by Prince Bernhard of the Netherlands.

Round Table chairmen and advisors for Round Tables have been invited from faculties and private or governmental agencies concerned with national policy. This group, whose role is primarily one of guidance, will have considerable experience in the field of the conference topic.

VP Johnson Arrives Today

The arrival of Vice-President Lyndon B. Johnson and his wife is set for 3:30 p.m. at the Burlington Municipal Airport. The Vermont Band will be on hand to make Vice-President and Lady Bird Johnson feel at home by playing "The Yellow Rose of Texas." There will also be a sky diving exhibition.

The welcoming committee of students from both UVM and St. Michael's College will be carrying homemade posters in honor of the Vice-President. The UVM and SMC Pershing Rifles will also be among the gathering to add some military color.

At 3:45, Johnson's party will leave the airport and travel through Essex Junction, Winoski, and Burlington in a motorcade. At 4:30, they will arrive at the Hotel Vermont where 150 of the state's Democrats will greet the Vice-President. Friday evening, Johnson will speak at the "Jefferson, Jackson Dinner."

Colleges Move To Ban Sale Of Cigarettes

PHILADELPHIA (CPS) — Cigarettes may be on their way out, if the actions at two colleges are any indication.

Earlier this month, Allegheny College, in Meadville, Pa., removed the last four cigarette machines from all of its buildings. At present, students can smoke on campus, but there are no machines that sell cigarettes.

The student newspaper said, "The action is in line with the decision of the tobacco companies to focus sales efforts on older markets."

Dean of Students John O. McKean reported that there is no intention of instituting a college rule against cigarette smoking, but said that the college "would be remiss in a tacit encouragement of the practice" implicit in the presence of the machines.

At Springfield College, in Springfield, Mass., the student council has passed a motion prohibiting the sale of cigarettes on campus. It yet remains to be passed on by the student body in a referendum requiring a 2/3 vote to pass.

The Springfield Student, the campus newspaper, conducted a survey of student opinion and found that of the 32 students contacted, 11 favored the resolution and 20 opposed it with one abstention.

If these two schools can be taken as the beginning of a national trend, the old familiar cigarette machines may be on their way out on the nation's college campuses.

Placement Barometer Women's Work Now Three Dimensional

by Douglas O. Hanau, Director of Placement

Today's senior woman, in looking ahead of her future, has to plan for three work-a-day worlds. The first is what I choose to call the training period. This usually lasts from one to three years. Upon getting married, the young woman puts aside her job training, enters the second world of marriage and raising a family, and concentrates essentially on living a domestic life. This period tends to last, depending upon the number of children in her family, anywhere from seven to ten years. She now enters the third work-a-day world, which is a re-entry into the job market and picking up the strings of her career which was started following her graduation from college.

There are many reasons today for women taking up full time jobs, after having established their families. I am sure you have read any number of articles discussing this topic in the various women's magazines. Furthermore, I suspect many of you have your own insights on this discussion, based upon your own family experience. Without getting too involved in looking at the working mother's reasons for holding down a job, one basic cause to affect every American family is the increasingly high cost today of obtaining a college degree. Fifteen years ago a husband's income could perhaps sustain the majority of his education bills. Today the working wife is a major contributor to the family's income where it concerns absorbing the cost of obtaining a college and graduate education.

A report, prepared by the National Industrial Conference Board, shows that in 40% of the 6.5 million U.S. families with incomes of $10,000 or more annually, the wife brings home a pay check to supplement the income of the chief bread winner. The rise of the multi-wage families also is predicted on the continued increase in the number of married women in the labor force.

An estimated 13.2 million married women - nearly one fifth of the nation's work force - are currently employed or looking for employment. The typical working woman of today is likely to be about 41 years old, with a husband and a growing family. While many work out of economic necessity, a growing number is seeking to use the skills acquired by higher education and training. The Labor Department estimates that nine out of every ten women will be gainfully employed during some part of their lives. If she is married, a woman can expect to work 25 years. If she is single, she will work forty years.

Despite this trend to outside jobs, housewifery is still the main occupation of most American women, and about 35 million of them devote their full time to it. But for the wife who wants, or needs, to work, there are some 446 kinds of jobs open to her. She is most often found in a sale, service, or factory job, but the Labor Department also reports some 2,500 women electricians, 5,000 carpenters and more than 12,000 painters and paperhangers.

No longer can the women college graduate in today's ever-changing world limit herself to the planning of a single career. For her thinking, unlike a man's, in at least this respect, must now become three dimensional.

Sweaters: Their History And Style Trends

Fashion conquers all for collegiates this fall. The "in" shapes are sculptured for action and strong on style, according to Wool Bureau reports. Any battle of wits can be won in a walkaway with Lady Puritan's knee-length culotte of permanently pleated pure wool, topped by a smashing Petti sweater. Culottes score a fashion coup on campus for their slim, trim good looks and active, attractive air of sportive know-how. Subtle teamwork of skirt and short combination provides freedom of movement with smart styling. Pure wool pullover sweater has hand-crocheted tile-panel front in tone-on-tone patchwork pattern. Open-weave sleeves and background tone is solid beige.

Did you know that every time you put on a sweater you are donning a century or more of historical tradition?

You can thank an English clergyman, according to the Wool Bureau, and a soldier who led the Charge of the Light Brigade, some sweating athletes, Gay Nineties bicycle riders, Klondike gold rush prospectors, and ladies with tight corsets for popularizing that snug garment which gives you so much style and comfort.

Sweater history. While the actual beginnings of sweater history are indefinite, it is known that the first knitted blouses appeared in England about 1863, some 75 years after Reverend William Lee invented the hand-knitting frame.

The sweater as we know it today probably derived from a knitted garment worn early in the 19th century and called a "spencer." This was usually a woolen shawl worn under coats, and at home over clothes on chilly days.

The word "sweater" literally sweated its way into the language. In the 19th century the term referred to knitted woolen affairs with long sleeves and turtle necks worn by athletes, permitting them to perspire without catching cold. Wool was used because of its ability to provide warmth and ventilation in a light weight garment.

Sweaters "soared" on the fashion scene with the feminine craze for cycling during the 90's. Called "athletic jerseys" in those days, these sweaters often featured ballooning sleeves.

You wouldn't think that the gentle wool cardigan, or coat sweater, could have any connection with battle—but it was named for Lord Cardigan who happened to lead the famous "Charge of the Light Brigade" in the Crimean War. The Klondike gold rush popularized its warmth and comfort and by 1910 it was able to claim the following headline in the New York Herald Tribune: "Borrowed Plumes; Women Adopt Masculine Sweaters for Feminine Uses."

Soon sweaters began to represent the freedom that women had won from the restrictions of the Victorian corset and the hour-glass silhouette. According to the Wool Bureau, the 1915 "new look" included loose-fitting blouses, and knitted silk sweaters too.

Men won a measure of freedom too, in the Tuxedo jacket which thrived from 1915 to 1925.

Modern trends. Most popular sweaters in the last few years have been the bulkies, whose ancestors were the 1940's now-ward models, and the "sloppy Joes." Present day designers are pulling out all the stops in combining various novelty stitches and design patterns. Among the most popular this winter will be the "primitive" prints—the jerkin, sleeveless, hip-long and waistless, and for men, brightly patterned, collarless cardigans. Another big item: the very trim blazer of wool.

Wool remains the pace setter in sweaters with the hand-knit look the mark of high fashion. Its popularity will increase as it joins the easy-care clothes family.

Sweater Facts

The scientists who found a way to change wool's molecular structure to make it retain creases and pleats permanently have found another process which can make 100 per cent wool sweaters washable and dryable. (Not all sweaters are machine launderable so you must look at the tag!)

If the art of sweater making has reached a new high in fashion and care, so has the art of sweater buying.

Before you buy, the Wool Bureau suggests that you:

(a) Test the sweater for proper sizing. If you can't try it on, hold it up to be sure the shoulder seams reach your arm sockets, that sleeves, if long, cover the wrist bone, and the bottom of the sweater just reaches the hipbone. Length varies of course, according to style but the sweater should be long enough so the lady shopper knows it won't hike above her skirt when she bends over.

(b) Check for elasticity. Waist and sleeve bands should stay snug and snap right back after stretching.

(c) Look at the tag if you want a washable sweater. It should assure you that the garment can be handwashed without shrinking, stretching, fading.

(d) Examine workmanship. A well-made sweater will have neatly finished seams, neatly made buttonholes with no loose threads waiting to pull, and an even knitting texture.

These pearls of wisdom will help you to buy with confidence and without knitting your brow. And while you may have every bit as much desire for warmth and comfort as the Klondike gold seekers, your sweater prospecting won't be a gamble.

1963 Vermont Varieties Shows Great "Variety"

by Carolyn Seigel

The seventeenth annual Vermont Varieties was presented Saturday night by the University Players in Memorial Auditorium as part of the Homecoming Weekend festivities. The show was characterized by folk singers, dancers and actors.

The production opened with Marion Moor dancing in maid's attire to "Let Me Entertain You." Esther Sundell then sang "Summertime" from the play "Porgy and Bess." Following this were three folk songs — "The Sexual Desires of the Camel," "The Lavender Cowboy," and "Don't Think Twice" — sung by Sumner Silverman and "There'll Be Some Changes Made" sung by Jean Conner. Errol Selsby and Sylvia Hook did a skit called Four Hundred Years Later, which was followed by a medley of songs from "Oklahoma" sung by Bill Bosworth. Marion Moor provided some comedy in another dance.

Lee Pantas sang three folk songs and Nancy Streit and Dave Storti who were called the Champlain Shakespearean Minstrels sang three selections. Ruthie Lichten read from the play "Archie and Mehtabel."

Three folk dances from Israel, choreographed by Norma Albert of the Women's Physical Education Department, were next on the program. They were "Malu Asamenu Bar," "Bo Dodi," and "Hora Agadati." She was assisted by Cordelia Kennedy and Lesley Patterson. The theme songs of two modern-day heroes — Dr. Kildare and Conrad Birdie — were interpreted by Bob Colagiovanni; following that was a skit called Hamlet, performed by Errol Selsby. The UVM Madrigals performed next. Under the direction of Francis Weinrich, the group sang "Ich Weiss mir ein Meidlein" by di Lasso, "The Mavis" by Purcell, and "Speme Amorosa" by Gastoldi. A dance to the tune of "Walk on the Wild Side" was performed by Fredda Eccer and Bryant Reynolds, and the Green Mountain Boys, a group which is quite well-known at UVM sang four songs, including one encore, and "Rover", a song they hope to record. The closing of the show was the same as the opening, tying up the production. Donald Coscina served as Master of Ceremonies and provided humor, as well as introductions, to the various performers.

Vermont Varieties was staged, designed, and managed by Bryant Reynolds and John Dancoes. The business manager was Robert J. Stein, Jr.

HAPPINESS CAN'T BUY MONEY

With tuition costs steadily on the rise, more and more undergraduates are looking into the student loan plan. If you are one such, you would do well to consider the case of Leonid Sigafos.

Leonid, the son of an unemployed bean gleaner in Straightened Circumstances, Montana, had his heart set on going to college, but his father, alas, could not afford to send him. Leonid applied for a Regents Scholarship, but his reading speed, alas, was not very rapid—three words an hour—and before he could finish the first page of his exam, the Regents had closed their briefcases crossly and gone home. Leonid then applied for an athletic scholarship, but he had, alas, only a single athletic skill—picking up beebees with his toes—and this, alas, aroused only fleeting enthusiasm among the coaches.

And then—happy day!—Leonid learned of the student loan plan: he could borrow money for his tuition and repay it in easy installments after he left school!

Happily Leonid enrolled in the Southeastern Montana Col-

...but he had, alas, only a single athletic skill

lege of Lanolin and Restoration Drama and happily began a college career that grew happier year by year. Indeed, it became altogether ecstatic in his senior year because Leonid met a coed named Anna Livia Plurabelle with hair like beaten gold and eyes like two sockets full of Lake Louise. Love gripped them in its big moist palm, and they were betrothed on St. Crispin's Day.

Happily they made plans to be married immediately after commencement—plans, alas, that were never to come to fruition because Leonid, alas, learned that Anna Livia, like himself, was in college on a student loan, which meant that he not only had to repay his own loan after graduation but also Anna Livia's and the job, alas, that was waiting for Leonid at the Butte Otter Works simply did not pay enough, alas, to cover both loans, plus rent and food and clothing and television repairs.

Heavy hearted, Leonid and Anna Livia sat down and lit Marlboro Cigarettes and tried to find an answer to their problem—and, sure enough, they did! I do not know whether or not Marlboro Cigarettes helped them find an answer; all I know is that Marlboros taste good and look good and filter good, and when the clouds gather and the world is black as the pit from pole to pole, it is a heap of comfort and satisfaction to be sure that Marlboros will always provide the same easy pleasure, the same unstinting tobacco flavor, in all times and climes and conditions. That's all I know.

Leonid and Anna Livia, I say, did find an answer—a very simple one. If their student loans did not come due until they left school, why then they just wouldn't leave school! So after receiving their bachelor's degrees, they re-enrolled and took master's degrees. After that they took doctor's degrees—loads and loads of them—until today Leonid and Anna Livia, both aged 87, both still in school, hold doctorates in Philosophy, Humane Letters, Jurisprudence, Veterinary Medicine, Civil Engineering, Optometry, Woodpulp, and Dewey Decimals.

Their student loans, at the end of the last fiscal year, amounted to a combined total of nineteen million dollars—a sum which they probably would have found some difficulty in repaying had not the Department of the Interior recently declared them a National Park.

Cynic-al Observations

The blackface controversy, which "raged" across the UVM campus a short while ago, gave a group of Yankee college students an opportunity to look at some of their long-established traditions and find that they were practicing a subtle subconscious type of discrimination. It also gave some an opportunity to tell Yankee liberals that they were practicing quite a few forms of discrimination which were in no way subtle and a great deal more vicious than anything like blackface.

Not that so-called white liberals are not deserving of much of the criticism hurled at them, but it is also good to remember that there are a great number of people in America who make no pretense of liberalism or toleration---these are racists (and by the way, not all racists live south of the Mason-Dixon line).

A few days ago, Robert Collier, the President of the IFC, received a letter (postmarked Tallahassee, Florida) from one self-appointed "preserver-of-the-race" who had heard of UVM's IFC ruling eliminating blackface. The CYNIC is reprinting this letter as exemplary of a type of mentality. In your perusal, keep in mind that the reason for the lack of continuity in this letter (besides the author's inept style) is that we have eliminated the many newspaper clipping that were attached to the letter (example of headline---5 N.Y. Youths Stabbed After Integrated Party) and to which the author refers frequently.

Blackface...Dixie Answers

Dear Robert;

We never cease to get laughs out of you Yankees on this African business. What has us puzzled is, where is your heaviest concentration of negroes? The United States' Census of 1962 shows Vermont to have had "519" negroes. "Now 'ain't" that sumptin' 519 negroes in a state. We have 880,000 of these Africans in Florida, 1,121,000 in Georgia . . . 519 negroes in Vermont. If it were not for Ed Sullivan, those Vermont syrup people would never see a negro.

As for the black faces, aren't they black? Have you ever felt a negro's hair? It's like steel wool -- go feel a little negro's hair, because a big negro resents his hair and he might cut out your guts if you tamper with his hair -- think I'm kidding you? Try it and see.

There is a segregated restaurant in Atlanta -- one of thousands in Dixie. Why not get a few of your 519 Vermont negroes and try to integrate this restaurant -- be certain to pick up steel helmets, because the chances are good that Maddox will crack somebody over the head with a baseball bat. We have to have segregated restaurants in Dixie, so that these ersatz integrationists from Yankee-land will have a place in which to eat when they come down to get out of the snow and ice.

Robert, can we transfer all 3,000 of these negro students to the University of Vermont -- we have 3,000 negro students at Florida A & M University over on the hill -- you can have them, along with the 215 teachers and 25 janitors. As you will note, we have some white trash at Florida State University -- the whites dug up the D150 rather than stay in our pokey -- they thought they would get pheasant under glass etc., but it turned out blackeyed peas, cabbage, corn bread and water.

Why don't you invite Meredith up to the University of Vermont? This African should feel at home in our nation's capital, because there are 420,000 negroes in 61 sq. miles. Mississippi's 915,000 Africans are spread out over 50,000 sq. miles -- Meredith gets lonesome without Federal Troops and U.S. Marshals. Almost $5,-000,000 for his education and he still thinks Peter Pan is a hospital item. How much was Meredith paid for causing this trouble in Mississippi -- you will learn some day.

Things are pretty quiet over in Louisiana -- a few Africans jumping up and down, but to listen to N.B.C. and C.B.S., one would think a full scale war was in progress. These prods do not hurt anybody -- they use them on cattle and the Humane Society has never complained -- it shocks a little is all.

Want to try this restaurant on for size -- bring a Sherman tank though. You Yankees will learn in due time as these negroes keep pouring out of Dixie. Your mass is now over 125,000 negroes and gaining.

Want to picket Raiford Prison -- they have 16 negroes on death row for rape and murder. This judge gave these three Africans a little more time, but they didn't give this grocer 2 extra minutes of life -- they blew his brains on the wall. If a negro ever levels a gun in your face, then listen to what he says -- they think no more of murder, than you think of changing your socks, or asking for another cup of coffee.

These whites are lucky that these negroes didn't amputate their heads with switch blades -- Glad to see you have integrated parties in N.Y. 100 years ago there were not many parties (integrated) in N.Y.C. -- with just 14,000 negroes living there. They can have plenty of parties now, because there are 1,120,000 negroes in N.Y.C. in 1963. We are just watching the N.Y. Pot Boil and it's boiling -- between 1950 and 1960, 994,000 whites (N.Y.C.) got Negrophobia and moved to the suburban areas. Let these Yankees run.

Letters To The Editor

IFC Reiterates Position

Editor's Note: The following is the letter which Bob Collier, IFC President, enclosed when he forwarded to the CYNIC the letter we have printed in our editorial column.

To the Editor:

Up to now, I have abstained from making any comment as to the validity of the arguments regarding the Kake Walk "Blackface" situation primarily because the issue has so many ramifications that it is difficult to do it justice in a short article.

However, since the comments and opinions expressed in the CYNIC by fellow students, as well as letters published in the Burlington-Free Press, have been greatly erroneous and illustrate grave misconceptions as to the basic issues involved in this problem, I attempt the following confutation.

Many of the arguments raised against the elimination of "Blackface" have been centered around the conviction that not only is Kake Walk not derogatory, but actually is a tribute to the Negro. In fact, as one contributor wrote, "Imitation is the sincerest form of flattery," and our imitation of the Negro Kake Walk has always been performed with sincere dignity and honor to the Negro traditions in our culture. Plus the fact that the "Blackface" is such an insignificant matter, in light of the "Racial Revolution" problems in the nation as a whole, it is ridiculous to make a problem out of it.

In answer to these arguments we submit the following letter, a letter which, for me, illustrates the fearful bigotry and hate which exists in the United States today and assures me that there is no such thing as an "insignificant" aspect of our social problems. It brings to mind Donne's phrase, "We are all involved in Mankind." Whether we integrate a "traditionally" all-white school or change an aspect of a "traditional" weekend the affect is not restricted to any one state, university, or person, and we cannot regard any such action which deals with fellow men as being insignificant.

But now you read this "magnificent" example of democratic, rational, thought -- what does it mean to you? -- can we still maintain that those who object to "Blackface" are being, as many letters have maintained, "oversensitive?"

Statements By College Presidents

We are agreed that pride in alma mater, college spirit, and friendly rivalry between colleges are healthy and desirable, and should be encouraged; however, we are also agreed that the damage of property, either on a rival campus or elsewhere, is not a proper manifestation of college spirit. We condemn such actions, and any student who is apprehended may expect to be subjected to disciplinary action. We also wish to announce at this time that the possession or consumption of alcoholic beverages is not permitted at football games held under the auspices of the colleges we represent.

THE SCEPTIC

"human kind Cannot bear very much reality."
-- a bird, quoted by T.S. Eliot

Way back in my first column (remember the one no one understood?) I suggested that mottoes tell us something worth knowing about the organizations they speak for. The motto of the state of Vermont is "freedom and unity." The university motto is "studies and honest things." Since the university is in the state, we may suspect that the mottoes reflect complementary attitudes; and indeed they do.

A while back (I can't be specific, since the CYNIC is on its way to being Vermont's second Sunday paper) there was a brief hassle about the state's secondary education. Commissioner Holden and Gov. Hoff announced that Vermont secondary education was lousy. Senator Aiken replied (I use the word loosely) that he would never agree with anyone who spoke slightly of Vermont. Now I'm sure that no one in my dwindling audience loves a man who criticizes destructively and condemns in wholesale lots; I must conclude, therefore, that Senator Aiken is roundly booed by all of you.

I bring up the painful subject only to point out that the clash between Holden, Hoff, and Aiken epitomizes the Vermont spirit. The motto seems to be a paradox: if men are at liberty it seems doubtful that they will often agree; how then can there be unity? The paradox is resolved when we see that the characteristic Vermont reaction is to criticize destructively and condemn wholesale anyone who finds fault with the status quo. The motto might be expanded to read "liberty, until you're shut up, then unity again." Put colloquially, it reads, "If you don't like it here, go away." Does the motto apply to the school as well as the state? Blushingly, I must admit that it does; here, too, any deviation from conventional ideas is greeted with instant hostility.

The university motto is interesting for its expression of a notable quality at UVM. By separating studies from honest things, it emphasizes the school's pervasive distrust of learning. I modestly call your attention to the frequent bitter comments about my "excellent command of the English language." There are, one hopes, few colleges in this country where such an achievement would be resented. (In fact, the columns have been rather badly written, though they do seem to sparkle when compared with letters to the editor.) Does this anti-intellectualism appear in state as well as university matters? Indeed it does; last year, some of you will recall, the state lethargically discovered that its language teachers frequently knew almost nothing about the languages they claimed to teach. The question came up (probably from a recent immigrant into the state): Why don't we give them a test? A brief discussion revealed that the teachers were very poorly paid, and if they had to take a test they would probably just quit and to back to hooking rugs. Faced with the alternatives of paying enough to attract competent teachers, dropping the language courses, or continuing to produce graduates who though they knew a language but didn't, the committee did what you can easily guess; they agreed that knowledge isn't important.

Anti-intellectualism in the state is rather crude; it expresses itself in the form of comments that Professor Daniels must be a communist because he knows a lot about communism. At the university we find subtler forms. Take, for an example, Mr. Heller's letter in last week's CYNIC. He criticizes piously Mr. Chaplin's dislike of the Bailey statue: "It makes no difference at all whether or not one dislikes a work of art, whether or not one finds it esthetically repulsive; the act of creation has beauty; it is born of sweat and tears and joy; it is the expression of an enormous struggle to attain freedom." He concludes that "this hollow laughter (a reference to Mr. Chaplin, not the statue) is the end of innocence, the end of search and the desecration of beauty." What are we to do with such an attitude? How would you feel if a teacher forced you to study a remarkably absurd poem because "the act of creation has beauty"?

Obviously the class should meet at the university farm and go into ecstasies over every egg-laying. This business of worshipping the artist as creator while ignoring the thing created is one of the worst fruits of Romantic emotionalism; it permits one to strike an ecstatic pose in front of the Mona Lisa and the Guernica and the

OUTSIDERS VIEW OF BLACKFACE BAN

Editor's Note: When the blackface controversy was at its height at UVM, the CYNIC printed letters from many of its readers which expressed a multitude of opinions (pro and con) on the problem. The following column is being printed mainly because it expresses the views of a writer who is familiar with blackface and Kake Walk but yet is neither affiliated with UVM or Burlington. It is reprinted from The Berkshire Eagle, Pittsfield, Mass.

by Elizabeth Dwyer

NORTH BENNINGTON, FOR BETTER or for worse, a long-standing tradition at the University of Vermont died last week when the Interfraternity Council voted to eliminate the use of blackface and kinky hair wigs in the annual Kake Walk celebration held during the February winter carnival in Burlington.

Certainly we can all be proud that the young students at our university took this action to further the cause of racial harmony, and took it on their own initiative without extreme pressure from university administration of outside forces.

THIS IS NOT written in a spirit of criticism of the action of the students in doing away with blackface for Kake Walkers - anything we can do to further the cause of equality among men is commendable and perhaps it is wise to make the gesture in the face of the tightrope situation we face today. However, when we talk of equality in civil rights, I sometimes think we overlook one basic right, or maybe basic privilege. If we are all to be equal and accepted as equals among one another, we must keep one other precious right - that of being able to have a little gentle fun and laughter WITH - and not AT - each other. The tradition of Kake Walk at the University of Vermont goes back many, many years. It is unique at UVM and has brought far more fame to the school than its football team ever managed. It's a warm and nostalgic memory to all Vermont alumni - that special moment when the band blares forth with "Cotton Babs," and the Kake Walkers, in colorful costumes, start their high-kicking and graceful routines to compete for glory and a green and gold frosted cake.

CERTAINLY THE thousands of people who have thrilled to the magic of the Kake Walking all these years never considered that they were being unkind to anyone or any race. Actually, I think they were paying tribute to the special contributions of the Negro in the American jazz culture. The Kake Walk was undoubtedly invented by the Negro and it would seem to me that the white man does him honor by adopting blackface for this dance.

Surely the people who delight in the antics of end men in minstrel shows don't accept these gay and charming creatures as the image of the Negro. The end men are the stars of a minstrel show and the whole point of the show is for them to spend the evening making the white folks look silly, so why should the tradition of blackface be offensive, or discriminatory?

We can admire the special skills of Negroes in athletics and at the same time know full well that they are capable of excelling in other fields, if given a chance. Millions of people watch the Harlem Globetrotters in exhibition basketball games every year - and they watch them not because they are Negroes, but because they have perfected a special brand of clowning and also a superior brand of basketball.

IT WOULD be a sorry world if all our fun and jokes and humor had to be so antiseptically free of any ethnic overtones that we could never again laugh at Pat and Mike jokes, or stories in the tradition of H*Y*M*A*N K*A*P*L*A*N White people sing Negro spirituals and Mahalia Jackson can tear out your heart and rupture your ear drums by singing "The Star Spangled Banner" with a power unmatched by white singers.

The Irish are a proud race and Murphy is a proud old Irish name, but they don't call an emergency meeting of the Ancient Order of Hibernians to protest everytime somebody takes it upon himself to render "Who Threw the Overalls in Mrs. Murphy's Chowder?" (I understand this song is banned in the Executive Mansion in Albany, but for reasons that have nothing to do with ancestry.)

EDDIE CANTOR and Al Jolson represent a special contribution of Jewish jazz singers to the American memories, but these two chose to sing Negro songs in blackface, and no insult to the Negro race was ever intended by them, nor was it viewed that way by their millions of admirers.

Certainly the Negro has been hurt enough, either by our sins of commission or omission, so that if we can make some small amends to his peace of mind by banning blackface in our national comedy, then by all means let's ban it. However, I hope that in our efforts to heal the hurts, we don't all lose some of the special memories in music and laughter that the Negro has bequeathed to us.

I'll gladly walk shoulder to shoulder - and hand in hand - with my Negro brother, my Jewish brother, my Protestant and my Catholic brothers, along the road that leads to full acceptance and equality in the hearts of men. But I hope that we don't make such a grim battle out of our journey that we can't stop once in a while along the way to have a little frank and open fun and a few moments of laughter with one another - the kind of affectionate fun you find in any family of brothers.

THE REAL SCEPTIC

Bailey statue alike, without requiring that one have the slightest idea why one should be ecstatic. It permits the artist to foist off on the public his moods, his whims, his mistakes, and his sheer sloppiness as "creations." It permits students to pass courses in "creative writing" even though they've done nothing worthy even of the Centaur. We need, I suggest, more laughter and less innocence, even at the cost of the Bailey statue's desecrated beauty. As for the act of creation, Lord Chesterfield commented that "the pleasure is momentary, the position ridiculous, and the expense abominable."

Students Urged: Attend Lectures

To the Editor:

On November 2, 1963, at the Ira Allen Chapel, the Vermont Freedom Forum is presenting a program that is a must for every student and faculty member here at the University. With its theme, "Americanism and You," The Forum will provide an excellent opportunity for everyone to become better acquainted with our great American Heritage.

Speakers will include Dr. Nicholas Myrardi, Director of the School of International Studies at Bradley University, with an address entitled "American Education at the Crossroads." The Honorable Samuel B. Pettengill, former Congressman from Indiana, has chosen "Concentrated Government Means the End of the American Republic" for his topic. Arthur G. McDowell, Director of the Department of Civic, Education and Governmental Affairs of the International Upholsterers Union, will speak on "The Knowledge Necessary for a Free Man." The final address, "The Fight For Your Mind," will be given by Edward Hunter, an outstanding authority on Communist brainwashing. After each address there will be a question and answer period for anyone who has a particular question that he would care to raise.

The Forum promises to be informative, educational, and exciting. I urge all of you to attend.

Blackface

To the Editor:

I was quite surprised to read your editorial commending the abolishment of blackface at the Kake Walk.

Although, I am not a student or alumnus of UVM, I have always been interested in the activities of the college. I have viewed and enjoyed Kake Walk many times and can only attach artistic ability and value to Kake Walk in general. Never have I or many others thought the blackface a degradation to the Negro race. To me the color of one's face makes no difference in the person. In my eye's the students who perform so admirably in Kake Walk are honoring the spirit, rhythm and grace of the Negro people. How is that detrimental?

It seems to me NACP should use their efforts and office to better other conditions facing the Negro. I think they have done more harm in this action because people resent their dealing in trivialities and certainly something not detrimental to their cause.

Yours, in hopes that we will again see Kake Walk as it should be.

Chaplin Answers Heller

To the Editor:

I was delighted to read M. Heller's thoughtful and provocative strictures on my somewhat Philistine opinions of Mr. Aschenbach's alleged sculpture.

I am truly sorry that M. Heller credits me with the possibility of making him the butt of my humor. I have never and do not now intend to resort to the argumentum ad hominem. It has been said that one may be careless in choosing his friends, but should exercise the utmost discretion in picking his enemies. I account it an honor to have the perceptive M. Heller an "enemy" of my ideas and shall certainly do nothing to jeopardize that relationship.

To join the battle, I must, of course, take exception to my colleague's thesis that satire and laughter are inappropriate responses to modern art. Philosophers, writers and critics have been having dead cats into sanctuaries with gales of laughter since time began. Why should this piece of work be a Sacred Cow? Nor can I accept the argument that derision and ridicule destroy creative thought. Creativity which springs from elemental sources is as immune from scorn as is great art itself.

M. Heller further states that is is inappropriate for a teacher to employ cynicism and mockery. These may indeed be inappropriate in the classroom. But I was not addressing myself to the issue as a teacher in the classroom where I would have an unfair advantage over a captive audience, but in news media where anyone is free to take issue with me.

The basic trouble in discussing contemporary art is that the ground has been cut out from under criticism by a lack of any sort of standards. Because something is "honest" or born of "sweat and tears and joy" --- to employ M. Heller's somewhat flamboyant phraseology --- is no guarantee of authenticity or of greatness. Mental patients produce all sorts of creative products conceived and executed in the depths of despair or in transports of manic joy. But such work, even by today's depressing standards is not art.

M. Heller further argues that I ought to try to "understand" the iron tree and not laugh at it. Laughter, M. Heller, comes from understanding, and is not an evasion of it. Rabelais, Anatole France, Rostand, Voltaire, and all the others who have howled at the folly and pretentiousness of their fellow man understand him --- indeed perhaps better than those who debate endlessly with solemn faces and labored phrase. We hold it truth that he who laughs at his fellow man must do so with understanding or his laughter is hollow and unworthy. I think I understand Mr. Aschenbach's "sculpture." He says it is symbolic of higher education. I have said it is a monstrous hoax. I see nothing inconsistent in these two points of view. It will be said of him that he builded better than he knew. Or did he?

ASUC Opposes Discrimination

BERKELEY, Cal. (CPS) — The Associated Students of the University of California (ASUC) Senate passed last Tuesday night an amended form of an anti-discrimination measure proposed three weeks ago after Lynn Sims, a Negro student, was barred from escorting a football festival queen candidate because of his race.

The amended measure which passed said:

"No group sponsored by the ASUC shall discriminate against any individual or group on the basis of race, religion or national origin; nor shall any ASUC sponsored group cooperate with any off-campus group or organization or participate in any activity in which such discrimination is practiced."

Problems involving implementation of the policy caused most of the amending. Fraternity and sorority interests worried that the measure might be used to force them to integrate before the September, 1964, deadline set by President Clark Kerr.

Members of the Senate assured them that the decision by President Kerr — that no discrimination policy would be applied to fraternities or sororities until the deadline — applied to this policy as well.

Ten Medical Scholarships Offered To Qualified Negro Men

Ten four-year medical scholarships to qualified Negro men are available beginning in the fall of 1964, it has been announced by National Medical Fellowships, Inc. and the Alfred P. Sloan Foundation.

To qualify for a National Medical - Sloan Foundation Scholarship, a student must have demonstrated outstanding achievement in college, been accepted for admission by a medical school, and be a U.S. citizen.

Interested Negro college students, who plan to enter medical school in the fall of 1964, may obtain registration cards and other information from the Graduate College Office, or from the offices of National Medical Fellowships, Inc., 951 East 58th Street, Chicago 37, Illinois. Amounts of the scholarships vary according to students' needs. Each scholarship is for four years provided that the student maintains required standards.

The deadline for registration is March 1, 1964. No registrations will be accepted after that date.

The medical scholarship program is designed to help relieve the critical shortage of Negro physicians and surgeons. It is financed by a substantial grant from the Alfred P. Sloan Foundation to National Medical Fellowships, Inc. The latter organization, which devotes itself to assisting Negroes with their medical careers, administers the scholarship program, accepts registrations, distributes application blanks, and selects candidates.

A total of 40 Negro students are at present studying medicine under this program in 23 U.S. medical schools. Each student will receive an average of $5,000 for the four year period of study.

Civil Rights To Be Discussed At USNSA Regional Conference

(Credit: Reprinted from U.S.N.S.A. New England Region News)

The New England fall regional conference will be held at Clark University in Worcester, Mass., on November 1 and 2, 1963. The conference will deal with the means and alternatives of the Civil Rights Movement. The events of the past summer have focused greater energy and interest on this movement, for the question seems to be no longer one of whether Civil Rights will be achieved, but rather what means will be employed to accomplish these goals. Another question brought out by these events is the actual goal of the movement. The Washington March linked the issues of jobs and freedom, and the question arises as to whether these issues are inextricably linked or whether one can be accomplished without the other.

At this conference there will be many points of view presented as to what the means are and what they should be. Representatives from groups actually engaged in Civil Rights activity will present the rationale as well as the approach they take to the question. The tentative schedule for the conference is as follows:

9:00 P.M. Panel discussion on the non-violent, constructive approach. Panelists will be from the Student Non-Violent Coordinating Committee, the Northern Student Movement, the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, and the National Student Association.
10:30 P.M. Informal discussion and coffee hours.

Saturday, November 2
9:00 A.M. Speaker
11:00 A.M. Showing of the film, "We'll Never Turn Back"
12:30 P.M. Lunch
2:00 P.M. Workshops on the implementation of Civil Rights activity. The workshops will be based on the panel discussion.
5:30 P.M. Free Time
7:00 P.M. Banquet and speaker
This conference will provide an opportunity to evaluate the Civil Rights Movement and to determine the direction, if any, student action should take.

On October 26 and 27, the Northern Student Movement is hosting a planning conference at Columbia University in New York. This conference is oriented towards students with a level of experience in Civil Rights activity. Any students with such experience should plan to attend this conference.

TENTATIVE SCHEDULE 1963-64 New England Region U.S.N.S.A.

October 19	Boston Area Conference	Boston

April 24 & 25	State Universities Conference	Univ. of Rhode Island
May 1 & 2	Pre-Congress Conference

This is a tentative outline of the regional activities for the coming academic year. The time and place of these events are flexible, but the program will include all of these topics. In addition, there will be a five or six week seminar series on issues in Higher Education in the spring semester; there will also be a similar program on an international level, concerned with neo-colonialism and Latin America. There are also plans for a speakers series which will bring noted figures from several different areas to the campus; this program may be operative by November.

Meet Gerald Bourland

Computer Systems Associate at WE

Gerald Bourland, B.S., Central Missouri State College, '61, picked Western Electric because it offered many interesting and challenging opportunities in his favorite fields—automation and data processing. Gerald's work here consists of writing, testing and documenting computer programs—each one a different and exacting assignment.

Also of great interest to Gerald when he joined Western were the Company's numerous management courses and paid Tuition Refund Plan. He knows, too, that we'll need to fill thousands of supervisory positions within the next few years. And he's getting the solid experience needed to qualify.

Right now, Gerald is working on a verification sub-system for maintaining production control. It consists of seven distinct computer programs that operate as one routine which performs the function of tying together and verifying forecasted with actual customer orders.

If you, like Gerald Bourland, set the highest standards for yourself, enjoy a challenge, and have the qualifications we're looking for—let's talk! Opportunities for fast-moving careers exist now for liberal arts, physical science and business majors, as well as for electrical, mechanical and industrial engineers. For more detailed information, get your copy of the Western Electric Career Opportunities booklet from your Placement Officer. Or write: Western Electric Company, Room 6405, 222 Broadway, New York 38, N. Y. And be sure to arrange for a personal interview when the Bell System recruiting team visits your campus.

Major Barbara, one of Shaw's most successful plays, was introduced in England in 1905, and was first produced in the states in 1915.

Tryouts will be held in the Arena Theater on Friday, Oct. 25, from 4:00, and on Sunday, Oct. 27, from 2:00. Everyone is cordially invited. Hope to see you there.

Mme. Nhu Disguises So. Vietnam Tragedy

By Ahmed El-Haddad

In the midst of the Buddhist persecution by the Diem government, and the barbecue monks in protest against the persecution, Mrs. Ngo Dinh Nhu's visit became an issue for the press throughout the world.

Obviously, Mme. Nhu's purpose out of all this publicity is to distract public opinion from the real tragedy of the Buddhists in South Vietnam. She has instead turned to less relevant or, to irrelevant issues such as her new hair style (short) and her capacity as a "homebody".

Mme. Nhu, when interviewed by the CBS correspondent in Paris, said that the Buddhists are guilty of carrying pistols and of attacking the police, in which the police had only to defend themselves. But when she arrived in New York she denied such charges of persecution and added, "I like them".

To me, Mme. Nhu and her brother-in-law, President Diem, are just one of many others who acquire the U.S. aid and sympathy under the false pretense of fighting Communism. Supposedly, the U.S. aid is aimed to improve the living conditions of the countries which receives it. But more often it has been used, as in the case of Vietnam, to suppress freedom and for other political purposes.

I think this is the reason behind Mme. Nhu's worries about the proposal of reducing or cutting U.S. aid to Diem regime. Mrs. Nhu is extremely furious because Ambassador Henry Cabot Lodge sticks to the view that President "Diem can't win and that he and his family must go." Furthermore, she criticized Secretary of Defense Robert McNamara when he reported to President Kennedy that the major part of the United States' task can be completed by 1965. Certainly Mme. Nhu and the whole Diem family are not happy about that.

I am sure that Mme. Nhu in particular is not primarily interested in a quick victory over the Viet Cong guerrilla. It definitely means that the flow of American dollars will be reduced drastically. Consequently, Mme. Nhu will find it very difficult to see her Parisian hair stylist as often as she does now, and more important, she will only become "a homebody" and "a good cook".

CAMBRIDGE, Mass. (CPS) -- Vietnam's Mme. Ngo Dinh Nhu ran into trouble last Tuesday night at Harvard and ran to Princeton telling them how bad Harvard was.

As the first lady angrily parried the sharp criticism of three faculty members, more than 1000 students massed outside a Law School Forum at Rindge Tech high school, shouting and demanding an end to United States aid to the Southeast Asian country.

The students started to line up outside the auditorium an hour before Mme. Nhu's scheduled arrival.

Demonstrations were orderly until she started to speak, but then the students surrounded the auditorium and made enough noise to interrupt the program several times. Halfway through the address, 20 pickets broke through police lines and got into the high school lobby. After a brief tussle, they were evicted.

At Princeton, Mme. Nhu told undergraduates how "horrible" Harvard was and described her experiences there as "bad manners, insulting."

URI Magazine Censored By Administration

KINGSTON, R.I. (CPS) -- Paradigm, the University of Rhode Island literary magazine, was censored because, according to Dr. John F. Quinn, vice-president for student affairs, certain passages in a story were deemed "not suitable for publication in a university sponsored magazine."

Dr. Quinn said that University President Horn and an advisory council, after much deliberation and discussion, came to unanimous agreement that certain passages from the story "Ballin'" be deleted.

Questioned as to whether the council thought the words were obscene, he said that "obscenity didn't come into it at all," that it was a legal term, and that the council "didn't want to hassle about it."

The Rhode Island Student Senate passed a resolution condemning the university administration's handling of the case.

Gerald McDowell, senate president and chairman of the committee to investigate the matter, stressed that senate disapproval is not so much aimed at the "solitary act of censorship, but at the administration's policy to censor anything which might possibly be detrimental to the reputation of the University."

"The policy of the administration is one favoring censorship and is based on convenience," said McDowell. "It is applied when it suits the University. A larger issue than that of Paradigm is involved. The question is whether the University should take stands such as in convocation speeches favoring student rights, and then turn around and do the opposite. It is a policy to which the senate, as representative of the student body, should object."

The Beacon, the student newspaper, commenting on the case, said, "A publication of this nature is supposed to reflect the feelings, the objectives and the ideals of a young generation, and these should not be judged by the standards of acceptance by another generation of older people."

They helped make a major advance in medical technology

...yet there's not an "M. D." in the house

These six men were members of a team that developed an x-ray system so advanced that, even with exposure to x-radiation reduced by 80%, images come out much sharper on the diagnostician's viewing screen. By bringing to the task the unique talents, experience, and educational background of each member, this team of experts has made it possible for radiologists and physicians to do a better job of medical diagnosis.

Of these six men from General Electric's X-Ray Department, Milwaukee, four have degrees in engineering, one majored in physics and math, and the sixth in economics. Not one was trained primarily in medical science—although, of course, their Department works closely with the medical profession. Nor did any of them anticipate, when in college, that their major subjects would be put to use in providing improved tools for diagnostic medicine. But they did recognize—as their record shows—that better-than-average performance could qualify them for challenging jobs with a forward-looking company like General Electric.

There are hundreds of such teams at General Electric today. Their make-up varies, and almost every field of specialization, technical and non-technical, is represented somewhere in the Company. The projects are just as varied: nose cones for missiles, desaliniza-tion of sea water, computers, or power plants to squeeze more electricity from a pound of coal or a gram of atomic fuel.

The more than 36,000 college graduates at General Electric comprise one of the largest and most varied pools of talent in the nation. But the Company's future is, in many ways, wrapped up in people still in school and college. As projects increase in size and complexity, so will the need for able young people. People who demonstrate, through their college record, the best use of their educational opportunities, who know the meaning of excellence, who understand the differences between specialization and narrowness, breadth and shallowness. Such people, working together, will make up the teams of the future, and be the architects of what we call progress.

LITTLE MAN ON CAMPUS PUNT RECEIVER

This should have happened to 'Danny Boy' Serieka, but instead he ran for 82 yards and the only New Hampshire score to the amazement of the Homecoming crowd and 11 Catamounts on the field.

Pardon me if I sound as if the executive position I've landed deals with the whole future of the world.

It does.

Certainly, there's no organization today conducting more vital business than the business of the United States Air Force. And very few organizations that give a college graduate greater opportunities for responsibility and growth.

As an Air Force officer, you'll be a leader on the Aerospace Team—with good pay, a 30-day paid vacation each year, educational opportunities.

How can you get started? For many, the best way is through Air Force ROTC. But if you missed out on AFROTC, or if there's no unit on your campus, you can still apply for Air Force Officer Training School. This three-month course leads to a commission as a second lieutenant in the United States Air Force.

Rappa's Roundup

By Richard Rappaport

Last Saturday in the Vermont-New Hampshire game the Cats gave away a touchdown to the opposition just as they did two years ago to Middlebury. In this contest Vermont apparently downed the ball after an Al Foster punt, but the whistle had not yet sounded and thus the ball remained in play. However, the Cats, exhibited an ignorance of the rules as Dan Serielea scooped up the ball and raced 82 yards while stood dumfounded.

However, unlike the Middlebury contest, this touchdown sparked the Cats to victory as the players and fans became unbelievably aroused due to the referee's failure to sound his whistle which would have concluded the play.

Starting with the block of the extra point by tackle Fred Boese, the Catamounts played inspired ball throughout, as they completely dominated all the various statistical departments.

Ken Burton was outstanding as usual, and he received running support from Dean Kent, Richie Reynolds, Frank Forrester, and Ken Andrade who all looked exceptionally good.

The passing of Scott Fitz was never better as he threaded the needle hitting his ends time and time again, and also running for a 24-yard touchdown. His replacement, Jack O'Dea, also moved the squad well as he led the Cats to two of their four scores.

The line play was even better than last week with Tom Mongeon, Rusty Brink, George Oelze, Ron Hertel and CYNIC editor Ray Bello, putting in the best all-around performances.

Vermont was assessed 85 yards in penalties in Saturday's game, which halted a few sustained drives, and cost the Cats a 65-yard touchdown pass play from Fitz to Burton, most of the penalties incurred were offside and illegal procedure penalties. The blame for these penalties can be placed directly upon Coach Clifford and his staff. These penalties can and should be corrected by hard work at practice sessions this week, since these can be significant in the remaining games, especially the upcoming tough contests at Massachusetts and Middlebury.

This week the University of Vermont opens its extremely strong bid for the state series crown, when it plays Norwich, a 21-7 victim last year, at Centennial Field. The Cadets sporting a 3-2 record, have played only one common opponent, Colby, whom they defeated 28-27, while the Cats topped the former charges of Coach Clifford in a scrimmage 38-6. The fact that the Cats have a superior record 4-1 is quite significant since they have been competing against much stronger opposition than have the Cadets. Another factor to consider is that Ken Burton will be playing his last home game, and it is felt that one of the greatest halfbacks in UVM history will respond with what could be the best performance of his illustrious career, possibly breaking his rushing record set against these same Cadets last year.

It is for these reasons that I feel that the University of Vermont should capture its final home game of the campaign, thus completing a sweep of its four games of Centennial Field, and triumph over Norwich by four touchdowns.

Fr. Basketball

All candidates for Freshman Basketball, please report to the Gymnasium on Thursday, October 31 at 4:15 P.M.

Intramurals

Winning their semifinal matches, Kappa Sigma and Sigma Phi Epsilon will meet in a play-off game to determine the fraternity champion in the annual intramural football classic.

In the semifinals, Alpha Tau Omega defeated Tau Epsilon Phi, ATO then being downed by Kappa Sig. Sig Ep then defeated Sigma Nu, and thus, the two winners will kick off against each other in the smashing final game.

Among the independents, the Leftovers, last year's champs, defeated the graduates, and gain the privilege of meeting the fraternity champs in a play-off game on Thursday, Oct. 24.

Basketball competition begins Nov. 20, Entries should be in no later than Nov. 18. Bowling tournaments start Oct. 23. All teams entered are reminded to be at the waterman alleys at the designated time.

As a side light, intramurals as a whole permit the entire student body to participate in a wide variety of athletic events. College is meant to develop both mind and body and intramurals go a long way in fostering the achievement of the latter. Perhaps one of President Kennedy's few worthwhile proposals was the National Fitness Program, all students should head our leader's vibrant words and work for both mental and physical prowess. Ask not what your body can do for you but what you can do for your body.

FOR -- not picking the Catamounts to beat UNH, URI, and forecasting a two touchdown loss to Maine. The team holds no grudges towards this knowledgeable sports writer. They only want to know who he picks this weekend in the UVM-Norwich game.

LAST SEEN -- in the Lake Champlain area hiding in the duck blinds. He says he's hunting ducks, but he's probably chicken (hunting). He was armed with both shotgun and pen. The team is worrying about his pen more than his shotgun because he has drilled the Cats full of holes with it in the last few weeks.

IF YOU SEE HIM -- don't say hello but "quack, quack," for Mr. Bishop is an odd duck. He is known to frequent football stadiums, especially Centennial Field, during the hunting season. He has been known to take shots at Catamounts.

REWARD -- a pass to all UVM's football games, free subscription to the CYNIC and a Free Press with Mr. Bishop predicting Vermont to win.

Team Set To Bomb Cadets

FLYING TACKLE - Larry Rice, who is really an end, throws his body in an attempt to block a Wildcat kick.

Before an overflow Homecoming crowd of 7,000 the UVM Catamounts overwhelmed the Wildcats of New Hampshire by a score of 28-6. This exciting victory over last year's Yankon Champions boosted Vermont's hopes for a top position in Yankee Conference standings. In two weeks the Cats face the league leaders, the Redmen of Massachusetts. However, before this game, they must meet with Norwich in the last home game of the season, and their first state series game.

The Wildcats scored their only touchdown on a freak play. The six point gift came in the first quarter when Al Foster placed a UVM punt on the UNH 18. Catamount and Larry Rice downed the ball. However, no whistle was blown. Alert Dan Serielea picked up the ball and pranced 82 yards while everyone but two referees watched in confusion. That was the extent of Wildcat scoring as tackle Fred Boese blocked the attempt for the extra point.

From that time on it was Vermont's football game as both temperatures and tempers soared. Six plays after the kickoff, the Cats scored. After a 45 yard drive, Ken Burton, continuing his fantastic offensive play, hit right tackle for a 26 yard jaunt to the end zone. Paul Toussaint kicked the extra point and Vermont was never threatened again.

Vermont's second score came midway in the second period as Cat's quarterback, Jack O'Dea threw a perfect pass to Deane Kent from the Wildcat 16 yard line. The speedy halfback then stepped over the goal line for another score. Toussaint's pat raised the score to 14-6.

The Cats refused to be satisfied, as they scored twice more in the second half. Jack O'Dea plunged over from the one yard line and Scot Fitz beautifully outfaked the UNH secondary as he went off tackle for 23 yards. Powerful Ken Andrade led the change in setting up Fitz's touchdown. Paul (Automatic) Toussaint converted both times for four straight extra points.

The Cats would have had another score as Scot Fitz placed a perfect aerial in the hands of Ken Burton who raced the rest of the way to the end zone. However, the play was nullified due to an off-sides penalty.

The UVM defensive strength showed even greater progress than in the previous victories as they held the Wildcat's Scoring threat, Dan Serielea to 44 yards in 11 carries. Jim Brennan kept Serielea in check the entire afternoon, as Rusty Brink, Den Andrade, and Ray Bello put on outstanding performances. The offense was once again engineered by the two sophomore quarterbacks Jack O'Dea and Scot Fitz.

Weekly Scouting Report

This week's opponent: Norwich University
Last year's game: 21-8
Nickname: Horsemen, Cadets
Colors: Maroon and Gold
Coach: Robert B. Priestly
Series Record: 34-15-6

UVM (4-1)		NORWICH (3-2)
14-American Int'n	6	28 Colby	27
12 Army "B"	0	34 Bates	6
13 Maine	14	7 Coast Guard	9
21 Rhode Island	6	42 RPI	6
28 New Hampshire	6	3 St. Lawrence	27
88	32	114	75

This year's performances: Cadets have displayed strong offense in beating Bates (34-6), and RPI (42-6). Spillane kicked unusual field goal against St. Lawrence. In same game, Norwich showed weak pass defense, yielding over 300 yards in the air. Will be lacking line strength with Captain Goetz injured. Forecast: This is same team against which Cat star Burton set rushing record for one game. Burton should repeat last year's performance by running through weak Norwich line. Catamount passers should find the airways free also. The Horsemen don't have the horses to fight off the fiery Cats.

VOL. 81 UNIVERSITY OF VERMONT BURLINGTON, VERMONT OCTOBER 31, 1963 NO. 16

Kappa Sigma Thrown Off UVM Campus

The University has expelled Alpha Lambda chapter of Kappa Sigma fraternity from the UVM campus and has asked Kappa Sigma National Fraternity to suspend the charter of its UVM Chapter "indefinitely" as a result of "irresponsible behavior" early Sunday morning, October 20, at the Kappa Sigma House on Main St.

On that morning Dean of Men Roland Patzer was called to the house by the Burlington police after a beer bottle had been hurled at a policeman trying to quiet Kappa Sigma members. The police had been called to the scene after trouble had flared up by the partial destruction of the Homecoming Poster of Sigma Phi Epsilon Fraternity and traffic had been halted on the street covered with broken glass.

The action, expelling the house, has been taken, the University says, because of "malicious destruction" of a neighboring fraternity's homecoming weekend display; "gross conduct toward civil police authority"; and the cumulative record of the chapter "over the past few years -- all deemed by the University to be related to violation of alcoholic beverage regulations."

In effect, the University is withdrawing its recognition of the chapter. However, it was indicated the University will permit the house to remain open as a residence unit under the following conditions:

First, the chapter must make "an appropriate apology to the Police Department of the City of Burlington," and to the fraternity whose homecoming poster was damaged, and shall make restitution of damages.

Second, the University has asked the chapter's Alumni Corporation to hire a head resident and to appoint an executive committee to assume responsibility for the internal operation of the residence.

Under these provisions, the University will consider reinstatement of the chapter on, but not before, April 1, 1964.

In the meantime, the rights and privileges of the chapter as a student organization, including membership and participation in the Interfraternity Council, shall be denied, and any further violation of University regulations by residents of the house will subject them to an immediate closing of the house as a residence unit and permanent nullification of the reinstatement of the Kappa Sigma charter.

A protest by the Kappa Sigma chapter association (alumni and active members) has been sent to Dean Patzer. It charges the decision is not valid because it did not comply with accepted procedures and, among other things, charges the police and Dean Patzer used "Gestapo tactics" in handling the disturbance.

25 New Spots In Wat. Lot

More than 25 parking spaces are now available for student parking in the northwest section of Waterman parking lot. These greatly needed spaces were made available due to a survey taken by the CYNIC last year.

The following letter was received from Chief Atwood concerning the parking situation:

There will be a slight amelioration of student parking on campus due to the partial opening of the Waterman Parking Lot to student vehicles. Utopia has not arrived and this is not a panacea for all student parking problems. Staff and faculty will continue to have first priority on this and any other campus. Infringe on their prerogatives and this gain can be lost. The student parking area will start out with twenty five spaces against the fence in the rear. Park between the indicated signs! If order prevails, this space will be expanded as faculty need diminishes. This is expected to occur when the Engineering Departments move into the new Engineering Building.

Camelot Is Disappointing

by Gary Derman

Burlington awaited with eager anticipation this much heralded Broadway musical, not unlike the anticipation felt in New York City when Camelot by Lerner and Lowe first opened, but on a much smaller scale. Unfortunately some were met with the same disappointment.

Camelot is a glittering theatrical achievement filled with fine performers, breathtaking scenery, rich and attractive costumes, and easily whistleable tunes. When confronted by all this talent and beauty one is almost persuaded to overlook its flaws -- almost, but not quite. The performance dragged considerably and some were painfully aware of the two hour ordeal of the first act in Memorial Auditorium's wooden seats. How much of this drag can be blamed on the production rather than Memorial Auditorium is hard to judge, but the inadequate facilities made scenery changes a constant delay with only the orchestra to retain interest which was already waning judging from the restless squeaking of these same marvelous seats. The play itself is far too drawn out with very little action and too much uncomic comic relief. The basic fault lies in the Libretto which was adapted from The Once and Future King by T. H. White.

But Memorial did absolutely nothing to abet the situation. Indeed, it seemed almost outright hostile when a chorus boy was knocked off the stage by the front curtain. Acoustics, too, were extremely poor, even with the aid of extra microphones. These difficulties only brought once again into full view the need for a truly modern auditorium, one which this university seems obligated to provide.

"Don Giovanni" Coming Nov. 4

by Betty Fuchs

"Don Giovanni," a dramatic comedy opera in two acts by Mozart, will be the November 4 presentation by the Red Lane Series. The traveling company of the New York City Opera, conducted by Julius Rudel, will present the opera in English. The 1963 performance will mark The Company's eighth year with Lane Series, and its eleventh performance. Julius Rudel has conducted every year at UVM with the exception of the first performance in 1956.

The curtain rises on Don Giovanni's attempt to seduce Donna Anna, the daughter of the Commandant. Forced into a duel with Don Giovanni, the Commandant is killed. Donna Anna and her suitor, Don Ottavio, swear vengeance on the unknown murderer.

With Leporello, his servant, Don Giovanni meets Donna Elvira, one of his possessive former loves, but quickly escapes leaving Leporello to explain his infidelity. In the meantime, Don Giovanni comes upon Zerlina, pretty bride-to-be of the peasant, Masetto, and tries to woo her. Elvira, however, interrupts them, upbraiding Don Giovanni before Donna Anna and Don Ottavio. Left along with Ottavio, Donna Anna suddenly realizes that Giovanni must be her father's murderer.

That evening the Don gives a ball during which he tries to seduce Zerlina, but the vengeful trio, Elvira, Donna Anna, and Ottavio save Zerlina and challenge Don Giovanni as an amoral libertine.

To woo Donna Elvira's maid, Giovanni borrows Leporello's coarse cloak and hat as a disguise. Donna Elvira unwittingly spoils his plans by returning home. To prevent Elvira from spoiling his new amour, Giovanni forces Leporello to wear his cloak and take Elvira away in his master's disguise. Masetto enters determined to kill Giovanni in order to avenge the Don's attempted seduction of Zerlina. The Don, still as Leporello, takes Masetto's weapons and thrashes him.

Later, Leporello is mistaken for Giovanni and nearly killed in vengeance by Donna Anna and the others. Just in time he slips through a hidden door and joins his master, who watched the event from within the graveyard of the Commandant. While the two are jesting, the ghost of the dead man speaks. Giovanni, undaunted, invites him to dinner.

That night, while Giovanni is dining, Elvira once more entreates him to reform his life, but the Don scorns her. The ghost appears, seizing Don Giovanni's hand, he demands repentance. The Don refuses and is driven to the fires of Hell.

Anna, Elvira, Masetto, Zerlina, and Ottavio appear seeking vengeance, only to be told by Leporello of the supernatural punishment of the Don. The principals step forward to remind the audience that: "Virtue triumphs in the end."

Julius Rudel, director and leading conductor of the New York City Opera, was born in Vienna. He studied music at the renowned Academy of Music in Vienna. After the occupation of Austria, he continued his studies at music schools and colleges in New York City... at the Greenwich House and the David Mannes College of Music, where he received his diploma as conductor in May, 1942. He has been associated with the New York City Opera since it was established in 1943, rising in easy stages to Director General in 1957.

In acknowledgement of his accomplishments in the cause of American opera, Mr. Rudel has received many awards, including the Alice M. Ditson award from Columbia University of distinguished service to American music, and in 1959, the New York Newspaper Guild gave him the Page One award in music. In 1961 he received one of Austria's highest orders, the Honorary Insignia for Arts and Sciences for "cementing closer cultural ties between the United States and the Republic of Austria." In the same year, UVM honored Mr. Rudel with an honorary doctor of music degree.

NEW CLASS OFFICERS

The CYNIC is proud to announce the results of the 1963-64 class officer elections. George Fraser is the new president of the seniors, Vice president is Don Feldman, secretary is Ellen Lipp and treasurer is Ivan Bergevin. Leading the Juniors for the next year will be Skip Laufer. He will be assisted by vice-president Ralph D'Attilia, secretary Colleen Denny and treasurer Phil Wilcox. The Sophomores elected Tom Gagliardi to preside over them. Milt Goggans is vice-president, Gini D'Angelo is treasurer and Ann Subach is secretary. Representing the frosh for the coming year will be Don Chioffi, president, Roy Zuckerman, vice-president, Dottie Ward, secretary and Richard Colton, treasurer.

The new officers are well-qualified to lead their classes. Most of them have had previous experience as class officers or as members of student councils. We hope that the student body will give the new officers their full support.

The election was held Monday, October 28 by the Student Association.

George D. Fraser, President of Class of '64.

Skip Laufer, President of Class of 1965.

The individual performances of all were fine and would have satisfied even Broadway's stiff standards. The actors did all they could to make it an enjoyable evening which, in spite of all, it was.

Man & Nature In Modern world

by Carolyn Seigel

Professor Paul B. Sears, a member of the Advisory Committee on Peaceful Uses of Atomic Energy of the Atomic Energy Commission, spoke at UVM last Thursday night on "Man and Nature in the Modern World."

Dr. Sears said in his lecture that one of the worst faults of the American people today is that they are unscientific in their use of science. Science has become a new magic, almost equivalent to tribal medicine; the reason for this, Dr. Sears said, is because no one has explained the advanced sciences well enough. He also said that Americans have a universal reputation for being worshippers of material things. However, he thought that Americans do not have enough respect for materialism.

The majority view on the problem of man and nature in today's world is that man has emancipated himself from nature, and that man has science to get him out of any "jam" he might get involved in. But Dr. Sears took the opposite viewpoint. Man is not free from his dependence on nature, he said, because he doesn't fully understand science, and how to use it to get the maximum benefits from it. According to Sears, we should commune with nature more for necessity's sake than for beauty's sake.

Dr. Sears, who said that we are up against the problem of intangible values in our society, offers several suggestions for remedying the problem. One of these is to re-examine our own set of values. He said that American people have a great concern for things when they understand them. We need interpreters, though, in order for the people to understand. Dr. Sears thought that artists make the best interpreters, because through words, or any other technique they use, they seem to grasp the situation better, and they dramatize it so it can be appreciated. Another suggestion calls for planning. Dr. Sears said that we need more architects and engineers who have experience in natural history and geology, among other sciences. He concluded by saying that scientific literacy was extremely important in remedying the problem at hand, and that in science, communication is just as important as observation.

Dr. Sears, former Professor of Conservation, Timothy Dwight College, Yale University, is a graduate of Ohio Wesleyan University. He did his graduate work at Nebraska and the University of Chicago. He also holds honorary degrees from Marietta College, Arkansas, Nebraska, Oberlin, and Wayne State. Sears came to UVM as Phi Beta Kappa Visiting Scholar. He has been with this program since his retirement in 1960, and has served as visiting professor at Louisville, Brigham Young, Wake Forest, and Hawaii.

He is a former member of the editorial board of "The American Scholar," and has held offices in the American Association for the Advancement of Science and the National Audubon Society, has studied land-use in parts of the United States, Central America and Europe, and his botanical research has dealt largely with the history of vegetation and climate.

The talk was also in connection with the University Lecture Series, and was open to the public at no cost. Dr. Sears was the fourth speaker in the 1963-1964 series.

NAACP Stickers

On Tuesday, Oct. 29, the "sticker" phase of the NAACP's campaign against discrimination was initiated. These stickers will soon be distributed throughout the community of Burlington by members of the NAACP who will distribute them to various clubs and organizations. The design of the sticker which community members will post near the doors of their homes is simple; it consists merely of 2 clasped hands (one black and one white) placed against an outline of the state of Vermont. The word "neighbors" is written below this symbolic representation of unprejudiced neighborliness.

Those people who post stickers on the doors of their homes will be asked but not required to sign a pledge stating: "I hereby resolve that I believe in the right of every person to live in a house or apartment and a neighborhood of his own choice. I further resolve that I will welcome as neighbors on a personal basis all persons without regard as to race, creed, or national origin."

The appearance of this little sticker can bring about the disappearance of discriminatory practices in housing here in Burlington. It can obliterate the fear that community members possess when they think of renting or selling their homes to those of a different race, religion or creed. They no longer will worry "What will the neighbors think?" The manifestation of the little sticker bearing the word "neighbors" will produce concrete answers to their questions, doubts, and fears.

Engr. Smoker

Tau Beta Pi, the engineering honor society, has announced that it is again sponsoring the annual Engineering Smoker. This year, the Engineering Smoker will be held Tuesday, November 5, at 7:30 P.M. in the Waterman Coffee Shop.

This is the one event of the year which affords all underclassmen engineering students the opportunity to gather and meet the faculty members of the complete Department of Technology. It is hoped that many students, especially freshmen, will take advantage of this event to seek the answers to their questions on advanced courses, summer jobs for college students and opportunities for engineers.

The program will consist of entertainment in the form of skits put on by the engineering societies. Refreshments will be served.

HOW SMALL CAN YOU GET?

Today let us address ourselves to a question that has long rocked and roiled the academic world: Is a student better off at a small college than at a large college?

To answer this question it is necessary first to define terms. What, exactly, do we mean by a small college? Well sir, some say that in order to be called truly small, a college should have an enrollment of not more than four students.

I surely have no quarrel with this statement; a four-student college must unequivocally be called small. Indeed, I would even call it intime if I knew what intime meant. But I submit there is such a thing as being too small. Take, for instance, a recent unfortunate event at Crimscott A and M.

Crimscott A and M, situated in a pleasant valley nestled between Philadelphia and Salt Lake City, was founded by What, exactly, do we mean by a small college?

A. and M. Crimscott, two brothers who left Ireland in 1625 to escape the potato famine of 1841. As a result of their foresight, the Crimscott brothers never went without potatoes for one single day of their lives—and mighty grateful they were! One night, full of gratitude after a wholesome meal of French fries, cottage fries, hash browns, and au gratin, they decided to show their appreciation to this bountiful land of potatoes by endowing a college. But their generosity contained one stipulation: the enrollment of the college must never exceed four students. They felt that only by keeping the school this small could each student be assured of the personalized attention, the camaraderie, the esprit, that is all too often lacking in larger institutions of higher learning.

Well sir, things went along swimmingly until one Saturday a few years ago. On this day Crimscott had a football game scheduled against Minnesota, its traditional rival. Football, as you can well imagine, was something of a problem at Crimscott, what with only four undergraduates in the entire college. It was easy enough to muster a backfield, but to find a good line—or even a bad line—baffled some of the most resourceful coaching minds in the nation.

Well sir, on the morning of the big game against Minnesota, its traditional rival, a capricious fate dealt Crimscott a cruel blow—in fact, four cruel blows. Sigafos, the quarterback, woke up that morning with an impacted incisor. Wrichards, the slotback, flunked his taxidermy exam and was declared ineligible. Beerbohm-Tree, the wingback-tailback, got his necktie caught in his espresso machine. Yuld, the fullback, was stolen by gypsies.

Consequently, none of the Crimscott team showed up at the football game, and Minnesota, its traditional rival, was able to score almost at will. Crimscott was so cross after this humiliating defeat that they immediately broke off football relations with Minnesota, its traditional rival. This later became known as the Sacco-Vanzetti Case.

So you can see how only four students might be too meagre an enrollment. The number that I personally favor is twenty. Why? you ask. Because, I reply, when you have twenty students and one of them opens a pack of Marlboro Cigarettes, there are enough to go around for everybody, and no one has to be deprived of Marlboro's flavor, of Marlboro's filter, of Marlboro's staunch and steadfast companionship, and as a result you have a student body that is brimming with sweet content and amity and harmony and concord and togetherness and soft pack and Flip-Top box.

That's why.

Latin America "de Nouveau"

by Ahmed El-Haddad

In my first article about the Latin American Republics, I referred to the Spanish - Portuguese heritage and to the role of the Roman Catholic Church as the basic source of the trouble which upset the continent. I want to emphasize once again that the Spanish ex-mother land has never had any democratic government in her history except during the short-lived republic (which was completely destroyed when the fascist government of Francisco Franco took power in 1938.)

When the Spanish were in Latin America, the principle of democracy and representation in government was never conceived. On the contrary, democracy was regarded as an evil incompatible to Catholic teachings, and accordingly, it should have been prevented.

I also made the point that the social injustice which characterizes Latin American society will continue for some time but it is bound to end by some sort of bloody violence. I refer to a bloody change because the heritage is dispersed to such a great degree that it would have to be uprooted for any real progress to take place. This prediction may seem radical but what can we expect after all peaceful and evolutionary means have failed to bring about real reform. We must have it in mind that the 1948 charter of the Organization of the American States makes strict obligations on the signatories to adhere to practicing the principles of representative democracy. Yet, it has been flatly ignored and disregarded by all the Latin members with a few exceptions (Costa Rica and Uruguay) who legally adhere to the charter. We must also indicate that the Declaration of Punta de Esta signed in Uruguay Aug. 17, 1961 has failed to carry out the principles embodied in the Alliance for Progress.

Recently, there has been talk about a conference scheduled for Nov. 11 in San Paulo, Brazil. Whatever will be the outcome of this conference, I doubt that it will bring about a new formula for pushing the Latin American governments towards reforms.

The existing government in most of the Latin American republics seized power by unconstitutional and illegal methods. The people of Latin American republics have lost confidence in the effects of such declarations and alliances. But, I'm sure that the same people who lost the confidence in external factors will soon realize that only internal popular revolutionaries will solve their problems and put an end to the unprincipled and infamous role of the Church.

Debate Team Starts Season

University of Vermont debate teams placed first and third in tournaments this weekend at Middlebury College and Brandeis University.

The two-member team at Brandeis and the four-member team at Middlebury were all from Vermont.

Members of the Lawrence Debate and Discussion Club will take part in 12 debates and tournaments before Christmas vacation.

UVM debate teams own one of the most successful records in the United States, having won one national tournament and missing out on reaching the national finals only twice since World War II.

A total of 26 students take part in debating and discussion programs. The discussion club will present a program for any high school assembly or service club in the state and offers a choice of three topics.

Discussion programs are "What Should be Done to Minimize Friction Among Racial Groups in the United States?" and "From High School to College - How Big the Jump."

The third program is a debate of the national topic for 1963-64, "Resolved: That the Federal Government Should Guarantee an Opportunity for Higher Education to All Qualified High School Graduates."

Dr. Norman London is director of the discussion program, while Dr. Robert Huber, John Travis and London are the debate coaches.

The debate and discussion programs have received considerable backing from a UVM alumnus, Edwin L. Lawrence of Rutland.

Other tournaments on tap include St. John Fisher (Rochester, N.Y.), the Hamilton Novice, and the Dartmouth Novice on Nov. 1-2; Amherst College on Nov. 8-9; St. Joseph's (Philadelphia) Nov. 15-16.

Also, the Vermont Invitational on Nov. 22-23, a debate which annually attracts 50 schools from all over the Eastern half of the United States; the Pittsburgh Cross Examination, and the Tufts Tourney on Dec. 6-7, St. Anselm's Novice on Dec. 13-14, and Wake Forest, Dec. 12-14.

Round-Robin practice debates are now under way among Vermont, Norwich, Middlebury and Dartmouth. Dartmouth is the defending champion.

Novice debaters are, Robert Brooks, Trumbull, Conn.; Steve Carlson, Cabot; Barbara Giddings, Meriden, Conn.; Harold Hyams, Brooklyn, N.Y.; Robert Stewart, Middlebury, Conn.; Henry Wellman, Brattleboro; Jackie Brooks, Rutland; Barry Messenger, New York City; Claire Tremblay, Woonsocket, R.I., and Bill Sullivan, Waltham, Mass.

Students engaged only in discussion work are: Janice Hackbarth, East Haven, Conn.; Robert Pratt, Whiting; Dan Newcomb, Norwich, and Greg Williams, Jamaica, N.Y.

I know from my personal contact with some Latin Americans that the Church tries to acquire wealth in any manner whatsoever and leaves the poverty stricken people starving or at least easy prey for communist indoctrination and frustration.

THE BELL TELEPHONE COMPANIES SALUTE: PETE WILDE

Almost 90,000 telephone customers in and around Haverhill, Massachusetts, rely on the supervisory ability of a man few of them will ever meet. He is Pete Wilde (B.A. 1960), Assistant District Traffic Superintendent for New England Telephone in Haverhill.

It is not unusual for a man of Pete's ability to rise to such a promotion as swiftly as he did. Pete had made an impressive start on an earlier assignment in Fitchburg where he was responsible for the service rendered by nearly 150 telephone operators. The capable job he did in Fitchburg earned him a chance for further training, a good raise, and his latest promotion.

Pete Wilde, like many young men, is impatient to make things happen for his company and himself. There are few places where such restlessness is more welcomed or rewarded than in the fast-growing telephone business.

Cynic-al Observations

FRATERNAL RESPONSIBILITY

After a series of unfortunate occurrences of Sunday morning, October 20, the University has ousted Kappa Sigma Fraternity from UVM and asked the Kappa Sigma National Fraternity to suspend the chapter's charter indefinitely. The action had the result of converting the Main Street fraternity house into another University residence unit. Although the University's decision appears to bear a note of finality, both the Kappa Sigma alumni association and some members have protested the administration's actions. Despite charges of "Gestapo tactics" and lack of compliance with "accepted procedures" it appears that UVM will have only 15 fraternities at least until April 1, 1969, when the University will reconsider the reinstatement of the chapter.

Most people on campus consider the events of October 20 and the actions taken against Kappa Sigma as truly unfortunate regardless of how they feel about the "fairness" of the University's actions. Even the most ardent opponent of the fraternity system can appreciate the amount of work that goes into the building of an established organization such as Kappa Sigma. It is sad that the irresponsible actions of a single individual or a few individuals should negate the positive constructive efforts of those who have come before them and of their own fraternity brothers.

Although we regret the entire Kappa Sigma affair we feel that it may actually help to preserve the fraternity system on the UVM campus. Up to now fraternities here have been under the sheltering wing of an extremely paternalistic administration. It appears that some Greeks have mistaken this paternalism as an unrestricted license for irresponsible and thoughtless action. To any who have misunderstood the administration's intentions, let the events of the past week and a half act as a sad but effective clarification.

PLACEMENT PROBLEMS

If we were to survey the intentions of students at UVM in attending college we would not be surprised if a great number of replies indicated something to the effect that "I'm here at UVM to insure my future". The fact of the matter is that in today's America, higher education has become a prerequisite for success in a great many areas. It is rather unfortunate that many students who have taken a step in the right direction by furthering their education at UVM, do not avail themselves of a relatively new but extremely useful service offered to all students -- the University Placement Service.

Up until June 1962, UVM had a rather inefficient, small-scale placement service in the College of Education and Nursing. When the University hired Douglas O. Hanau of the Bell Telephone Laboratories to head its expanded University Placement Service, it took the best possible step to insure that UVM students would get the chance to find just the right position once they left the University. Mr. Hanau's achievements with the Service have been outstanding. Today, in the pages of the CYNIC, Mr. Hanau urges all seniors to register with the Placement Service. We urge all students (freshmen, sophs, juniors, and seniors) to read Mr. Hanau's column and we share his hope that 100% registration will be achieved this year. It is surprising how such a simple step as registering with Placement can prove to be so important in determining the future success and happiness of UVM students.

Letters To The Editor Kappa Sigma Tells Its Story

To the Editor,

In the light of certain actions taken against Kappa Sigma Fraternity and news articles and other reports which raced through the town and the campus, it is felt that an account should be made manifest, now that the emotionalism has subsided. News releases have found their way into newspapers from Burlington to Boston declaiming the barbaric actions of Kappa Sigma. Accusations of "complete destruction of a Homecoming display", "traffic halted by students", "the street covered by broken glass", and "the cumulative record of the chapter over the past few years", have been deemed worthy of space in newspapers in Rutland and Boston not to mention unsavory renditions of the story from Burlington news media. It is, therefore, not felt that Kappa Sigma can remain silent and, at the same time, retain its self-respect, but it feels compelled to clarify the facts.

Shortly before 1 A.M. Sunday morning, Oct. 30, seven members of Kappa Sigma crossed Main St. to Sigma Phi Epsilon Fraternity, where destruction was done on a Homecoming poster to the extent of a two by two foot hole in the twenty four by eighteen foot structure. Because of this the Burlington Police were summoned and arrived upon the scene to find the Kappa Sigmas back on their side of the street.

While the president of the fraternity spoke with the officer, uncalled for taunts were hurled at the police man. The president quieted the members, and, as the police officer was leaving, with no intent of any report being filed, that ill-fated and much-publicized beer bottle was thrown from the third floor of Kappa Sigma by an alumnus of the University. When Kappa Sigma was unable to bring forth the person responsible for this unquestionably disrespectful action, the Dean of Men was called and soon arrived to survey the situation.

This letter is not to be taken as an excuse or a rationale for the misconduct of the Kappa Sigma Fraternity, but merely a true statement of fact, and if these facts are worthy of the revocation of the charter of the Alpha Lambda Chapter of Kappa Sigma and transition of the chapter house into a dormitory, let it be so.

SMC Says Thanks

To the Editor,

It is with due respect and gratitude to all of those who helped to welcome Vice President and Mrs. Johnson to the Burlington area that I have written this letter. Since the Free Press carried no coverage of the airport activities of last Friday I would like to thank Dick Page, President of UVM's Student Association, Barbara Lawrence of UVM, and Kathy Meagher of Trinity College who worked tirelessly in helping with the necessary preparations and details. It was through their efforts that the two children from St. Joseph's Child Center were able to present the Vice President and Mrs. Johnson with gifts of Vermont Maple Syrup and yellow roses on behalf of the students of UVM, St. Michael's and Trinity.

Although I could not begin to name them, I also would like to thank everyone who helped to make the reception at the airport the success that it was.

THE SCEPTIC

"Is it not strange, that an Infant should be Heir of the World, and see those Mysteries which the Books of the Learned never unfold?"

-- Thomas Traherne

Certainly one of the worst and yet most accurate criticisms that can be aimed at teachers is that they are bored by their knowledge. They have lost that joy in learning and knowing about the world which should be the only justification for education. In theory, at least, teachers renew their early pleasure through their contact with students, who keep them young and interested in the delight of education. Unfortunately, students are reticent creatures, reluctant to expose their excitement to jaded teachers; and as a result, teachers tend to suspect that nothing is happening out there in the classroom. It is with deep pleasure, then, that I pass on to the rest of the faculty a portion of a student's notebook, which I found by chance in a classroom. I reproduce from it a morning's notes. They cover only two classes, but I think they serve to evoke, even in the most languid teacher, that youthful intensity of mingled thought and feeling which some of us, alas, have lost. (There's no name on the notebook. The student who took the notes will recognize them, of course; he may pick up the notebook in my office.)

Map To Amherst

Going To The Big Game?

Many students are going "En Mass" to the "big game" at Amherst. Pretty co-ed, Mary Deming, is not really planning to hitch-hike to Amherst but she would like to see the Cats scalp the Redmen.

Kittens Remain Undefeated

The Kittens of coach Fuzzy Evans scored four touchdowns in the first half before a Middlebury defense was aroused enough to shut the door and settle for a 27-0 trouncing here Friday.

Butch McCrea opened the scoring for the frosh as he bulled his way for six yards and the touchdown in the first period. The run was set up by an intercepted Middlebury pass in Panther territory.

Keith Keiterling scored two touchdowns in the second period as he took passes of six and 25 yards from quarterback Dick Czabor on both occasions to score back to back TDs.

Eric Mortenson bucked for six yards with four seconds to go in the half as UVM finished its scoring.

Dale Scribner booted three extra points to aid the Kittens' cause.

Vermont is now 3-0 on the year and will host Bridgeton Academy of Maine Friday in its season finale.

Cats In Action

(Credit: Audio/Visual Services)

Deane Kent uses Ron Hertel as a bodyguard as he cuts up-field on an end sweep.

On the brink is Soph standout, Rusty Bink as he edges his way into a pile-up to help stop a Cadet runner.

Paul (Automatic) Toussaint's try for his tenth consecutive conversion is blocked. Guess we can't call him Automatic any more.

A common sight indeed is Ken Burton slashing around end, Burton gained 89 yards and became UVM's all-time rushing leader.

Pile-ups like this are frequent in football games when the defensive team gang tackles, as the Cats did against Norwich.

Burton Breaks Rushing Record

Halfback Ken Burton, who Saturday became Vermont's all-time leading ground gainer continues to lead the Catamounts in most individual departments as the 1963 football season heads into the home stretch.

Against Norwich Saturday, Burton picked up 89 yards to bring his three-year total to 1245. The old mark was 1160, set by Ed Beck, another halfback, from 1953-55.

In six games this fall, Burton had gained 549 yards on 82 carries for a 6.6 average per carry. The Middlebury senior needs only 71 more yards to break Beck's one-season rushing mark of 620 yards established in 1954.

Twice named to the weekly ECAC College Team of the Week, Burton also heads the Cats in scoring with 30 points on five TDs, on kickoff returns with 91 yards, and he ranks second in pass receptions with 11 for 130 yards.

Fullback Richie Reynolds is second in rushing with 300 yards on 73 cracks for a 4.1 average. Sophomore quarterback Scott Fitz, the leading passer, is third in rushing with 86 yards. In the aerial fireworks, the Nashua, N.H. performer has completed 30 of 57 attempts for 374 yards and two TDs. Two other scoring passes have been called back because of penalties.

Deane Kent of Rutland retains his No. 1 spot as leading pass receiver with 14 for 153 yards and two TDs. Pete Weiss has caught 10 for 188 yards. Kent and Paul Toussaint of St. Johnsbury are second to Burton in scoring with 24 points each. Toussaint's accurate right toe has accounted for 12 points on 15 conversion attempts. Punter Charlie Foster is averaging 37.5 on 27 kicks.

Defensively, Toussaint has moved past Capt. George Oelze into second place for linemen with 68 defensive points. Oelze has 65. The pacesetter is center Rusty Brink with 78. A real dog fight exists among the backs defensively with Ken Andrade holding a narrow lead over Jim Brennan and Kent, the former with 63 points, the latter two with 60.

LITTLE MAN ON CAMPUS

"NOTICE THE SUDDEN BURST OF ENERGY SHOWN BY OUR BOYS AS THEY PASS BY THE INSPIRING CHEER FROM THE COACH'S BENCH!"

Placement Barometer.

by Douglas O. Hanau, Director of Placement

"Our chief want in life is someone who can make us do what we can - this is the service of a friend."

Ralph Waldo Emerson

This year as a senior you will have to make a number of decisions whether you wish to or not. In its broadest sense, one of the fundamental questions requiring your answer is, "What am I going to do following my graduation?" You reply, "No fear, this cannot happen to me!" I hope you are right.

Elsewhere in this newspaper your discerning eye has already glanced over the Group Meeting Calendar for Placement Registration. To those of you, senior and graduate students, who expect to complete all the academic requirements for your degree and intend to register with Placement, the contents of this discussion will be glossed over and perhaps raise some interesting questions in your own right. For example, you might well raise the point as to why should a discussion of this nature even be necessary? My answer is simply that until senior and graduate registration is one hundred percent, we shall always have to present our case before the student.

Lets look at some interesting figures for a moment. As you know, we are striving to become a truly University-wide Placement Service with the immediate and long range goal of providing a variety and number of services to all our colleges, academic and administrative departments, to students at various levels of their education, and to the employer. Obviously such an undertaking requires time, planning, and the support of all concerned. Last year was our beginning as a coordinated and centralized Placement Service, born your might say, out of the results of the Self-Study. For a number of years, the best as can be determined from previous registration figures dating back to 1954, the percentage of senior class women who registered was somewhere between 10 and 15 percent - senior men fell between 35 and 40 percent. Again I wish to emphasize that this is an estimate. However, in looking at the Class of 1963, 55 percent of the senior men and 74 percent of the senior women registered with Placement, or a combined total of 66 percent. While this represents a substantial increase over past years, we are still a long way from attaining 100 percent. Furthermore, our sister New England States Universities are running well ahead of us. The question raised here might be, "Is it realistic to ever think of our eventually having total senior and graduate registration in a voluntary Placement Program?" You, as students hold the answer to this one.

Now I would like to turn my remarks to those of you, who at this point of your final year are definitely going on to medical, law, business or some graduate school - to those of you who are counting on going directly into military service following graduation - to the fortunate or unfortunate few, depending upon how you look at it, who have a job already awaiting them and here I am talking about entrance into the family-owned business - to the many of you women, who plan to marry over the summer and lastly to those who plan to do nothing for awhile following graduation. The issue here is whether or not you should register with Placement?

I could go into endless paragraphs and countless case studies of a proportion of you who will put all of your eggs in one basket and see the basket come apart before your eyes. For the plain facts of the matter are that a number of you will be turned down for graduate study. Financial assistance, either through scholarships or summer jobs will not materialize. Even if you actually get through the door - what happens if it just is not for you, or a death in the family requires you to go to work immediately and become the principal breadwinner?

I could discuss at length the number of young men who are so sure they are going on active military duty immediately in June. What does it mean to you if you do not go into the service for at least six months to a year? How do you plan to cover this period of time, or is it largely to be "wasted" or "lost" time? How about when you terminate your military duty? It is so easy to say, "I shall register then." But let me tell you that time is the most precious commodity you can have when searching for a job and to register by mail is a slow, tedious process, plus you run the very real risk of losing out to the man who has a head start by having his Placement credentials in order and up to date.

Some of you say that you plan to go to work for your father, uncle, or some relative of the family and my answer is that a number of these business relationships have been known to fail. What do you do then?

As an intelligent senior woman, I am sure you could give me any number of reasons as to why a pending marriage might be delayed or postponed indefinitely.

One of the themes running through all of this is that - "Oh yes, what you say may be true; but this will not happen to me." I wish I had it in my power to give this kind of guarantee. As far as I have been able to determine, there is no good reason for not completing the simple mechanics of registration. In fact, all of us in Placement here and at other institutions find our experience has been that those alumni who have the most trouble in career planning, vocational orientation, or job hunting during the first five years out of college are those who did not register with the Placement Office or take advantage of the counseling and other services available to them as undergraduates. This University enjoys an enviable reputation, both with respect to the quality of its academic preparation and to the performance of its Placement Service. It is our goal to make this reputation work to the advantage of every student.

In conclusion, each of you must make a decision. However, all too many times that which is the simplest appears all too complicated. If in doubt, and you want to stop by the Placement Office, I shall attempt to pursue matters further in light of your own personal plans or better yet, attend a group meeting with those of your classmates who intend to register and listen to the discussion.

Letters

EDITOR'S NOTE: The following letter, which we reprint here, is addressed to the student body by a visiting foreign student. Dear fellow students,

Since I had a talk with the two beautiful co-eds from UVM on a foreign trip, it has been my desire to be able to tell you something about it. As you all know, when students from this fine community which is UVM, meet they, without a doubt will talk about academic experiences. I found out that they are juniors majoring in some foreign language, and they, that I study Physics. From 'I never take Physics', 'Oh boy' and cetera to 'Tell me, what is Physics?', I am kind of wondering about how many students went through College, without knowing what is Physics, and from a fellow graduate student in Physics "When people said that they never take Physics before, they seem to be very proud of it." I don't really know how I should react to these remarks, because for me Physics isn't exactly that subject that we should try to skip in College. Listen, this could happen to you:

My freshman Physics teacher is an old smiling man. At my first class he explained to us that Physics is the study of the basic laws of nature, and our whole college education is just to make us think, to teach us how to think properly. As we progressed through the semester, he used to show us experiments, simple experiments. I enjoyed watching these experiments and as I observed around me, I found out how ignorant I was and still am. We do have a joy knowing or discovering something new you know. If I may, I would like to suggest to non-science and non-physics majors to try some Physics courses, they are not so tough, or granting in the worse case that they are difficult courses, we all know that "Impossible takes a little longer for UVM students."

Editor's Note: The Editor received this letter critically attacking the Sceptic's anonymity. The person who penned the letter is obviously a hypocrite - he hasn't signed HIS name. Moreover, J.D. O'Hara has openly revealed the fact that he IS the Sceptic.

To the Editor:

Although the "Sceptic" does not wish to sign his name, this hardly means that he wants it to be unknown. Like a tight sweater on a loose girl, he wears the cloak of anonymity not to conceal, but to reveal. After all, to be completely successful as a man of mystery would spoil the fun, and fun - or fame - this vest-pocket Pope must have. Apparently he finds the captive audience of the classroom too confining for his talents and has decided to vent his spleen in the grand manner. To go wholly undetected in this venture would grieve him deeply and so he has left behind a trail -- or is it a scent? -- that even the poorest of his students can follow with ease.

The object of his verbal vandalism is not to lash mankind (or the student body) out of its favorite follies and vices but to be a CONTROVERSIAL FIGURE. To judge from letters to the CYNIC, he has enjoyed considerable success in this sim. Not every day does a college English teacher find time and energy to address himself to such vital issues as the inadequate ventilation in fraternity passion pits or the prose rhythms of "Mixes and Matches." Never has so much been said about so little, or in a style some students mistakenly believe to be just this side of immortality.

"IS THERE ANY WAY TO MAKE UP THIS S-S - OH, NEVER MIND."

Sculptor Is Not A Speaker

Usually, when a talented and successful artist and an interested audience meet, the result is a worthwhile and entertaining experience for all involved. Unfortunately, for the Roy Kennedy Lecture on October 24th, which was held in the Fleming Museum, this did not hold true. Mr. Kennedy, who is apparently unused to public speaking had decided to use the entire lecture time for a question-answer period; those in charge obviously did not warn him of the dangers involved in this type of procedure. The audience, on the other hand had come to hear about Mr. Kennedy's unusual and sensitively formed sculpture - they were not prepared to ask one and a half hours' worth of questions. The result was that, after a very short time, a communication barrier developed which caused the audience to rack its brains for questions to ask and which must have made Mr. Kennedy very uncomfortable.

The time with Mr. Kennedy, however, was not a complete loss. He explained in detail the techniques and equipment used in creating his unique bronze sculpture. Mr. Kennedy is delighted with this medium because there are no special limitations in its use, except that the expansion and contraction of the metals when subjected to varying temperatures makes shaping them difficult.

Mr. Kennedy works mostly from sketches which are then made into clay models. The final sculpture, however, is often completely different from the original plan. The reason for this, Mr. Kennedy states, is that subject matter is relatively unimportant to him; solving the problem of form and placement is his primary objective. Each new composition is a challenge to Mr. Kennedy; consequently he seems to enjoy his more intricate works more than the simpler ones.

Pi Beta Phi would like to announce the following pinnings: Susan Monti, '65, to Buzzy Clifford, '65, of Kappa Sigma; Cathy Hentz, '66, to John Bradley, '66, of Sigma Alpha Epsilon; Pat Warren, '65, to Peter Henry, '65, of Delta Upsilon of Middlebury; and Sylvia Seibert, '64, to Tim Terrien, '64, of Delta Psi. Congratulations to our new pledge Marilyn Owens, '66, and to new Pi Phi sister Carolee Cheeney, '66. Mrs. Katherine Waterman, new head resident of Pi Phi was the special guest of the Pi Phi's Mothers' Club at a dessert hour last Wednesday. Next week be sure to buy tickets from Pi Phi's for the Burlington Junior Chamber of Commerce's Hootennany to be held Nov. 6.

The Owls proudly announce the engagement of Al Shaw to Maryann Squires. A late December wedding is planned.

Congratulations to Acacia's three new brothers: Dave Mansfield, Bob Costine, and Jay Moore who were initiated this past weekend.

The sisters of Kappa Alpha Theta were up unusually early Sunday morning, not because they had forgotten to set their clocks back the night before, but because they were expecting the brothers of Delta Psi for breakfast. A fine time was had by all and at last report, no one had suffered from indigestion... the sisters did all the cooking.

Miss Nola Marburger, faculty advisor to the Thetas, was surprised at the usual Monday night meeting, by a shower held in honor of her recent engagement.

This Saturday, most Thetas will don their "working clothes" for their annual Workday for Logopedics, their national philanthropy. Raking leaves, washing windows, even cleaning refrigerators for faculty members are the tasks they will tackle and any money received will be donated to the Logopedics Institute for Cerebral Palsy in Wichita, Kansas.

Alpha Delta Pi's are happy to welcome as new sisters Sharon Ryan, '66 and Jane Meyers, '66 who were initiated Sunday, Oct. 27, 1963.

A wonderful Homecoming, indeed! Unfortunately, the social news came too late to make last week's edition - so here it is:

Congratulations to AEPhi's Cookie Goldman, '65, on her pinning by Dick Darling, '65, AEPhi, and to Betsy Juels, '65, on her pinning by AEPhi's Barry Bloom, '64.

The brothers of TEP congratulate Rick Nalin of Nightriders fame, on his marriage to Carol Mesh of New York City. Also Cupid-type congrats go to Peter Hollis, TEP, on his engagement to Sarabeth Lipson of Newton, Mass.

AGR's cowboy, Steve Abbott, '65, and Joan Adams receive best wishes on their engagement. Also, congratulations to AGR's new Brothers: Enoch Bell, Jim Bushey, Gilles Cote, Brian Hawley, Ted Manning, Fremont Nelson, Wally Rooney, Jim Rowley, Don Taylor, and Danny Young.

The AEPhi-Gamma Phi Open House was a tremendous success as was that of ADPhi and Lambda Iota.

ADPhi's Linda Atcuph deserves congratulations on being appointed News Director of WRUV.

Theta Chi's Tim Madison, '66, has the best wishes of all his brothers on his pinning to Carol Latham, '67, of the University of Rhode Island. They were pinned during Homecoming.

Best wishes to Acacia's Burton Bryan, '65, on his pinning of Ann Lindsey, '65, of ADPhi.

The brothers of Lambda Iota extend their congratulations to John Robichaud, '62, who recently married Kathy Tulley.

The Alpha Chi's are proud to announce the engagement of their Marty Robinson, '64, to Carl Eels, Acacia, '64.

Congratulations to Janice Rood, '66 on her pinning by Eddie Coddling, '67, Springfield College and to Andy Layman, '64, on her marriage to Erwin Lefkowitz.

When is it going to snow? This past Homecoming really was tropical, so we can expect the Ariel to caption this year's game as storm-tossed, I guess.

Delta Delta Delta sorority held its annual Apple Polishing Party on Monday evening, October 28. The collegians entertained their favorite professors outside of the classroom which is a seldom met pleasure. To carry out the theme of the party, the professors were served apple pie and given a fresh apple before their departure. The Tridelt's thank all their professors for making the party such a success.

MISS AFFLERBACH'S GOLDEN JUBILEE: HURRAH!

YOU have heard us mention Miss Revera Afflerbach who has been Forelady here at Eagle Shirts since 1918. It is not often that one sees such allegiance, and we appreciate it. Also, she has been very nice to allow us to bandy her name about in ads, books, etc. So we would like to proclaim something to honor her and also give us another excuse to bandy her name: The Afflerbach Golden Jubilee Year. ★ Now, ordinarily this wouldn't occur until 1968, but why wait until the last moment? Besides, we have already struck a medal (see above). The cloth in the shirt upon which the medal is hanging is also named after her: Afflerbach Cloth. It is made in Switzerland to her specifications, which are 20% wool and 80% cotton. Her reasoning is interesting. She wanted enough wool to make it very soft, but enough cotton to make it light and washable. Any more wool than that and it's not a shirt so much as a nice, if bulky, garment for woodchopping or other hearty activities. ★ Additionally, it is mothproof; if for no other reason than that no moth would be willing to go to all that work for such scant nourishment. Afflerbach Cloth is the moth equivalent of pomegranates. The Afflerbach Jubilee Shirt comes, complete with medal as shown, in solid colors (flame red, midnight navy, loden green, winter white, smoke blue) at about $13.00; and tartans, district checks and blazer stripes at about $14.00, wherever Eagle Shirts are sold. If you're not sure where that is in your town, write Miss Afflerbach, Eagle Shirtmakers, Quakertown, Pa. It might be nice if you said congratulations.

Does a man really take unfair advantage of women when he uses Mennen Skin Bracer?

All depends on why he uses it.

Most men simply think Menthol-Iced Skin Bracer is the best after-shave lotion around. Because it cools rather than burns. Because it helps heal shaving nicks and scrapes. Because it helps prevent blemishes.

So who can blame them if Bracer's crisp, long-lasting aroma just happens to affect women so remarkably?

Of course, some men may use Mennen Skin Bracer because of this effect.

How intelligent!

WINTERFEST

Vermonters with any dim appreciation of the Weathermakers gift for making trouble are already preparing for a tough winter ahead, their catchwords being, "Man, are we going to pay for this summer-type autumn; bet it'll snow 200 inches this winter."

All of which makes WINTERFEST, November 1 and 2 at the Memorial Auditorium, a highly appropriate introduction to the winter season.

Winter sports will be the heart of WINTERFEST, and happy skiers, skaters, tobogganers, hikers and snowshoers will be its spirit.

On Saturday, Gov. Philip Hoff will officially open the sports show, which will feature gorgeous clothes, gorgeous girls, every variety of sports equipment, assorted husky dogs, an Olympic toboggan, many persons famous in the wintersports field, eats, and door prizes by the bushel basketful.

Friday night, November 1, the "Snow-Ball" will be held. The Music Messengers, directed by Temple Conner, will play from 8 until 11:00. Melissa Hetzel will attend the dance and Ted Barker will be Master of Ceremonies.

Girls and women who fancy themselves in stretch pants are invited to get in on the Miss Stretch Pants contest, to be judged by a group of men noted for their profound appreciation of the combined efforts of God and man in adorning the ski slopes of Vermont.

WINTERFEST is to benefit Mary Fletcher Hospital and admission is $1.00 for adults. The show goes from 11 in the morning until 11 in the evening with something happening every minute.

Students' Forum

To the Editor:

It is long past the time that all members of this University, no matter what their race or religion, stopped playing on a variety of conflicting emotions and took a good look at the implications of banning Black-Face at Kake Walk.

Why are so many of you voting against Black-Face? It is because one Negro girl felt that this representation of her race was unfortunate. After she had spoken, many other Negroes, who had not previously had the gumption to speak for themselves, openly agreed with her viewpoint. As time went on and the discussion spread, emotions went into play, and before many people had truly reflected on their thoughts and actions, they too spoke out against Black-Face.

It is said that when boys black their faces, put on old clothes and strut up the floor for the Kake, that they are unwittingly discriminating against the Negro because he is being represented as poor and illiterate. It is said that this is the symbol of the Negro to to many people, and thus should be banned. It is said that this hurts the Negro's feelings, and we do not want to hurt anybody's feelings.

Of course, if we are decent, which some of us truly are, we do not want to hurt anybody's feelings, whether they are white, brown, yellow or green and purple. But there is only one reason some Negroes will be hurt when they see themselves represented at Kake Walk -- and that will be if they are ashamed of what they once were. And many of them, unfortunately, are ashamed.

It is not the Black-Face that must be erased -- it is the shame of any minority group for themselves that must be erased.

All poor people when they came to this country had to work like hell to get out from under the Yoke of their position and achieve a "good life." Of course, not all of them were slaves (and it is the slavery of the Negroes that made their position even worse than that of the average "foreigner" or "low class worker"); but all of these people, the Irish, the Polish, the Italians, the Jews, the Arabs, all of them lived, and some are still living, in a type of slavery until they could through sheer guts and exhausting labor make themselves into something near to what they hoped to attain.

Is this shameful? It is shameful that in a world with so much, so few have a lot, and so many must break their backs to gain some small measure of happiness and decency. But the courage these people showed, and will show as long as there is poverty and prejudice in the world, is not shameful.

This courage has manifested itself in many ways. One of the most amazing has been the ability at the end of an exhausting day of labor to come home and spend much of the night singing and dancing. It comes out in certain types of humor which is peculiar to each minority group, and which the "Top-Dog" will never truly be able to understand. It has manifested itself in an almost super-human will to keep on, to do what must be done day after day, and to somehow still retain a sense of the humorous and the joyful in life.

Human courage is a strange thing. It cannot be understood or talked about well in words. But, believe me, it is nothing of which to be ashamed. And the moment Black-Face is banned, we are giving in to the shame of the Negro for the original position of his people, which is a sick thing to do. He must feel pride -- not shame. Some Negroes do feel proud of their people, just as some Irish are proud of their own, as are some Italians, etc. But others act as if their forefathers never existed as what they were. Is this a fine attitude?

Please -- let us not mouth emotional words simply for the sake of thinking we should be brotherly. Let us think about things, and then say what we really mean. Let us, above all, not lose sight of what human dignity and compassion truly consist.

Massachusetts junior quarterback Jerry Whelchel has completed 28 of 44 passes for three touchdowns and 394 yards. Whelchel has completed 64% of his passes for an average of 14.1 yards per completion.

The 57-0 win over Rhode Island was the biggest margin of victory for a Massachusetts football team since the Redmen beat C.C.N.Y. 59-0 in 1946.

Catamounts Topple Cadets, 27-0

Crowd Of 7100 See Cats Win

Caught in the air - Pete Weiss, who has proven to be the Cats' most reliable end, snags an aerial from Scot Fitz (10) in mid-air.

Continuing its victorious trend, the UVM Catamounts toppled the Norwich Cadets, 27-0, in the last home game of the season. The Cats brought their season's record up to 5-1 before a spirited crowd of over 7100.

Early in the first quarter, the Cadets began to move under the passing of quarterback Bob Nolan and the running of halfback Gary Wehrwein. The Catamount defense stopped their progress on the Vermont 13 yard line. An attempted field goal by Norwich's Joe Spillane was wide and the threat ended.

Another threat was erased when Captain George Oelze recovered a Norwich fumble on Vermont's 9 yard line.

Late in the first quarter the Cats began a drive from the Norwich 49 yard line. After Scot Fitz passed to Ken Burton for 4 yards, runs by Burton, Reynolds, and Ettlinger brought the ball down to the 15 yard line. Deane Kent then slanted off tackle for Vermont's initial score. Paul Toussaint then converted for the extra point, making the score 7-0.

The score remained at this for the rest of the half as both defenses controlled the play.

Vermont scored three times in the second half. With 7:55 left in the third quarter Richie Reynolds bulled his way over from 2 yards out. Toussaint again kicked for the extra point, making the score 14-0. Deane Kent intercepted a Cadet aerial, thus setting up another Vermont drive. Capping this one was a touchdown pass play from Scot Fitz to Pete Weiss, just after the beginning of the fourth quarter. Toussaint's third consecutive extra point made it 21-0.

Vermont's final touchdown came on a beautifully executed reverse play to Frank Foerster, who scored from the Norwich 21 yard line. Toussaint's kick was blocked. Coach Clifford then utilized his bench. The Catamount substitutes proposed a serious threat in the closing minutes of the game, but failed to score.

Vermont travels to Amherst this week to take on the Redmen of the University of Massachusetts. This will prove to be the toughest game of the season for the Cats, and also the deciding factor in the final standings of the Yankee Conference. Up to date the Redmen sport a 5-0-1 record. The outstanding player, Jerry Whelchel, quarterback for the Mass team will be the man most sought after by the Catamounts this coming Saturday.

Good Season In View For Cagers

Although we lost four starters from last year's squad, coach "Fuzzy" Evans is very optimistic about the fortunes of the 1963-64 varsity team. There are seven members returning from last year plus seven newcomers. The returning seniors are Dave Strassburg, Chuck Glick, Dick Lawson and Bobby Nurse. Three juniors, Joe Gannon, Ralph D'Attilia and Carl Fratinni, and seven sophomores, Layne Higgs, Ken Spalter, Milt Goggins, Ed Pollack, Dick Shaw, Mike Shay, and Dave Cornell, round out the squad.

Strassburg is the only returning starter and he will captain this year's varsity. He can either play inside or out front in "Fuzzy's" 3-2 offense. D'Attilia and Lawson, sixth and seventh men last year, appear ready to take over the starting jobs vacated by the graduated seniors. Lawson is a cornerman and D'Attilia can play both back and fore court, but will most likely be stationed in the latter position. Glick and Nurse will be fighting for a backcourt spot.

Three sophs from last year's powerful undefeated Freshman squad can possibly play an important role on the team. At 6'4" and 215 pounds, Goggins will battle Strassburg and Lawson for a starting berth.

Milt is from Hoboken, New Jersey and was the leading scorer on the freshman five. L. Higgs and K. Spalter will tussle with Glick and Nurse for the backcourt positions. Layne is a product of Barre, Vt., and he along with Spalter, a Brooklyn boy, directed the Kittens offensive patterns.

The fourteen boys began practice on Oct. 16, and have been working out at night from 7:00-8:30. Coach Evans coordinates his practice drills with the type of offense he uses. These drills also enable the boys to get into their peak condition for the opening game, a month and a half away. The boys practice defensive movements as well as offense. The defense is an integral part of the game and any team that expects to win its share of games must have an adequate defensive club. Another basic fundamental to winning basketball is the free throw. A team can win or lose a game on the foul line depending whether they are able to make a good percentage of foul shots. "Fuzzy" requires that his ball-players sink a certain number of free throws at the end of each practice session before taking their showers. He increases the minimum quota daily thus hoping to establish a high percentage of foul shots made in order to win those tightly fought games.

Last Thursday in conjunction with the gathering of all Vermont coaches in Burlington, "Fuzzy" Evans demonstrated his offensive patterns and subordinating drills at the Burlington High School gym. Coach Evans first outlined his offensive plays on a blackboard explaining in detail the function of each ballplayer in the play. Then he asked his team to demonstrate how each play was run on the court.

Fitz Named ECAC Soph Of The Week

(Credit: Audio-Visual)

For his outstanding quarterbacking in Vermont's 27-0 win over Norwich, Scott Fitz has been named ECAC Sophomore of the Week in the College Division.

Fitz enjoyed one of the best days of his young varsity career in leading the Catamounts to their fifth win of the season Saturday. The Nashua, N.H. player completed 10 of 13 passes for 117 yards including a 50-yard TD pass to end Pete Weiss. The same combination had another score wiped out by a penalty.

In addition to his passing, Fitz carried the ball five times and gained 27 yards. He has become the third leading rusher with 86 yards on 17 carries to rank behind Ken Burton and Richie Reynolds.

Fitz paces Vermont in passing with 30 completions in 57 attempts for 374 yards and two touchdown passes. He had had only one interception. On total offense (rushing and passing yardage), Fitz is second to Burton with 460 yards.

In being named Sophomore of the Week, Fitz was selected over 28 other nominations.

Fitz is the fourth Vermont player named to the weekly ECAC team this fall. Burton has twice been named as a halfback while Reynolds earned one nod from his fullback spot.

Rappa's Roundup

by Richard Rappaport

Last Saturday the University of Vermont captured its fifth victory in six attempts to assure itself of a winning season for the first time in four years by defeating Norwich 27-0.

The Norwich contest, although important, is actually of minor significance when contrasted to the Catamounts upcoming game with the University of Massachusetts this weekend at Amherst. This game with the U Mass, is probably the most important football game the Cats have ever played, since if they emerge victorious they can do no worse than a tie for first place in the Yankee Conference with the Redmen.

In this contest the Catamounts will be opposing an undefeated squad which has recorded a 5-0-1 record, having beaten Maine, Bucknell, U Conn, Rhody, Boston University, and playing also unbeaten Harvard to a 0-0 standstill. The significant fact about victorious U Mass is that their extremely potent defense has only permitted ten points in six games while their high scoring offense has amassed a total of 134 points in as many contests. Their line is a huge and talented one, they have the best quarterback in the conference in Jerry Whelchel, and are returning twenty-two lettermen from last year's team that defeated Vermont 34-6.

In predicting the outcome of this contest, many factors, besides U Mass's considerable weight advantage on the line, must be considered. The Redmen have Vermont well scouted, and thus they should be able to stop our plays unless Coach Clifford re-vamps the offense with new, imaginative plays. The Cats, decidedly the underdog, must not only institute many new plays, but cannot, as in previous games, play this week's game straight by the book.

It goes without saying that UVM will be extremely fired-up for this game, but the enthusiasm and incentive of the team will be increased if they know that they have the entire support of the student body, not only in spirit but by their actual attendance at this contest. This game will be played before a highly partisan crowd, and if a considerable amount of Cat fans attend this contest, it would offset this partisan spirit somewhat, and could provide the difference in a close battle between these two squads.

Although I picked the correct winner of the UVM games in my initial two columns including the correct point spread last week, I am not overly enthusiastic over this week's prediction, as I attempt to make it three in a row. The reason for my lack of enthusiasm this week is that, unlike the last two games when I chose UVM to win, I am forced to back the Redmen this week by two touchdowns, a prediction which for once I hope does not come true.

The Cats do have a fairly good chance to make this writer join the ranks of that great predictor, Bish Bishop by pulling off what would definitely be the outstanding upset of the New England Collegiate season. This can only be accomplished by an aroused Vermont team using many new unorthodox plays, and having the loyal support of the UVM student body.

Weekly Scouting Report

This week's opponent: University of Massachusetts
Last year's game: 6-34
Nickname: Redmen
Colors: Maroon and White
Coach: Victor H. Fusia
Series Record: 7-13-2

UVM (5-1)		U MASS (5-0-1)
14 American Int'n	6	14 Maine	7
12 Army "B"	0	0 Harvard	0
13 Maine	14	21 Bucknell	0
21 Rhode Island	6	21 Connecticut	3
28 New Hampshire	6	57 Rhode Island	0
27 Norwich	0	21 Boston U.	0
115	32	134	10

This year's performances: Redmen have displayed tremendous defense thus far, yielding only 10 points in six games. At same time, have compiled strong offense to go along with defense. Biggest offensive game against Rhode Island (57-0). Victory over powerful B.U. (21-0) last week was very impressive. Have phenomenal quarterback in Whelchel, who is accurate passer and aggressive runner, besides kicking extra points. UMass is enjoying one of strongest years in history.

Forecast: Cats will be outweighed on line from 5-50 pounds per man. This is definitely strongest team Vermont will face all year. UMass is 3 deep in every position with some to spare (55 man squad). Aerial and ground attack of Redmen is much too powerful for the smaller Cats to content with. Short Catamount pass defenders will not be enough for tall Massachusetts ends (6'3", 6'4"). It will be an accomplishment for Cats to score against mighty defense which held Harvard, B.U., Bucknell, and Rhody scoreless. Cats will be giving it their all, but that might not be enough. But remember, David slew Goliath.

American Ballet Theatre To Feature "Billy The Kid"

by Betty Fuchs

During the twenty-three years since its debut in 1940, the company has performed in 37 countries and 48 states in this country. When American Ballet Theatre plays an engagement here at Memorial Auditorium, presented by the Blue Lane Series on November 14, it will have travelled more than 500,000 miles.

The world renowned American Ballet Theatre, under the direction of Lucia Chase and Oliver Smith, is headed by the internationally famous stars, Toni Lander, Royes Fernandez, John Kriza, Dianne Richards, Ruth Ann Koesun, Sallie Wilson, and Eleanor D'Antuono. The company consists of 85 dancers and a symphony orchestra.

Lucia Chase and Oliver Smith have found that audiences throughout the world are generally divided into two schools of preference: those who prefer the classical ballets and the Russian school, and those who derive greater pleasure from the performance of contemporary works. For this reason, every program offered by American Ballet Theatre is designed to appeal to the taste of every ballet-goer. This universality of appeal has been made possible because for 23 years the company has trained and selected dancers to perform with equal facility in both the serene and dignified style of classical ballet, and in the energetic and more volatile spirit of contemporary dance.

During its Burlington engagement, American Ballet Theatre will present two performances; its regularly scheduled evening performance, and a special youth matinee. The afternoon performance will include "Grand Pas-Blazounov," and "Billy the Kid." Comprising the program for the evening performance are "Concerto," "Billy the Kid," "Pas de Deux," and "Divertissements from Napoli."

"Billy the Kid" is the first great American ballet; European critics consider it the finest dance work ever created by an American. The character of Billy the Kid, the young outlaw who killed 21 men in his short life of 21 years, provides John Kriza, the leading dancer, with the most exciting and virile male role in all ballet repertory. The music was especially written for the ballet by Aaron Copland and is regarded as the masterpiece of America's most important composer.

"Concerto," William Dollar's latest addition to the American Ballet Theatre repertory, is a ballet in the modern classical style. The ballet is set to Mendelssohn's Piano Concerto No. 1 and is designed to show the technique of the corps de ballet as well as the principal dancers.

"Napoli Divertissement" is choreographed by August Bournonville, re-staged by Toni Lander. The music is from "Napoli" by Paulini, Halsted, and Gade. "Pas de Deux," Grand Pas de Deux from "Don Quixote," is choreographed after Marius Petipa, music by Leon Minkus.

Four Civil Rights Leaders To Speak At Vt. Conference

Mr. Stephen Spingarn

Louis E. Lomax

James Farmer, National Director of CORE

Louis Lomax, whose topic for Vermont Conference is "The Individual's Commitment to Freedom," is "one of the nation's best authorities on the race issue and the emerging nations of Africa and Asia."

Mr. Lomax turned to writing at the age of 22 and has served as a feature writer for the Afro-American and the Chicago American. His articles have appeared in most of the major magazines including Life, Look, Harper's, The Saturday Evening Post, The Nation, and The New Leader.

The Saturday Review Annisfield-Wolf award was won by Mr. Lomax in 1960 for his best seller, The Reluctant African. His second book, The Negro Revolt, is considered to be the definitive work on race relations in America today. His latest book, When The Word is Given, was published on October 28, 1963.

Mr. Lomax has made several television appearances and has also periodically been on newscasts for CBS, NBC and ABC. His lecture tours have taken him to America's major cities and Canada.

The other two featured speakers for this year's Vermont Conference are James Farmer, National Director of CORE, and John Lewis, Chairman of the Student Nonviolent Coordinating Committee.

Stephen Spingarn and Louis E. Lomax will be two of the featured speakers at Vermont Conference to be held Nov. 12, 13 and 14, in Ira Allen Chapel, 7:15 p.m. Both Mr. Lomax and Mr. Spingarn will speak on Wednesday, Nov. 13. The theme of the Conference is "Pride Prejudice: Negro Struggle for Civil Rights."

Stephen Spingarn's main experience has been in Legislative Drafting and Congressional Relations, Small Business and Anti-monopoly Matters, Counter Espionage and Internal Security, and Politics at the National Level.

From 1934-1942, in the Roosevelt and Truman administrations, Mr. Spingarn was an Attorney in the U.S. Treasury Department and Special Assistant to the Attorney General. His work involved mainly drafting bills and preparing supporting data, testifying before Congressional Committees, and consultation with and assistance to Congressional members at their request.

During World War II, Mr. Spingarn was an Army Captain, Major and Lt. Colonel. He was commanding officer of the Fifth Army Intelligence Corps (CIC) from July 1943-July 1945, and directed its operations in the capture of over 500 enemy espionage and sabotage agents and the arrest and internment of several thousand security risks. Spingarn was awarded the Legion of Merit, Bronze Star Medal with Valor Emblem, Invasion Arrowhead and Battle Stars. He was also recommended for the Silver Star Medal and additional Legion of Merit. The Fifth Army CIC was awarded a Unit Citation.

1946-1949 found Mr. Spingarn as Legislative Counsel of the U.S. Treasury Department with the title of Assistant General Counsel. He was also Deputy Director of Contract Settlement and Legal Counsel to the U.S. Secret Service. In 1947, he represented the Treasury at the International Conference in Lima, Peru. Mr. Spingarn served on the working Committee of President's Temporary Commission on Employee Loyalty (1946-47) which drafted the Truman Loyalty Program, and in 1948 helped draft the Truman Civil Rights Program.

Mr. Spingarn served as Administrative Assistant to the President of the United States from 1949-50, and was, in effect, Legislative Counsel of the White House.

As Commissioner of the Federal Trade Commission (the independent, bipartisan Federal Anti-monopoly agency headed by five Commissioners) from 1950-September, 1953, Mr. Spingarn handled most of the FTC legislative and appropriation work.

Mr. Spingarn has devoted himself to personal affairs since September, 1953, and from time to time testified before Congressional Committees on questions of public policy. He was National Director of Special Activities for the Kefauver Vice-Presidential Campaign in 1956, and a member of Senator Kefauver's Executive and Advisory Committee.

In addition to Mr. Lomax and Mr. Spingarn, James Farmer and John Lewis will also be guest speakers. Mr. Farmer is National Director of the Congress of Racial Equality (CORE) and was one of its founders in 1942. He also served as the first National Chairman of CORE. He has lectured extensively and written for numerous publications and is a former program director of the NAACP. Mr. Farmer also led the original CORE Freedom Ride beginning on May 4, 1961, and played a prominent role in this past summer's Freedom March on Washington.

Mr. Lewis is Chairman of the Student Nonviolent Coordinating Committee (SNICK). He is a former philosopher at Fisk University in Nashville, Tennessee, and is a member of the militant Nashville Group.

James Farmer will be the speaker Tuesday night, Louis Lomax and Stephen Spingarn on Wednesday night, and John Lewis on Thursday night. Following their speeches in the Chapel, there will be panel discussions in Lower Waterman in the old coffee shop. There will also be a moderator for this panel each night. On Tuesday he will be Dr. M. Alfred Haynes, President of the Burlington NAACP and assistant professor of Epidemiology and Community Medicine at the UVM College of Medicine; on Wednesday, Professor Jay Sigler, professor of Political Science at UVM; and on Thursday, Reverend William Hollister of Burlington who organized the Burlington group at the March on Washington this past August.

In addition, there will be two other speakers on Tuesday's panel, Mr. Gordon Mills, editor of the Burlington Free Press, and Mr. Roger MacBride, a representative of the Vermont State Legislature from Halifax, Vermont.

Admission to all aspects of Vermont Conference is free.

Barb Wool Is Back In Japan

By Pat Orvis
Burlington Free Press

It was a love affair with a country that drew Barbara Wool back to the Orient, where she is now a student, teacher and television personality.

In 1959 Barbara, daughter of Burlington lawyer Joseph S. Wool, and Mrs. Wool, was an American Field Service student in Japan for nearly three months.

She lived with Dr. and Mrs. Susumu Ogino, their son and two daughters, in Hamamatsu, Japan, a city of some 250,000 and declared on her return that she wouldn't mind living there permanently.

A Burlington High School senior that fall, she immediately began planning her return to the country with which she had avowedly fallen in love.

At the end of her freshman year at the University of Vermont (where she was Homecoming Queen), Barbara went to New York City to study Japanese at Columbia University.

During her sophomore year (when she was a runner-up for Military Ball Queen), Barbara applied to study at the Tokyo division of Stanford University, Stanford, Calif.

That summer, 1962, she returned to New York to learn more about Japan and its complex language and culture by working at a Japanese shop.

Glamour played the interloper and attempted to swerve the earnest young student from her goal when she was "discovered" by the manufacturers of the popular Pantino sportswear, for whom she modeled that summer.

Lord and Taylor also liked her looks and she did some modeling for them. In fact the store made a mannequin of her that still is used in its Fifth Avenue windows, says Barbara's father.

But neither queenly titles nor offers from famous designers could turn her head, could distract Barbara Wool from her purpose, and that fall, in September, she was off to her beloved Japan.

And there she is today, studying and behaving like a native, doing a show - in Japanese - on Tokyo television and teaching English to three Japanese professors, in addition to her courses at the Stanford branch.

"I don't know what kind of show she has," she's been too busy to write us details. I just know it is a weekly show and that she does it all in Japanese," says her father with justified pride. "She speaks, writes and reads the ancient as well as the modern language fluently," he says.

Barbara will be back here in January to finish college, probably at Stanford or Columbia, according to her father.

HER FUTURE?

Well, there will undoubtedly be lots in it to do with Japan and Japanese culture, perhaps something connected with the U.N. or State Department, says Wool.

THE BELL TELEPHONE COMPANIES SALUTE: LEO BERARD

Leo Berard (B.S.M.E., 1957) joined New England Telephone in the fall of 1960 and, within months, was put in charge of an important study to determine the feasibility of large-scale buried cable operations in Rhode Island.

Developing standards and practices where few previously existed, Leo presented his final reports before top-level management, engineering groups, municipal planners, and Chambers of Commerce throughout Rhode Island.

His initiative in carrying out the study and his ability to capably represent his company are just two of the traits that earned Leo his promotion to Engineer in the Plant Extension Department.

Leo Berard, like many young engineers, is impatient to make things happen for his company and himself. There are few places where such restlessness is more welcomed or rewarded than in the fast-growing telephone business.

Science Foundation To Award Fellowships

Applicants for the graduate awards will be required to take the Graduate Record Examination designed to test scientific aptitude and achievement. This examination, administered by the Educational Testing Service, will be given on January 18, 1964, at designated centers throughout the United States and certain foreign countries.

The annual stipends for graduate Fellows are as follows: $2400 for the first level; $2600 for the intermediate level; and $2800 for the terminal level. The annual stipend for postdoctoral Fellows is $5500. Limited allowances will also be provided to apply toward tuition, laboratory fees, and travel.

Further information and application materials may be obtained from the Fellowship Office, National Academy of Sciences - National Research Council, 2101 Constitution Avenue, N.W., Washington, D.C., 20413. The deadline for the receipt of applications for regular postdoctoral fellowships is December 16, 1963, and for graduate fellowships, January 3, 1964.

The National Academy of Sciences - National Research Council has been called upon again to advise the National Science Foundation in the selection of candidates for the Foundation's program of regular graduate and postdoctoral fellowships. Committees of outstanding scientists appointed by the Academy Research Council will evaluate applications of all candidates. Final selection will be made by the Foundation and awards will be announced on March 15, 1964.

Fellowships will be awarded for study in the mathematical, physical, medical, biological and engineering sciences; also in anthropology, psychology (excluding clinical psychology), geography, economics (excluding business administration), sociology (not including social work), and the history and philosophy of science. They are open to college seniors, graduate and postdoctoral students and others with equivalent training and experience. All applicants must be citizens of the United States and will be judged solely on the basis of ability.

NUSAS May Be Banned Soon

PHILADELPHIA (CPS) — According to informed sources there is a very good probability that the National Union of South African Students (NUSAS) will be banned in the next month.

In the past few months NUSAS has become victim to increasing amounts of criticism from the government, a usual prelude to the banning of an organization or political party in South Africa.

NUSAS, a predominately white national union of students (because of the government apartheid policy, not by NUSAS's choice), has opposed the apartheid policy of the South African Government for at least two decades.

The reason for believing that NUSAS will soon be banned are two fold. The first is that the government seems to be stepping up prosecutions of "acts of terror" against dissenters, specifically the current trial of the leaders of the African National Congress.

The second reason is that the government has recently stepped up its attacks against NUSAS. This, in the case of previous groups under government attack, has been a prelude to prohibition.

On August 31, opening the congress of the Jeugbond, a youth group which supports apartheid and the Nationalist Party government, the Minister of Justice, Mr. P.J. Vorster, threatened action against NUSAS. He is reported to have said that he wanted to warn South African parents whose children were at universities and colleges affiliated with NUSAS "that they should ask what is going on with NUSAS and where it is leading the youth."

"It is high time this warning was given," he continued, "in the light of certain developments which will probably be disclosed in the course of this year."

During the month of September the government continued its smear campaign against NUSAS, and, among other things, attempted to start a wholesale resignation campaign among the South African students whose universities belonged to NUSAS.

For the most part, this campaign was unsuccessful. At the University of Capetown, where the campaign was most highly organized, only 150 out of 5800 students resigned their NUSAS membership.

The English press in South Africa either defended NUSAS or was non-committal; few attacked NUSAS. The Rand Daily Mail said that the Minister of Justice was using the same smear tactics that he had used in the past before taking action against an organization. The first step was to "warn the country" about its liberal orientation. After this softening-up process came the second phase of the attack: brand the organization as communistic. The Daily Mail said:

"Having tagged the 'subversive' label of NUSAS, Mr. Vorster is no doubt confident that there will be no serious public outcry when he does act. On this occasion, however, it is hoped that this smearing tactic will not hoodwink the public and the thousands of students who belong to NUSAS."

At this point, the conservative students who are members of NUSAS came out in defense of the organization. This put Vorster in a very difficult position. Either he had to justify his earlier attacks or else have his intimidatory tactics exposed.

On September 28, Vorster issued his main, and to date most vicious, attack on NUSAS.

Vorster based his attack on NUSAS by calling it a leftist, liberal group that has stated its belief in integration and has defended the rights of political groups opposed to the current South African government. In several places, Vorster attempted to smear NUSAS by saying that communists had been affiliated with it.

NUSAS responded with a point by point rebuttal and denial of the Minister's charges. It has also requested letters and telegrams of support from all national unions of students and student governments be sent to NUSAS, 148 St. George's St. Cape Town (Cable: NATSUAS CAPE-TOWN).

NUSAS may be on its way to exile, but it is not going without a fight.

Performance Of Don Giovanni Not Up To Expectations

(Credit: Felder, SPS)

by Robert Jahrmarkt

On Monday evening, November 4, at Memorial Auditorium, the New York City Opera Company, in conjunction with the Red Lane Series, performed Don Giovanni, a dramatic comedy opera in two acts by Mozart. Julius Rudel conducted and directed the new English production, and the traveling orchestra and company performed the opera.

At 8:40 Mr. Rudel approached the orchestra and the opera began. The orchestra played the overture well although, at times, failed to provide the richness of sound found in all Mozart's great works. Crescendos in the overture rarely reached their maximum intensity. Subsequently, the audience failed to respond as it should have. In general, however, Mr. Rudel and his orchestra performed admirably throughout the opera.

At the conclusion of the overture, the curtain rose on act one. The stage manager, Hans Sondheimer, realizing the difficulty in scenery change, wisely avoided the problem. From the beginning to the end the major scenery remained the same; only minor changes were made during the performance. The quality of any performance depends least on scenery and, in this case, numerous changes could only have reduced the success of the opera. The choreographer, Thomas Andrew, should once again (or for the first time) study choreography. The well-known dance scenes in Don Giovanni deserve thorough preparation. Mr. Andrew did not prepare the dancers well.

Opera stars are often criticized for their inability to act. With certain exceptions (notably John Fiorito, the Commandant) the singers acted well. Chester Ludgin captured the bold, cynical way of Da Ponte's Giovanni. Spiro Malas combined the happy-go-lucky attitude of a merry-andrew and the morally concerned ideas of a dedicated servant with charm and delight.

The acoustics in Memorial Auditorium seriously reduced the quality of the sound, but the audience could hear most of the recitatives and arias. However, the opera should have been performed in Italian, the language for which Mozart created his immortal music. The spirit and style of the original suffer in translation and, in Don Giovanni, the music loses dramatic vitality when the opera is sung in English.

Several of the performers deserve praise for their singing, while others do not. Mr. Ludgin sang with ease and assurance.

Mr. Malas, who helped in many ways, used his voice with considerable facility and remained throughout the opera a very pleasing Leporello. William McDonald (Don Ottavio), although a tenor with fine vocal qualities, had a voice not suitable for the role Mozart created. Beverly Sills (Donna Anna) had trouble with some of the high notes, but she succeeded. John Fiorito sang his difficult lines very well and, for a few glorious moments, enraptured the audience. Joan Summers-Lader (Zerlina) sang the role of the young peasant girl quite satisfactorily. At the last moment, Sarah Mae Endrich replaced Marguerite Willhauer (Donna Elvira). She handled her part with composure. William Metcalfe (Masetto), who could have improved his acting, could have improved his singing too.

With its faults, this opera worked.

Cynic-al Observations

Petty Larceny On Campus

The serious problem of petty larceny in the University Store has been brought to the attention of the CYNIC. We were requested to make this fact known to the University community and we do so reluctantly. The problem of this nature is so appalling to all concerned that it might be better if nothing were said at all and the whole matter "swept under the carpet" so to speak. But, lately, the minor thefts have increased with such boldness that something must be done in an effort to curtail this dishonest trend.

And dishonesty is all that is involved here. In most cases genuine robbers are driven to their crimes by economic, biological or even psychological pressures. In some cases, although an actual theft is committed, the intent is honorable. A poor man, rationalizing society's injustices, may steal from the rich with no regrets. A starving man may steal food to sustain life. Or a kleptomaniac will steal for the sake of stealing.

Why do people who are usually in secure financial situations and of above average intelligence, as most UVMers are, resort to stealing? For the thrill of it seems to be the only answer. And that is quite a feeble reason and above all it is not even honorable.

This problem goes far beyond the thefts in the University Store. All throughout the campus; in the labs, in the cafeteria and even in the housing units the same petty crimes are committed. The different types are too numerous to be enumerated here. But, with a little introspection we feel confident, taking a cynic-al view of collegians of course, that the majority of students are violators to some extent.

This problem goes into the classroom also in the form of cheating. Many of us may not realize it, but cheating is stealing someone else's ideas. You are only cheating yourself by cheating, although you may attain a high mark if your method is proficient, just as petty larceny, the punishment is great in proportion to the gain.

We here at UVM are in a unique position. We live in a microcosm that serves as a proving ground for life. We may make mistakes and receive what we think is severe punishment, but in reality the punishment is nothing to what it might be in the outside world if we committed a similar crime.

Remember what you learned as a child, "thou shalt not steal." By stealing from the various places mentioned around the campus you are stealing from yourself. The money made from the University Store is added to the vast reservoir of University finances, and ultimately goes toward raising or lowering your tuition. This is a minor fact but when figured with similar situations concerning petty larceny, they add up to a considerable amount of money.

Phantom Phases

by the Phantom

The recent expulsion of Kappa Sigma fraternity has caused many people to reevaluate the fraternity system on our campus. Before this occurrence, two writers have spoken out in the CYNIC in opposition to fraternities. Miles Worthman expressed his thoughts in the Independent View (October 19, 1963) and the Sceptic had his slam in his article on October 10, 1963). The fraternity men on campus did little to refute these arguments except for one heart-rending rendition from a fraternity president. Upon investigation, I have found that the IFC did in fact discuss the Sceptic's column. It was this group's decision not to take issue with the Sceptic (probably because the Sceptic has a better command of the language). A noble decision, indeed.

This lack of action is indicative of the entire fraternity system, in that they are unwilling to face up to their problems. It is much easier to just pass off these comments as being unworthy of their attention.

Let us turn our attention now to Mr. Worthman who believes that sex, sin, drinking, and campus control are directly contributable to the fraternities. Firstly, sex, sin, and drinking will continue on this campus as long as there are students. The administration tacitly goes along with this as long as there are no flagrant violations of this policy. Such proof as the Kappa Sig incident shows that the administration will tolerate so

Letters To The Editor Anthropologist Views Black Face

October 29, 1963

The Editor
Vermont CYNIC
UVM

It was with extreme gratification that I read about the elimination of blackface as part of Kake Walk. Constant references to a biological happenstance, one's skin color, always offended me in the states and recently have bothered me even more here in the Philippines.

Filipinos have a great interest in skin color and all that such an implies. A standard reference for me is "Ti Puraw" - the white. I suppose this is a compliment since lightness of skin correlates with a high social position generally. Indeed, Filipinos go to great lengths to avoid exposing their skin to the tanning effects of the tropical sun. As an anthropologist, I can understand their desire to look as much like an American or European as possible. But, as a person I find their references to my skin color and theirs, pretty silly since it automatically classifies a person on the basis of something external that literally, and figuratively, is only skin deep.

Recently I became aware of a new dimension in this little game that sickened me. American soldiers traditionally leave behind them tangible and intangible mementos of their overseas tour. Now, mestizos of sundry sorts have long been a part of the Philippines scene. We added to this grouping in Ilocos Norte by introducing a number of people whom the Ilocano refer to as "Neegers". War babies are one thing but this kind of labeling is another. Most of the negro-mestizos I have seen were born after 1945 and are teenagers today. Some of these children attend the local high schools and colleges where they are taught that America brought many good things to the Philippines during the half-century we dominated it. I doubt, however, if they see the term "neeger" as one of these grand civilizing gifts. Such acts as the recent IFC ban do help to balance such barbarisms. Let us all hope that some day the whole rotten black-white score sheet will cease to exist.

Vt. Varieties: Financial Fiasco

To the Editor,

Vermont Varieties came off with a bang this year - a bang somewhat similar to the sound of a lead balloon hitting a floor. About 200 people attended it, compared with the crowds of around 2000 in previous years.

Most people don't know this, but Vermont Varieties is the only production of the entire year from which the University Players expects to make money. It is the money from Varieties which enables the Players to bring the cultural medium of the theatre to UVM, (and to innumerable small children via the Playtimers' Spring Tour). Therefore it is not unreasonable to assume that if Varieties should be a miserable failure, the theatrical program at UVM would not be presented.

Varieties was a miserable failure. The box office receipts totalled $250.54; Expenses for the show ran to about $400. This is compared to the profits of between $900. and $1100. of pre-

THE SCEPTIC

"E was white, clear white, inside"
- "Gunga Din"

Vermont Conference is nearly upon us, gang, and there's always the chance that us WASPs (white Anglo-Saxon Protestants) might get involved in it if we don't look out. Dates being the demanding, idealistic little creatures that they are, even the most wholesome all-American frat-clubber might find himself obliged to be cool and assured at some Conference-connected function. By popular demand, therefore, we have prepared a list of okay remarks. Clip this column out and carry it with you for the next week or so. You'll have no trouble handling even the most awkward situation.

The remarks have been broken down into three groups for the three most probable emergencies. Let's begin by assuming the worst: your date not only insists that you take her to hear one of the speeches, but she has arranged for you to meet the speaker ahead of time. No need to stammer, blush, or faint. Step boldly up to him and deliver in your sincerest manner (one hand in pocket; cigarette held casually in the other) one of the following sure-fire announcements:

1. "I've always been very interested in your problems. In high school/prep school I wrote an essay on the subject, and I interviewed some real Negroes about it."
 2. "I never notice what color a person is."
 3. "I'd like to help, but frankly I don't care for lunch-counter food."
 4. "My parents taught us not to use words like nigger; they said it sounded prejudiced. We always call you darkies."
 5. "Some of my best friends are Negroes."
- Now let us imagine that you have shone brilliantly at this meeting, and you have sat successfully through the evening's speech. Question period--and your girl wants to know that you've been giving the subject some serious thought. Take your pick:
1. "How do intelligent Negroes feel about Kakewalk?"
 2. "Now that the Jews are all going to Israel, why don't the Negroes go back to Africa?"
 3. "Well, if they aren't naturally messy, why do they always live in the slums?"
 4. "Do you know any good spirituals?"
 5. "Isn't it true that Lena Horne is really an Italian?"
 6. "What you've said is okay in principle, I suppose, but how would you feel if your daughter wanted to marry Governor Wallace?"
 7. "Isn't all this fuss about high-paying jobs awfully materialistic?"

8. "Well, if you're not in the pay of the international Communist conspiracy, why are you always making trouble?"

Having passed through the question period with flying colors, you can relax. All you have to go through now is a sincere discussion of the Conference at the Mast & Anchor. You'll probably want to use more than one remark from this group (especially if your girl has taken an overnight). A few relevant memories have been included for those who have none:

1. "If they don't like it in America, they should go away."
2. "They're really lovable people, actually. Irresponsible, of course, but fun-loving and musical and always laughing."
3. "Yes, I was interested in the subject when I first came to UVM, but the fellows at the house made me realize what a waste of time it is."
4. "I think it was pretty nasty what they did to Kakewalk."
5. "We have Shakespeare; all they have is James Baldwin."
6. "We had a Negro in our school, but no one really liked him much because he never came to the dances or ran for student offices or hung around the right people. He was sort of sullen, actually."
7. "In high school my gang invited a Negro to one of our parties, and he said that he had a good time. He was just trying to get on our side, though; we watched him all the while he was there, and he didn't actually have much fun."
8. "Well, all right, so we didn't hang around with them. So what? They didn't hang around with us, either."
9. "None of my best friends are Negroes."
10. "The way I see it, education is preparation for life; and if we're nice to them now, they won't be prepared."

Vermont Varieties

vious years.

Why was the show a "flop"? It had nothing to do with the talent. The show was admirably produced and presented. This year we had a first-rate show, as compared with the shows of previous years, which have given Varieties a reputation of being third-rate.

Perhaps it was the admission price, but the admission was the same this year as last.

Perhaps it was the advertising, which, although excellent, was only out a week in advance of the show, and the show was never "pushed".

Most probably, however, it was due to the splitting of Parents' Weekend and Homecoming Weekend, an S.A. experiment. Varieties was scheduled for, and produced on, Homecoming Weekend. It attracted the alumni, but comparatively few students. Did the fraternity parties interfere, or was it general student apathy? All fraternities were requested to start their parties after nine o'clock, which was when Varieties was scheduled to end, and all apparently complied. The fraternity parties could not have proved that great an interference, therefore.

But what if S.A. had scheduled Varieties for Parents' Weekend? A great number of parents come up for this event, and, without Varieties, what can a student do with parents besides a) sit around and talk, (which usually ends in an argument), b) go to a movie, (which can be done at home), or c) go to a party, (which is a very bad mistake). Varieties provides an evening's entertainment to which a student can bring parents without explanation or apology, and at which the family can enjoy themselves.

Why didn't S.A. think of this when Homecoming and Parents' Weekend were separated, with Varieties scheduled for Homecoming? If the University Players and Varieties are going to be used as guinea pigs, why weren't we warned in time, and why wasn't Varieties "pushed"?

Anyone want to throw pennies? We have our hats ready.

The Statue...
Creativity vs. Conformity

To the Editor:

Many people have condemned Mr. Aschenbach's sculpture which stands in front of the Bailey Library. Among those who condemned the sculpture were many who knew as little about art as I do. Therefore, I feel free to praise it with similar perspective.

Many of us on the UVM campus are aspiring to graduate schools inculcating many different orientations of interest. Many of us want to be doctors, lawyers or members of other glorified professions. Such status we are all seeking because of the mass acceptance, and elaboration of such professions. We are all running about in pursuit of security; in pursuit of a place on earth which will protect, nourish, and provide for "us". I place quotation marks around the word "us" because in our mass procession we are about as aware of others as stones, in taking up functional space, are aware of the utility to which the earth which they cover can be put. In our little "us" groups we are seldomly aware of the "other" groups which make up the rest of society with whom we share the phenomenon of life. In referring to "others" I mean people with different specific interests sharing in the general interest of life. I see the specific interests shared in the "us" groups as the means by which we arise and take "cover", and any form of deviation from the expected is not accepted.

In regard to Mr. Aschenbach's sculpture many of "us" expected to see a conventionally accepted style, or "at least something similar to what existed and not something so different". However, Mr. Aschenbach presented something so completely different from anything else which has been done that I believe there is no other similar creation in existence which could have possibly prepared us for his work, and this definitely deviated from the way of life so familiar to "us".

If there isn't a media in our society in the past for future acceptance of a present formation, the psychologist is afraid the shock will disfigure our future performance. I am sure the show will go on and though many people will use criticism as a safeguard to the extent that it becomes unprecedented, we must remember that we cannot criticize the man who creates because he does not produce what we expected, since he is looking at life in an attempt to capture its essence. If he should look to the past for his formulations (which most of us don't attempt) they could not possibly be creative, but only learned. The artist cannot follow the everyday procession toward security because he must try to understand this procession so that he can present something new -- something for "others" to think about. There is so little left in our society for the mass to contemplate let "us" not attempt to prevent it. We should not be so quick to stigmatize one's work of art because it doesn't meet with the requirements of the "expected" because it cannot -- it is creative. The artist himself cannot completely expect the outcome of his work before it is finished.

I feel the criticism Mr. Aschenbach received was a good sign because the people were surprised and didn't expect the sculpture to look like it does. This proves one thing in my opinion, that the sculpture is a creative work, and UVM was lucky enough to be able to display this one outside phenomenon of the everyday procession on its campus. I wish to thank Mr. Aschenbach for a creative work about which one can contemplate and break-up the everyday procession toward security. I can see where this work of art could be a threat to the security of many of "us" because we have not been prepared for this as a specific, expected, formulation, but it is definitely an asset to the essence of man's existence in which we all share, but so frequently forget -- life!

Col. Robinson
Advises Corps

Col. Leonard G. Robinson, the new PMS of UVM's Military Science Department, was introduced to the Advanced Corps by Cadet Brigade Commander Roger Kline, Oct. 24, at the first ROTC Smoker of 1963-64.

A Harvard graduate, Col. Robinson is an artillery officer and a veteran of World War II and the Korean conflict. One of many outstanding credits was his supervision of compiling an eighty volume history of the Korean War for the Department of the Army.

The topic of Col. Robinson's speech was "Do You Mean Business" in which he recalled the unselfish dedication of officers in the past. He indicated that peacetime may produce officers who forget that their main purpose is to be prepared to fight for the country. Thus he advised the Advanced Corps to be ready physically, psychologically, and professionally to assume the job of a military officer.

Cadet Brigade Commander Roger Kline spoke on the role and qualities of an officer and emphasized their position as professional men with specialized training and responsibilities.

Ted Jyzk, the Brigade executive officer, explained how recognition as a Distinguished Military Student is obtained and he spoke of its advantages.

The history and activities of the Ethan Allen Rifles, a military honor society, was presented by Cadet Brigade Sgt. Robert Russo.

much before it will step in. The administration realizes that the average student has to let off some of his pent-up emotions, and the fraternity is the ideal spot to do it under the supervision of administration-approved chaperones. This solution of the problem is a lot better than the activities that go on in the parking lots. Mr. Worthman then made the generalization that the poor atmosphere on campus was due to controlling influence of the fraternities on campus. This was the reason that The Players cancelled a play, and the Centaur was unable to publish last year. He even went so far to say that Vermont Conference was not held due to fraternity control. This is pure bunk, and any reasonable person could see that his argument is completely absurd. I feel that before you can make any value judgment about the fraternity system, you have to be a part of it. I was once an independent, and now that I am a member of this big family, I can say that I am truly proud of some of their accomplishments. Let us now resort to some facts.

First of all, the fraternity provides a social aspect for the university. Whether one agrees with the part that the fraternity plays in the social life of campus, one at least has to admit that a great deal is provided by the fraternity. Second, and of prime importance, is the educational stimulus that the fraternity provides, both with individuals in the house and in the system as a whole. There is a wholesome competition that makes each fraternity marks conscious. It is a tribute to the system itself that the overall fraternity average is higher than the university average. Athletics play an important part in the average fraternity man's life, and a good intramural program is conducted by the IFC. Is the fraternity such an evil creation that it provides these things for the fraternity man. Lastly, let us look at the good that is evolved from the fraternity system in relation to the university itself. Not only does the IFC provide a necessary liaison with the administration, but it is of direct help to other organizations on campus. The Wake Walk (a committee of the IFC) dispositions committee allots money to many organizations on this campus. Therefore, what do we have? We have an organization that is not only beneficial to the individual, but also to the university as a whole.

The fraternity system was conceived with the intention of doing good, and they have done well at this particular phase. But where has the fraternity system gone wrong? A hint of the problem is exemplified with the IFC's silence on the Sceptic's letter. The IFC and its component parts are not facing up to the realities of their existence on this campus. They are unwilling to deviate from the straight and narrow path that they have treaded in the past. They are inflexible in that they are unwilling to accept the growing role of the independent on this campus. The fraternity doesn't have to fight the independent, but rather he should recognize him and work with him. There is room for both on this campus. The IFC cannot, however, insulate itself from the growing changes on this campus. They must become dynamic and meet the new challenges that are happening on this campus. If the fraternity system is unable to do this, then the system will crumble in its own inefficiencies and pride.

Debaters Capture Tourney

University of Vermont varsity and novice debaters captured second and third places in two weekend tourneys with 17 victories in 22 debates.

The four-member varsity team traveled to St. John Fisher College in Rochester, N.Y., for a tournament with 12 other schools.

Coached by Dr. Robert B. Huber, chairman of the UVM speech department, the team was second, behind Colgate's forensic squad.

The UVM team was made up of two units: senior Lynn Baier of New Brunswick, N.J., and Burlington sophomore Dave Webster for the affirmative; and Cynthia Clark of Springfield and Craig Nelson of Greenville, Maine, for the negative. Both squads tallied 4 wins and 1 loss, for a total 8-2 record.

Baier and Webster defeated: Buffalo, R.I.T., Niagara, LeMoyne while dropping to Canisius. Clark and Nelson defeated Rosary Hill, R.I.T., Colgate, Niagara, and suffered a setback against LeMoyne.

Webster won an award as the second best affirmative speaker in the tournament, and Baier took the third place speaker award.

Eight novice debaters placed third in the 18-school Dartmouth College Fall Novice Debate Tournament. In three rounds, the new debaters won 9 out of 12. Two Dartmouth groups placed first and second.

The novice team of Robert Brooks and Steve Carlson defeated Albany, Albertus Magnus and lost to Dartmouth. Harold Hyams and Barbara Giddings defeated Amherst, St. Anselm's and lost to Army. Barry Messenger and Jackie Brooks defeated Rhode Island, New Hampshire and dropped to Brandeis. Robert Stewart and Henry Wellman went undefeated with scores over Middlebury, Union and Dartmouth.

Coaching the novices were two varsity debaters, Carmen Wessner of Manchester and Norman Snow of Burlington.

Next encounter for the UVM debaters will be at the Amherst College tourney this weekend.

Lane Series Offers Ticket Exchange Service

It has come to the attention of the Lane Committee that UVM Students may not be aware of its Ticket Exchange Service. As described by Lane Series Chairman Barry Freeman, the service is an effort on the part of the Lane Committee to better serve its patrons.

Lane Series subscribers who know in advance that they will be unable to make use of their season tickets may inform the Lane Office of their desire to either sell or give-away their tickets for any single performance. The Lane Office will then offer this information to those people desiring single seats.

The Lane Office will not sell any tickets or handle any money; it will act only as an intermediary between its patrons who are unable to use their season tickets, and those people desiring a seat for a single performance. All matters concerning ticket price, and collection of money will be handled by the individual buyer and seller. In a situation where ticket requests exceed the number of season tickets available for use, a waiting list will be initiated.

Those students, faculty or townspeople wishing to take part in this service may either visit the Lane Office, Room 54 Waterman or phone UN 4-5511, Extension 240.

U. Of P. Refuses Appearance Of Governor Wallace

PHILADELPHIA (CPS) -- More than 200 University of Pennsylvania students picketed and protested the decision of the Penn administration not to allow the Daily Pennsylvanian, the campus newspaper, the use of one of the campus auditoriums to sponsor a speech by Alabama Governor George C. Wallace.

The campus paper decided to re-invite Wallace after the Law School forum had earlier decided it would be risking civil chaos by sponsoring an address. The Penn paper had been meeting with local police officials and the Governor's press secretary to work out the arrangements for police protection.

Yesterday, the university, in what seemed to observers to be a reversal of position, said that it could not allow the paper the use of the auditorium. In essence, this denying Wallace the right to speak on the Penn campus.

Today's demonstration was the result of planning by ACTION, a campus political party, and the Women's Student Government Association (WSGA).

Following the picketing in front of College Hall, the university administrative building, the students marched over to the University Museum Auditorium where more than 1000 parents were assembling to hear university Provost David R. Goddard speak on "The Meaning of a Liberal Education."

The reason given for denial of auditorium usage was that groups such as the campus chapter of the NAACP would not have enough time to arrange a protest demonstration. This was refuted by the NAACP in a letter to the Daily Pennsylvanian this morning from that group.

The Committee on the Wallace Demonstration said that progress had already been made toward a peaceful integrated demonstration when the university decision was announced.

"The University should have the backbone to give its own reasons, and not attempt to cast aspersions on the abilities of civil rights organization," the letter concluded.

Wallace was a hot issue at another campus as well. The student activities committee, composed of varying amounts of students, faculty, and administration, of Adelphi University (Garden City, N.Y.) last night refused to allow Wallace to speak on the Adelphi campus.

Miss Ruth Skinner, chairman of the committee, released a statement to the Delphian, the campus newspaper, explaining the group's action. The letter states that while "recognizing the desirability of having various points of view discussed on campus, the committee . . . feels that Governor Wallace, by defiance of the decision of the Supreme Court, does not represent the ideals and practices that we uphold at Adelphi University."

Dr. Eddy, president of Adelphi, in a press conference prior to the student activities committee meeting, said about the proposed Wallace visit "If you think it will be to your (the students) advantage to get him here, and if you see to it that the thing is balanced and not just a way to create sensationalism, then have him here."

Richard Haley, national assistant of the Congress of Racial Equality (CORE), said "First of all, I believe that the only way we can demonstrate our regard for the spirit of the first amendment of the Constitution is to allow anyone the right to express themselves."

The Delphian, the campus newspaper said in an editorial on the Wallace matter, "Fear that this action by the committee will set a precedent to bar any speaker from the Adelphi campus who 'does not represent the ideal and practices that we uphold at Adelphi University.' We submit that in a democracy it is always beneficial to hear all types of opinions expressed, if only to help strengthen our own. Our country should not be denied the strength of well informed citizens who are the backbone of our democratic system. The Adelphi students should not be denied this opportunity to become part of that strength."

Cats Set To Break "Midd. Myth"

UVM Stunned By U Mass 41-0

Hertel Injured-Will Miss Middlebury Game

UVM halfback, Ken Burton, runs into some "big" trouble as he attempts to skirt around right end, in the game against UMass. (Credit: UMass Collegian)

The UVM Catamounts suffered their second defeat of the season last Saturday at the hands of the Redmen of Massachusetts by a score of 41-0, on the latter's home field. Although the Cats put up a gallant fight, the men from U Mass showed more experience and strength than the Vermont squad.

The Redmen scored twice in the first half, once in each quarter, as quarterback Jerry Whelchel supervised both air and ground attacks. The Cats proposed one serious threat against Massachusetts in the second quarter, but was put back by the powerful Redmen defensive. Had Vermont tallied then, the score would have been 14-7 at the half, and giving the morale of the Cats a lift.

The Redmen scored three times in the third quarter and once more in the fourth. U Mass coach, Vic Fusia, freely substituted his second and third string men in the second half. The Cats could not get started against these boys either, as they too, showed superior size and strength.

UVM sustained 3 injuries and fortunately only one was serious. Ron Hertel reinjured a loose knee cartilage and is definitely out for the Middlebury game next Saturday. A dislocated bone in Richie Reynold's right hand had Coach Clifford worried but the Vermont first-string fullback will see action this weekend. Dennis Blanck aggravated an old leg injury, yet he too will be able to play against Middlebury.

That's exactly what is foremost in the minds of the Catamounts this week. This great state rivalry will show the preparation the Cats are undergoing. Despite the loss to U Mass, the Cliffordmen show a great amount of desire.

New Soccer Team Goes Undefeated

by Bernie Zaccaro

Since the Vermont football season began, little mention has been given to other athletic activities on the campus. For this, I accept full responsibility and offer my apology to Coach Harold Greig for not publicizing the undefeated UVM soccer team.

Mr. Greig coached the 26 man squad to its marless record this Fall. Only two members of the team were not from the sophomore and freshman classes. For this reason, Coach Greig feels that the boys have a sound chance to become a soccer power in Yankee Conference. Next year there will definitely be an expansion in the team's schedule.

This year's schedule ran as follows:

UVM vs St. Mikes	4-3
(combined varsity and freshmen)
UVM vs Norwich Frosh	4-3
UVM vs Lyndon College (varsity)	3-0
UVM vs Castleton "B"	7-1
UVM vs Northwood	7-1

A Presidential Message on Youth Fitness

Since we can no longer count upon the routine conditions of daily life to maintain our physical fitness, we have only one alternative to continued decline: that is the establishment of systematic and readily accessible fitness programs in every school and community in the nation. It was for this purpose that, two and a half years ago, I reorganized the President's Council on Youth Fitness under the leadership of one of the country's leading football coaches, Charles B. (Bud) Wilkinson of the University of Oklahoma.

I hope that all parents who share my concern will inquire about the physical fitness programs in their schools. I hope that every active American - particularly if he is a young American - will take part in such a program, for his own good and for his country's good.

Rappa's Roundup

by Richard Rappaport

This week the University of Vermont meets Middlebury College at Porter Field as it attempts to capture its first undisputed state title in the last few years.

The Cats will be out to reverse their form of last Saturday when they were downed by Massachusetts 41-0 in the conference title battle. U Mass was definitely out of Vermont's class due to its superior line and its wealth of depth. UVM, lacking reserves in the line from the start, received a serious setback when guard Ron Hertel and tackle Dennis Blanck were injured early in the game, which, along with the absence of bed-ridden Tom Mongeon, left the Cats without their best guard, and only two experienced tackles.

In this contest Ken Burton established himself as a certain choice for a first team spot on the Yankee Conference team by running extremely well with a minimum of blocking. George Oelze and Rusty Brink were the top linemen for the Cats against the Redmen in this ballgame.

Although Vermont did not capture this game, and at least a share of the Conference title, they have no reason to be ashamed. Whoever dreamed before the season started that UVM would solidly defeat both New Hampshire and Rhody thus recording a 5-2 ledger after seven games.

The "Middlebury Myth" has existed for many years with the Cats unable to defeat the Panthers even when they had apparently superior teams, such as last year when UVM lost 14-6.

This year Vermont will be greatly aroused as it attempts to destroy the Panther's recent supremacy in this ancient series. Vermont is definitely superior to the Panthers in all respects as indicated by their record of 5-2, compared to Middlebury's 2-4 slate, made against much tougher competition. The two teams only common opponent was Norwich which the Cats trounced 27-0, while the Panthers dropped last Saturday's contest to them 19-14.

This Saturday is the final game of Ken Burton's fabulous career which will be played before his hometown fans, thus providing him with the extra incentive which should spark him on to his greatest of his collegiate football performance.

Thus it appears that the Cats should be heavy favorites to triumph over the Panthers by five touchdowns even without injured Ron Hertel, and thus capture the Vermont State Series for the first time in many years.

This year's performances: Only high spots of season were impressive victories over Worcester Tech (21-6), and RPI (32-0), where Panthers gained over 360 yards rushing. Middlebury has lost key players Stanley, Kingman, Leahy through injuries, hampering the Panthers greatly. Standout has been sophomore halfback Freddie Beans, who also kicks extra points and scored all 14 points against Norwich.

Forecast: Cats are sore from last week's game, but UMass has given them added inspiration to clearly delete the "Middlebury Myth". UVM will miss Hertel (bad knee), but this won't be enough of disadvantage for Panthers to come close to victory. Cat star Burton should close career in grand style as Cats triumph with ease.

Dukes Of Dixieland First Jazz Concert On Lane Series

by Betty Fuchs

On December 20, the first Dixieland music to be heard at Lane Series will be played at Memorial Auditorium by the famous Dukes of Dixieland. The Wednesday night concert marks the half-way point in the Red Series of six.

For those who are unsure of what Dixieland jazz is, Dr. Frank Lidal of the UVM music department defines it as the New Orleans style of jazz, the first authentic jazz style. Dixieland music began with the old-Negro marching bands which played at Mardi Gras, fish fries, and funerals. This music is characterized by a march-like beat and features a tailgate trombonist. Originally, when the band rode in parade wagons, the trombonist sat with his feet banging over the wagon's tailgate; hence the name, tailgate trombonist. Dixieland jazz was first made popular by such all-time favorites as Louis "Satchmo" Armstrong and Bob Crosby.

Today, Fred and Frank Assunto and their Dukes of Dixieland are keeping alive the tradition of jazz. The group began ten years ago when the Assunto brothers formed a small band for fun. During the first year or two the name of the band and the band personnel were shifted around until the seven final musicians united to form the Dukes of Dixieland. This band had one advantage over the many others in New Orleans: while most of the other musicians had trades at which they worked during the day, the Dukes, from the beginning, aspired to be professionals.

The Dukes learned their work methods the way hundreds of other New Orleans musicians did.

Fred, Frank and Papa Jac Assunto - The Dukes of Dixieland.

They lived with music day and night. They lost no opportunity to observe, and had the privilege of absorbing what they could from many of the musical "greats" who played New Orleans.

Besides Fred and Frank Assunto, the combo includes Jac Assunto, their father, known as

"Papa Jac." Together with his two sons and the rest of the Dukes of Dixieland, "Papa Jac" should be able to provide the Lane Series audience with a program of jazz in which, as he says, every note means something.

Independents Protest IFC KW Decision

Independent students in University of Vermont residence halls will turn three days of pressure on the Inter-Fraternity Council next week to try to force IFC to allow residence hall participation in Kake Walk next February - a proposal already unanimously rejected by IFC.

The council voted Tuesday to exclude residence hall participants because it is "physically impossible" to include them and because their participation is contrary to the IFC constitution, IFC President Robert Collier said Friday.

Kake Walk is governed by IFC and Kake Walk rules, in the IFC constitution, which call for participation by "social fraternities and social clubs which have been in existence for at least one year and contain strictly non-Greek-affiliated students."

There are no such non-Greek social clubs on the UVM campus now; if one were formed it would be able to participate in next year's Kake Walk, but not this year's.

This isn't right, said Robert Furkey, chairman of the Independent Kake Walk Committee, a 12-member group which says it represents some 400 independents in the Tupper-Marsh-Austin residence hall dorms.

"Residence halls form a student organization and we don't feel we should have to form a social club to participate in Kake Walk," Furkey said.

Six men in the dorms have been hopefully working out for Kake Walk for over a month, Furkey said.

"It's a university function and we feel we should be able to participate. We feel we could add something to it."

"I've lived in these dorms for 2 1/2 years, and I know you feel left out when you don't have anyone to cheer for," Furkey declared.

Collier gave IFC's position: "The independents are not being excluded; their participation is welcomed as long as they have the Class year) and forwarded our list of alumni to her. If she sends us the local APO and FPO addresses, our Alumni Office will be able to furnish many more UVM names to her. Who knows . . . perhaps this will be the beginning of a strong and loyal Tokyo-Yokohama area Alumni Club!

Most of you cannot conceive of being alumni, with its clubs and reunions and memories. The feeling won't "hit" you until you've been graduated for several or more years. But don't wait until then to find out something about the UVM Alumni Association. Drop in to your Alumni House (corner of So. Prospect and College, across from Waterman) and have one of our staff show you the addressograph section and other operations of the mail room. Come see where your own addressograph plate will be in the very near future!

a legitimate group, which has been in existence one year and which is going to build a better weekend."

"The significant point is that it's impossible to say 'dormitory', because that includes fraternity men who live there and excludes all independent upper-classmen who don't live there," he asserted.

Collier went on to say he'd like to help the independents form a social club to participate in Kake Walk.

Last year IFC voted to have no independent participation - which is unconstitutional but not found out until later, Collier said. The same proposal this year was voted down 14-1, he pointed out.

The Independent Kake Walk committee's protest campaign will run something like:

- Wednesday and Thursday at 8 p.m., a program on WRUV, the campus radio station, explaining the situation.

"Hopefully, there'll be a discussion on the subject between myself and some IFC member," Furkey said.

- Also Wednesday, circulars to be passed to all students at dining halls.

- Thursday, letters to the editor of CYNIC, the campus newspaper, from students and faculty members.

- Friday, culmination of the drive in a mass meeting in the afternoon or evening.

"We'll present our case to students who come to the meeting, and we think we'll ask for their support in the form of a petition," Furkey explained.

Furkey said the campaign has absolutely no connection with the recent IFC decision to bar blackface makeup on Kake Walkers.

Dean of Men, Roland D. Patter, was away Friday, and Assistant Dean of Men, Carl O. Eycke, said the issue, at this point, is being left to the students to negotiate.

Alumni House Addresses 18,000 Grads

Alumni House serves as information source for alumni and others interested in UVM activities.

by (Mrs.) C.S. Zolotas, '32
Alumni Department

The two UVM undergraduates who are employed part time at the Alumni Office during the week have become familiar with many of the activities of the Association. They've seen the 18,000 addressograph plates of our alumni - plates which indicate that the UVM "family" is living and working all the way from Burlington, Vermont to those "far-away places with the strange-sounding names." They've also seen the 3,200 plates which contain your parents' names, and another 1,200 plates for other colleges and firms which are on UVM's mailing list.

About a dozen times a year the entire 22,400 addressograph plates are used to speed the ALUMNI BULLETIN or the special requests for funds to relatives and friends of the University. In addition, certain plates are used for a particular mailing - perhaps a fraternity letter or a memo to all doctors who have been graduated from the College of Medicine.

All this is made possible by having the addressograph plates "tabbed." A small metal tab, capable of having 5 holes punched in it, is placed in one of 12 different locations on each of the 18,000 alumni addressograph plates. A glance at each plate and its tab will immediately tell you if the person is an alumnus or alumna, married or single, what college attended and whether graduated or not, whether the student was a letterman, honor society member, etc. On the plate itself is imprinted the name and mailing address of the alumnus, with the class year and the postal sectional center.

Last week the Alumni Office received an interesting letter from Yokohama from a UVM alumna who told of having met three other UVMers in the area. We pulled out our addressograph plates for Japan (plates are filed in geographic categories - states, countries, and counties within Vermont -- in addition to

UVM Orchestra Holds Concert

The University of Vermont Symphony Orchestra will present its first concert of the year Friday evening, November 15, at 8:30 p.m. at the Ira Allen Chapel.

The group will play the OVERTURE TO THE MAGIC FLUTE, by Mozart, and the SYMPHONY NO. 1 IN C MAJOR, by Beethoven, as well as three movements of the GRAND CONCERTO IN B-FLAT MAJOR, by Handel. The orchestra will complete the program with the PAUL BUNYAN SUITE, by William Bergsma. The work is in three movements and entitled, "The Dance of the Blue Ox," "Country Dance," and "Night."

The concert will be the first music department event of the season and will be conducted by James Keene. The program will be given without charge and is open to the public.

INDEPENDENTS VS. IFC IN CONTROVERSY

To the Editor:

We, the RESIDENT HALL INDEPENDENTS, would like to inform the UVM student body and faculty of certain facts pertinent to the present KAKE WALK controversy.

The men of the Marsh, Austin, and Tupper Complex have been, for all practical purposes, a social club, both in fact and in spirit, for the past two years. As such, we have provided for the social life and the governmental organization of more than 400 students per year. As such, we HAVE the right to participate in KAKE WALK, WHICH IS A SOCIAL FUNCTION. Despite this fact, the I.F.C. has not granted our organization permission to participate in KAKE WALK.

Other issues apparently overlooked by the I.F.C. in denying us this right to participate in KAKE WALK include:

1 - CLASSES, for which ALL STUDENTS PAY EQUALLY. ARE CANCELLED; but INDEPENDENT RESIDENCE HALL MEN CAN NOT PARTICIPATE!

2 - PATRICK GYMNASIUM for which ALL STUDENTS ARE PAYING EQUALLY is used; but, INDEPENDENT RESIDENCE HALL MEN CAN NOT PARTICIPATE!

3 - THE UNIVERSITY BAND, in which BOTH FRATERNITY and INDEPENDENT students play, is utilized; but, INDEPENDENT RESIDENCE HALL MEN CAN NOT PARTICIPATE!

Quite obviously, there are NO LOGICAL REASONS why we should be so discriminated against. NOW IS THE TIME FOR THE RETURN OF INDEPENDENTS TO KAKE WALK!

"UVM'S GALA OCCASION".

Bruce Firkey

Chairman of the Kake Walk Committee of The Men's Residence Hall Assembly.

To the Editor,

Will the residence hall men be able to participate in Kake Walk? This is a question that is uppermost in the minds of residence hall men at the University. Our entire campaign to have residence hall Kake Walkers has been squelched at almost every turn by unanswerable questions. Now we think that it is the Residence hall men's turn to ask a few unanswered questions. Why does the Inter-Fraternity Council refuse to meet us in a radio debate? Why did the campus radio station give us permission to present our views and then suddenly revoke its permission? We would like very much to know the answers to these questions. To find out these answers we find it necessary to appeal to the community newspaper and other public media. Why do we have to do this?

Leonard Nemen, '64
Moderator, Men's Residence Hall Assembly

To the Editor,

The question of whether or not non-Greeks should be allowed to participate in Kake Walk was a topic of great concern when it was presented and, unfortunately, greatly muddled, last year. At that time, the Interfraternity Council, upon receipt of an ultimatum demanding participation of Independents in Kake Walk, voted to restrict participation to Greek letter organizations only. This year, however, this motion to restrict Kake Walk has been reviewed and decisively defeated by a vote of twenty-six to two at the November fifth meeting of the Interfraternity Council. The defeat of this motion, therefore, leaves the qualifications for admission to Kake Walk as they had been previous to Kake Walk, 1962:

Section 4. Policy

B. Eligibility for competition in Kake Walk activities shall be as follows:

1. Walking; Skits

a. Kake Walkers of fraternities which are members of the Interfraternity Council

b. Kake Walkers of social clubs meeting the following conditions:

(1) membership consisting of persons with no social, undergraduate, Greek-letter affiliation

(2) recognized by the University administration for at least one year

It is, therefore, obvious that the member fraternities of the Interfraternity Council, by the vote of November fifth, has welcomed independent organizations to participate with them in Kake Walk.

At this meeting, the following motion was also voted upon: "That the M.A.T. Complex and affiliated independents be granted equal right to participation in Kake Walk Activities as prescribed for each fraternity." Since this motion is contrary to the provision of our Constitution, it was defeated.

What, then, is the problem? As I understand it, the question is no longer whether or not independents should participate in Kake Walk, since the Interfraternity Council has already confirmed this, but whether or not the dormitory units may be accepted as "clubs" and thus participate.

The reasons why M.A.T., as represented in the Men's Residence Hall Assembly, cannot be viewed as clubs and why the dormitories are unacceptable by the Constitution are clear:

A). Dormitories contain fraternity as well as non-fraternity men.

B). Living in the dormitories and, therefore, membership in the Assembly, is not a voluntary one as is the case when one joins a club. The University collects dues from all men living in the dormitories. These men are, therefore, governed by the dormitory governmental organ: the Men's Residence Hall Assembly.

Granted the empirical facts that the dormitories' Men's Residence Hall Assembly is not a "club" in which all of its members have professed voluntary membership, and that not only independents but also Greeks live there, the problem then becomes: Why not acknowledge the existence of those undetermined numbers of dormitory members who are non-Greeks and wish to participate? Clearly this is impossible.

With the number of organizations which depend upon Kake Walk for financial support (over $4,000 are given by the Interfraternity Council to campus organizations), it is imperative that the participants be stable, well-organized groups which can be relied upon to contribute to the overall success of Kake Walk. It is for this reason that our Constitution requires that an organized club be in existence for at least one year.

It may be of interest to those who do not wish to form a stable organization, that this "year stipulation" is also mandatory for fraternities. Before a social club can be recognized by the Interfraternity Council as a Greek letter fraternity, it, too, must have been in existence for at least one year.

The stability of an organization is shown not merely through the desire of an undetermined number of men to participate in a winter carnival, but by organizing under a charter or constitution, having it recognized by the University, operating for at least one year, keeping an account of its membership and activities, and finally, operating in such a manner as to not only gain admission into Kake Walk, but to be a contributing member of the campus community for an entire year.

It would, therefore, be extremely unreasonable for the Interfraternity Council to allow independent groups to participate without meeting the qualifications which each of the fraternities have been required to meet.

We, the fraternities of the Interfraternity Council, ask of the non-Greeks only what we require of ourselves: a stable group, organized under a University-recognized constitution, and existent for at least one year.

Enrollment Schedule

If You Plan To Continue At UVM--Read This

All undergraduate and graduate students planning to continue their studies at Vermont in the second semester should make arrangements to complete a new enrollment process which will make it possible for most students to by-pass registration and its traditionally-long lines.

The enrollment period will be from Nov. 18 through Dec. 6, and students must enroll during this period, or present a satisfactory explanation for failure to enroll during the period, in order to be eligible to continue their studies during the second semester.

Here's the enrollment schedule:

Students planning to be in attendance next semester should pick up enrollment materials at the Registrar's Office and schedule an appointment with their faculty advisor.

Each student shall enroll with his advisor in accordance with the instructions he will receive from the Registrar.

Each student will then file the completed enrollment card with the Registrar in accordance with the following schedule:

Graduate Students, Nov. 18 through Dec. 3;

Seniors, Nov. 18 through Nov. 22;

Juniors, Nov. 24-25, and Dec. 2-3;

Freshmen and sophomores, Dec. 4 through Dec. 6.

The schedule has been arranged to give preference to the upper classes, and it is expected that section assignments for graduate students, seniors and juniors will remain as programmed at the time of enrollment. Freshmen and sophomore programs will be reviewed by the Registrar and, wherever class size and schedules make changes necessary, revisions will be made.

A further step in the enrollment process, which will help make it unnecessary for most students to go through the usually more involved registration process, will come in January, when the Treasurer's Office will send bills for the second semester to each student at his local or campus address.

Each student will be responsible for paying his second semester bill or making satisfactory arrangements with the Treasurer's Office prior to Jan. 24, after which date, $10 additional will be assessed. Students who fail to make satisfactory arrangements with the Treasurer's Office by Feb. 1, will not be eligible to return for the second semester.

Students completing this enrollment process will have an opportunity to make changes in their programs at registration, which has been set for Jan. 31 and Feb. 1. But, in effect, students who do not need or do not wish to make changes, will be able to skip the registration process entirely, provided they have followed the enrollment process.

For the record, course changes necessitated by failure in a course or courses, may be made at registration without charge. Others wishing to make changes at registration will be charged a fee of ($3), which may be waived at the discretion of the student's academic dean.

Students who find it necessary to make a course change after the beginning of classes may do so if they receive the authorization of their academic dean. Such changes will be subject to a $3 fee.

Readmitted students must have applied for readmission on or before Dec. 1, and have conferred with their academic dean, arranged a suitable schedule of courses, and completed and filed their enrollment with the Registrar upon receipt of notification of readmission. They will be subject to the same pre-billing procedures as apply to all other undergraduate and graduate students.

Medical students, the Registrar will advise medical students of the enrollment process being arranged for them.

Experiment In International Living

by Janet Hadda

The UVM student who wishes to study abroad may be unaware of the fact that there are innumerable opportunities for him, even though the University has no program of its own. Many American universities offer programs in which qualified students may participate. Foreign universities send bulletins to the United States; finally, special bureaus are set up to facilitate study abroad.

One of the most popular of these organizations is "The Experiment in International Living". The Experiment's philosophy is that "significant advances toward world peace can be made at the individual level, by introducing the people of one country to the people of another country through the basic social structure of the family." This is done by placing the student with a family living in the country he has chosen to visit. He lives with the family for a month; although he is included in their activities, there is ample time for him to be on his own.

After his "homestay," the student and one member of his host's family go on a two or three week trip through the country. During the trip, he will "stop to examine ancient landmarks, perhaps take part in local folk festivals, or visit a factory renowned for its products."

When this trip is over, the student, before returning home, spends four or five days in a major city, sightseeing and increasing his knowledge of the country.

The student travels in a group of about ten Experimenters accompanied by a leader. Before the start of his journey, there is a four-day orientation period, and at the end of his stay there is an evaluation period, where the student discusses his experiences.

Participants in the program must travel together to the country of their choice. For the return trip, however, it is possible to leave the group at the conclusion of the program abroad.

The Experiment is not for students who insist on luxury. The student "...should expect, and accept gracefully, not only the unexpected, but a lack of 'modern' conveniences, and possibly even some physical discomfort."

Those students desiring further information about this and other programs may contact any language department here at UVM.

Rickover Blasts Education

When the Burlington-Lake Champlain Chamber of Commerce and the University of Vermont Lecture Series invited Vice Admiral Hyman G. Rickover to speak on education, they asked for dynamite.

They got it Thursday evening when the controversial critic of the nation's educational system and author of "Education and Freedom" addressed a captive audience at Ira Allen Chapel.

"We have a philosophy of education that simply does not work, and an educational establishment that has too many administrators and researchers who boss the teachers, and teachers whose educational and professional qualifications are inadequate," he said.

"I readily admit that as places for fun and games American educational institutions are unsurpassed in the world.

"We are the only Western nation where precious school hours are wasted teaching children how to make fudge, swirl batons, drive cars, budget income, handle the telephone, catch fish and become 'likable, lovable, and datable.'"

Rickover said American education fails to live up to the needs of our society.

As signs of this failure, Rickover said that each year medical schools graduate one quarter less than the number the United States needs; that although America requires 72,000 new engineers annually, it graduates less than 40,000; that America has too many unskilled workers and too few skilled workers.

"In Europe," he said, "the situation is exactly the reverse. England's working force is 50 per cent skilled, 12 per cent semi-skilled; Switzerland has to import virtually every unskilled worker.

"Educational inefficiency hurts our children and it hurts the nation. It also makes ours the most expensive school system in the world," he said.

"We spend more money to carry a child to a given level of scholarship than any other country."

What can be done to improve education?

Rickover suggested lengthening the school day; eliminating subjects which could be learned elsewhere; "improving teacher qualifications, bringing them up to the level existing abroad, and you could then put the educational enterprise under the supervision of our best teachers."

Rickover said he was convinced that a "really effective reform program" could not be put through without a national standard. "We are the only advanced nation without a national scholastic standard."

What does he mean by a national standard?

"It is simply an optional criterion for determining the value of an act or accomplishment," he said.

He referred to the high school diploma when he spoke of a standard with which to judge graduates.

"The high school diploma has so shrunk in value that in many cases it represents no more today than did grammar school graduation half a century ago."

First, said Rickover, a "National Standards Committee" would have to be created to determine what America's needs were.

"This would be a small committee composed of men of national stature and eminence—trustworthy, intelligent, scholarly, and devoted to the ideal of an American education second to none," said the man who has been called the "father of the nuclear submarine."

Hyman G. Rickover addressing Lecture Series audience. (Credit: Felder, SPS)

He said the committee would act as a watchtower to determine national needs that would keep us competitive with other advanced countries.

Rickover was quick to point out that the standard, as established through examination, would not be forced upon local administrators, but offered as a guideline.

Students who took and passed this examination would receive a certificate.

Would this open the door for federal control of education?

Rickover says no. Like the problem of water pollution, education now requires federal assistance to local and state administrators, he said.

"Let me make it crystal clear that nothing in my proposal would violate the constitutional separation of power between federal and state governments, nor go counter to our tradition of control of schools by the local community," Rickover said.

"I envisage the rendering of a service; not regulation in any way, shape or manner."

Rickover said that when enough people want school reform there will be government action.

He ended: "For if the public schools fail in their purpose it will not be possible to develop in adequate number the brain power and consequent innovation on which you must depend for your major capital development in the future—on the development which this community must depend for opportunity, employment and happiness."

Aschenbach Library Sculpture Featured In Alumni Magazine

The Paul Aschenbach sculpture that stands on the mall to the main entrance of the Bailey Library is the subject of a feature story in the November issue of the University of Vermont alumni magazine now in the mails.

"The Aschenbach Sculpture and a Personally Prejudiced Review" is the title of the story written by Larry Van Benthuyzen, UVM director of public relations. Included with the article are several pictures and some sketches of the sculpture done by the artist as he molded its final shape.

Other feature stories include "Golden Anniversary," a look at the Vermont Cooperative Extension Service as it celebrates its fiftieth birthday; the opening convocation address, "Freedom in American Education," delivered by Dr. John T. Fey, UVM president, and a guided tour of "The New Billings" by Emil Spees, director of student activities and the Billings Center.

As an added feature in response to many requests, the listing of the annual donation record is given in the Class News section.

SHOULD AULD ACQUAINTANCE AND JAZZ LIKE THAT

I am now an elderly gentleman, full of years and aches, but my thoughts keep ever turning to my undergraduate days. This is called "arrested development."

But I cannot stop the healing tide of nostalgia that washes over me as I recall those golden campus days, those ivy-covered buildings (actually, at my college, there was only ivy; no bricks), those pulse-tingling lectures on John Dryden and Cotton Mather, the many friends I made, the many deans I bit.

I know some of you are already dreading the day when you graduate and lose touch with all your merry classmates. It is my pleasant task today to assure you that it need not be so; all you have to do is join the Alumni Association and every year you will receive a bright, new, chatty bulletin, chock-full of tidings about your old buddies.

Oh, what a red-letter day it is at my house, the day the Alumni Bulletin arrives! I cancel all my engagements, take the phone off the hook, dismiss my resident osteopath, put the cheetah outside, and settle down for an evening of pure pleasure with the Bulletin and (need I add?) a good supply of Marlboro Cigarettes.

Whenever I am having fun, a Marlboro makes the fun even more fun. That filter, that flavor, that yielding soft pack, that firm Flip Top box, never fails to heighten my pleasure whether I am playing Double Canfield or watching the radio or knitting an afghan or enjoying any other diverting pursuit you might name—except, of course, spear fishing. But then, how much spear fishing does one do in Clovis, New Mexico, where I live?

But I digress. Let us return to my Alumni Bulletin and the fascinating news about my old friends and classmates. I quote from the current issue:

"Well, fellow alums, it certainly has been a wing-dinger of a year for us old grads! Remember Mildred Cheddar and Harry Camembert, those crazy kids who always held hands in Econ 101? Well, they're married now and living in Clovis, New Mexico, where Harry rents spear-fishing equipment, and Mildred has just given birth to a lovely 28-pound daughter, her second in four months. Nice going, Mildred and Harry!

"Remember Jethro Brie, the man we voted most likely to succeed? Well, old Jethro is still gathering laurels! Last week he was voted 'Motorman of the Year' by his fellow workers in the Duluth streetcar system. 'I owe it all to my brakeman,' said Jethro in a characteristically modest acceptance speech. Same old Jethro!

"Probably the most glamorous time had by any of us old alums was had by Francis Macomber last year. He went on a big game hunting safari all the way to Africa! We received many interesting post cards from Francis until he was, alas, accidentally shot and killed by his wife and white hunter. Tough luck, Francis!

"Wilametta 'Deadeye' Macomber, widow of the late beloved Francis Macomber, was married yesterday to Fred 'Sureshot' Sigafos, white hunter, in a simple double-ring ceremony in Nairobi. Many happy returns, Wilametta and Fred!

"Well, alums, that just about wraps it up for this year. Buy bonds!"

Cynic-al Observations VERMONT CONFERENCE RETURNS

Last year, for a number of reasons, there was no Vermont Conference. Many people, especially graduating seniors, were disappointed. Although it may be of little consolation to those who have already departed from UVM, the 1963 Vermont Conference "Pride and Prejudice: The Negro Struggle for Civil Rights", will very likely be the most interesting and most successful Conference of all. There are two reasons for this prediction - the topic and the speakers.

The civil rights movement is not a new movement in America; in the past decades there have always been some men who would not tolerate discrimination (social, economic, political) based on the color of one's skin. The 1954 Supreme Court decision on school desegregation did not create the civil rights movement. True, it did bring the Negroes' struggle onto the front pages of the nation's newspapers and it did awaken some Americans, white and Negro, to the fact that discrimination (in this case statutory discrimination) could and would be combatted. However, it did nothing to remove discriminatory procedures in housing, employment, etc. (In fact, the 1954 decision has yet to end segregation in all the nation's schools.) Moreover, it could do nothing to attack the fortress of racial discrimination - the prejudicial state of mind which infects many of America's white citizens.

But 1963 ("The Year of the March") may be remembered by future generations as the year in which the Negro civil rights movement reached a new peak of militancy and established the groundwork for eventual equality for all Americans. It is in this important year that the Vermont Conference Committee has brought to the UVM campus some of the leaders in the Negro civil rights movement to speak to and with the students and faculty of UVM and the townspeople of Burlington.

Besides the scheduled formal speeches of the four guests, they will meet all who desire to in the Waterman cafeteria for more informal discussions following their presentations in the chapel. In addition, the Conference's guests have agreed to address some University classes on a host of topics related to the civil rights movement.

WHY IN VERMONT?

But why have a civil rights forum in Vermont with its 700 plus Negroes and, more specifically, at UVM with its handful of Negro students? The plight of the American Negro is an American problem; Vermont is a part of America (although we doubt its role as the fortress of Americanism) and hence every Vermonter must be concerned with the Negro civil rights movement. It is truly the most vital domestic issue facing our country today and its implications for our position in the world and our foreign policy are fully understood by very few Americans (which is shocking when we realize we are trying to sell our system to a world which is three quarters non-white).

Another thing we must keep in our minds is that the basis for discrimination against Negroes and other minority groups is prejudice; this exists in the minds of Vermonters as well as in the minds of Alabamans (although not necessarily to the same extent). Paradoxically, prejudice and discrimination have become part of the American way of life. Any conservation attitude which considers this way of life to be sacrosanct and declares that it cannot be improved upon must be junked. Critical problems demand dramatic and direct action. Moderation and patience are meaningless synonyms for lack of action which are frequently used by whites with "good intentions".

The quality of the Conference's speakers is a credit to the Vermont Conference Committee, headed by Ilene Hofbinder. Three of the guests are active leaders of the Negro civil rights movement and the fourth is an experienced veteran of federal administration. After a year's absence from UVM, Vermont Conference has returned in a grand manner. We hope the work of the Committee will pay off doubly by aiding future groups in organizing such functions.

Letters To The Editor

Church Emphasizes Need For Reform

To the Editor:

The article LATIN AMERICA "de Nouveau" by Ahmed El-Haddad which appeared recently in "The Vermont CYNIC" deserves many comments, but there is a particular point that can not go unanswered, namely that of the role played by the Roman Catholic Church in the shaping of the Latin American countries since the colonization by the Spanish up to our modern times. Nobody can ignore the fact that the Roman Catholic missionaries were the protectors of the Indians against the exploitation by the whites. To the Spanish Jesuits goes the credit of giving to the Guarani Indians a social organization and a culture they did not have before America was discovered. This inspired the atheist Voltaire to make his famous statement: "The establishment of the missions by the Spanish Jesuits in Paraguay seems in some manner the triumph of civilization". The Revolution of Independence against Spain was supported by the Church and many Roman Catholic Priests have been honored since then among the heroes of the liberation of those countries. Those who have lived in modern times must remember the opposition of the Church to several dictatorial regimes in Latin America. This was instrumental in returning some of these countries to a democratic system. Today the Roman Catholic Church in Latin America is very much concerned with the many reforms needed and is one of the last hopes left against communism.

To state that the Roman Catholic Church exploits the poor for the sake of acquiring her own wealth can only be qualified as plain slander or gross misinformation. The Church in Latin America is very poor and the priests serving her share the same poverty that the peasants know.

To make statements about Latin America and in particular about the situation of the church, there takes a lot more than a few or many personal contacts with Latin Americans. To do otherwise implies irresponsible journalism which works only against the understanding and tolerance among countries and people so much needed today.

Vt. Conf. Attracts Pseudo Intellectuals

To the Editor:

In my total ignorance of what Vermont Conference is attempting to do this year, I would like to raise a sincere question: Where is the debate which used to characterize this event? I know that we can't afford to enjoy George Lincoln Rockwell v.s. Walter Reuther - the minds of the bearded ones wouldn't recover from the strain on their one-sided facilities. But, be this as it may, why must we be exposed to three rather expensive voices speaking essentially the same words?

I am certain that the character of the speakers and the morality of their cause are above question. However, I am equally certain that there are two sides to the issue. Education comes from intelligent discussion, not from one-sided speakers lecturing a committed audience.

THE SCEPTIC

"Sounds and sweet airs that give delight and hurt not." -- Caliban

We've been asked to print the lyrics to "We Shall Overcome." However, no one on campus seems to know them, so we're forced to offer instead a more secular song. It apparently goes, raggedly, to the tune of "Frankie and Johnny."

Met some trouble last month in Missouri,
Lost my job and my last month's pay
For speaking my mind a bit too free,
So I had to get away,

'Cause I'm a good man, and they was doing me wrong.

Well, there ain't no point for a dark man
To make any kind of a fuss,
So I took my last twenty dollars
And spent it on a Greyhound bus,

'Cause I'm a good man, and they was doing me wrong.

That old bus took me up to New England,
And I knew that that place would be good,
'Cause the Northern whites that come down South
Say they're from the land of Brotherhood,
Where they're all good men, and don't do no wrong.

But when I got to New England
Not a single job could I find,
So I went to a liberal man in town
And to him I spoke my mind

'Cause I'm a good man, and things was going all wrong.

Then that nice Northern liberal white man,
He smile this white liberal grin,
He says, "Friend, don't stand out in front that way, People looking at you, just come in,

'Cause you're a good man, and they're doing you wrong."

So he took me out to the kitchen
And he set me down in a chair,
"Tell me 'bout that Washington freedom march,
And how you felt down there.

'Cause you're a good man, and they're doing you wrong."

"Well," I says, "I'm sorry but I didn't go,
So I can't say how it all was,
But they say that Washington turned its back
And made damn fools of us.

But we're good men, and they're doing us wrong."

"Now they made us walk slow there and quiet,
And said, don't get mad now, just smile,
And the whites looked out and said, we're not scared,
'Cause they look like they can wait a while.

They're all good men; they won't do us no wrong."

Well this white man he turned all purple,
And he puffed and he huffed and he blew.
He says, "you ungrateful Nigra man,
Why, I went on that march for you.

I thought you was good men, and they was doing you wrong."

He says, "I sat most next to Joan Baez,
And I sang and heard speeches and prayed,
And got so filled with equality
That I fired my colored maid

'Cause I'm a good man, but I was doing her wrong."

"Well," I says, "I'm sorry you're mad, sir,
And I'm glad you had a good time,
But that march didn't get me no better job
Or raise my pay one dime.

I'm a good man, but they're still doing me wrong."

Phantom Phases

by The Phantom

Last week in this column, I challenged the IFC to work with the independents on this camp. It is my opinion that the IFC has gone out of its way to accomplish this matter. Yet, there is a lot of noise on campus coming from the independents in their effort to back their way into Kake Walk. The independents should have every right to walk for the Kake if they are willing to meet the necessary prerequisites. At one time on this campus the independents did walk for the Kake, but under circumstances completely different from today.

The Kake Walk rules explicitly state that any group that walks for the Kake must be an established social group that has been in existence for at least one year. The independent group of today does not meet these standards whereas the group in the late '40's and early '50's did. Proof of this lies in the constitution of the Vermont Independents' Association which clearly states the purpose of the group, which was not primarily to walk for the Kake. I will now quote from this constitution which can be found in the S.A. office in Billings Center.

Preamble: We, the students concerned about the vitality of the University community, and about the right to individual action at the University of Vermont, to enrich our lives with human understanding, to encourage individual ability, and to further a spirit typical of the Vermont way of life, to better support these ends, do hereby establish this constitution.

Article II Purpose

The Vermont Independents' Association shall be a social organization, seeking to serve the individual and the University Community by promoting the following:

- 1-Cooperation with other campus organizations.
- 2-A social program complementing the other events of University life.
- 3-Interest in campus student government, its activities and relationships.
- 4-Encouragement of individual initiative and ability.
- 5-A center of thought and ideas.
- 6-The drawing of attention of individuals to opportunities in student life by study, publicity, and training.

The constitution then lays a firm foundation establishing officers and the like to make the organization run effectively. This was the theoretical construction of the organization. Did it work out practically? The Vermont CYNIC reports in its issues of February 28, 1948, February 17, 1952, December 2, 1947, and December 13, 1947, that the VIP did in fact exert some influence on campus. They were an established group that participated in several aspects of University life. Some of these aspects include social events, an active and direct participation in campus politics, the furthering of ties with the faculty, participation in the IFC sing, and lastly, a fine tutoring service.

No one can deny that the independents became well established on campus, and for this reason, they should not have been denied, nor were they, the right to walk for the Kake. Now let us consider our modern day group. The rules are still the same, and yet some group of diehards are trying to force their way into Kake Walk. It reminds me of the ill-fated anti-ROTC campaign that degenerated into a mass of confusion. This fine group of aspiring young men hope to ascend the heights of walking for the Kake, strangely with no basis at all for the actual walking.

It is my contention that the independents can not walk for the Kake this year, or any year for that matter, until they have formed a social group and perform as such on this campus. They must first prove that they can function on this campus for reasons other than personal desires. Be useful to the University and form a group. Pressure the IFC to become more efficient. The end result will be a stronger and more active campus. It seems strange that these supposedly intelligent young men must resort to demonstrations to put across a dead issue. This wasted effort could be put to much more useful purpose by the drafting of a constitution and the formation of an independent party.

He says, "all you Nigras think of is money.
Us whites is trying teach you ideals.
Why that march got your cause in the papers
And your pictures in the newsreels,
So you're good men, though they're doing you wrong."

He says, "America's a free country.
Only lazy men is poor.
Man, you trying to take my job away?"
And he sent me out the kitchen door
'Cause I'm a no good man, and I done him wrong.

Well, I got me a stack of ideals now,
And the whites all agree that they're great,
And there's only one fly in my ointment—
It's been five days since I ate,
I'm a good man; wonder where I went wrong.

As an educational experience, Vermont Conference seems to be a failure. The pseudo minds will love it, however, because they will undergo absolutely no strain. The person who seeks an intelligent discussion of an important issue will spend his time much more profitably listening to Bob Collier and Miles Worthman discuss the Sceptic. However, hats off to the band of narrow little minds who have succeeded in bringing us no conflict, no debate, and no education. Best wishes for many more years of stagnation.

IFC Notes

To the Editor,

"In order that the fraternities may more easily determine the interest in each of the houses, all Freshmen men are requested to comply with the following:

All Freshmen men are requested to submit a list of the names of up to four houses in which they are possibly interested in pledging next semester. This list is not mandatory; it is, however, advised by the Interfraternity Council. The names of the four houses should be listed alphabetically on the distributed form and deposited in the ballot box which will be situated in Lower Waterman on Friday, Nov. 15.

A Master List will be drawn up from the lists submitted by each individual and all the fraternities will receive a copy of the Master List.

All Freshmen are to remember that this list is in no way binding either to your present choices nor does it exclude any of those unlisted ones in which you may become interested at a later date."

Sincerely,
The Interfraternity Council

Nota Bene

A blood drive will be held at the University of Vermont, Monday, November 25, from 10:00 A.M. to 4:00 P.M. in the Waterman Student Lounge. Under the student drive program of the Vermont and New Hampshire blood banks, any student who gives blood will receive blood free of charge if he should ever need it. No matter where he is, blood from the local Red Cross blood bank will be shipped free of charge to the hospital where the student is located. If a student doesn't give blood, he will be charged anywhere from $35 to $100 a pint for any blood he may require. A student at UVM desiring to give blood must make an appointment, and if he is under 21, he must have permission from his parents. Appointments can be made and permission slips received from any Gold Key or Sophomore Aid representative who will be at all the dorms, fraternities, and sororities. Any student 18 or over who has not given blood in the last 8 weeks or more than 4 times this year, is eligible to make an appointment. Coffee, donuts, and sandwiches will be served. The whole process is painless and takes very little time. It is important that you should give blood both as an insurance measure for yourself and as a humanitarian gesture for those who may need your blood now. The UVM quota is 150 pints.

Placement Barometer

by Douglas O. Hanau, Placement Director

The Odds Are 9 to 1.

The chances are this great, that a college student will wind up with a mediocre firm - unless a systematic technique to appraise management is used before making a final job decision. The College graduate's problem in trying to obtain the "right" position is essentially one of salesmanship. In fact, he is selling the most important product he has - himself. For any salesman to achieve maximum effectiveness, he must know his product, be skilled in telling others about his product, and select the most promising potential customers.

Many articles have been written about these initial steps, including the preparation of resumes and handling of one's self during an interview. However, little has appeared about the evaluation of the potential employer by the applicant - investigating the comparative growth characteristics of various industries and the quality of the various companies in those industries. One of the main reasons for the lack of information on this topic of evaluating the potential employer is due to the variance in approach used by the candidate or putting it another way, the evaluation differs with the individual.

Why is selecting the right corporation important? There are over 1,500 organizations listed on the New York Stock Exchange and many more thousands exist. Corporations, like individuals, have personalities. People recognize this in public relations by speaking of the "corporate image". Some corporations are young in ideas, aggressive, energetic and growing; they have the image of good management. The managements of certain other corporations have grown tired; they are simply going through the motions and they are recognized as mediocre. Finally, there are some managements which are completely burned out and entirely incompetent.

Let us assume that John Doe was graduated from the University of Vermont and is now employed by Corporation "X". John, an excellent "all-around" man, was among the top 10 percent of his class. Corporation "X" is excellently managed. John is therefore associated with a company which offers the best climate for advancement. John knows that his corporation will grow, creating additional opportunities; that his company will have intelligent and progressive personnel policies which will assist his executive development and reward him commensurate with his contribution to the corporate goal; and that Corporation "X" is a sound one to invest in; in fact, it will probably have an employee stock purchase plan. John is a winning player on a winning team. The odds for success in his corporate career are all in his favor.

Now, if instead of going with Corporation "X", what would have happened if John had joined "Y", whose management is mediocre or "Z" whose management is bad. In either case, John would invest a number of years with the company before the ineptness of its management became apparent to him. John would now have to repeat the process of obtaining another corporate connection. The regrettable thing is that John would have wasted valuable years of his business career in a lost cause, whereas those same years could have been invested wisely in the excellently managed Corporation "X".

A definite correlation exists in a corporation between management excellence and the probability of business success by a capable employee. The problem then is to recognize good management. Much can be learned about the quality of a corporation's management by a study over the years. Valuable data for such a study can be found in the periodic financial reports of companies, in material available at brokerage houses, and in the publications of such outstanding organizations as Standard and Poors, Moody's Manuals, Dun and Bradstreet, the Wall Street Journal, and Fortune Magazine's 500 Blue Chip Corporations published each year during the summer. Management excellence is obviously correlated not only with career opportunities but also with investment value.

In addition to these excellent sources, there are a number of important questions to which you should obtain some answers. For example, what is the average age of a company's management? What system is used for evaluating and promoting the employee? What is the turnover rate among new college hires? What is the basic philosophy of the company? I could go on indefinitely. However, each of you has to decide what is important to you in researching an organization. The important fact is that you have to dig. The answers that really count will not be found any other way. A college student contemplating a career in the corporate world can increase his chances for business success by comparing corporate managements. And the odds will be even more in his favor if he confines his inquiries to excellently managed firms.

Former UVM Minstrel Turns Cinderella In NYC

By Pat Orvis

NEW YORK CITY - Cinderella had nothing on Carole Demas.

It's hard to believe a talented but "unknown" bright-eyed little songstress could bring her influence to bear on an important segment of New York's summer entertainment and then end up in a promising off-Broadway play.

But Carole, a 1961 University of Vermont graduate who was Miss Vermont in the Miss Universe Pageant in 1960, was a minstrel and actress with Champlain Shakespeare Festival, and held major roles in several UVM productions, did just that this year.

A native of Brooklyn, she had moved home to take education courses with an eye to helping her future husband, David Hall of Windsor, Vt., also a 1961 UVM graduate, through Columbia University Law School and herself with voice and drama lessons.

She and David were married in June 1962, and she began teaching kindergarten in a "depressed area" in Brooklyn, that fall.

The year wore on and Carole began thinking of a summer job, for Dave still had a year of law school left.

"The summer before I had seen Shakespeare in Central Park and thought it was too bad they had no minstrels as we had at UVM. I wondered if there were any particular reason for this and decided it might be worth looking into," related the peppy, petite soprano in the Halls' apartment at 646 West End Ave. one rainy afternoon.

Teaching with her was one Paula Rosen, an alto with a guitar, who agreed to be a minstrel too, if Carole could get the nod from the head of the popular open-air theater, Joseph Papp.

"We knew we could never fill the park with singing by ourselves, but she had a brother Jon, who sings baritone, and my brother Alex had quite a career as a boy soprano and now sings tenor," she continued.

"So, without even bothering to consult Paula's brother, who was about to graduate from the University of Pennsylvania and wouldn't be home for several weeks, I sat down to write Mr. Papp, telling him why I thought singers, ourselves in particular, could contribute to the general atmosphere of the park!"

Shortly after, a phone call at school from Papp gave them the go-ahead, but: "We panicked! We had no music, had never sung together and wouldn't be able to until late in June!"

Then she remembered how Prof. Howard Bennett, retired head of the UVM music department, "loves" the Elizabethan period and called to ask if he could help them. Soon, the four-part arrangements, all done from one-melody songs of the period, began pouring in. "We owe much of our success to Mr. Bennett!" she declared.

They finally got together and learned five songs, but "everything seemed to go wrong - we just didn't blend. Two days before try-out we decided to see how we sounded outside, and went over to Riverside (just a block from her apartment) and asked strangers to listen and tell us how we sounded."

Then came the big moment in Central Park when, before Papp and a number of "big names" appearing in the plays, they "did their stuff."

"After two and a half songs Papp jumped up and cried: 'You're hired!' It was really a dream come true!"

Make Traffic Jams

They first sang outside the theater, but caused such pedestrian traffic jams from playgoers and curious passersby, that the park commissioner wrote an unfriendly letter to Papp and they were moved inside to sing for more than 2,000 people, most of whom arrived early and waited on hard seats for the play to begin. This meant a radical expansion of their repertoire and, "it was like playing in a very noisy nightclub."

But by the end of the summer they were drawing entrance applause and curtain calls. The Unexploited Elizabethan ballads and the four attractive young singers, well-matched for looks as well as for blend, were a hit.

Meanwhile a dividend Carole says had never entered her head, the foursome was seen by nearly everyone in the world of the New York theater before the final performance.

As a neat variation on the usual pavement-pounding theme of actress-in-search-of-an-agent, three agents thought of Carole for an ingenue role in a promising musical about to open at the Phoenix Theater, considered by most to be off-Broadway's best theater.

Ingenues Everywhere!

Fred Ebb and Paul Klein had been working off-and-on for nine years on a full-length musical, "Morning Sun." Patricia Neway had the only precast role for this show about a mother who never forgives her husband for "deserting" her to fight and get killed in the Civil War and who, because of this bitterness allows her oldest son to be hanged, when accused of something for which he was not responsible.

More than 100 girls, "every ingenue actress in New York apparently," says Carole, had "that certain" quality the creators envisioned for their character.

Eva Weith, the agent with whom Carole is now signed, was the one who arranged for her to audition. "I have never seen so many ingenues in my life as were waiting to try out. I figured it was pretty hopeless, but I decided I couldn't just run away, so I sat on a fire escape and waited my turn."

When she was stopped half-way through the first song, she was convinced it was no use. They had her read something, then come and talk to them, and invited her back the next day. That night she told Dave what "a smiling, friendly group they were," not realizing at that point that they had been until her audition, at their wit's end to find the right girl.

She was told on the third day the part was hers and horrified the producers by saying she didn't know if she could afford to accept.

But Dave ruled with the decision she "couldn't afford not to take it," regardless of financial sacrifices.

From then it was Cinderella all over again until luck turned the carriage into a pumpkin and the show closed after one week of previews and a second week of regular performances.

The critics just didn't like it, most of them agreeing the parts were "infinitely superior to the whole."

Reviewers Generous

Carole says she "learned a lot" from the experience, was given a lot of special help by the director, and had the good luck to work with a friendly, highly talented, well-matched highly talented, well-matched cast.

She also got good reviews, being at least mentioned by every critic, in remarks that changed for the Herald Tribune's description of her as "pretty and sweet-voiced," to the New York World-Telegram and Sun's analysis that she is "remarkably lovely" and has a "rich, sure singing voice" and a "wealth of stage presence."

What's in store for the young actress whose first big role, at 17, was a black-leather-jacket routine in Vermont Varieties at UVM, where she went on to have leads in "Brigadoon" and "Carousel" (in which she met Dave) and featured roles in "Carmen", "Where's Charlie" (Dave played Charlie), and "The Medium," as well as in The Playtimers' productions, some of which she also directed.

Carole is a very practical Cinderella and insists that if something doesn't come along in the theater soon, she will teach again until Dave is through his last year.

Competing With Best

But she does recognize, from being cast in "Morning Sun" and ranking among the top three in auditions since that play closed, that she is at least in a league with leading experience ingenue actresses in New York.

Also, her agent has plans for her to do at least bit parts on television.

"After this summer, when the minstrels worked out all right in the park and Dave got the summer job he wanted (with the law firm Watters & Donovan, James Donovan being the Lawyer who negotiated for the release of Cubans by Castro and arranged the Abel-Powers swap, we decided things couldn't continue to be so good."

"But then I got the part in the play and it's really hard to predict what may happen next!" concluded Cinderella, as Dave returned for dinner and the realistic young actress slipped easily into her domestic role in the kitchen.

Prof. Daniels

Speaks At Cinn.

On Marxism

In appeal and function, Marxism is different in countries where communists are not in power from areas where communists rule, a University of Cincinnati audience was told Thursday, Nov. 7, by a University of Vermont expert on Marxist ideology.

Prof. Robert V. Daniels of the Vermont department of history spoke on "The Challenge of Marxism as a Faith" at a UV faculty luncheon sponsored by the campus YMCA in the UC Building.

"Marxism, though outwardly anti-religious, is professed dogmatically by the communist movement in a religious manner," Professor Daniels said. "Therefore Marxism can be studied together with the traditional religions as a 'faith movement,' with intellectual appeals and psychological functions similar to religion."

Explaining non-communist Marxism is not so religious and was being omitted from his discussion, Professor Daniels continued: "The appeal of Marxism depends on its political position."

"Among communists who are not in power, Marxism has the following appeals: Economic -- promises to the workers and peasants; intellectual -- its pretense of scientific certainty and inevitability; psychological -- group ties for the alienated; and moral -- protesting social injustice."

"In the underdeveloped countries and especially in Asia, Marxism has become a faith of anti-Western but Westernizing nationalism."

"The function of Marxism where communists are in power is very different. The doctrine is reinterpreted by the totalitarian authorities to justify themselves and their policies and imposed on the country to secure conformity and obedience. It thus becomes intellectually empty and is resented by most intellectuals under communist rule."

"The direct Marxist challenge to the international order is not an intellectual challenge but purely the political threat of communist countries. Russia and China now challenge each other, with conflicting Marxist justification."

"Regarding the internal order in the West, fideistic Marxism has never been a serious threat or else, as in France and Italy, it has decayed into passive opposition."

"The great challenge of the Marxist faith today is in the underdeveloped countries of Asia, Africa, and Latin America as a psychological response to the strains of westernization and industrialization."

"Communism in these countries is likely to become more pro-Chinese. Probably the most effective alternative is another totalitarian revolutionary faith of a non-Marxist nature, such as Peronism or Nasserism."

UVM Debaters Place First At Amherst Debate Tournament

The University of Vermont placed second with an 8-2 record at the Amherst College Debate Tournament this weekend. Twenty-nine schools representing eight different states were in attendance at the tourney. UVM sent novice debaters, Carl Lisman and Donna Kristiansen, on the affirmative; and varsity debaters, Elaine Zak and Michael Cronin on the negative to this varsity tournament. Carl and Donna compiled a 4-1 record, defeating Army, Central Connecticut State College, Dartmouth College, Amherst and dropping to St. Anselm's. Similarly, Elaine and Mike compiled a 4-1 record with victories over Providence College, Marymount College, Cornell, Wesleyan, while sustaining a loss to Boston College who won the tournament with an overall record of 9 victories, one defeat. The topic was: "Resolved that the federal government should guarantee an opportunity for higher education to all qualified high school graduates." Carl Lisman was awarded a trophy as the best affirmative speaker in the tournament, and Elaine Zak received an award as the second best negative speaker at Amherst. Robert B. Huber, chairman of the speech department, was the coach on the trip.

This week also saw the opening of the discussion program portion of the Lawrence Debate and Discussion Club activities for 1963-1964. UVM discussants appeared in two programs discussing the topic: "What should be done to minimize friction among racial groups in the United States. The discussants, Gregory Williams, Janice Hackbarth, and Dan Newcomb, appeared before a packed assembly at Hinesburg High School early in the week; and later the threesome was invited for supper and an evening program before the Mansfield Women's Club of Underhill Center, Vermont. Dr. Norman T. London, director of the discussion program, accompanied the discussants.

There's Still Time Girls!

FOR A CHANGE - Lynda Greene, reverses dating procedure as she escorts her MERP date, Tom Clark, into the car.

Four years ago the Panhellenic Council decided that the men and women of UVM needed a change. So the sorority women created MERP Week, (Men's Economic Recovery Period). At this time, the girls ask out the boys and pay for them! This year it will last from November 11 through November 15.

Five candidates have been chosen to vie for the title of MERP Week King. The coronation of the King will take place on Friday night at a dance featuring the Vistas. It will last from 8:00-12:00 p.m. (12:30 curfew, girls), and the tickets cost $1.00 per couple. Tickets are on sale at the Billings Center November 13 through November 15. The voting for the King took place on Wednesday at Billings. Each candidate had a large jar with his picture over it. The voting was done by dropping pennies into the jar of the candidate of your choice.

The following were candidates for MERP WEEK KING:

Jim Suskin, '64: Jim is the immediate past Vice-President of the Phi Sigma Delta Fraternity. He is taking advanced ROTC and has membership in the Ethan Allen Rifles, an honorary society. Jim plans to go to law school upon graduation this year.

George Oelzie, '65, George, captain of this year's varsity football team, is both a member of the track team and the Varsity Club. He is taking advanced ROTC and plans to go into the Army after working for a year in the field of sales and personnel.

Ted Jordan, '64, Ted is a member of the Sigma Phi Epsilon Fraternity. He belongs to the Newman Center and plans to go to law school after leaving UVM.

Ed Blaise, '64, Ed is the immediate past President of Theta Chi Fraternity, and he has kake walked for his house. Ed, an economics major, plans to go into the field of banking after graduation.

Dave Strassburg, '64, Dave is a member of the Delta Psi Fraternity. He is captain of the varsity basketball team and a member of the advanced ROTC course. He will probably go into the Army upon graduation.

So lets go, girls. Ask out that boy you've been liking at these past two months . . . before somebody else does!

Players Present Albee's "The Zoo Story"

The University of Vermont Players will present two one-act plays of Edward Albee on Nov. 15-17.

Plays to be staged in the Arena Theatre of the Fleming Museum on the UVM campus are "The Zoo Story" and "The American Dream." These will be the first dramatic offerings of the year by the Players.

Albee is the author of two Broadway hits, "Who's Afraid of Virginia Woolf" which is entering its second season, and of "Ballad of the Sad Cafe" which just opened to rave reviews.

The two UVM offerings are sardonic and comic shows about the habits and foibles of men and women in American society. Both have been popular off-Broadway shows and "The American Dream" has been revived each year for a three-week off-Broadway run since its original performance in 1959.

The Players selected the two Albee plays as sampling of some of the best contemporary theater by an American playwright.

Directing the plays will be Richard E. Leidberg, campus representative for the cooperative ministry. He directed "Waiting for Godot" when it was produced three years ago.

Starring in the two-character cast of "The Zoo Story" are Bryant Reynolds of St. Albans and David Sorti of Barrington, R.I.

Lead roles in "The American Dream" are played by Anne Bourgault of Richford, Gary Derman of Brooklyn, N.Y., Nancy Streit of Warren, Susan Greene of Butler, N.J. and Ralph Preston, an instructor in the department of mathematics.

Sorority Culture

by Merry Schron

The UVM sororities have been busily entertaining and being entertained by professors and prominent professional men. Many of the organizations have profited by the cultural meetings held monthly. Sisters of Alpha Chi Omega enjoyed a talk on flower arranging by one of their alumnae and viewed attractive floral demonstrations. They are planning to invite professors to speak to them during the semester. Ann Lindsey of Alpha Delta Pi spoke to her sorors on her trip to Alaska. Ann worked in an orphanage there and used colorful slides to illustrate her talk. Also, Professor Penner of the Religion Department spoke on what he might say if it were to be his last lecture.

After dining at Alpha Epsilon Phi, Professor Dykhuizen of the Philosophy Department spoke to the girls both on the evolution of philosophy and on the modern trends of philosophy. Delta Delta Delta sorority put the advice of Mrs. Russell Holden's talk on etiquette to practical use. The success of their Apple Polishing Party might have been due to their courteous and warm reception. The girls of Kappa Alpha Theta listened attentively to Dr. Boardman's advice on marriage and love. Wisdom gained at their meeting will last a lifetime. Pi Beta Phi found it a rewarding experience to listen to Professor Heller of the French Department. Professor Heller spoke on the advantages and disadvantages of sorority and fraternity life. Gamma Phi Beta plans to have their cultural meeting this month. The sorority girls this month might well be walking on campus a little wiser from the wise advice of wiser elders.

WUS PRESENTS SPEAKER

Miss Judy Nicholson, field representative for WUS.

On Monday afternoon at 4:10 p.m. Miss Judith Nicholson will speak on World University Service in India in Marsh Lounge at Billings Center and be available to answer questions concerning other areas of WUS work. Miss Nicholson is serving World University Service for a second year as a field representative.

Last year she visited colleges in the Midwest and in the summer she traveled to Asia as a member of a WUS Seminar. She spent two months in India visiting WUS projects at several universities and working with Indian students on a construction project at a small college outside of Delhi. She also spent two weeks in Japan and Hong Kong where she saw WUS health projects and met with university students.

Miss Nicholson graduated in 1961 from the University of Michigan where she majored in history -- with emphasis on the Middle East. After graduation she continued her education at Stautzenberger Business College and at Princeton University studying Arabic.

It is hoped that students will avail themselves of this excellent opportunity to become acquainted with what WUS is and does around the world for students.

The Vermont Chapter, founded just two years ago, is particularly concerned with providing opportunities for closer contact between our foreign students (60 every year) and Americans. Anyone interested in this endeavor or in supporting the international program of WUS are strongly urged to attend - this short hour will indeed be well spent.

WUS States Philosophy And Program

This article is presented as one of a series with the hope of stimulating participating in the work of the UVM WORLD UNIVERSITY SERVICE COMMITTEE.

Why Should We Help?

Throughout the world, a "rich student" or a "wealthy faculty member" is as hard to find as the proverbial needle in the haystack. Therefore at first glance it would appear rather futile to have an organization helping students financed largely by members of the academic community who feel themselves in need of help. And yet, is it? Is it not true that some students, though not rich in reference to their own society, are far better off than others? Cannot students who face the many handicaps in seeking education in one country feel an identity with an obligation to those in other countries? Those who support World University Service think so. If the students of European and North American countries struggle for education, where per capita income is more than $2,000 annually, how much greater must be the struggle in those countries where per capita income is $100 a year or less?

Whom Do We Help?

The existence of need was the basis on which WUS was called into being, and need continues to be the basis of the present program. Within the limits of its resources, WUS stands ready to respond to the ever increasing demands of student welfare, from whichever part of the globe the call for help may come. WUS cannot and does not discriminate on political or geographical bases, nor does it consider possible political consequences when it responds to the need.

(The perennial question of American students about WUS' assistance to students in Communist countries must therefore be answered thusly: WUS does not currently operate in any Soviet-bloc countries, not because it discriminates against students under Communism, but because it has so far been impossible to set up autonomous WUS committees in these countries, one of the basic requirements of the international organization.)

How Do We Help?

The disproportionate dimensions of the need and the resources available to WUS bring, of course, other factors into play in consideration of projects to be undertaken. For example, WUS has in recent years increased its efforts to contribute toward a permanent solution of certain specific student problems, rather than to dissipate its limited resources on the greatest number of projects possible. This requires the concentration of efforts to mobilize national and local resources in the countries receiving assistance. Thus, WUS projects become "issue symbols", calling attention to both the problems and possible effective solutions. WUS thus makes

John LaCost wanted a part in scientific progress

He has it at Western Electric

John LaCost received his B.S.E.E. from the University of Illinois in 1962. One of the factors which influenced him to join Western Electric was the quick manner in which new engineers become operational.

During the short time John has been with us, he has worked in several areas which are vital to the nation's communications complex. And with his future development in mind, John attended one of our Graduate Engineer Training Centers where he studied the front-line Electronic Switching System. He is currently working as a systems equipment engineer on such projects as cross bar switching and line link pulsing.

John's future at Western Electric looks promising indeed. He knows he will be working with revolutionary and advanced engineering concepts like electronic switching, thin film circuitry, computer-controlled production lines and microwave systems. He is also aware of the continued opportunity for advanced study through the Company-paid Tuition Refund Plan, as well as through Company training centers.

How do you see your future? If you have high personal standards and the qualifications we are looking for, we should talk. Opportunities for fast-moving careers exist now, not only for electrical, mechanical and industrial engineers, but also for physical science, liberal arts and business majors. For more detailed information, get your copy of the Western Electric Career Opportunities booklet from your Placement Officer. Or write: Western Electric Company, Room 6405, 222 Broadway, New York 38, N. Y. And be sure to arrange for a personal interview when the Bell System recruiting team visits your campus.

Ken Burton became UVM's all-time rushing leader with 1386 yards. He raced for 104 of them against his hometown team, Middlebury, in the mud.

Deane Kent, UVM fleet halfback, battles his way through the left side of the Middlebury line, as Ed Fugit clears the way.

Middlebury tacklers close in on quarterback Jack O'Dea, as he fights for that extra yard.

Bill Davidson, filling in for injured Ron Hertel, played an outstanding game to end his college career.

Intramurals Start Winter Program

by Mel Bloomenthal

With the touch football season complete, and the bowling season underway, students may now look ahead to intramural basketball, hockey, squash, and handball for the remainder of this semester.

In touch football, Sigma Phi Epsilon captured the fraternity division by defeating Kappa Sigma, 13-6. Sig Ep went on to win the all-campus championship by edging Independent winner, the Leftovers, 12-6. The Leftovers were the defending all-campus champions.

In the tennis singles tournament, John Adler of Tau Epsilon of the Senior Class. The members are chosen on the bases of their Military Science Average, Scholastic Average and extra-curricular activities.

Phi, copped the Fraternity, championship. Henson was the Independent winner. A match between the two has not yet been arranged.

Bowling matches are currently being played on the Waterman alleys. Alpha Tau Omega is out to defend their last year's championship.

In the All-Sports Trophy race, Sig Ep is the current leader of the fraternities with 124 points. Delta Psi is second, with 116, followed by Phi Sigma Delta, with 98. The Leftovers lead the independents with 91 points, and Buckam is second with 75.

Mr. Norm Strassburg, Intramural Sports director, announces that there will be a meeting of all basketball officials and team managers, Monday, November 18, at 4:15. It will be held in the classroom off the gym floor in the east lobby.

The deadline for basketball team entries was this past Wednesday, and the schedule starts Wednesday, November 20. Basketball practices may be arranged by signing up in the equipment room. Mr. Strassburg expresses a need for game officials for the basketball schedule.

The hockey rink will be open on Tuesday nights for intramural practice sessions. This is for practice only, and may be arranged by phoning Mr. Strassburg, and giving him the name of the unit and the players involved.

A hockey schedule may be drawn up for the second semester, but teams may enter only if the players have adequate equipment.

The deadline for entries for the handball doubles and squash tournaments, is Monday, November 18.

Cats Complete Best Season Since 1949 With 6-2 Record

UVM Cops Vt. Crown From Midd 14-0; Burton Sets Four Rushing Records

The UVM Catamount football team ended their 1963 season in an honorable fashion. Besides boosting their record to a respectable 6-2, the Green Mountain Boys also copped the Vermont State Title for the first time in eight years.

Last Saturday at Porter Field, in Middlebury, the Cats outplayed and out-classed the Panthers from Middlebury College by a score of 14-0. The soaked, muddy field gave way to four UVM fumbles; but the Clifford men were able to bail themselves out of trouble each time. First-rate performances were displayed by Rusty Brink, Scot Fitz, Paul Toussaint, Captain George Oelze, Ken Burton and Karl Ettlinger. Bill Davidson, now a senior, displayed the most inspiring defensive exhibition of his college career. It was pure team effort which allowed the Cats to break the "Middlebury Myth".

TOUSSAINT 14, AIC 6

The defensive strength of the Vermont squad was made evident early in the season as the Cats took the first two games. The initial contest against AIC ended in a 14-6 victory as veteran Paul Toussaint collected all 14 points and Richie Reynolds placed on the ECAC team.

ARMY (B) TEAM BLANKED

The second clash against the Army B team was a sheer defensive battle. The final score, 12-0, indicated the superiority of the UVM boys over the West Pointers. Resulting from this game was the struggle for the top berth in the quarterback department between veteran Cris Greer and sophomore hopefuls Jack O'Dea and Scot Fitz.

TURNING POINT

Maine defeated Vermont 14-13. This can be considered the turning point of the season for the Catamounts. Perhaps it was humiliation or plain distaste for failure that sparked the club, regardless, after the Maine game, the Cats had a new team. Ken Burton emerged as a serious threat in Yankee Conference competition as he was elected to the ECAC team of the week.

BURTON RUNS WILD

The Saturday that UVM was pitted against Rhode Island was unofficially declared "Ken Burton Day". The speedman from Middlebury ran around, through, on top and underneath the Rams as he racked up 140 yards, highlighted by touchdown jaunts of 60 and 59 yards. For the second week in a row, Ken placed on the ECAC team. Another aspect that allowed the Cats to upset Rhody was the halting of their gib fullback Tony Tetro. Considered as one of the biggest threats against Vermont this season, he was stymied by the overwhelming line play of Ron Hertel, George Oelze and Rusty Brink.

CATS STOP SERIEKA

The Cats' next opponent also went home completely upset. New Hampshire, last year's Yankee Conference Champs, was totally destroyed 28-6. The major factor in this game was the superb defensive action in holding top-ranked halfback Dan Serieka to a small amount of rushing. Probably the most unique play ever to occur on Centennial Field took place in this game. A mix-up between players and referee resulted in New Hampshire's only score. Serieka, on the alert, picked up a Vermont punt, which was thought to be downed, and pranced 82 yards for the score.

SCOT FITZ EXCELLS

The final game of the year against Norwich, once again exemplified the great defense of Vermont, the score being 27-0. Scot Fitz did an outstanding job at quarterback and was then elected as the ECAC Sophomore of the Week. He completed 10 of 13 passes for a phenomenal 76% completion average.

VERMONT OVERPOWERED

The Cats then traveled to Amherst, Mass., for an encounter with the Redmen of UMass. The opponents offered too much strength and experience and completely out-classed the Catamounts. In this game, Ron Hertel was injured and was forced to miss the Middlebury game.

FINAL RECORD, 6-22

The Cats sport a 6-2 record and placed third in Yankee Conference standings. The 1963 football season was the best season the Catamounts have had since 1949. Congratulations must be given to Coach Robert Clifford who in two years, has built Vermont into a threatening Yankee Conference power. It was a season of superb performances by George Oelze, Rusty Brink, Richie Reynolds, Paul Toussaint and last but not least Ken Burton. The senior halfback broke four Vermont records; most carries in a game, 22; UVM career rushing record, 1,386 yards; the single game rushing mark, 150 yards, and the best career rushing average, 6.5 yards per carry.

Coach Clifford has been sort of a "miracle worker" here at UVM, for in two short years he has converted the usually meek Catamounts to ferocious competitors in the Yankee Conference. The graying football tactician left a secure position at Colby to try to rejuvenate Vermont. By the past season's performance it seems like he has found a home. (Credit: Scott, SPS)

Oelze, Brink Honored With ECAC Laurels

Capt. George Oelze was selected to ECAC weekly team for play against Mass. (Credit: P.B. Eldred, SPS)

UVM's phenomenal success this year is not only due to the fine play of the backfield, but in a large way, to that of the line. Two of the most outstanding linemen, Captain George Oelze and Art (Rusty) Brink, have been duly rewarded in the past two weeks.

Oelze was the fifth Catamount to be selected on the ECAC All-East College division team of the week, last week for his ferocious defensive play against the Redmen of UMass.

Brink was placed on the ECAC team of the week for his rugged performance in the "myth-shattering" game against Middlebury. The soph standout was nominated many times during the season, but never broke into the first team till the last game of the year.

Overall, Brink lead the Green and Gold's defensive rating with 125 points. Oelze was a close second, with 108. In this rating system, an unassisted tackle receives 2 points, an assist 1 point, and various other defensive maneuvers are awarded corresponding points.

Rappa's Roundup

By Richard Rappaport

Last Saturday at Porter Field the University of Vermont football team punctured the "Middlebury Myth" by defeating the Panthers 14-0 to win their first outright state series crown since 1955.

The Cats completely dominated play in every category as they held Middlebury to a total of 42 yards while rolling up 272 yards themselves. The surprisingly low score of the game was due to the fact that the Cats offense was stalled somewhat by the inclement weather. The entire team, especially the line was outstanding for the Cats, but special praise should be given to amazing Kenny Burton who smashed the school single season rushing record of 621 yards by finishing the season with 690 yards from scrimmage. Others who put in exceptional performances were Carl Ettingler filling in at fullback for the injured Richie Reynolds, and linemen Rusty Brink and George Oelze who did a superb job.

Saturday's contest was the final collegiate game for eight departing seniors, ends Paul Toussaint, Al Brown, Pete Weiss, and Ken Atkins, quarterback Chris Greer, guards Bill Davison and Ray Bello, and, of course, Ken Burton, all of whom played good football for the Cats during their careers.

As a result of Saturday's triumph the Catamounts concluded the campaign with an overall record of 6-2, the best season ledger since 1949. This year was actually supposed to be one of experience pointing towards next season when eight Vermont starters will return. However, the team developed faster than expected, and a complimentary word which has often been absent in this column, must be given to Coach Clifford, and his staff for the outstanding job which they and their players did all season long.

The football outlook for next season appears to be quite bright since all except eight members of last year's squad will return next year. The major loss will be, of course, Ken Burton, but he is expected to be replaced by either Richie Defeo, a transfer student from Northeastern, or hard running Kenny Andrade depending upon whether versatile Defeo is used at quarterback or halfback. The only loss on the line will be split ends Pete Weiss and his replacement Al Brown, and tight end Paul Toussaint. The expected return of Tommy Perras should solve the vacancy at split end, with track star Don Mayland, and possibly speedy frosh halfback Dave Busick also battling for this position. However, at present, the tight end spot appears to be the major problem which will probably not be determined until spring practice.

Theodore Bikel Featured Nov. 25 On Lane Series

Theodore Bikel, next Red Series attraction.

By Betty Fuchs

Monday, November 25, Lane Series is proud to present Theodore Bikel in an evening of folk singing. In this age of specialization, Mr. Bikel emerges as a unique and amazing personality. He is a chameleon of an actor, slipping in and out of roles so varied that hardly any two of his performances are attributed to the same person. An internationally-renowned folk singer, he has a repertoire in twenty languages, speaking seven of them with fluency. Among his other achievements, Theodore Bikel is a splendid instrumentalist, a superb dialectician, a brilliant raconteur, a master showman, and an indefatigable bundle of energy.

He has been featured in over twenty motion pictures, four Broadway productions, and countless television shows. In recognition of his remarkable talents, Mr. Bikel was cast as Mary Martin's leading man in Rodgers and Hammerstein's Broadway musical, The Sound of Music. Another tribute was an Academy Award nomination for his fine portrayal of a Southern sheriff in The Defiant Ones.

Born in Vienna thirty-four years ago, Theodore Bikel and his family emigrated to Israel when he was fourteen. He worked in an agricultural settlement in his early youth, but soon became interested in the theater. In 1944, he co-founded the Israel Chamber Theatre, and two years went to London to study at the Royal Academy of Dramatic Art. After graduation he appeared in several small theater productions in England until Sir Laurence Olivier offered him the role of Mitch in A Streetcar Named Desire. After the long run of that hit play, he went into Peter Ustinov's The Love of Four Colors.

Theodore Bikel came to the United States in 1954 to appear on Broadway in Tonight in Soho. His other Broadway credits include The Lark with Julie Harris, The Rope Dancers with Art Carney and Siobhan McKenna, and, of course, Sound of Music.

Among his many movie roles, he has been outstanding as the sinister impresario in The Blue Angel, a knowing psychiatrist in I Want to Live, a Dutch doctor in The Little Kidnappers, a German submarine officer in The Enemy Below, a Russian colonel in Fraulein, and a Dutch artist in A Dog of Flanders.

Theodore Bikel has starred on every top dramatic television program — U.S. Steel Hour, Playhouse 90, Studio One, Kraft Theater, Hallmark Hall of Fame, Dupont Show of the Month, Alfred Hitchcock Presents, GE Theater, etc. He has been a mad bomber, a French tax evader, a Nazi interrogator, an Iron Curtain refugee, an old Italian tramp, a Scottish police officer, a Chinese crook. The list is virtually without end.

Mr. Bikel has been a favorite on the "Jack Paar Show," and has made several appearances on NBC-TV's "Today." He was recently hailed for a one-man, 90-minute show on WNTA-TV in New York which was syndicated nationally on video tape. He conceived, wrote, and starred in one-man shows on the NBC-TV religious series, "The Eternal Light," and CBS-TV's "Look Up and Live."

His own weekly radio program, "At Home With Theodore Bikel," is a potpourri of music, interviews, and peppery opinions. Guests have included such notables as Archbishop Makarios of Greece, Siobhan McKenna, and Harry Belafonte. The hour-long program is heard on FM stations in several cities.

Theodore Bikel, the folk singer, has packed concert halls from Town and Carnegie Halls in New York to the Philharmonic Auditorium in Los Angeles. A Theodore Bikel concert is an exciting affair because Mr. Bikel is an exciting human being. He transmits a rare brand of magic and in a matter of moments has an audience completely captivated. He never loses that magic.

Vt. Conference Stresses Vt. Role In Rights Struggle

James Farmer: Won't Give Up

by James L. Sealy

It was a rainy, solemn Tuesday, Nov. 12, 1963, which ushered in the 1st day of Vermont Conference. It almost seemed as if the weather had recognized the significance of the event about to take place, and decided to set the proper atmosphere. This was the conference so many people had been waiting to see and this was illustrated by the shy, solemn, inquisitive, facial expressions of the students and townspeople of Burlington as they entered Ira Allen Chapel at 7:15 on this Tuesday evening.

The topic of the conference was "Pride and Prejudice, the Negroes' struggle for equal rights" and as Dr. Babcock stated in his opening address before the conference, "the Negro has a vehemence of pride and they are venomous towards prejudice." Dr. Babcock introduced Mr. Farmer, National Director of CORE, the audience clapped and then a silence permeated the whole chapel as the audience listened in rapt attention to the words of this man, a leader of both black and white man, who had important things to say. Things which the audience so desperately wanted to hear.

Mr. Farmer stated, "we'll take hitting, kicking, spitting, even death, and we will keep coming until we can eat, sleep, ride, work, sweat and love from place to place and coast to coast." Mr. Farmer held the audience spellbound with stories about the Negro's dedication to the cause of civil rights in the face of brutal actions by the vicious, neurotic law enforcement agencies of the south. The Director of CORE traced the growth of strength of the civil rights movement from the Montgomery bus boycott to the March on Washington and other developing events. He called for all Americans (Vermonters included) to get involved in the civil rights struggle, which he called the central domestic issue of the times.

Mr. Farmer stressed the economic aspect of American life for it is the most significant field in the Negro's drive for equality. The disparity of incomes between Negroes and whites can no longer be overlooked by Americans, not only because it is

Louis Lomax: Humans First

by Carolyn Seigel

Louis Lomax said in a speech Wednesday night that Negroes and whites are "inextricably bound together." He added that one race cannot rise without the other and that we must save each other to save ourselves. Lomax said that he is trying to involve us, as individuals, in some phase of the Negro's struggle for equality. He said that one half of the job of getting people involved in the struggle is getting them to realize what is going on today, and why. He attempted to provide the audience, comprised mostly of students and faculty, with some philosophic mean from which it could make its own decisions.

Mr. Lomax started by giving examples of how hate and racism pervade the world today. He cited the cities of Havana, Cuba, Berlin, Germany, and Birmingham, Alabama, in his attempt to put discrimination in a world-wide perspective. He said that in the United States, the whites have remained silent while Negro hatred persists, and that America is going to be in trouble because the whites have been guilty of constant bigotry and exploitation. Lomax said that we need a universal concept of brotherhood in order to achieve the moral and social evolution that the philosopher Henri Bergson says we must.

Lomax followed this with an attack on the "uncommitted" person. He said that in the civil rights struggle there can be no such individual, and that the struggle is not for one's self alone, but for everyone. But how can people become uncommitted in the struggle, Lomax asked. He answered this by saying that people "either believe in truth, justice, and right or don't." He

by Joan Klonsky

On Thursday evening, November 14, the final speaker for Vermont Conference was John Lewis, who, at only 25, is the youngest leader of a major civil rights organization in the United States (SNICK). Although Mr. Lewis has "felt the pain of anguish and disappointment", his speech was one of optimistic and idealistic ambitions.

According to Mr. Lewis, the march for justice and freedom is universal, and, in the U.S., has already reached the revolutionary stage, wherein everyone is involved. In 1960 the American Negro was concerned for his image as a dignified human being; today, his role has become more active as manifested in his efforts "to get the job done and solve the problem." In what Lewis terms the second American Revolution is a fervent desire of the Negroes to become part of the "mainstream of the American way of life." Seeing a need for basic changes to effect his goal, Lewis asserts that we must destroy the political structure (which in Alabama prohibits voting rights), and economic structure (which prevents equal employment opportunities and pay); "we must destroy such a system," he states, "one which has been created by both Negroes and whites, and which must be destroyed by both Negroes and whites."

To clarify the dynamic realities of the civil rights struggle, Lewis selected Mississippi as a case study. Among 400,000 Negroes of voting age in the state only 20,000 are registered to vote; it has the highest rate of illiteracy in the country; its income is the lowest in the country; the double school system forces

UVM Debate Team Places First; Captures T. V. Guide Trophy

The University of Vermont took first place this weekend at the St. Joseph's (Pa.) College Debating Tournament over twenty-eight other eastern colleges and universities and brought home to Burlington the magnificent T.V. Guide rotating trophy. The UVM team won eight out of ten debates with both the affirmative and negative units compiling a 4-1 record. The affirmative team of Carmen Wessher of Manchester, Vermont and Norman Snow of Burlington, defeated Navy, Rutgers, Penn State, Kings; and lost to the University of Virginia. The negative team of Sharon Call and David Waite, both of Springfield, Vermont, defeated St. John's University, St. Joseph's, La Salle, Johns Hopkins; and lost to George Washington, Georgetown University placed second in the tournament and the University of Virginia took third. Dr. Norman T. London of the UVM Speech Department was the coach on the trip.

In discussion program activities over the weekend, UVM discussants presented a program Saturday evening in Rutland, Vermont, before the Couples Club of the Congregational Church. Craig Nelson of Greenville, Maine, and Cynthia Clark of Springfield, Vermont, presented a demonstration debate on this year's national intercollegiate topic: "Resolved that the federal government should guarantee an opportunity for higher education to all qualified high school graduates." On Sunday evening, before the Youth Fellowship of the Congregational Church in East Corinth, Vermont, Janice Hackbarth and Greg Williams, with Carl Lisman moderating, discussed the problem of what should be done to minimize friction among racial groups in the United States.

Registration Lines Are Thing Of Past

Those traditionally long registration lines may be a thing of the past for students at The University of Vermont.

The University has set up an enrollment process, to run from Nov. 18 through Dec. 6, which will make it possible for students to complete all the details of enrollment in advance of the Jan. 31 and Feb. 1 registration for the second semester.

Under the process, each undergraduate and graduate student will pick up enrollment materials from the registrar, complete them in consultation with his or her faculty advisor, and return the completed enrollment card to the registrar. The process must be completed in the Nov. 18 - Dec. 6 period if the student is to be eligible to continue his studies in the second semester.

A final step in the process will come for most students in early January, when the Treasurer's Office will send each student his second semester bill. Each student will be required to pay his semester charges or make satisfactory arrangement with the Treasurer's Office by Jan. 24.

Then, unless the student wishes to change one or more courses at registration preceding the start of second semester classes, he may skip the registration day proceedings entirely.

added that the world has a great deal of bright people who avoid moral commitment or moral concern. In order to become a committed person, Lomax continued, people must start with themselves in their search to do something for civil rights. People can give or donate money, time, and effort. He added that he is not asking people to do anything he has not done himself.

Lomax went on to criticize the white population of America by saying that people are more concerned with being Jews, Catholics, and Protestants, than with being human. He would like people to sublimate their tribalisms, and make them much lower than their dedication to Americanism. Lomax said that America is too good not to be better, and it is up to the young men and women to take hold to make a better America, and a better world. He added that Negroes only want basic rights, that they don't want to socialize with whites. They want the chance to "go to school, use facilities, make top money," Lomax said that he speaks not in anger, yet with determination, not innocently, yet firmly.

The struggle, Lomax told the audience, is not black vs white, but right vs. wrong. He said that the burden has fallen on the Negro to sound the note of moral redemption in Western Civilization, and that whites can't do it because they've "been white too long." He said that whites haven't had the experiences; they haven't been insecure. He asked white people to come from behind their "white masks" and start acting human and American.

Lomax ended his speech by making a final plea to the audience and to all individuals to "serve where you can, where you are, and do what you can. You alone must decide, he said; you alone run the risk."

Mr. Lomax was the first speaker of the second meeting of the annual Vermont Conference. He is the author of several books - "Reluctant African," for which he won the Saturday Review Annisfeld Wolf Award for 1960; "The Negro Revolt," which is considered to be the definitive work on race relations in America today, and "When the World is Given," about the Black Muslim movement - and served as a feature writer for the Afro-American and the Chicago-American newspapers.

The second speaker of the evening was Stephen Spingarn, who was very active in the Truman and Roosevelt Administrations. From 1934-1942 Mr. Spingarn was Attorney to the U.S. Treasury Department and Special Assistant to the Attorney General. In World War II he was a commanding officer of the Fifth Army Counter Intelligence Corps. In 1948, he helped draft the Truman Civil Rights Program and from 1949-1950 was, in effect, Legislative Council to the White House. Mr. Spingarn's topic was "A Specific Proposal for Counteracting Prejudice."

Spingarn's proposal calls for the establishment of a Truth Foundation. He said it would be headed by a board of bipartisans in good stature. Generally, they would guide the foundation in providing security against radical movements, and collect extensive documentary information on radical societies. According to Spingarn, the group would do the following: 1) subsidize research and publish results, 2) stimulate newspaper and magazine reports and exposés, 3) recruit speakers to inform the public, by way of civic groups and college courses, 4) encourage community reactions by working with local organizations and field service workers, 5) produce movies for high schools and colleges, such as "They Spoke for Freedom," 6) educate people to be ashamed of the gap between principle and practice, 7) have a public fundraising campaign which would be publicized greatly to help combat "fright peddlars," and 8) instruct the public; show people how to combat radical movements.

Following these two speeches, an informal discussion panel was held in lower Waterman. The members of the panel were Stephen Spingarn, James Farmer, John Lewis, Jules Older, and Louis Lomax. The moderator was Mr. Sigler, a member of the university's Political Science Department. The panel discussion gave both the audience and the panel members the opportunity to ask questions and made comments on the speeches.

Mr. Sigler started the discussion by commenting on Mr. Lomax's speech. He asked Mr. Farmer to comment on it, too. Sigler stated that Lomax called for an international change of heart, and a slow process of moral evolution. He asked Farmer why we should not speed up this evolution by use of force. Farmer replied that he wants to control the evil in men's hearts, and that segregation perpetuates racial intolerance. Lomax got back on the topic and said that he did not say go slow in the social and moral evolutionary process. He said that the evolution is going on now, and that it will come. However, Lomax's question is, is the change going to come with help or with violence? The moderator then asked Mr. Lewis to comment on Mr. Spingarn's proposal of a Truth Foundation. Lewis said that he doesn't think we need foundations right now, but that they are good, and sometimes combat some of the evils in society. Spingarn answered by saying that his foundation would not replace anything, but rather would be in addition to civil rights movements. He added that his program would cover more than racial bias, and that it would "sweep away" propagandists, but would not affect demagogues or bigots. Lomax said then that Spingarn's foundation had some merit, and that nothing will change bigots.

MERP Week - New Tradition?

by Judy Myers

A new UVM tradition is in the making. MERP Week has again proved to be a well accepted part of the UVM year. Sponsored by Panhellenic Council, its purpose is to relieve the financial strain on the men and give the girls a chance to show where their interests lie. It serves as a welcome break for the tension following the first round of hour exams. Budding campus romances testify to its success.

The first official event of the week was the Powder Puff football game on Tuesday afternoon. One significant change from last year was holding the game on the ROTC drill field instead of on Redstone campus. This location attracted students returning from classes and consequently more spectators than in previous years. Girls representing the various women's residences played vigorously until cold hands and feet won out. MERP Week King Candidates, George Oelze, Ed Blaise, Jim Suskin, Dave Strassburg, Ted Jordan, and Al Brown, functioned as coaches and referees.

A Hootenanny on Wednesday replaced the coffee shop skits of previous years. Seven groups representing each of the sororities for the large crowd in the North Lounge of Billings. After each group's initial performance, they returned to lead group singing. Reports reflected a highly enthusiastic response.

The MERP Week Dance climaxed the week's activities. Approximately 130 couples attended this event Friday night in Waterman Dining Room. The Vistas supplied the music for dancing. Highlighting the evening was the crowning of MERP Week King, George Oelze. He "inherited" the jar containing the pennies, quarters, and half dollars that his admirers had cast as votes.

Again this year "MERPing" was accepted well by UVM students, especially freshmen. This continuing success promises to make MERP Week as much of a UVM tradition as Homecoming and Kake Walk.

Fey Asked To Be Consultant

University of Vermont President John T. Fey has been invited to serve as a consultant to the Mountain States Medical Education Study designed to help the states of Idaho, Montana, Nevada, and Wyoming plan ways to provide their residents with increased opportunities for medical education as a means of relieving a growing shortage of physicians.

The study is being sponsored by the Western Interstate Commission for Higher Education. Study director is Dr. James M. Faulkner, former dean of the Boston University Medical School.

President Fey has been asked to serve as a consultant for a phase of the study to determine Idaho's potential for establishment of a medical school. He will work with Dr. Faulkner and with Dr. Clark K. Sleeth, dean of medical science at the University of West Virginia.

The study originated at the request of the Western Governors' Conference, in cooperation with the state universities and state medical societies of Idaho, Montana, Nevada, and Wyoming. None of the states has a medical school. The ratio of physicians to population in those states is "already far below the national average," according to WICHE.

The study is being supported by a grant from the Commonwealth Fund, a private philanthropic foundation.

Fund Started

The University of Vermont chapter of Tau Epsilon Phi fraternity has announced plans to establish a yearly scholarship fund to help upperclassmen.

The fraternity plans to stage a yearly concert to raise funds with a minimum of 25 per cent of the net proceeds from each concert going into the scholarship fund. The initial concert will be held Nov. 23 in the Patrick Gym and will feature the Nina Simone Quartet; Herbie Mann and the Afro-Cuban 8, and the Modern Folk Quartet.

Stuart Leventhal, chancellor (president) of Tau Epsilon Phi, said the first scholarship would be awarded following the second year's concert rather than the first so as to allow the fund to build up in value.

Scholarships will be awarded to juniors and will be based on leadership, character, scholarship, need, and there will be no stipulation as to race, religion or creed. As many scholarships as possible will be awarded. The amount of each remains to be determined.

Candidates may be nominated by the Interfraternity Council, the Student Association, by the Deans, the athletic department, or by Tau Epsilon Phi.

The fraternity will do the preliminary screening, then all remaining nominations will be forwarded to the faculty senate student and committee.

Abstractions On Display At Fleming Museum

All students with an interest in art shouldn't miss the opportunity to see the Alber's Study in Art on display through December 1 at the Fleming Museum. The display covers such phases of color as intensity, brilliance, and emphasis in placement. Some of the more fascinating studies deal with optical illusion which colors make. For example, it is possible to make two different colors look alike by placing them on special colored backgrounds. It is also possible to make the same colors appear different in the same manner. Another illusion occurs when, after staring at nine yellow circles arranged in three rows or three tangently, you look at a plain piece of paper and see the "after-image" which in this case looks like four yellow diamonds. These are only a few of the many thought-provoking displays found at Fleming. Even if you're not an art enthusiast you will enjoy viewing the array of colors.

Cynic-al Observations DECLARATION BY INDEPENDENTS UNFOUNDED

Recently there has been an uprising by the independents of the University who compose the Men's Resident Hall Assembly over their right to participate in Kake Walk. Their main gripe was based on three so-called facts which they stated in a letter to the CYNIC last week. There is no need to restate these "facts" because they are totally unfounded and in a statement issued by Dave Maichuk, publicity director of the Kake Walk Committee, quoted below, they are answered with facts.

To the small group of independents who tried to set the University on fire with the "Kake Walk controversy" it created, we can only praise them for their enthusiasm and reprimand for "playing with fire." It was good for UVM morale to have the usually apathetic independent students stand up for their rights even though they were promptly knocked down by a flood of facts from the I.F.C. and Kake Walk Committee. Their argument does have some merit, but it is buried under so much red tape and political policy that it isn't worth the trouble to unravel it, unless there is genuine interest among this group to do so.

FACTS OF THE MATTER

Seems like everyone's fighting for the cause of civil rights these days. Even the UVM campus has been hit by this latest craze in the form of the independents bid for the right to take part of the events of Kake Walk. Last week there appeared in the CYNIC a letter which explicitly pointed out the reasons for independents should be allowed to participate in the weekend's events. It was stated that the Kake Walk weekend is a University function and as such everyone should be entitled to participate. If the event is a University function why did the Kake Walk Committee have to pay the University several thousand dollars for the use of University facilities? Why did the Committee have to purchase and install electrical equipment and "services" of the Buildings and Grounds Department for the production? TEP is presenting a concert this weekend for which they are incurring the same type of expenses mentioned. Is the concert a University function or a function of the fraternity? Obviously, the fact that the "Patrick Gymnasium" for which all students are paying equally is used for the events of Kake Walk is a rather ridiculous argument for the Men's Residence Hall Assembly "Kake Walk Committee" to justify any right of participation.

Granted, classes are cancelled for 2 days to accommodate the events of the weekend and all students do pay equally for their education. In fall semester there are 86 days of classes. In the spring semester, believe it or not, there are also 86 days of classes even with two days allotted to Kake Walk. If the MRNS is concerned with getting their money's worth out of actual classes why don't they campaign to have the University refrain from cancelling the few classes on Honors' Day.

Also, it cannot be denied that the University band is utilized during Kake Walk. Each member of the band is given tickets for the walking so that the member and the member's date is admitted free. Also, the band as a unit received payment for their "services".

Speaking of action, the independents attempted to build a snow sculpture for last year's Kake Walk. "The social club of the Marsh, Austik, and Tupper Complex" truly exemplified its governmental organization when the sculptures failed to materialize. This incident reflects the reason why the stipulation is made in the IFC constitution concerning active participation in Kake Walk.

We can only sympathize with the independents in their ambitious undertaking because we do believe that they should be able to take part in Kake Walk, if they show an interest. We do believe that "they shall overcome... someday," but not this Kake Walk. (Continued on page eight).

Letters To The Editor

Brotherhood?

To the Editor

At the last panel discussion of the Vt. Conference I stated that as a freshman one of the first things I learned upon arriving at UVM this fall is that if I should choose to join a fraternity, I would be severely limited in my choice by the fact that I am a Jew. I made this statement in the hope that I would receive some intelligent reactions from an allegedly enlightened audience of upperclassmen and faculty. I was met only by the hushed and unsuccessfully concealed embarrassment of an audience which has just been told an off-color joke. I am still waiting for an intelligent reaction—or any kind of reaction.

I do not wish to disappoint those veteran students at UVM who, in the infinite wisdom of their upper class years, know that all freshmen are traditionally naive, idealistic, and generally ignorant by comparison. I must beg their indulgence, for apparently I was not aware that there are certain things that one just doesn't say in polite college society; that it is in impeccable intellectual taste for us all to sit nodding our heads as one, in pious agreement with everything that our civil rights speakers had to say; that it is acceptable for us to stand up and condemn bigotry in the South and even to direct an occasional but comparatively mild attack on discrimination in the state of Vermont, but that any mention of prejudice on our own campus and within the sphere of the Inter Fraternity Council's jurisdiction is a fundamental violation of the UVM liberal's code of ethics.

I may be just another freshman fool, rushing in where wise fraternity men fear to tread. I am not familiar with the political intrigue and maneuvering of the Inter Fraternity Council and so cannot offer any more specific proposals for action. I know only that as a future fraternity man (if there are any fraternities truly liberal enough to accept me after this letter) I do not wish to face a legacy of inaction and general complacency. It is not sufficient for certain fraternities to admit one or two Jews or a Negro just so that, if challenged, they can point to these few members and say, "Look Ma, no prejudice!"

I can foresee no greater opportunity for UVM's fraternity system, which is supposedly steeped in traditions of brotherhood, to justify its existence.

Enthusiasm, UVMer's

To the editor:

In light of last week's Vermont Conference, I think it is evident that just because UVM doesn't have a civil rights group, doesn't mean it doesn't need one. Because we are students and are in and of a system which has as a basic tenet man's inhumanity to man, it is really our responsibility to do what we can to alleviate and revise this situation.

Hereupon, I urge UVMer's not to forget whatever they may have learned or decided about their connection with the racial justice movement. It is a real fear I have that when we get a moving group on this campus many students will have that typical UVM, indeed American, reaction of indifference. If the enthusiasm, or at least interest, demonstrated last week is atypical, for heaven's sake, don't stop being atypical now!

Yours truly,
Jean Camp, '68

WRUV

To the Editor,

During the past few weeks there has been much said on the UVM campus about Kake Walk. WRUV, as the Voice of the University of Vermont, intends to remain completely neutral on the issue.

WRUV is impelled to do this for two very important reasons. Firstly, as the Voice of UVM, we represent the University as a whole. This includes the student body, in its entirety, the faculty, and any and all organizations and departments of the University. To fulfill our duty to the University, we MUST be fair to both sides of any controversial issue confronting UVM. With regard to the Kake Walk issue, any programming regarding Kake Walk will be presented in an unbiased manner, wherein both sides have equal time for expression of their views.

Secondly, WRUV strongly upholds the Radio Code of Good Practice as set forth by the National Association of Broadcasters (NAB). Pertinent to this issue, the Code states "... broadcasting provides a valuable forum for the expression of responsible views on public issues of a controversial nature. In keeping therewith, the broadcaster should seek out and develop with accountable individuals, groups and organizations, programs relating to controversial public issues of importance to its fellow citizens; and to give fair representation to opposing sides of issues which materially affect the life or welfare of a substantial segment of the public."

In a recent letter to the Vermont CYNIC, Leonard Nemon, speaking for the Independents, stated that WRUV had "revoked" permission for the presentation of the Independents' views concerning Kake Walk, after having approved such a presentation. There has been a slight misunderstanding on the part of Mr. Nemon.

WRUV postponed presentation of such views until both sides could be present. The station stated that, after Monday, November 18, having asked both sides to air their views, WRUV would then permit either or both parties to present their respective arguments.

Very truly yours,
Kenneth L. Nalibow
Station Manager, WRUV

Civil Rights' Leader?

To the Editor:

I did not get a chance to say anything at the discussions held during the Vermont Conference. Therefore, I would like to interject an opinion which may not have entered some people's minds.

I firmly believe that if the Negro problem is going to make any headway, all political opportunists should be barred from lectures similar to those of the Vermont Conference. One such opportunist is Mr. Stephen Spingarn. His bigoted views were no less than antagonistic to anybody holding Republican tenets.

It is not the purpose of the Negro cause to be a front for office seekers. The Negro is struggling for his human rights which, as an American, he is entitled to.

I believe that if the other gentlemen who represented the Negro cause think Mr. Spingarn's approach to the subject demonstrated that he is sincere and dedicated to the Negro cause, they are hiding behind their thumb. Many people I have talked to seriously doubt the sincerity of some of the speakers due to their expression of sentiments which were other than for the Negro struggle.

Doubt of the sincerity of these people does not stem from the fact that some of their political beliefs differ from ours, but rather that this was hardly the place to discuss Republican or Democratic.

How do the Negro leaders hope to perpetuate their movement? They are antagonizing potential backers. An image of complete dedication to one cause has to be presented by these leaders. They have to educate and get followers. Unsubstantiated statements and inferences to key Republicans and Conservatives such as Mr. Goldwater, Fulton Lewis, Jr., Mr. Buckley, Mr. Luce, etc., is hardly the way to hope to win new supporters - or, for that matter retain old ones.

Being a strong supporter of the Negro cause, also wishing for its ultimate success, I would say that Mr. Spingarn has walked on a few kitchen floors with his golf shoes on.

Placement Barometer

by Douglas O. Hanau
Director of Placement

Why a series of articles on the technique of job hunting? Because an overwhelming majority of students have no idea how to approach the problem. You are often bewildered and sometimes frightened.

The series, which will begin with the next issue, is written out of experience in the employment world and talking with students here and on other campuses during which the writer has observed the haphazard, vague, and mistaken way in which most of you go about the business of finding work. It is a result of witnessing a number of instances of young men and women who have more than average ability continuing to be unemployed because they do not know how to sell their services to a suitable market. The suggestions that are to follow, gathered from many varied sources, have been made as concrete as possible; they are practical and they have this merit — they work.

Job hunting should never be hit-and-miss; such a method produces nothing but weariness, discouragement, and loss of selfconfidence. It is a sales campaign that requires careful planning and intelligent development. Most students, and you have heard me state this before, do their poorest job of selling the most important product they will ever have to sell — themselves. There are three reasons for this. The first is that, as a rule, they have not taken the trouble to get acquainted with the product they are attempting to sell. They do not know themselves, they have not estimated their own liabilities and their own assets.

The second reason for their failure is that they do not know where to sell their product. They have given no clear thought to the kind of work they want to do, to the field they are equipped to enter, to the type of position that corresponds most closely to their own personal equipment.

The third reason for not getting jobs is that the average job hunter does not know how to look for a job. There are jobs, there will always be jobs. It depends upon you whether you will get the right one for you. It depends on the honesty with which you measure your own abilities. It depends on the careful thought with which you match your talents with the job you want. It depends, above all, on the intelligence you display in following up the job.

A job intelligently chosen can be the most rewarding thing in life. A job chosen by the "I'll take anything" method, by taking the first vacancy that comes to hand, by deciding, "This will do for the time being; if I don't like it, I'll look around for something more suitable later on", can be the greatest source of unhappiness, discontent, and frustration. Sometimes one is put in a position of having to take a job until a better opportunity becomes available. This need not, nor should not be time wasted, but recognize your goals will remain unsatisfied until you are in "the right job."

Most turn-over problems among new college hires can be traced either to initial error of judgement in selecting employees or to putting men and women in the wrong jobs. The misplaced individual is not only wasted but becomes discontented. This discontent is reflected on the job, in one's personal life, and ultimately in the community.

In the long run, not only your basic satisfactions but your whole significance as a human being lies in the work you can do, in the things you accomplish. This is a fundamental truth, whose basic importance cannot be over emphasized. It is the key to the truly successful person. But note that the satisfaction comes from "doing."

Kake Walk

Dear Sir:

I shall attempt to defend the desire of the men in the MAT complex against the rather inept, but none-the-less positive statements of Robert Collier which appeared in the November 14th CYNIC.

The desire which I mention is nothing more than wanting to be permitted to partake in the event which is, supposedly, the high point of the entire school year at UVM. This request is not only quite reasonable and proper, but is long overdue.

The first point which Mr. Collier uses to justify the stand taken by the IFC is a rather technical justification according to the wording of the rules governing Kake Walk participation. He is relying on the phrase: "(b) Kake Walkers of social clubs meeting the following conditions: 1) membership consisting of persons with no social, undergraduate, Greek-letter affiliation."

Mr. Collier's argument hinges on this one point which, if considered from a reasonable viewpoint, should not prevent participation by independents living in Marsh, Austin, or Tupper halls. My reasoning behind this argument is (1) living together, working and playing together, and partaking in the democratic operation in the Men's Residence Hall Council together certainly does qualify the men in the MAT complex as members of a social club — one of far larger size, far more democratic, and of a much greater scope than any Greek organization on this campus. (2) People who are members of the various Greek organizations on this campus, and who live in the MAT complex are, by virtue of the fact that they have decided to dedicate their first social loyalties to their fraternity, automatically excluded from the "social club" of the dorms by their decision to partake in Kake Walk activities through their fraternity. (3) Contrary to Mr. Collier's claim that the MAT complex is not "stable" (by the way Mr. Collier, how many of the fraternities on this campus are "stable"), the very size and homogeneity of the group in question gives it greater stability than that of any group of considerably smaller size and range.

Mr. Collier's final argument is built around the fact that the Kake Walk Committee gives large sums of money to various university organizations every year. This is true, and quite commendable. It also proves absolutely nothing. Were participation in Kake Walk to be opened to independents representing the residence halls, the the total amount of money taken in by the Kake Walk Committee would be increased — probably by a considerable amount. Not only would many more independents remain at school on Kake Walk weekend, providing more revenue at all of the Kake Walk functions; but more people would invite dates up here, etc., providing more revenue for the Burlington area.

The IFC and the Kake Walk Committee depends upon support and assistance from the University and even from the MAT complex. At some schools this size of fraternities is severely limited by the fact that all members of the houses (excluding pledges) must live in the house. Were this rule to be put into effect here, the sizes of the various fraternities on campus would decrease, and so would their revenue. Therefore, where would the fraternities be if they were not permitted to have members who were also residents of the MAT complex.

Finally, there exists in this situation a distinct amount of segregation — not by race — but by economic position and by social desires. All students at this university pay, equally, for the major facilities used during Kake Walk (the Patrick Gym as well as the rest of the campus). Classes and other normal activities — for which the non-Greeks are paying — are cancelled, yet the non-fraternity people are not allowed participation in Kake Walk activities.

Kake Walk either is or is not the high point of the school year at UVM. If it is, then it must be opened to all people at the University as long as it receives official sanction from the University. If it is not, then I propose a winter carnival which will be set up and run under the direction of the Student Association. This new Winter Carnival, being for the entire University, would receive official sanction and Kake Walk could then operate in the way it presently does — as a private, closed affair for fraternity people only — but without (assistance (such as cancelled classes, use of school property, etc.) from the people who are refused a part in the activity.

Robert J. Stein, '64

Independents - IFC

To the Editor,

Why is the Men's Residence Hall Assembly being denied the right to participate in Kake Walk, the major University function of the year? Is it because the IFC, which dominates this affair, is afraid of a little competition? Is it because they feel that the fraternities will lose some of their drawing power if independents are allowed to participate in Kake Walk? WHY? It is certainly not because the dormitories being represented aren't "...stable, well-organized groups which can be relied upon to contribute to the overall success of Kake Walk." I can assure the President of the IFC, who made the above remark, that the dorms are as well organized and governed as any fraternity, and will long outlive any of them on this campus. It is not because the necessary spirit is lacking. The dorms have six prospective Walkers in training — 3 times the necessary pair. As far as support is concerned, would not 400 people cheering for one team indicate as much support as 60 or 70 cheering for another?

In spite of the IFC's failure to observe or recognize the fact, the Men's Residence Hall Assembly has been organized "...under a charter or constitution, having it recognized by the University, operating for at least one year; keeping an account of its membership and activities, and finally, operating in such a manner as to ... be a contributing member of the campus community for an entire year." In this respect the Assembly has met the necessary requirements to participate in Kake Walk and should be allowed to do so.

THE SCEPTIC

"Am I my brother's keeper?"

-- Cain

I agree wholeheartedly with you -- Vermont Conference was an awful waste of time. Their fault? Certainly. We did everything we could to make the Conference worthwhile, but look at the material we had to work with! That guy Spingarn, for instance, with his perpetual "practical politics." Who cares about politics? What ever gave him the idea that we wanted to do anything about discrimination?

Lewis was potentially okay. He's been beaten up and jailed and insulted; he's probably full of exciting, spirit-raising stories. If he'd only played his cards right, he could have worked up (briefly) a storm of indignation about those horrid Southerners. But did he? Not a bit of it. Instead we had to listen to a lot of drivel about non-violence. Who needs it? What do we care about it? It has nothing to do with Kake Walk.

Farmer and Lomax were the worst. Imagine them coming up here, showing off their fancy grammar and their big minds and thinking they could impress us! The Free Press really told them off, though. Remember when you were a kid, you used to find some scrawny littler kid and grab his hat and run with it? Remember the best part of the game, when you made him get all humble and say please before you'd give it back? Well, that's the game the Free Press played; these Negroes had better stop demanding and threatening, it said, if they want to get anything from us whites. Humility, that's what they need.

Did you see the way they kept trying to steer the questions away from Kake Walk? They knew we had them on that subject, anyhow. The Conference committee was in conspiracy with them, I'll bet -- remember how Mr. Weaver tried to distract us from talk about Kake Walk with his silly red herring about church bombings and dead children? It didn't work, though; we stood up for our rights and kept talking about ourselves. After all, the speakers were brought up here to hear what we thought, weren't they?

Well, we don't have to worry about them any more. They're all safely back in the South, where the cops and their dogs can keep an eye on them; and we can turn our attention to important matters, like getting the dependents to let everybody go "wawkin fo de Kake" (isn't it a scream the way these Negroes talk!).

Listening to Mr. Lomax brought home to me (not for the first time) how badly I criticize things. My, but he was good at it, wasn't he? I nominate him for any prize you care to offer. Mr. Farmer was probably the more intelligent and sensible of the two, but I like a lack of balance sometimes. On this note let me make an awkward transition to a thoroughly unbalanced work -- The Realist.

The Realist is a monthly magazine edited and almost completely written by Paul Krassner. It sells for 35¢ a copy, but a subscription (225 Lafayette St., New York 12, N.Y.) will get you 10 issues for $3 or 20 issues for $5. Ask for it at the Waterman magazine rack (they won't have it), and ask them why not. Then subscribe.

Krassner is a young man and a rebel against authority. Unfortunately, he is also rebelling against good taste; as a result the magazine is full of words like s---, f---, c---, p---, c---, b---, and a---. (And you knew every one of them, didn't you?) This tastelessness, however, allows him to tell you things that your Luce-id world never knew. Examples? The Stormtrooper, official organ of the American Nazi Party, advertises Anne Frank Soap Wrappers ("put it on regular cakes and delight your friends;"). Pat Boone (Krassner nominates him for Father of the Year) said, "I would rather see my four daughters shot before my eyes than to have them grow up in a Communist United States." Krassner offers interviews with an abortionist, a homosexual, Lenny Bruce, Norman Mailer, George Lincoln Rockwell, etc. He also has some dandy cartoons. A favorite (describable) goes back to a Tony Curtis-Sidney Poitier movie of a while back; it shows a Negro convict handcuffed to a white one; they are escaping. The tag line: "We're almost to my plantation..."

There's lots more, too. Get your frat club to subscribe. Get Bailey to subscribe. Get the Waterman magazine rack to carry it. It specializes now in how-to-do-it magazines (Popular Boating, Flying, How to Ski, The Male and Female Body), art magazines (Country Music Stars; "101 Great Singers! Their Lives! Their Loves!"), adolescent sexual titillation (Playboy), and sick jokes (Hair Trends). Many mansions, indeed. But most of all, Krassner and I urge you to Get It. Until then, you may borrow my copies.

Players Hailed For Albee's Plays

by Kenneth Klonsky

If one happened to be present at the Arena Theatre on the weekend of Nov. 15-17, he saw what was, perhaps one of the highlights of the UVM season. The University Players with National Collegiate Players presented two one act plays by Edward Albee, The Zoo Story and The American Dream. The plays were directed by Richard E. Leideberg.

The Zoo Story describes a fierce encounter between two men in New York's Central Park. The play is highly dramatic throughout as Jerry, played brilliantly by David Storti, manages to dig so deeply under the skin of Peter, played by Bryant Reynolds, that the tension created between them is unbearable. Mr. Reynolds, who is a member of The National Collegiate Players, chipped in a fine performance.

The American Dream is a biting satire that is spiced with many humorous lines. This play deals candidly with the small talk and fictions of the average American household. The audience particularly enjoyed the performance of Anne Bourgault as Grandma. I thought that Ralph Preston as Daddy and Nancy Streit, a National Collegiate Player, as Mrs. Barker were also excellent. Susan Greene as Mommy and Gary Derman as the Young Man both did credible jobs. Special credit must be given to Janet Hadda and Esther Sundell for a thoroughly professional make-up job.

These plays offer UVM students an excellent opportunity to enrich their minds and to broaden their interests. Judging from the fine quality of this performance I would highly recommend George Bernard Shaw's Major Barbara, coming December 12, 13 and 14.

American Ballet Theater Praised For Performances In Afternoon And Evening

By Lois Allison

The American Ballet Theatre treated Burlington to a generally excellent performance last Thursday, November 14, on the Blue Lane Series program. Featuring both classic and modern ballet, the presentation was notably enjoyable.

First on the program was "Concerto," an imaginative concoction of dances. The performers were a little stiff at first, but bloomed into full flower as the presentation progressed.

The undoubted highlight of the evening was the "Billy the Kid" number. Making excellent use of costumes and lighting, the entire performance was characterized by vigor and flair. The ballet depicted the pioneering of the West as illustrated by incidents in the life of Billy the Kid. The dancers gracefully and aptly captured the determination of the pioneers and violence and bewilderment of the outlaw. Outstanding in the presentation were the three lead dancers - John Kriza as Billy, Joseph Carow as Pat Garrett, and Richard Beaty as Alias.

"Pas de Deux" followed as an example of the classic in ballet. Toni Lander and Gayle Young performed with style and grace. The vigorous and spirited "Divertissements from Napoli" concluded the evening with three individually executed movements; the number featured the exciting expression that characterized the entire program.

On November 14, the American Ballet Theatre presented the Lane Youth concert at Memorial Auditorium. It was touching to see the delight with which the audience received a very mediocre performance.

The first part of the performance was the "Grand Pas-Grand-ounov". As the curtain rose on a rather colorless backdrop, the backdrop, there were "oohs" and "ahs" of appreciation and a spontaneous round of applause. The children did not seem to notice the obvious lack of discipline among the dancers; in parts, they were just not together. The Variations, which occurred in the latter portion of the selection, were somewhat better, and were also very well received.

"Billy The Kid", which starred John Kriza as Billy, was livelier, more original, and more colorful than "Grand Pas-Grand-ounov". There was a definite suspense in the audience as this notorious outlaw's story was unfolded. The dancers themselves seemed to get much more enjoyment out of doing this selection. Still, it was not an exceptional performance. It is to be hoped that the American Ballet Theatre did not slacken its standards because of the tender age and unsophisticated taste of its audience.

Concert Premiere

Music of Mozart, Beethoven, Handel, and William Bergsma was featured at the opening concert of the University of Vermont symphony orchestra Friday evening, Nov. 15.

The concert opened at 8:30 p.m. in the Ira Allen Chapel with Overture to the Magic Flute by Mozart. Following was the Symphony No. 1 in C Major by Beethoven and three movements of the Grand Concerto in B Flat Major by Handel. The latter work featured a small group of orchestra musicians performing solo and duet passages.

Completing the program was the Paul Bunyan Suite by Bergsma. The work was in three movements entitled "The Dance of the Blue Ox," "Country Dance" and "Night."

James Keene of the department of music at UVM conducted. The program was open to the public at no cost. The next music department concert will be held on Dec. 6, at 8:30 in the Chapel. James and Mary Keene, Flora and David Kinsey, and Virginia Mori will comprise the string quartet who will play Hayda's Quintet, Opus 77, and the Dohnanyi Quintet, Opus 1.

"Maybe we are guilty," Lewis half admits, "for disturbing the peace" in states such as Mississippi. "But let's discuss peace," he continues. "If we take peace as the maintenance of law and order, then there is no peace, since in the South, there is no maintenance of law and order."

In discussing the Negro method in the civil rights struggle, Lewis advances the theory of non-violence as both a technique and a philosophy of life, by which he intends to teach the world a lesson. The non-violent movement provides the Negro with a new sense of dignity, pride and hope, and "has made them better citizens of the U.S. and the world with a broader perspective of both." Besides, Lewis believes, violence is impractical, "like committing suicide", and is immoral as well. Moreover, "the struggle is not between white and Negro, but between forces of justice and injustice, right and wrong, good and evil, light and darkness."

For Lewis and his followers the ultimate goal is not for a separate state or haven, but for the "beloved community" entrenched in the dynamics of the present. The end must be caught up in the means — both are inseparable. In sum, "love intertwined with non-violent action" will facilitate the goal of a community of love, brotherhood, good will — a "redeemed society."

Lewis speaks mainly for the Negroes in the South and hopes to set the example there for the North and the rest of the world to observe and follow. "We shall overcome", the credo for all Negroes, expresses their hope for a "new day in the South before it arrives in the North) to teach a lesson not only to the North but to the whole world." Within the non-violent movement, Lewis hopes to change the hearts of the people, and indeed, every person must play a role. "Silence today is the greatest sin," Lewis declares. "We must rise to the point for the salvation of our souls and spirits . . . We want to be free now."

In concluding his moving plea for the Negro cause, Lewis expressed concern for the necessity of solving the civil rights problem today and not tomorrow, for if justice is not granted today, "I don't know what will happen tomorrow . . . but we don't want to see the 'fire next time' . . . Little by little we must create the better community, to live as sister and brother."

To the question of the genetic inferiority of the Negroes, Lomax said that those bigots who believe that Negroes are genetically inferior want to believe it, and always will, and are constantly looking for additional material. He is certain that they are committed to this belief and that they could not be changed no matter what proof they were given. Lomax added a humorous touch to the discussion when he invited anyone to tackle with him intellectually or philosophically to find out if he was genetically inferior.

Mr. Older then interjected and made a plea to all students to join the Civil Rights movement, and to take a very active part in it. Lomax said that the leaders in the revolution must be Negro, and that whites can help dedicated young Negroes by "fighting and standing like men." Farmer continued by asserting the need that the Negroes have for a revolution. But he said that Negroes cannot win unless they win allies. By this he meant at least one-half of the American population. He also said that there have to be whites in the ranks, that whites have to join the movements and "help-out." He added that they can do this by participating in sit-ins, march-ins, and withdrawing patronage.

The discussion then turned to minstrel shows, namely UVM's own, Kake Walk. The panel agreed that if the blackening of the faces offended some students, then the rest of the students should consider whether or not to continue it. They said that oppressed minority groups often become very sensitive, and whites must be sensitive to this.

Mr. Farmer was then questioned about Malcolm X and the Black Muslim Movement. Farmer said that the net effect of the movement is negative, because it frightened people into looking at the Negro Revolution. He said that if the Black Muslim movement wins, the Negro Revolution loses.

The panel discussion closed, even though the interest among the panel members and the audience was great. There was another discussion Thursday night.

morally wrong, but because America is losing 18 billion dollars a year. This loss is due to the unproductive stagnant position the Negro holds in American society. Mr. Farmer called for special affirmative action to insure that significant numbers of Negroes are hired by American employers. He did not call for any kind of quota system but stated that it is the responsibility of employers (even in Vermont) to see that their work forces are integrated. The CORE director suggested that qualified Negroes should be given a preference when jobs are open because of past discrimination against Negroes. He did not say that he wanted white employers to be fired to make job openings for Negroes.

Mr. Farmer also stressed that there should be a new alignment of political parties in the United States. He suggested that this alignment should be on a generally liberal and conservative basis. If such a realignment does not materialize, he said, a third party may emerge in the nation. He stated that this third party would not be a "Negro party", but would include individuals who support the Negro civil rights effort. Mr. Farmer, the leader of CORE, also was critical of the Kennedy administration's civil rights efforts and especially of what he called the watered-down civil rights bill of 1963.

The CORE director also spoke about two Negro girls who sat down and ordered coffee in Greensboro, N.C. in 1961. He said they didn't order coffee, they ordered dignity. This is the spirit which has put more than 50,000 persons in jail, and has made being in jail and being shot at a "badge of honor."

Mr. Farmer was a man speaking with a vision, a vision of Negroes fighting for and finally acquiring equal rights. He spoke of prejudice as being irrational, pernicious, and wrongfully emotional. He asked for our help in aiding the Negro to realize the American dream of freedom, democracy and liberty. You must choose sides. Are you American whites going to yell in unison "Run, nigger . . . run", or are you going to wake up from your apathetic position and ride the Negro's cause in every way possible? The choice is yours and when you make it you either destroy this country or you create something beautiful and with this enigmatic creation you free yourself and the Negro. What is your choice going to be and when?
